B. Stained Glass Stations. These are sometimes seen as being a surrogate for the church. They mirror or reflect the church, itself, with sermons, church music, and broadcasting of church events.

A compliment for a Stained Glass Station is, "Listening to your station for eight hours is like being in church for eight hours."

Stained Glass stations are narrow-casters, not broad-casters; They have a narrow audience; Narrowcasters seem happy with that for whatever reasons they may present. For instance, a wealthy donor to the narrowcasting station may actually be choosing the music and sermons that the wealthy donor prefers -- and that's what everyone else ends up hearing or seeing. Stained Glass Stations may have little or no on-air fund raising, but rely on a "bricks-and-mortar" congregation for the lion's share of station funding.

I realize I have over-simplified this, but this explains the approach which accounts for the varying stations and their styles of music which exist in the world today.

Therefore, music styles needs to be presented in context of the goals of the broadcaster or narrowcaster. It's not a topic we really need to be overly concerned about.

We can't expect everyone to go to the restaurant buffet and all choose the exact same items and it's the same way with music. Different people have different tastes.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 10 2007, 02:31 PM

Interesting summation, Panama_Pete.

Now, where between "A" and "B" does 3abn fall in this regard?

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jun 10 2007, 02:41 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 10 2007, 02:31 PM)
>
> Interesting summation, Panama_Pete.
>
> Now, where between "A" and "B" does 3abn fall in this regard?

I'm leaving that as a point of discussion. Different people will have different ideas.

But there are some interesting words, such as "wealthy donor" that are laced into the summation for the readers' consideration.

Pete

Posted by: Skyhook Jun 10 2007, 06:37 PM

This is a little off topic, but I noticed that Shelly Quinn interviewed Jerry and Janet Page a few days ago. Jerry is president of Central CA. Conference and Janet is his wife and the director of Women's Ministries, and the conference Prayer Coordinator. They had been featured on Don Schneider's "Really Living" program on Hope Channel 2 or 3 weeks ago or so. They have some REAL miracle stories concerning the offering taken at campmeeting for outreach and evangelism. They can directly attribute to prayer by several individuals that the offering has increased from (if I recall correctly) about $100,000 7 or 8 years ago, Which was considerd a lofty goal to the $2.2 million taken in at the 2006 campmeeting. 1.1 mil was from matching funds from a wealthy donor.
In my (Im sure unfounded) cynicism, I wonderd if they hit on the Jerry for a few of those evangelism dollars for 3abn. I'm pretty sure the money is to go only for Central Conference projects.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 10 2007, 06:40 PM

CCC has a great Campmeeting my Mom and Pops gofor the entire ten days. Now, you won't catch me up there that long, but they have good weekend speakers, this year Barry Black and Walter Pearson, I believe.

However, my Mom did tell me about the money tey did raise for evangelism and also for their youth.

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Jun 10 2007, 05:37 PM)
>
> This is a little off topic, but I noticed that Shelly Quinn interviewed Jerry and Janet Page a few days ago. Jerry is president of Central CA. Conference and Janet is his wife and the director of Women's Ministries, and the conference Prayer Coordinator. They had been featured on Don Schneider's "Really Living" program on Hope Channel 2 or 3 weeks ago or so. They have some REAL miracle stories concerning the offering taken at campmeeting for outreach and evangelism. They can directly attribute to prayer by several individuals that the offering has increased from (if I recall correctly) about $100,000 7 or 8 years ago, Which was considerd a lofty goal to the $2.2 million taken in at the 2006 campmeeting. 1.1 mil was from matching funds from a wealthy donor.
> In my (Im sure unfounded) cynicism, I wonderd if they hit on the Jerry for a few of those evangelism dollars for 3abn. I'm pretty sure the money is to go only for Central Conference projects.

Posted by: roxe Jun 10 2007, 07:38 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 10 2007, 06:40 PM)
>
> CCC has a great Campmeeting...

pdi, you talking about Soquel?? (pronounced so-kel... accent on last syl)

we used to call it So-cool... and it was cool with all that fog coming in off the bay... until the mosquitos started eating you at night!!

oh the memories...

Posted by: Artiste Jun 10 2007, 07:44 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jun 10 2007, 12:11 PM) ☐
>
> that's a code word for all music that is not eurocentric in nature.... don't get us started...

Hmmm... All music that is not eurocentric... That sounds interesting!

Posted by: Jnana15 Jun 10 2007, 10:36 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 10 2007, 07:40 PM) ☐
>
> CCC has a great Campmeeting my Mom and Pops gofor the entire ten days. Now, you won't catch me up there that long, but they have good weekend speakers, this year Barry Black and Walter Pearson, I believe.
>
> However, my Mom did tell me about the money tey did raise for evangelism and also for their youth.

Yes, Berry Black and Ron Halvorsen, didn't see Walter Pearson's name. Also David Asscherick is going to be there.

Posted by: Denny Jun 11 2007, 04:42 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jun 10 2007, 09:11 PM) ☐
>
> that's a code word for all music that is not eurocentric in nature.... don't get us started...

Believe it.....their 'music of African origin' allergy is showing ☒ rofl

---

Posted by: princessdi Jun 11 2007, 12:39 PM

I don't think they sing any music on 3ABN of African origin at all. In fact I have heard very few songs that I recognized when I do watch, including hymns......I thought there songs they wrote or something..........It definitely aint' like they invited CeCe to sing.......

Now,I did hear af ew songs that I knew when they had 10C weekend, and when they have people like Pastor Phipps sing. However as far as the weekly show........they definitely don't eve approach anything African or African American in origin...........they have to have somebody balck to sing a spiritual, and I think they have a "acceptable" list for that even....no top tappin', hand clappin', nuthin'....jes stand there and sing...close your eyes and tilt your head back if you really mean it. LOL!!

> QUOTE(Denny @ Jun 11 2007, 03:42 AM)
>
> Believe it.....their 'music of African origin' allergy is showing rofl

---

Posted by: Jnana15 Jun 11 2007, 12:55 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 11 2007, 01:39 PM)
>
> I don't think they sing any music on 3ABN of African origin at all. In fact I have heard very few songs that I recognized when I do watch, including hymns......I thought there songs they wrote or something..........It definitely aint' like they invited CeCe to sing.......
>
> Now,I did hear af ew songs that I knew when they had 10C weekend, and when they have people like Pastor Phipps sing. However as far as the weekly show........they definitely don't eve approach anything African or African American in origin............they have to have somebody balck to sing a spiritual, and I think they have a "acceptable" list for that even....no top tappin', hand clappin', nuthin'....jes stand there and sing...close your eyes and tilt your head back if you really mean it. LOL!!

Okay Di, are you going to laugh at me if I ever sing in public? Cause I sure close my eyes and tilt my head back. I'm singing praises to God, not people. Does that not make me black (I stopped at black, can't get with the African American movement yet) cause I don't toe tap and hand clap in public?

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jun 11 2007, 01:01 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 11 2007, 12:39 PM)
>
> I don't think they sing any music on 3ABN of African origin at all.............they have to have somebody black to sing a spiritual, and I think they have a "acceptable" list for that even....no top tappin', hand clappin', nuthin'....jes stand there and sing...close your eyes and tilt your head back if you really mean it. LOL!!

rofl rofl rofl

Posted by: princessdi Jun 11 2007, 01:09 PM

Naw, Gurl. Most singers I know do the same thing. My point is that is as far as they can go on 3ABN(and at GC for that matter), to the point that it is probably inferred or even mentioned, instead of just letting the singer minister as God leads them. IOW, there is no allowance for the guidance of Holy Spirit.

The way you sing and express praise to God, is yours and your praise belongs to Him. He alone can say whether it is acceptable, not me. It is not for me. If I am giving my own priase, I don't have time to be worried about yours. Neither will you hear me ever critize another's praise given to God. Part of the problem is, for the most part when we come to church or when it come to things of God our focus is horizontal instead of being veritcal, Therefore, we are constantly worried about what our neighbor is doing, and if it is "acceptable to God. Put bluntly, that is none of our business. It is God's house,a nd God's child. Let Him handle His business. At the moment the thing which is most unacceptable to God is us judging another. As they say, "He is God all by Himself, He don't need nobody's help" no mater how well intentioned.

> QUOTE(Jnana15 @ Jun 11 2007, 10:55 AM)
>
> Okay Di, are you going to laugh at me if I ever sing in public? Cause I sure close my eyes and tilt my head back. I'm singing praises to God, not people. Does that not make me black (I stopped at black, can't get with the African American movement yet) cause I don't toe tap and hand clap in public?

Posted by: Artiste Jun 11 2007, 02:57 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 11 2007, 11:09 AM)
>
> Naw, Gurl. Most singers I know do the same thing. My point is that is as far as they can go on 3ABN(and at GC for that matter), to the point that it is probably inferred or even mentioned, instead of just letting the singer minister as God leads them. IOW, there is no allowance for the guidance of Holy Spirit.
>
> The way you sing and express praise to God, is yours and your praise belongs to Him. He alone can say whether it is acceptable, not me. It is not for me. If I am giving my own priase, I don't have time to be worried about yours. Neither will you hear me ever critize another's praise given to God. Part of the problem is, for the most part when we come to church or when it come to things of God our focus is horizontal instead of being veritcal, Therefore, we are constantly worried about what our neighbor is doing, and if it is "acceptable to God. Put bluntly, that is none of our business. It is God's house,a nd God's child. Let Him handle His business. At the moment the thing which is most unacceptable to God is us judging another. As they say, "He is God all by Himself, He don't need nobody's help" no mater how well intentioned.

Well, again, being from Southern California, I can't really relate to all these musical restrictions... We're doing good to have people that even believe in basic Biblical doctrines (like creationism). There's not too much worry about clapping or toe tapping.

****

Posted by: princessdi Jun 11 2007, 03:01 PM

The same here in Northern CA. we got over all that a long time ago.

> QUOTE(Artiste @ Jun 11 2007, 01:57 PM)
>
> Well, again, being from Southern California, I can't really relate to all these musical restrictions... We're doing good to have people that even believe in basic Biblical doctrines (like creationism). There's not too much worry about clapping or toe tapping.
>
> ***

Posted by: Jnana15 Jun 11 2007, 03:59 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 11 2007, 02:09 PM)
>
> Naw, Gurl. Most singers I know do the same thing. My point is that is as far as they can go on 3ABN(and at GC for that matter), to the point that it is probably inferred or even mentioned, instead of just letting the singer minister as God leads them. IOW, there is no allowance for the guidance of Holy Spirit.
>
> The way you sing and express praise to God, is yours and your praise belongs to Him. He alone can say whether it is acceptable, not me. It is not for me. If I am giving my own priase, I don't have time to be worried about yours. Neither will you hear me ever critize another's praise given to God. Part of the problem is, for the most part when we come to church or when it come to things of God our focus is horizontal instead of being veritcal, Therefore, we are constantly worried about what our neighbor is doing, and if it is "acceptable to God. Put bluntly, that is none of our business. It is God's house,a nd God's child. Let Him handle His business. At the moment the thing which is most unacceptable to God is us judging another. As they say, "He is God all by Himself, He don't need nobody's help" no mater how well intentioned.

