Arthur-

This will confirm my understanding following our telephone call this morning that, notwithstanding the internet banter, you are not in possession of any of Danny Shelton's financial records except those obtained in discovery and which are subject to the confidentiality order issued by Judge Hillman in the Massachusetts court case.

I would ask that you avoid making statements in your internet postings that implicitly reveal the contents of the confidential documents, since that would also violate the confidentiality order even if not directly quoting the contents of those documents. If it appears that your comments on the confidential documents in your internet postings reveal the contents of the documents, I would regard that as a violation of the confidentiality order and take appropriate steps to enforce it. I trust and hope that won't be necessary.