Hello walls, Preach Sis!

Posted by: Denny Jun 11 2007, 04:10 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 11 2007, 07:39 PM)
>
> I don't think they sing any music on 3ABN of African origin at all. In fact I have heard very few songs that I recognized when I do watch, including hymns......I thought there songs they wrote or something..........It definitely aint' like they invited CeCe to sing.......
>
> Now,I did hear af ew songs that I knew when they had 10C weekend, and when they have people like Pastor Phipps sing. However as far as the weekly show........they definitely don't eve approach anything African or African American in origin...........they have to have somebody balck to sing a spiritual, and I think they have a "acceptable" list for that even....no top tappin', hand clappin', nuthin'....jes stand there and sing...close your eyes and tilt your head back if you really mean it. LOL!!

Exactly they have an allergy they avoid the genre....

Posted by: watchbird Jun 11 2007, 06:46 PM

> QUOTE(Denny @ Jun 11 2007, 06:10 PM)
>
> Exactly they have an allergy they avoid the genre....

Actually I doubt they even know what "genre" they are avoiding. It's mainly a matter that "if it 'moves' you it's sinful".... end of discussion.

Doesn't matter what its heritage or pedegree is... if it triggers a motion of your toes, arms, hands, torso... (especially the latter)... ..... it's devil music for sure. ....

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ For The General Conference Of Seventh-day Adventists:

Posted by: Artiste Jun 7 2007, 03:34 PM

To State the Premise:

3ABN has become the premier world-wide media organization broadcasting Seventh-day Adventist programming for the last 20+ years. It has been widely used as a venue for conference officials, well-known pastors, and General Conference events.

A prominent Seventh-day Adventist leader has referred to it and/or its founder as "the face of Adventism".

Has the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists now relegated 3ABN to "an independent supporting ministry", of which the General Conference is not "taking any particular position in issues which are under the purview of the Board of Directors of 3ABN"?

Legions of trusting Adventists receive 3ABN in their homes. They give their financial and moral support to both the programming and the administration.

Some, however, have heard that there might be problems with it. Being loyal Seventh-day Adventists, they look to the church leadership for guidance.

To be continued...

****

Posted by: Artiste Jun 7 2007, 04:00 PM

Topic: FOR THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS

1. The Premise

2. The Current Public Relations Problem

3. The Plan to Avert Negative PR

4. Discussion of the Plan

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 7 2007, 06:39 PM

> QUOTE(Artiste @ Jun 7 2007, 03:34 PM)
>
> To State the Premise:
>
> 3ABN has become the premier world-wide media organization broadcasting Seventh-day Adventist programming for the last 20+ years. It has been widely used as a venue for conference officials, well-known pastors, and General Conference events.
>
> A prominent Seventh-day Adventist leader has referred to it and/or its founder as "the face of Adventism".

> Has the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists now relegated 3ABN to "an independent supporting ministry", of which the General Conference is not "taking any particular position in issues which are under the purview of the Board of Directors of 3ABN"?
>
> Legions of trusting Adventists receive 3ABN in their homes. They give their financial and moral support to both the programming and the administration.
>
> Some, however, have heard that there might be problems with it. Being loyal Seventh-day Adventists, they look to the church leadership for guidance.
> To be continued...
>
> ***

Vell put, Artiste. It reminds me of parents and their kids....as long as the children are acting right, well ehaved and doing well in school they are "mine" but when they are acting up it turns into "do you know vhat YOUR son/daughter did today????"

3TW, I think I read somewhere that you were victimized? I am so truly sorry to hear that, but I am also hankful you found your way to BSDA to share with us. I also pray you have been able to find some sort of ealing...

Posted by: Artiste Jun 8 2007, 01:34 AM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Jun 7 2007, 04:39 PM)
>
> Well put, Artiste. It reminds me of parents and their kids....as long as the children are acting right, well behaved and doing well in school they are "mine" but when they are acting up it turns into "do you know what YOUR son/daughter did today????"
>
> BTW, I think I read somewhere that you were victimized? I am so truly sorry to hear that, but I am also thankful you found your way to BSDA to share with us. I also pray you have been able to find some sort of healing...

hank you Snoopy for your thoughtfulness. I do appreciate very much the sharing in BSDA that helps lleviate both personal pain from the past and grieving over problems with 3ABN.

Posted by: Artiste Jun 8 2007, 02:44 AM

The Current Public Relations Problem

Given that the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists has traditionally looked with approval upon the activities of 3ABN, the first part of the problem is the possibility of secular media realizing that there is a newsworthy story unfolding.

Relevant questions: How long ago was the leadership of the church first advised of administrative misbehavior at 3ABN? Have the leaders been engaged in a cover-up? Has there been undue influence placed upon church leadership by means of monetary or other causes?

The Seventh-day Adventist church is recognized for its health systems, educational institutions, and missions. Perceived complicity with the type of allegations currently being made against the church's primary media outlet could result in lurid publicity.

The second part of the problem concerns the members of the church. Those currently learning of the difficulties at 3ABN are distressed. The ones who have yet to learn of them may be angry as well as distressed, not having been warned that there is a problem. They have been left to believe that their financial contributions are being used in an appropriate manner.

Posted by: steffan Jun 8 2007, 10:19 AM

> QUOTE(Artiste @ Jun 8 2007, 03:44 AM)
>
> The Current Public Relations Problem
>
> Given that the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists has traditionally looked with approval upon the activities of 3ABN, the first part of the problem is the possibility of secular media realizing that there is a newsworthy story unfolding.
>
> Relevant questions: How long ago was the leadership of the church first advised of administrative misbehavior at 3ABN? Have the leaders been engaged in a cover-up? Has there been undue influence placed upon church leadership by means of monetary or other causes?
>
> The Seventh-day Adventist church is recognized for its health systems, educational institutions, and missions. Perceived complicity with the type of allegations currently being made against the church's primary media outlet could result in lurid publicity.
>
> The second part of the problem concerns the members of the church. Those currently learning of the difficulties at 3ABN are distressed. The ones who have yet to learn of them may be angry as well as distressed, not having been warned that there is a problem. They have been left to believe that their financial contributions are being used in an appropriate manner.

Though your post first appears as if you know what the conference learders are thinking, you apparently do not.

June 5, 2007
Dictated May 31, 2007

Your e-mail is the first that I have heard about me sending out a letter to our pastors not to preach on 3ABN. I hope that you have not circulated such an untruth. I know nothing of such a letter. Just today I was talking with an Adventist leader about the good that I feel 3ABN has accomplished and is accomplishing.

It is true that I have not called Danny Shelton lately. I do not chase down negative rumors, nor do I spread them. It would be impossible for me to keep up with all the bad rumors I hear if I ever wanted to follow all of them.

There are many people who need to hear the gospel. Let's do all we can to tell them.

Don C. Schneider
President
North American Division of Seventh-day Adventist

NEXT EMAIL

In response - all I can say is that there has been no change or > review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the > General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.
>
> Blessings.

> --Rajmund Dabrowski
> Communication Director
> Seventh-day Adventist Church
> World Headquarters
> 12501 Old Columbia Pike

Silver Spring MD 20904 USA

Now I have a reply from an AF official. While I was ask not to post the email I can tell you, in essence, what it said.
AF is a totally self supporting ministry and receives no financial support from the GC or Nad. The link with the conference is that some board members are conference ordained ministers or conference employees.
As for the 3abn allegations, it is gossip that people are reading on the internet. Most is untrue and/or taken out of context.

Then we have the post by Greg M. that says that maybe the statement by Elder Hankinson wasn't accurate due to it's brevity.

So, here you have it from 2 very important people in Leadership that can be named and one from AF that is "in the know." This is not speculation from conference leaders. They have put it in writing.
So where does this leave all of the unnamed sources that are "high up" in leadership that have been quoted by SSOM and several others which paints an opposite picture? Does this mean Elder Schneider and Mr. Dabroski are lying? Or does this mean SSOM is lying? Or could it be that all off these "anonymous high up officials" are not so "high up" afterall and evidently not in the "know" as much as they are credited for.
Let me point out another major issue that has been ignored here. Go to the real and authentic www.3abn.org site and look under 3abn history or just go to this link http://www.3abn.org/pdf/commitment.pdf. Under the resolve issues chapter, The conference plainly states that they will act on or order nothing without first communicating with 3abn and then proceeding to try and resolve any issues that might arrive.
So, if the Conference is issueing orders to avoid 3abn, were they lying in this contract? Or, as mentioned earlier, have some of you gotten your information wrong or are listening to the wrong people? What a surprise!!!!

Posted by: princessdi Jun 8 2007, 10:30 AM

More of a surprise is that you thought you would get any other answers. Also you should probably rea dthe toher thread about this. we already know that there has been no "official" change in status, and that GC will never put in writing such a proclamation, and....nevermind!

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 8 2007, 12:02 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 8 2007, 08:19 AM) ☐
>
> Though your post first appears as if you know what the conference learders are thinking, you apparently do not.
>
> June 5, 2007
> Dictated May 31, 2007
>
> Your e-mail is the first that I have heard about me sending out a letter to our pastors not to preach on 3ABN. I hope that you have not circulated such an untruth. I know nothing of such a letter. Just today I was talking with an Adventist leader about the good that I feel 3ABN has accomplished and is accomplishing.
>
> It is true that I have not called Danny Shelton lately. I do not chase down negative rumors, nor do I spread them. It would be impossible for me to keep up with all the bad rumors I hear if I ever wanted to > follow all of them.

>
> There are many people who need to hear the gospel. Let's do all we can to tell them.
>
> Don C. Schneider
> President
> North American Division of Seventh-day Adventist

teffan, hank you for posting this email. I have a few questions about it:

. Is this the complete email from Pres. Schneider or has it been edited?
. Did he send it to you personally?
. Did he see the email from Denis Hankinson that was posted by sonshineonme?

> QUOTE
>
> NEXT EMAIL
>
> In response - all I can say is that there has been no change or > > review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the > > General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.
> **>
> > Blessings.
>
> > --Rajmund Dabrowski
> > Communication Director
> > Seventh-day Adventist Church
> > World Headquarters
> > 12501 Old Columbia Pike
> Silver Spring MD 20904 USA

hile this is certainly along somewhat similar lines to the email that Gregory Matthews received from ajmund Dabrowski, there are some notable differences. I have bolded the similarities and highlighted in olor the great differences between the two:

> QUOTE
>
> Dear Brother Matthews
>
> Thank you for your enquiry which I received while traveling in another part of the world. I am still on the road. In reference to your communication, and a comment you are quoting from the Internet chat forums, may I share with you the following:
>
> The General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists has received a number of inquiries into the status of Three Angels Broadcasting Network (3ABN) as a supporting ministry of the Church. There has been no change or review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Due to ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN, the General Conference administration has taken a position that until these matters have been addressed that the General Conference personnel not involve 3ABN for new program development and production. This approach does not reflect that the General Conference is taking any particular position in issues which are under the purview of the Board of Directors of 3ABN, which is an independent supporting ministry. The GC's position applies to General Conference personnel.
> Blessings.

> --Rajmund Dabrowski
> Communication Director
> Seventh-day Adventist Church
> World Headquarters
> 12501 Old Columbia Pike
> Silver Spring MD 20904 USA
> <www.adventist.org>
> Phone: 301-680-6300
> Fax: 301-680-6312
> e-mail: dabrowskir@gc.adventist.org

Not quite the clear cut picture your email from Rajmund Dabrowski seems to paint.

> QUOTE
>
> Now I have a reply from an AF official. While I was ask not to post the email I can tell you, in essence, what it said.
> AF is a totally self supporting ministry and receives no financial support from the GC or Nad. The link with the conference is that some board members are conference ordained ministers or conference employees.
> As for the 3abn allegations, it is gossip that people are reading on the internet. Most is untrue and/or taken out of context.

Sorry Steffan, it is hard to trust that you are truly giving the "essence" of what that AF official actually said, especially since the AF Chairman of the Board said the following about the connection between AF and the conference:

> QUOTE
>
> From: Jim Pedersen
> Sent: Thursday, April 26, 2007 4:25 PM
> Subject: Re: Amazing Facts
>
> Hi, nice to chat with you. Let me respond with some clarifications to the AF questions you raise.
>
> Amazing Facts is listed in the NAD Yearbook under the Northern California Conference. That makes them an official SDA entity, with ties to NCC — "under the umbrella" of NCC.
> Amazing Facts has its own separate board of directors. Thus, the NCC does not directly oversee the ministry. As NCC President, I chair the AF board, as per the AF Bylaws. However, the constituency of AF is technically made up of a majority of NCC members.
> As a SDA entity, AF leaders and evangelists are entitled to receive SDA credentials. Currently, those credentials are issued by the Pacific Union Conference, not NCC.
> I'm not sure what "certificates" you make reference to. Please clarify.
> If AF and 3ABN actually merge, there would be a new constituency and a new board, which would take them out from under the umbrella of the NCC, as I understand it.
> There is no direct financial support from NCC to AF. They handle their own payroll, raise their own funds, etc.
>
> I hope this helps. Feel free to contact me again as needed.
>
> Best wishes,
>
> Jim
> --
> James E. Pedersen
> President
> Northern California Conference of Seventh-day Adventists > 401 Taylor Blvd.
> P.O. Box 23165

> Pleasant Hill, CA 94523
> 925-685-4300 x1200
> jpedersen@ncc.adventist.org

> QUOTE
>
> Then we have the post by Greg M. that says that maybe the statement by Elder Hankinson wasn't accurate due to it's brevity.
>
> So, here you have it from 2 very important people in Leadership that can be named and one from AF that is "in the know." This is not speculation from conference leaders. They have put it in writing.
> So where does this leave all of the unnamed sources that are "high up" in leadership that have been quoted by SSOM and several others which paints an opposite picture? Does this mean Elder Schneider and Mr. Dabroski are lying? Or does this mean SSOM is lying? Or could it be that all off these "anonymous high up officials" are not so "high up" afterall and evidently not in the "know" as much as they are credited for.
> Let me point out another major issue that has been ignored here. Go to the real and authentic www.3abn.org site and look under 3abn history or just go to this link http://www.3abn.org/pdf/commitment.pdf. Under the resolve issues chapter, The conference plainly states that they will act on or order nothing without first communicating with 3abn and then proceeding to try and resolve any issues that might arrive.
> So, if the Conference is issueing orders to avoid 3abn, were they lying in this contract? Or, as mentioned earlier, have some of you gotten your information wrong or are listening to the wrong people? What a surprise!!!!

Would this sentence, taken from Rajmund Dubrowski's email to Gregory Matthews be construed as avoiding 3abn?

"Due to ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN, the General Conference administration has taken a position that until these matters have been addressed that the General Conference personnel not nvolve 3ABN for new program development and production. "

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 8 2007, 12:11 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 8 2007, 10:19 AM) ☐
>
> Though your post first appears as if you know what the conference learders are thinking, you apparently do not.
>
> June 5, 2007
> Dictated May 31, 2007
>
> Your e-mail is the first that I have heard about me sending out a letter to our pastors not to preach on 3ABN. I hope that you have not circulated such an untruth. I know nothing of such a letter. Just today I was talking with an Adventist leader about the good that I feel 3ABN has accomplished and is accomplishing.
>
> It is true that I have not called Danny Shelton lately. I do not chase down negative rumors, nor do I spread them. It would be impossible for me to keep up with all the bad rumors I hear if I ever wanted to follow all of them.
>
> There are many people who need to hear the gospel. Let's do all we can to tell them.

> Don C. Schneider
> President
> North American Division of Seventh-day Adventist
>
> NEXT EMAIL
>
> In response - all I can say is that there has been no change or > > review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the > > General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.
> **>
> > Blessings.
>
> > --Rajmund Dabrowski
> > Communication Director
> > Seventh-day Adventist Church
> > World Headquarters
> > 12501 Old Columbia Pike
> Silver Spring MD 20904 USA
>
> Now I have a reply from an AF official. While I was ask not to post the email I can tell you, in essence, what it said.
> AF is a totally self supporting ministry and receives no financial support from the GC or Nad. The link with the conference is that some board members are conference ordained ministers or conference employees.
> As for the 3abn allegations, it is gossip that people are reading on the internet. Most is untrue and/or taken out of context.
>
> Then we have the post by Greg M. that says that maybe the statement by Elder Hankinson wasn't accurate due to it's brevity.
>
> So, here you have it from 2 very important people in Leadership that can be named and one from AF that is "in the know." This is not speculation from conference leaders. They have put it in writing.
> So where does this leave all of the unnamed sources that are "high up" in leadership that have been quoted by SSOM and several others which paints an opposite picture? Does this mean Elder Schneider and Mr. Dabroski are lying? Or does this mean SSOM is lying? Or could it be that all off these "anonymous high up officials" are not so "high up" afterall and evidently not in the "know" as much as they are credited for.
> Let me point out another major issue that has been ignored here. Go to the real and authentic www.3abn.org site and look under 3abn history or just go to this link http://www.3abn.org/pdf/commitment.pdf. Under the resolve issues chapter, The conference plainly states that they will act on or order nothing without first communicating with 3abn and then proceeding to try and resolve any issues that might arrive.
> So, if the Conference is issueing orders to avoid 3abn, were they lying in this contract? Or, as mentioned earlier, have some of you gotten your information wrong or are listening to the wrong people? What a surprise!!!!

Steffan,

'd be real interested in your response to the statement made by Brother Dabrowski to Brother Matthews (and posted at the following link), since you seem to have left this one out of your summary:

http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=13733&view=findpost&p=198809

****

Dear Brother Matthews

Thank you for your enquiry which I received while traveling in another part of the world. I am still on the road. In reference to your communication, and a comment you are quoting from the Internet chat forums, may I share with you the following:

The General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists has received a number of inquiries into the status of Three Angels Broadcasting Network (3ABN) as a supporting ministry of the Church. There has been no change or review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Due to ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN, the General Conference administration has taken a position that until these matters have been addressed that the General Conference personnel not involve 3ABN for new program development and production. This approach does not reflect that the General Conference is taking any particular position in issues which are under the purview of the Board of Directors of 3ABN, which is an independent supporting ministry. The GC's position applies to General Conference personnel.

Blessings.

--Rajmund Dabrowski
Communication Director
Seventh-day Adventist Church
World Headquarters
12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring MD 20904 USA
<www.adventist.org>
Phone: 301-680-6300
Fax: 301-680-6312
e-mail: dabrowskir@gc.adventist.org

****

A couple of questions come to mind:

1. Are there ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN?? YES........or..........NO
2. If YES, then I rest my case.
3. If NO, woud you say that the Communications Director of the SDA Church is......could it be....are you saying.......that this highly respected individual......might be LYING???? Oh my.
4. OR, could it be that the GC left hand does not know what the GC right hand is doing/saying/typing??? Again, hhhhmmmm......

OK, and here's another question. You say that AF is completely independent of the GC/NAD and receives no support from either. Yet, I read somewhere that AF employees are considered conference employees and received conference benefits. Which is it, or is it both?? Could you help clarify that for me with your "AF official"? I'd appreciate it immensely!!

I also find it noteworthy that the emails posted from Brother Dabrowski include complete contact information for the writer, yet the email from Brother Schneider does not. Hhhmmm.... Hhhhmmm........ Hhhhmmm...........

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 8 2007, 12:02 PM)
>
> Steffan,
> Thank you for posting this email. I have a few questions about it:
>
> 1. Is this the complete email from Pres. Schneider or has it been edited?
> 2. Did he send it to you personally?
> 3. Did he see the email from Denis Hankinson that was posted by sonshineonme?
>
> While this is certainly along somewhat similar lines to the email that Gregory Matthews received from Rajmund Dabrowski, there are some notable differences. I have bolded the similarities and highlighted in color the great differences between the two:
> Not quite the clear cut picture your email from Rajmund Dabrowski seems to paint.

> Sorry Steffan, it is hard to trust that you are truly giving the "essence" of what that AF official actually said, especially since the AF Chairman of the Board said the following about the connection between AF and the conference:
> Would this sentence, taken from Rajmund Dubrowski's email to Gregory Matthews be construed as avoiding 3abn?
>
> "Due to ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN, the General Conference administration has taken a position that until these matters have been addressed that the General Conference personnel not involve 3ABN for new program development and production. "

Excellent post, PB!! We must have shared the same page, at the same time!!! It appears that our friend Steffan is a bit selective in the emails he chooses to quote...BTJM...

Posted by: Whtz Happenin Jun 8 2007, 12:35 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 8 2007, 12:19 PM)
>
> ...
> Let me point out another major issue that has been ignored here. Go to the real and authentic www.3abn.org site and look under 3abn history or just go to this link http://www.3abn.org/pdf/commitment.pdf. Under the resolve issues chapter, The conference plainly states that they will act on or order nothing without first communicating with 3abn and then proceeding to try and resolve any issues that might arrive.
> So, if the Conference is issueing orders to avoid 3abn, were they lying in this contract? Or, as mentioned earlier, have some of you gotten your information wrong or are listening to the wrong people? What a surprise!!!!

Thanks Steffan for pointing this document out.

Thoughts:

 This document is ten years old. It lists a lady by the name of Linda Shelton as Vice President. I searched the entire 3ABN website and cannot find this name anywhere else. One would think that this agreement would have been updated since 1997, especially since it seems that this lady has not been involved with 3ABN very much, if at all.

 I read the history page. http://www.3abn.org/3abn_history.cfm find it interesting that in the first three paragraphs God is included 4 times, but then God is not listed anymore. The most popular word seems to be "Shelton" and this word is listed 15 times. This "Shelton" sure has been able to do a lot it seems and based on the history write up, most of it by himself. The only family member mentioned is a daughter that is mentioned early on.

Ok, enough of the funny talk... Steffan, now that you have pointed this document out, do you really think if it s possible to have this ten year old document updated, it would still be on the website?

Now that you have pointed this document out to us, it brings up the question of why it is still on the website since it is obvious that every other reference to Linda Shelton has been removed.

1. Either no one has thought to remove it?

2. Or is it that this document is actually more important to Danny, even though it has Linda's name on it, han trying to get an updated one.

What are your thoughts Steffan? Do you think the GC would sign this commitment again today?

I was curious if this document has been discussed. The search found two places that "Joint Declaration" is discussed:

1. A post by tall73 located in the "3abn, Left Out" thread at:
http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=11339&view=findpost&p=158375

This post is followed by a discussion on this document.

2. A post by watchbird in the "3ABN crucial documents, some context" at:

http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9194&view=findpost&p=159770

I believe it would be helpful for others to review these two threads.

Thanks Steffan. Your post was very enlightening.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 8 2007, 02:07 PM

Well, if at all possible, that document will be gone ASAP. They removed all they could think of and those they missed they removed as they were brought to their attention.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jun 8 2007, 02:09 PM

Dateline: Brindisi, Italy
Date: 64 AD

Personally, we think Nero plays the violin beautifully, and we need to go about our business of filling the world with inspiring music rather than spreading ugly rumors about smoke and fire.

General Conference Fire Inspectors
12501 Appian Way
Brindisi, Italy

P.S. We have temporarily suspended our visits to Rome due to ongoing administrative issues there. This policy applies to General Conference personnel.

☒ rofl

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 8 2007, 02:26 PM

Panama_Pete,

You have such a way with words!

☒

Posted by: Artiste Jun 8 2007, 09:23 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jun 8 2007, 12:09 PM) ☐
>
> Dateline: Brindisi, Italy
> Date: 64 AD
>
> Personally, we think Nero plays the violin beautifully, and we need to go about our business of filling the > world with inspiring music rather than spreading ugly rumors about smoke and fire.

>
> General Conference Fire Inspectors
> 12501 Appian Way
> Brindisi, Italy
>
> P.S. We have temporarily suspended our visits to Rome due to ongoing administrative issues there. This policy applies to General Conference personnel.
>
> ☒ rofl

Wonderful, Pete! ☐

****

Posted by: princessdi Jun 8 2007, 09:28 PM

☒ Stop!!! ☒ rofl

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jun 8 2007, 01:09 PM) ☐
>
> Dateline: Brindisi, Italy
> Date: 64 AD
>
> Personally, we think Nero plays the violin beautifully, and we need to go about our business of filling the world with inspiring music rather than spreading ugly rumors about smoke and fire.
>
> General Conference Fire Inspectors
> 12501 Appian Way
> Brindisi, Italy
>
> P.S. We have temporarily suspended our visits to Rome due to ongoing administrative issues there. This policy applies to General Conference personnel.
>
> ☒ rofl

Posted by: mikell Jun 8 2007, 09:35 PM

Pete, that was GOOD! ☐

Posted by: sonshineonme Jun 8 2007, 10:26 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jun 8 2007, 01:09 PM) ☐
>
> Dateline: Brindisi, Italy
> Date: 64 AD

> Personally, we think Nero plays the violin beautifully, and we need to go about our business of filling the world with inspiring music rather than spreading ugly rumors about smoke and fire.
>
> General Conference Fire Inspectors
> 12501 Appian Way
> Brindisi, Italy
>
> P.S. We have temporarily suspended our visits to Rome due to ongoing administrative issues there. This policy applies to General Conference personnel.
>
> rofl

ou are so you! i love it! perfect as always!!

Posted by: steffan Jun 9 2007, 10:58 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 8 2007, 01:02 PM)
>
> Steffan,
> Thank you for posting this email. I have a few questions about it:
>
> 1. Is this the complete email from Pres. Schneider or has it been edited?
> 2. Did he send it to you personally?
> 3. Did he see the email from Denis Hankinson that was posted by sonshineonme?

B, you have know basis for which to accuse me of editing emails or anything else. If editing emails is a roblem with you I am sure then, you don't believe anything on Joy's site since that is habitually done. I, owever, have not done in anything like that and take offense at your insinuations.
he emails from Pres Schneider was not touched. The same email was sent to me and another person I know hat also inquired about the status of the GC and the 3abn.
f course he didn't "see" the email from sson as he doesn't read internet gossip but, it was sent to him along vith the inquiries.
s far as the communications director what I posted of his email was taken directly off of this site and I elieve was posted by Observer. I didn't post it in it's entirety since Observer already had done so.
i answered my post by saying you were all aware the status with 3abn had not changed as these emails lainly explain, so why are you trying to act like I am being deceitful and making things up? You and Di are, fterall, on the same side so maybe you should examine her post with the same scrutiny you examined mine.

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 9 2007, 02:33 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 9 2007, 10:58 AM)
>
> PB, you have know basis for which to accuse me of editing emails or anything else. If editing emails is a problem with you I am sure then, you don't believe anything on Joy's site since that is habitually done. I, however, have not done in anything like that and take offense at your insinuations.
> The emails from Pres Schneider was not touched. The same email was sent to me and another person I > know that also inquired about the status of the GC and the 3abn.

> Of course he didn't "see" the email from sson as he doesn't read internet gossip but, it was sent to him along with the inquiries.
> As far as the communications director what I posted of his email was taken directly off of this site and I believe was posted by Observer. I didn't post it in it's entirety since Observer already had done so.
> Di answered my post by saying you were all aware the status with 3abn had not changed as these emails plainly explain, so why are you trying to act like I am being deceitful and making things up? You and Di are, afterall, on the same side so maybe you should examine her post with the same scrutiny you examined mine.

Steffan,

am feeling ignored!!!! If you are through berating PB, could you please answer my questions from this post:

http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=13765&view=findpost&p=198947

I'll copy my questions again here:
Steffan,

'd be real interested in your response to the statement made by Brother Dabrowski to Brother Matthews (and posted at the following link), since you seem to have left this one out of your summary:

http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s...st&p=198809

****

Dear Brother Matthews

Thank you for your enquiry which I received while traveling in another part of the world. I am still on the road. In reference to your communication, and a comment you are quoting from the Internet chat forums, may I share with you the following:

The General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists has received a number of inquiries into the status of Three Angels Broadcasting Network (3ABN) as a supporting ministry of the Church. There has been no change or review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Due to ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN, the General Conference administration has taken a position that until these matters have been addressed that the General Conference personnel not involve 3ABN for new program development and production. This approach does not reflect that the General Conference is taking any particular position in issues which are under the purview of the Board of Directors of 3ABN, which is an independent supporting ministry. The GC's position applies to General Conference personnel.

Blessings.

-Rajmund Dabrowski
Communication Director
Seventh-day Adventist Church
World Headquarters
12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring MD 20904 USA
<www.adventist.org>
Phone: 301-680-6300
Fax: 301-680-6312
e-mail: dabrowskir@gc.adventist.org

****

A couple of questions come to mind:

1. Are there ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN?? YES........or..........NO
2. If YES, then I rest my case.
3. If NO, woud you say that the Communications Director of the SDA Church is......could it be....are you saying.......that this highly respected individual......might be LYING???? Oh my.
4. OR, could it be that the GC left hand does not know what the GC right hand is doing/saying/typing??? Again, hhhhmmmm......

OK, and here's another question. You say that AF is completely independent of the GC/NAD and receives no support from either. Yet, I read somewhere that AF employees are considered conference employees and received conference benefits. Which is it, or is it both?? Could you help clarify that for me with your "AF official"? I'd appreciate it immensely!!

I also find it noteworthy that the emails posted from Brother Dabrowski include complete contact information for the writer, yet the email from Brother Schneider does not. Hhhmmm.... Hhhhmmm........ Hhhhmmm...........

Posted by: Johann Jun 9 2007, 03:30 PM

Deleted for now

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 9 2007, 03:33 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 9 2007, 09:58 AM)
>
> PB, you have know basis for which to accuse me of editing emails or anything else. If editing emails is a problem with you I am sure then, you don't believe anything on Joy's site since that is habitually done. I, however, have not done in anything like that and take offense at your insinuations.

Steffan,

I was not accusing you of editing emails, simply asking if Don Schneider's email was presented in its entirety. I also was not insinuating that you had done any thing of the sort. I am sorry that my questions offended you for that was not my intention.

> QUOTE
>
> The emails from Pres Schneider was not touched. The same email was sent to me and another person I know that also inquired about the status of the GC and the 3abn.
> Of course he didn't "see" the email from sson as he doesn't read internet gossip but, it was sent to him along with the inquiries.

Thank you for answering my questions! I appreciate that.

> QUOTE
>
> As far as the communications director what I posted of his email was taken directly off of this site and I believe was posted by Observer. I didn't post it in it's entirety since Observer already had done so.

If this is the case, then you have edited it to the point where the statement from Dabrowski is altered from the original that he sent to Gregory. I doubt that you did this intentionally or maliciously, at least I hope not, but by your editing you did change what the communications director said when you added your own extra words and yet posted the statement as if it was Dabrowski's own.

Your posted version:

In response - all I can say is that there has been no change or review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

What Dabrowski actually wrote:

There has been no change or review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

> QUOTE
>
> Di answered my post by saying you were all aware the status with 3abn had not changed as these emails plainly explain, so why are you trying to act like I am being deceitful and making things up? You and Di are, afterall, on the same side so maybe you should examine her post with the same scrutiny you examined mine.

Steffan,

I am sorry that you feel I am trying to act like you are being deceitful and making things up. I didn't accuse you of that. The information from your "source" conflicted with what the AF Board of Directors Chairman wrote. Given the choice, I will believe what I can see with my eyes from a person I deem a credible source and not the "essense" of a statement from some unnamed source who won't even allow his words to be posted.

As for Di's post, we have all seen the email that states the status of 3abn being a supporting ministry of the GC remains the same. Some may believe that to be the case, others will wait to make of their minds until the information plays out more fully to see if what Denis Hankinson emailed is also valid. The bottom line is, the conference has taken a position to distance its personnel from involvement with 3abn in regards to progamming due to ongoing adminstrative issues at 3abn.

Hopefully, one day you will see that this truly isn't a brother against brother, side vs. side issue. The side many of us are on and have always been on is God's side.

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 10 2007, 09:38 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Jun 9 2007, 02:33 PM)
>
> Steffan,
>
> I am feeling ignored!!!! If you are through berating PB, could you please answer my questions from this post:
>
> http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=13765&view=findpost&p=198947
>
> I'll copy my questions again here:
> Steffan,

> I'd be real interested in your response to the statement made by Brother Dabrowski to Brother Matthews (and posted at the following link), since you seem to have left this one out of your summary:
>
> http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s...st&p=198809
>
> *************************
>
> Dear Brother Matthews
> Thank you for your enquiry which I received while traveling in another part of the world. I am still on the road. In reference to your communication, and a comment you are quoting from the Internet chat forums, may I share with you the following:
> The General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists has received a number of inquiries into the status of Three Angels Broadcasting Network (3ABN) as a supporting ministry of the Church. There has been no change or review of the status of 3ABN as a supporting ministry by the Seventh-day Adventist Church.
> Due to ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN, the General Conference administration has taken a position that until these matters have been addressed that the General Conference personnel not involve 3ABN for new program development and production. This approach does not reflect that the General Conference is taking any particular position in issues which are under the purview of the Board of Directors of 3ABN, which is an independent supporting ministry. The GC's position applies to General Conference personnel.
> Blessings.
> --Rajmund Dabrowski
> Communication Director
> Seventh-day Adventist Church
> World Headquarters
> 12501 Old Columbia Pike
> Silver Spring MD 20904 USA
> <www.adventist.org>
> Phone: 301-680-6300
> Fax: 301-680-6312
> e-mail: dabrowskir@gc.adventist.org
>
> *************************
>
> A couple of questions come to mind:
>
> 1. Are there ongoing administrative issues at 3ABN?? YES........or..........NO
> 2. If YES, then I rest my case.
> 3. If NO, woud you say that the Communications Director of the SDA Church is......could it be....are you saying.......that this highly respected individual......might be LYING???? Oh my.
> 4. OR, could it be that the GC left hand does not know what the GC right hand is doing/saying/typing??? Again, hhhhmmmm......
>
> OK, and here's another question. You say that AF is completely independent of the GC/NAD and receives no support from either. Yet, I read somewhere that AF employees are considered conference employees and received conference benefits. Which is it, or is it both?? Could you help clarify that for me with your "AF official"? I'd appreciate it immensely!!
>
> I also find it noteworthy that the emails posted from Brother Dabrowski include complete contact information for the writer, yet the email from Brother Schneider does not. Hhhmmm.... Hhhhmmm........ Hhhhmmm...........

)K Steffan, I think your lack of response is a clear answer to my questions. But you know what? If the :ommunications Director of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists thinks there are "ongoing ıdministrative isses at 3ABN" there must be something wrong somewhere!! Just because you chose to ignore t doesn't make it go away!!! You might want to check your medications.....

Reality" and "Steffan's perception of reality" are obviously not in agreement!!

Posted by: Artiste Jun 10 2007, 10:47 PM

> QUOTE(Artiste @ Jun 7 2007, 01:34 PM)
>
> To State the Premise:
>
> 3ABN has become the premier world-wide media organization broadcasting Seventh-day Adventist programming for the last 20+ years. It has been widely used as a venue for conference officials, well-known pastors, and General Conference events.
>
> A prominent Seventh-day Adventist leader has referred to it and/or its founder as "the face of Adventism".
>
> Has the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists now relegated 3ABN to "an independent supporting ministry", of which the General Conference is not "taking any particular position in issues which are under the purview of the Board of Directors of 3ABN"?
>
> Legions of trusting Adventists receive 3ABN in their homes. They give their financial and moral support to both the programming and the administration.
>
> Some, however, have heard that there might be problems with it. Being loyal Seventh-day Adventists, they look to the church leadership for guidance.
> To be continued...
>
> ***

****

> QUOTE(Artiste @ Jun 7 2007, 02:00 PM)
>
> Topic: FOR THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISTS
>
> 1. The Premise
>
> 2. The Current Public Relations Problem
>
> 3. The Plan to Avert Negative PR
>
> 4. Discussion of the Plan

****

> QUOTE(Artiste @ Jun 8 2007, 12:44 AM)
>
> The Current Public Relations Problem
>
> Given that the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists has traditionally looked with approval upon the activities of 3ABN, the first part of the problem is the possibility of secular media realizing that there is a newsworthy story unfolding.
>
> Relevant questions: How long ago was the leadership of the church first advised of administrative misbehavior at 3ABN? Have the leaders been engaged in a cover-up? Has there been undue influence placed upon church leadership by means of monetary or other causes?

> The Seventh-day Adventist church is recognized for its health systems, educational institutions, and missions. Perceived complicity with the type of allegations currently being made against the church's primary media outlet could result in lurid publicity.
>
> The second part of the problem concerns the members of the church. Those currently learning of the difficulties at 3ABN are distressed. The ones who have yet to learn of them may be angry as well as distressed, not having been warned that there is a problem. They have been left to believe that their financial contributions are being used in an appropriate manner.

Posted by: Artiste Jun 10 2007, 11:01 PM

The Plan to Avert Negative PR

Coming from a recognizable church leader, a statement would be disseminated to various church publications and leadership. (Using here a fictitious name)

****

James Porter, General Conference President of Seventh-day Adventists, has released the following statement:

"While we realize that the TV media outlet 3ABN (Three Angels Broadcasting Network) has been for many years influential for good as a venue for our church teachings, we must admit that various allegations of misconduct concerning 3ABN personnel have surfaced.

In the interests of our church constituency, we are launching an investigation into the allegations. We will thoroughly examine evidence of any wrongdoing and make the appropriate recommendations to our church members as to how to relate to this self-supporting organization."

****

Following this, an official investigation would be undertaken by a committee appointed for the purpose, with the results reported to Adventist church members.

Posted by: Artiste Jun 10 2007, 11:42 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jun 8 2007, 12:09 PM)
>
> Dateline: Brindisi, Italy
> Date: 64 AD
>
> Personally, we think Nero plays the violin beautifully, and we need to go about our business of filling the world with inspiring music rather than spreading ugly rumors about smoke and fire.
>
> General Conference Fire Inspectors
> 12501 Appian Way
> Brindisi, Italy
>
> P.S. We have temporarily suspended our visits to Rome due to ongoing administrative issues there. This policy applies to General Conference personnel.

Posted by: Artiste Jun 11 2007, 04:45 PM

Discussion of the Plan

Is there a reason for a church leader to make a public statement in case of widely circulated reports, rumors, or gossip about perceived problems with an entity so closely connected to the worldwide Seventh-day Adventist church image as 3ABN?

Large public corporations realize the value of damage control. Corporations have not only suffered a blow to their image but also have been criticized for not being open and aboveboard concerning serious problems that have become generally known.

Once a public statement has been made, the church can be seen as trying to solve the perceived problem in an honest and sincere manner.

****

☒

☒ IPB

☒

Board Rules - Please Read Gallery Arcade Help Search Members Calendar

Welcome Guest (Log In | Register)

☒ HSU

☒ >

BlackSDA > General Fellowship > 3ABN

Latest Shouts In The Shoutbox -- View The Shoutbox

☒ Collapse

leehaw -- Hey Everybody!!
LeePaDee -- All afternoon... Hey
Clay -- hey Den
Denny -- afternoon all.
leehaw -- Nite Nite Sis! ☒ hug.gif
Seraphim7 -- Good nite fam
princessdi -- ahhh
MsHoly1 -- The one for the Princess!
MsHoly1 -- You must ask?

Skin Default [ ] Shout Clear Smilies BBCodes

Refresh

19 Pages ☐ < 1 2 3 4 5 > »

☒ Start new

☐ 3ABN

Forum Options ☐

	Topic Title	Replies	Topic Starter	Views	Last Action
☑	10 Commandmants Weekend ☐ 1 2 3 » 11 (moved from Lawsuits Filed thread)	164	LaurenceD	4,321	11th June 2007 - 12:43 AM Last post by: mozart
☑	Maybe, It Is More Smoke Then Fire? ☐ 1 2 3 4	48	sdaguy	1,466	10th June 2007 - 09:14 AM Last post by: PeacefullyBewildered
☑	John Lomacang : Saturday's Campmeeting Sermonette ☐ 1 2 3 4 "main points" transcript	46	maggiecttr	1,339	8th June 2007 - 11:06 PM Last post by: mozart
☑	AToday NewBreak Article on 3ABN ☐ 1 2 3 » 10	139	sonshineonme	5,893	8th June 2007 - 06:43 AM Last post by: lurker
☑	Doug In Denial? Or Danny's Bluff? ☐ 1 2 3 » 5	61	Pickle	2,749	5th June 2007 - 01:56 PM Last post by: mikell

✓	Poll: "the Evidence Will All Be Brought Out In A Court Of Law" ☐ 1 2 3 Danny's strategy?	38	Pickle	1,270	4th June 2007 - 03:17 PM Last post by: ex3ABNemployee
✓	☐Free Enterprise ☐ 1 2	24	lurker	899	4th June 2007 - 03:53 AM Last post by: Johann
✓	Legal Posturing ☐ 1 2 3 » 8	114	Observer	3,580	3rd June 2007 - 02:13 PM Last post by: Snoopy
✓	☐What Is Happening With Linda? ☐ 1 2 3 » 20	287	Observer	12,098	2nd June 2007 - 10:17 PM Last post by: Snoopy
✓	Questions From Gailon Joy ☐ 1 2	17	Observer	930	2nd June 2007 - 08:39 PM Last post by: Snoopy
✓	Proofs, Or Lack Thereof ☐ 1 2 3 » ☐ 19 A concern of causing false assumptions	277	Richard Sherwin	6,878	1st June 2007 - 06:49 PM Last post by: SoulEspresso
✓	3abn Action Steps what is being done	12	icedragon	571	31st May 2007 - 06:55 PM Last post by: mozart
✓	Arbitration & Mediation	1	Observer	250	30th May 2007 - 02:48 AM Last post by: Fran
✓	Behind The Scenes ☐ 1 2 3 » 6 By Jorgen VanBraun	89	sister	3,941	29th May 2007 - 07:13 PM Last post by: Rosyroi
✓	Reason For Divorce Is lusting grounds for divorce?	0	summertime	147	29th May 2007 - 05:01 PM Last post by: summertime

Enter Keywords ☐ Search forum

19 Pages ☐ < 1 2 [✓ 3] 4 5 > »

☒ Start new

3 User(s) are browsing this forum (2 Guests and 0 Anonymous Users)

1 Members: Observer

☐	New Replies	☐	Poll (New)
☐	No New Replies	☐	Poll (No New)
☐	Hot Topic (New)	☐	Locked Topic
☐	Hot Topic (No New)	☐	Moved Topic

|-- 3ABN Go

Order: Last Post Z-A Show All

Topics: All Go

Lo-Fi Version Time is now: 2nd July 2007 - 08:26 AM

Invision Power Board v2.1.7 © 2007 IPS, Inc.

☒ ☒ ☒

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ 10 Commandmants Weekend

Posted by: LaurenceD May 4 2007, 09:11 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene)
>
> This weekend the complete recipe will be the 10 commandment weekend being held in Chicago. Starts 9am central time goes until about 10 pm saturday night. Then repeats until sunday 9am where it continues until 1pm. Lots of music from some 3abn singers and others from the area of Chicago. Wintley P, John L, Doug B, Jim Gilley, and David A. just to name a few of the speakers. The Chicago churches have supported this endeavor fervently. A huge crowd is expected. Don't miss a blessing. Be sure and tune in.

I wonder if any of these speakers will be presenting the 10 Commandments as described in Exodus 34.

For those not familiar what is apparently an older version of the commandments...here's a little quiz. What are the 10 Commandmants as described in Exodus 34?

> Ex 34:1And the LORD said unto Moses, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest.
>
> (snip)
>
> 14For thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God:
>
> 15Lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one call thee, and thou eat of his sacrifice;
>
> 16And thou take of their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.
>
> 17Thou shalt make thee no molten gods.
>
> 18The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abib: for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt.
>
> 19All that openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle, whether ox or sheep, that is male.
>
> 20But the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb: and if thou redeem him not, then shalt thou break his neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. And none shall appear before me empty.
>
> 21Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in earing time and in harvest thou shalt rest.
>
> 22And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, of the firstfruits of wheat harvest, and the feast of ingathering at the year's end.
>
> 23Thrice in the year shall all your menchildren appear before the LORD God, the God of Israel.
>
> 24For I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year.
>
> 25Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leaven; neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of > the passover be left unto the morning.

>
> 26The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.
>
> 27And the LORD said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.
>
> 28And he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.

No $1,000 prize or anything. If I remember correctly, this is one of two places in the OT where the 10 Commandments are actually called "the ten commandments."

Posted by: sonshineonme May 4 2007, 09:15 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 4 2007, 08:11 PM)
>
> I wonder if any of these speakers will be presenting the 10 Commandments as described in Exodus 34.
>
> For those not familiar what is apparently an older version of the commandments...here's a little quiz. What are the 10 Commandmants as described in Exodus 34?
>
>> Ex 34:1And the LORD said unto Moses, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first: and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest.
>>
>> (snip)
>>
>> 14For thou shalt worship no other god: for the LORD, whose name is Jealous, is a jealous God:
>>
>> 15Lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land, and they go a whoring after their gods, and do sacrifice unto their gods, and one call thee, and thou eat of his sacrifice;
>>
>> 16And thou take of their daughters unto thy sons, and their daughters go a whoring after their gods, and make thy sons go a whoring after their gods.
>>
>> 17Thou shalt make thee no molten gods.
>>
>> 18The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abib: for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt.
>>
>> 19All that openeth the matrix is mine; and every firstling among thy cattle, whether ox or sheep, that is male.
>>
>> 20But the firstling of an ass thou shalt redeem with a lamb: and if thou redeem him not, then shalt thou break his neck. All the firstborn of thy sons thou shalt redeem. And none shall appear before me empty.
>>
>> 21Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest: in earing time and in harvest thou shalt rest.
>>
>> 22And thou shalt observe the feast of weeks, of the firstfruits of wheat harvest, and the feast of ingathering at the year's end.
>>
>> 23Thrice in the year shall all your menchildren appear before the LORD God, the God of Israel.
>>
>> 24For I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire > thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year.

>
> 25Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leaven; neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the passover be left unto the morning.
>
> 26The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring unto the house of the LORD thy God. Thou shalt not seethe a kid in his mother's milk.
>
> 27And the LORD said unto Moses, Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.
>
> 28And he was there with the LORD forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.
>
> No $1,000 prize or anything. If I remember correctly, this is one of two places in the OT where the 10 Commandments are actually called "the ten commandments."

.aurence, thank you for putting this here. It is very powerful, isn't it?
....

Posted by: LaurenceD May 4 2007, 10:19 PM

I wish them all the best, really.

Thursday night Mollie referred to their panel as the "Motley Crew." And while advertising and punctuating the upcoming 10 Commandments weekend, DS mention how big it was going to be. He said the Chicago Tribune and USA Today were going to there reporting on the event. Mollie turned to DS and said something like people weren't going to be coming just because of his good looks. Danny blushed, and look better in his sweats rather than in that ugly longhorn blazer he wore a couple weeks ago.

Everyone seemed excited, but then the subject turned to the "attacks of Satan." DS mentioned that it had been good for them all. It had brought them to their knees in prayer. I'm curious about this expression, "attacks of Satan." I've heard it over and over on 3abn. Are they referring to you'all?

It's crazy times we live in. I never thought I'd read the bible and turn around and face the day when even our people preaching the gospel would fit the stories I'd read...like about the rich young ruler. I wonder how easy it would be, even for a religious corporation, to sell everything they have, give to the poor, and follow in the footsteps of our savior. What a crazy world we live in.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 4 2007, 10:27 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 4 2007, 09:19 PM)
>
> I wish them all the best, really.
>
> Thursday night Mollie referred to their panel as the "Motley Crew." And while advertising and punctuating the upcoming 10 Commandments weekend, DS mention how big it was going to be. He said the Chicago Tribune and USA Today were going to there reporting on the event. Mollie turned to DS and said something like people weren't going to be coming just because of his good looks. Danny blushed, and look better in his sweats rather than in that ugly longhorn blazer he wore a couple weeks ago.
>
> Everyone seemed excited, but then the subject turned to the "attacks of Satan." DS mentioned that it had been good for them all. It had brought them to their knees in prayer. I'm curious about this expression, "attacks of Satan." I've heard it over and over on 3abn. Are they referring to you'all?

> It's crazy times we live in. I never thought I'd read the bible and turn around and face the day when even our people preaching the gospel would fit the stories I'd read...like about the rich young ruler. I wonder how easy it would be, even for a religious corporation, to sell everything they have, give to the poor, and follow in the footsteps of our savior. What a crazy world we live in.

have felt for some time that this was a living bible story in front of our eyes. This was about more then just divorce. My feeling has been that there is a great deal here for us to see - many aspects, many things to ee with our eyes in this time, and it will be a breaking point (IMO) for many sda's. It may divide people, but, nything that is about principle, justice, truth and standing for what's right often does divide. My words over nd over have been "wake up - open they eyes and see".

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 5 2007, 07:24 AM

We're ignoring the weekend altogether in our churches. One sermon is about studying the Bible for yourself (yay for broad readings in clear passages!), the other is about believing Jesus' way is best before we can really become disciples.

The Ten Commandments are baseline righteousness anyway. One can keep them without being converted at all. But maybe that's a theology post ...

The whole thing is a publicity stunt by political conservatives anyway--not even close to as serious as the National Day of Prayer. 3ABN is trying to hijack it for its own publicity--why give them any ammo?

Posted by: LaurenceD May 5 2007, 09:02 AM

Thursday night, DS said the weekend would cost us about $300,000. Does anyone know how much it cost Christ to draw a crwod of 5,000 people, or give the sermon on the mount, or explain God's commandments?.

Posted by: Clay May 5 2007, 09:04 AM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 5 2007, 10:02 AM)
>
> Thursday night, DS said the weekend would cost us about $300,000. Does anyone know how much it cost Christ to draw a crwod of 5,000 people, or give the sermon on the mount, or explain God's commandments?.

vell Jesus didn't have to worry about fueling the jet....

Posted by: Skyhook May 5 2007, 09:10 AM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 5 2007, 10:02 AM)
>
> Thursday night, DS said the weekend would cost us about $300,000.

oes that cost include Danny's royalties for the book sales?

Posted by: awesumtenor May 5 2007, 09:35 AM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 10:24 AM)
>
> We're ignoring the weekend altogether in our churches. One sermon is about studying the Bible for yourself (yay for broad readings in clear passages!), the other is about believing Jesus' way is best before we can really become disciples.

sounds like a plan...

> QUOTE
>
> The Ten Commandments are baseline righteousness anyway. One can keep them without being converted at all. But maybe that's a theology post ...

And if one heeds Paul in Romans and Galatians, it's not even that; it exists to let us know where the lines are drawn... and when we have stepped outside of them. I don't know if we can accurately call them "righteousness", baseline or otherwise, because the avoidance of sin does not automatically make one righteous...and, as the rich young ruler found, one can keep them from small and still be spiritually lacking...

> QUOTE
>
> The whole thing is a publicity stunt by political conservatives anyway--not even close to as serious as the National Day of Prayer. 3ABN is trying to hijack it for its own publicity--why give them any ammo?

Agreed.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: LaurenceD May 5 2007, 09:37 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 5 2007, 09:04 AM)
>
> well Jesus didn't have to worry about fueling the jet....

Well, He and his disciples may have had to borrow a few kernals of corn from the neighbors garden...

> QUOTE
>
> Does that cost include Danny's royalties for the book sales?

Not sure, and I don't know if that included everyone's salary through the weekend. But Whitney Phipps was on stage this morning, and just before he sung, he talked about the one million dollar check he'd received from Oprah. There has been a lot of talk about money so far, maybe they'll get into the essence of God's meaasge a little later today. But' I have to go up to the mountains now...so I won't see it.

Posted by: caribbean sda May 5 2007, 09:38 AM

We are not going live at the 11 am hour like we did last year. The promotion has not been big at our church this year. Don't ask me why...

Our media ministries Department is recording it.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 5 2007, 10:01 AM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 5 2007, 08:02 AM)
>
> Thursday night, DS said the weekend would cost us about $300,000. Does anyone know how much it cost Christ to draw a crwod of 5,000 people, or give the sermon on the mount, or explain God's commandments?.

Yes, I believe it cost 5 loaves and 3 fishes.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 5 2007, 10:26 AM

Dear BSDA brothers and sisters,

Sitting here in my St. Louis hotel room as my husband naps on the comfy bed, I just finished watching one of the most powerful sermons I have ever heard! Dwight Nelson gave the opening message for the 10 commandment weekend and I hope that Danny and the leadership of 3abn were actually listening for he spoke of Jesus' teaching about the hierarchy of truth.

Matthew 22:36-40
34 Hearing that Jesus had silenced the Sadducees, the Pharisees got together. 35 One of them, an expert in the law, tested him with this question:
36 "Teacher, which is the greatest commandment in the Law?" 37 Jesus replied: " 'Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind.' 38 This is the first and greatest commandment. 39 And the second is like it: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' 40 All the Law and the Prophets hang on these two commandments."

His thrust was that the love Jesus spoke of in these two commandments transcends the 10 commandments. Dwight rebuked the SDA congregations in Chicago for not demonstrating this love by having the most segregated churches of any city and charged them to put aside that segregated worship and get together.

I wasn't going to watch any of the TCW but what a blessing I would have missed had I not seen this service! The Holy Spirit is going to minister to those with ears to hearin spite of the control that Satan appears to have over some who are leading this weekend.

I won't be able to watch any other programs due to visiting with my St. Louis family, but I would strongly urge all of you to try to catch the rebroadcast of Dwight Nelson's powerful sermon this evening.

PB

Posted by: runner4him May 5 2007, 01:41 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 5 2007, 09:04 AM)
>
> well Jesus didn't have to worry about fueling the jet....

rofl Thanks for the laugh although I know this is all very serious I could not help myself....laughing out loud still!!

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 5 2007, 09:10 AM)
>
> Does that cost include Danny's royalties for the book sales?

Those royalties are a BIG issue.

Posted by: seraph|m May 5 2007, 06:11 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 5 2007, 12:04 PM)
>
> well Jesus didn't have to worry about fueling the jet....

Yep.

Of course, Jesus didn't have 14 lawyers either

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 5 2007, 12:10 PM)
>
> Does that cost include Danny's royalties for the book sales?

Who is the book being sold to? I ask because the church we attended today, in IL, had 10,000 books to distribution. I asked what it cost the church to get the books and was told they were "given" to them for distribution.

Posted by: caribbean sda May 5 2007, 06:15 PM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 5 2007, 08:11 PM)
>
> Yep.
>
> Who is the book being sold to? I ask because the church we attended today, in IL, had 10,000 books to distribution. I asked what it cost the church to get the books and was told they were "given" to them for distribution.

I think the church has to pay for the shipment of the books. Probably a nominal fee, ya think?

Posted by: Skyhook May 5 2007, 06:36 PM

I think it was explained on some other thread that Remnant Publications prints the books and 3abn pays Remnant publications. Also, Remnant Publications will send them directly to every address in any zip code for a small price per book. As someone has pointed out before, even a few pennies per book as a royalty adds up when hundreds of thousands of books are being moved.

I can't help but remember after it became apparant last year that the Sunday church people who promoted the initial TCW did not follow through with much activity on the actual Sunday of the weekend. Someone said that it was really about selling thier little pins and other articles that they were pushing to the local churches, and not so much about activities on the weekend. My thought was that Danny sure picked up on that one in a hurry. I don't want to sound too cynical or mean, but things like t shirts, books, coffee mugs and other such incidental products can add up to a lot of money. I have heard that some of the big famous rock groups and pop entertainers travel with a big semi truck filled with t shirts etc. that bring in a significant amount of cash.

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 07:14 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 4 2007, 10:27 PM)
>
> I have felt for some time that this was a living bible story in front of our eyes. This was about more then just a divorce. My feeling has been that there is a great deal here for us to see - many aspects, many things to see with our eyes in this time, and it will be a breaking point (IMO) for many sda's. It may divide people, but, anything that is about principle, justice, truth and standing for what's right often does divide. My words over and over have been "wake up - open they eyes and see".

i am feeling the same way SSOM. it's been said here before but i have thought the divorce very well could have been a blessing for linda. to get her out of the way. to protect her from the gauntlet. time will tell. i sure miss her tho'. again i say, 3abn lost it's "SOFTNESS" when it lost Linda Shelton!!!
even tho' you don't read here.........we love you linda. hope to see you soon somewhere.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 5 2007, 07:53 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 5 2007, 06:14 PM)
>
> i am feeling the same way SSOM. it's been said here before but i have thought the divorce very well could have been a blessing for linda. to get her out of the way. to protect her from the gauntlet. time will tell. i sure miss her tho'. again i say, 3abn lost it's "SOFTNESS" when it lost Linda Shelton!!!
> even tho' you don't read here.........we love you linda. hope to see you soon somewhere.

Mo,

I will make sure she gets your note here.
She would like nothing more then to be out there doing more and more ministry. That is what she enjoys, where she connects with people, and feels called, still.

I agree, many times I have looked at this mess and thought to myself that God got her out of there - a type of Joseph experience, but still, she is out, and I have no doubt she is being taught many things by her loving Father in heaven, as we all are. If you are staying connected to God thru the trials, you can't help but learn things!

I believe we all have a role in this in some way, we all have a journey in this "story" that we either will grow from, or we will sit in a stupor, refusing to see and accept what is to be gained by such an awful time. I try not to waste anything - I have always felt God wastes nothing, and like our sermon today in my church, to be among the faithful (as in Hebrews 11) means life is not always easy, but, if we are faithful to follow God's lead, no matter what, He never fails us, and we do grow stronger in our faith because of the relationship - trusting even while questioning all the happenstance around us .... nothing happens all at once - we grow, and time shows the results of that faith and growth. You usually can't see the growth as you are going through it, but faith tells us that each day of moving forward is a step in growth. God is so good.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 5 2007, 11:47 PM

Perhaps Linda is being protected. Danny's character hasn't changed overnight, so if she was like Joseph in Potiphar's house, if she hadn't been taken out, all the stuff not having to do with the divorce (relationships with the state viz. nonprofit status, Tommy, royalties) could have sucked her in and made her culpable.

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 5 2007, 08:35 AM)
>
> And if one heeds Paul in Romans and Galatians, it's not even that; it exists to let us know where the lines are drawn... and when we have stepped outside of them. I don't know if we can accurately call them "righteousness", baseline or otherwise, because the avoidance of sin does not automatically make one righteous...and, as the rich young ruler found, one can keep them from small and still be spiritually lacking...

This is basically what I spoke on a year ago on Ten Commandments weekend. I felt so bad about Ten Commandments Twice Removed (we lost a couple of interests in the community when some members took it upon themselves to have Remnant mail them to every address) I felt compelled to oppose it on some level.

Calling them "baseline righteousness" was sloppy, thanks for calling it to my attention. Of course the real thing grows over time out of a changed heart.

Posted by: GrammieTana May 6 2007, 11:52 AM

As much as I appreciate T. Marshall Kelly, I was somewhat disappointed in his sermon on the fifth commandment. It seemed like he was talking to a lot of 'us' when he said that children should still honor their father or mother no matter what kind of parents they had been solely upon the fact that, were it not for the 'sperm donor and receiver' (my words) they would not be on this earth. That any abuse issues should just be 'given to God' and not be used to 'dishonor' the parents no matter what their ilk. (Again, my words.) Am I being too harsh here? Or did anyone else hear that as a veiled suggestion that we should just ignore Danny's behavior with Alyssa and Tommy's behavior as a sexually predatorial Pastor and 'leave it to God?' Oh, yeah, forgiveness was mentioned in there somewhere, too.

Just wonderin'

GrammieTana

Posted by: mozart May 6 2007, 12:40 PM

> QUOTE(GrammieTana @ May 6 2007, 11:52 AM)
>
> As much as I appreciate T. Marshall Kelly, I was somewhat disappointed in his sermon on the fifth commandment. It seemed like he was talking to a lot of 'us' when he said that children should still honor their father or mother no matter what kind of parents they had been solely upon the fact that, were it not for the 'sperm donor and receiver' (my words) they would not be on this earth. That any abuse issues > should just be 'given to God' and not be used to 'dishonor' the parents no matter what their ilk. (Again, my words.) Am I being too harsh here? Or did anyone else hear that as a veiled suggestion that we should just ignore Danny's behavior with Alyssa and NATHAN.

> Tommy's behavior as a sexually predatorial Pastor and 'leave it to God?' Oh, yeah, forgiveness was mentioned in there somewhere, too.
>
> Just wonderin'
>
> GrammieTana

id not God often order his servants to ACT !!!!!!!! against sin and evil???????

rrrrrrrrrrrrr..............
f i had not spoken up after 3 in my family had been abused, it's very likely the youngest would have been he 4th. it took tremendous courage on my part, Praise the Lord. it was a grievous time writing the letter that nded the abuse and the letter that also ended my relationship with my father.
did not want the relationship with my father to end, but the fact he denied all and was not repentent, made ne the outcast. my father wanted to remove me from his will because of that but my mother would not let im do that even tho' she, herself will not admit she believes us. my sister would not and did not defend her wn child for lack of courage and fear of dis-inheritence. so being silent is not always for the reasons people hink. the reasons are vast and the longer people are silent, the more innocence is lost forever and "little" ives are permanently altered.
also want to add that I have forgiven my father long ago and also the tremendous amount of emotional buse from my mother. I have showed my appreciation for the "good" they did and for taking good physical are of us even tho' they were failures at raising us emotionally healthy. that has taken me most of my life to eal from.
ere's a good quote: "It's a lot easier to raise a healthy child than it is to fix a broken adult".

Posted by: GrammieTana May 6 2007, 01:06 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 6 2007, 02:40 PM)
>
> Did not God often order his servants to ACT !!!!!!!! against sin and evil???????
>
> Grrrrrrrrrrrrr..............
> If i had not spoken up after 3 in my family had been abused, it's very likely the youngest would have been the 4th. it took tremendous courage on my part, Praise the Lord. it was a grievous time writing the letter that ended the abuse and the letter that also ended my relationship with my father.
> i did not want the relationship with my father to end, but the fact he denied all and was not repentent, made me the outcast. my father wanted to remove me from his will because of that but my mother would not let him do that even tho' she, herself will not admit she believes us. my sister would not and did not defend her own child for lack of courage and fear of dis-inheritence. so being silent is not always for the reasons people think. the reasons are vast and the longer people are silent, the more innocence is lost forever and "little" lives are permanently altered.
> I also want to add that I have forgiven my father long ago and also the tremendous amount of emotional abuse from my mother. I have showed my appreciation for the "good" they did and for taking good physical care of us even tho' they were failures at raising us emotionally healthy. that has taken me most of my life to heal from.
> Here's a good quote: "It's a lot easier to raise a healthy child than it is to fix a broken adult".

hank you MO. I was so disappointed in Mr. Kelly. And thank you for what you have done for your family. It is nly when people stand up for the downtrodden in any way, physically, emotionally or financially, that God's ill can even think to be done.

GT

Posted by: lurker May 6 2007, 01:42 PM

It was my understanding that even the commandment about coveting was given the twist that someone may gossip and tell lies about a ministry because that person covets the ministry of the person they are "trying to ring down". Now that's a stretch.

Elder Kelly did not give the sermon about coveting by the way.

Posted by: mozart May 6 2007, 02:35 PM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 6 2007, 12:42 PM)
>
> It was my understanding that even the commandment about coveting was given the twist that someone may gossip and tell lies about a ministry because that person covets the ministry of the person they are "trying to ring down". Now that's a stretch.
>
> Elder Kelly did not give the sermon about coveting by the way.

AND, shelly quinn's sermon on "bearing false witness", reading, spreading and believing gossip, etc. was just laughable except for the fact it's so disturbing coming from her. the whole time i was thinking, "does she listen to her own words?". i can hardly bear to listen to her, i've always been that way. not sure why, just a bad feeling, but i listened this morning just for edification. how can she possibly stand there and say what she said after the things she has said at other times against other people? just baffles the mind and heart.

Posted by: princessdi May 6 2007, 03:54 PM

Unfortunately, I believe more than out of some defense of Danny, I believe Pastor Kelly speaks out of a religious "cluelessness". In an effort to advoid confrontation, at all cost, we tend to want to rush the process to the stpe where we are "healed".

As an example, I know of a very beloved friend of mine. This is not an easy friendship, but God given and strong one, nonetheless. It is not easy because my firend has been victim to many of the the things of which we speak here, in fact, most of them. God has done tremendous work in her. however, It is recognized by most that she still has much anger, but has been like this for many years, so she doesn't see her interactions as such. Not that she is not kind of loving, but quick to repsond in anger, with a healthy lack of self esteem to boot. Now to hear her speak about these things would make Pastor Kelly proud because like a good portion of Adventism(or chritianity for that matter) on the surface she looks and sounds good. However, a misunderstood word from some would tell even those who are not trained to recognize such that she is stuck on the stage of anger.

This is what came to mind when Pastor Kelly was dsecribing the people who have "overcome". None of which he has had enough contact to determine their true state, but could talk a good game in a chance meeting, and even from Sabbath to Sabbath, to say what is "expected". we don't really allow for all the stages of grief or recovery. Just the ones which odnt' make "us' uncomfortable". Now, it is this mind frame which makes the fertile ground for people like Danny and his familya nd cohorts within even the leadership of any given religious organization, SDAs in particular. So while I don't believe it was intentional by Pastor Kelly, I believe he resides in and promotes the environment which allows this kind of conduct to flourish within the church.

Posted by: Eirene May 6 2007, 08:34 PM

> QUOTE(caribbean sda @ May 5 2007, 09:38 AM)
>
> We are not going live at the 11 am hour like we did last year. The promotion has not been big at our church this year. Don't ask me why...
>
> Our media ministries Department is recording it.

Isn't that wonderful that Jesus was there to make that miracle happen. But, as it is now, events such as these cost a great deal of money. Thankfully we know though, that no price can be put on the souls that will be won and the hearts that will be changed through the messages of this TCW.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 07:24 AM)
>
> We're ignoring the weekend altogether in our churches. One sermon is about studying the Bible for yourself (yay for broad readings in clear passages!), the other is about believing Jesus' way is best before we can really become disciples.
>
> The Ten Commandments are baseline righteousness anyway. One can keep them without being converted at all. But maybe that's a theology post ...
>
> The whole thing is a publicity stunt by political conservatives anyway--not even close to as serious as the National Day of Prayer. 3ABN is trying to hijack it for its own publicity--why give them any ammo?

And you're a Pastor? Lord have mercy on us.

Posted by: FineArt May 6 2007, 09:03 PM

This is my first post.
I have read and reread all that is on this 3 ABN topic. Read it here and on save 3ABN and on Maritime. I just shake my head. It is hard to believe this is happening in my church. I am disappointed in many ways that the handling of this matter has been treated as if nothing has gone wrong in this ministry.

I watched the "ten Commandments" presentation Sabbath and Sunday, I feel distressed , there was a cloud hanging over what could have been a blessing because the words applied to the errors of 3 ABN but was not meant for reproof.

Revival in our churches [DB] among our people is being called for but how can the Holy Spirit use vessles that are not empty?

If i remember council, the "finishing of the work" will not be by famous evangelists but by the humble quiet meek person that is willing for God to set him on fire. When the work is finished in our own hearts.....He will finish the work in the world. He will have a people whose mind is stayed on Him, not on the immpressive resume of man.
When we stop doing evangelism "our way"....God can use those that are willing to follow His way.

Posted by: runner4him May 6 2007, 09:17 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 6 2007, 09:03 PM)

> This is my first post.
> I have read and reread all that is on this 3 ABN topic. Read it here and on save 3ABN and on Maritime. I just shake my head. It is hard to believe this is happening in my church. I am disappointed in many ways that the handling of this matter has been treated as if nothing has gone wrong in this ministry.
>
> I watched the "ten Commandments" presentation Sabbath and Sunday, I feel distressed , there was a cloud hanging over what could have been a blessing because the words applied to the errors of 3 ABN but was not meant for reproof.
>
> Revival in our churches [DB] among our people is being called for but how can the Holy Spirit use vessles that are not empty?
>
> If i remember council, the "finishing of the work" will not be by famous evangelists but by the humble quiet meek person that is willing for God to set him on fire. When the work is finished in our own hearts.....He will finish the work in the world. He will have a people whose mind is stayed on Him, not on the immpressive resume of man.
> When we stop doing evangelism "our way"....God can use those that are willing to follow His way.

Welcome FineArt and thank you for your words. I agree and say Amen!

R4H

Posted by: LaurenceD May 6 2007, 09:29 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt)
>
> When we stop doing evangelism "our way"....God can use those that are willing to follow His way.

Good post, FineArt. And welcome!

> QUOTE(Eirene)
>
> Isn't that wonderful that Jesus was there to make that miracle happen. But, as it is now, events such as these cost a great deal of money. Thankfully we know though, that no price can be put on the souls that will be won and the hearts that will be changed through the messages of this TCW.

Christ and His disciples are out ministering according to Luke 10. Nothing has changed in soul-saving. In this chapter, Christ tells his disciples they won't need money, but to work person to person. Paul understood this too when he took the gospel to the "whole world" (Rom 1:8) with hardly any monetary support at all.

But this isn't to say there are other types of ministries. Genuine methods tend to follow Christ though. It's much more meaningful...like night and day.

Posted by: shinejoy May 6 2007, 09:32 PM

are they blind or choosing to be blind

Posted by: sonshineonme May 6 2007, 09:33 PM

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 6 2007, 08:32 PM)

> are they blind or choosing to be blind

think they can be one in the same too.

Posted by: Jnana15 May 6 2007, 09:34 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 6 2007, 10:03 PM)
>
> This is my first post.
> I have read and reread all that is on this 3 ABN topic. Read it here and on save 3ABN and on Maritime. I just shake my head. It is hard to believe this is happening in my church. I am disappointed in many ways that the handling of this matter has been treated as if nothing has gone wrong in this ministry.
>
> I watched the "ten Commandments" presentation Sabbath and Sunday, I feel distressed , there was a cloud hanging over what could have been a blessing because the words applied to the errors of 3 ABN but was not meant for reproof.
>
> Revival in our churches [DB] among our people is being called for but how can the Holy Spirit use vessles that are not empty?
>
> If i remember council, the "finishing of the work" will not be by famous evangelists but by the humble quiet meek person that is willing for God to set him on fire. When the work is finished in our own hearts.....He will finish the work in the world. He will have a people whose mind is stayed on Him, not on the immpressive resume of man.
> When we stop doing evangelism "our way"....God can use those that are willing to follow His way.

☒ welcome.gif and A-a-amen sista!

Posted by: shinejoy May 6 2007, 09:41 PM

It so hard to listen DS anymore now its hard to listen DB

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 6 2007, 08:33 PM)
>
> I think they can be one in the same too.

think then they are ignoring the truth and choosing there own way and not Gods

---

Posted by: sonshineonme May 6 2007, 09:43 PM

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 6 2007, 08:36 PM)
>
> It so hard to listen DS anymore now its hard to listen DB

What is difficult for me is keeping my balance in this. While you sit and watch people you would think were respectable examples, behave in ways that are dissapointing, you can become a bit numb about it all, and that is just what the devil would like to happen to those of us that are paying close attention. Let us keep our eyes on Jesus, realize that He has watched this kind of nonesense since the beginning of time, and I yearn to see things through His eyes - keep the faith of Jesus, and learn to smile at my neighbor, knowing that that is the best way to reach people. I have had my fill of evangelism....I just wonder how really affective it can be anymore....I know, I know, some will disagree, but, honestly....I get a bit nausiated thinking of trusting any more "evangelists". Some detachement can hang in the back ground (obviously) from real people, and I think it's to easy to lose touch with what really matters. You can say one thing, but when you live another, how positive is that? I'm rambling...been thinking a great deal about all this...as usual.

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 6 2007, 08:41 PM)
>
> It so hard to listen DS anymore now its hard to listen DB
> i think then they are ignoring the truth and choosing there own way and not Gods

That's how it appears for sure. Think they will pay attention to perspective? Because I can tell you, we that speak here, are the tip of the iceberg too...I think they should listen.

Posted by: shinejoy May 6 2007, 09:50 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 6 2007, 08:43 PM)
>
> What is difficult for me is keeping my balance in this. While you sit and watch people you would think were respectable examples, behave in ways that are dissapointing, you can become a bit numb about it all, and that is just what the devil would like to happen to those of us that are paying close attention. Let us keep our eyes on Jesus, realize that He has watched this kind of nonesense since the beginning of time, and I yearn to see things through His eyes - keep the faith of Jesus, and learn to smile at my neighbor, knowing that that is the best way to reach people. I have had my fill of evangelism....I just wonder how really affective it can be anymore....I know, I know, some will disagree, but, honestly....I get a bit nausiated thinking of trusting any more "evangelists". Some detachement can hang in the back ground (obviously) from real people, and I think it's to easy to lose touch with what really matters. You can say one thing, but when you live another, how positive is that? I'm rambling...been thinking a great deal about all this...as usual.
> That's how it appears for sure. Think they will pay attention to perspective? Because I can tell you, we that speak here, are the tip of the iceberg too...I think they should listen.

YEA interesting words BALANCE,Respectable examples, numb how right you are that is what i have always thought people can get so comfortable that when something questionable happens it just whizzs by them and they miss it. i think the devil has his sneeky ways beware and watch as a it will come upon you like a thief in the night or are lamps have no oil

---

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 6 2007, 10:15 PM

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 6 2007, 08:32 PM)

> are they blind or choosing to be blind

o one is so blind as the one who will not see. Or the ones.

saiah 29:13-15.

atthew 15:7-20.

dited. Disappointed with self for earlier post.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 6 2007, 10:41 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 6 2007, 11:40 AM)
>
> Did not God often order his servants to ACT !!!!!!!! against sin and evil???????
>
> Grrrrrrrrrrrr..............
> If i had not spoken up after 3 in my family had been abused, it's very likely the youngest would have been the 4th. it took tremendous courage on my part, Praise the Lord. it was a grievous time writing the letter that ended the abuse and the letter that also ended my relationship with my father.
> i did not want the relationship with my father to end, but the fact he denied all and was not repentent, made me the outcast. my father wanted to remove me from his will because of that but my mother would not let him do that even tho' she, herself will not admit she believes us. my sister would not and did not defend her own child for lack of courage and fear of dis-inheritence. so being silent is not always for the reasons people think. the reasons are vast and the longer people are silent, the more innocence is lost forever and "little" lives are permanently altered.
> I also want to add that I have forgiven my father long ago and also the tremendous amount of emotional abuse from my mother. I have showed my appreciation for the "good" they did and for taking good physical care of us even tho' they were failures at raising us emotionally healthy. that has taken me most of my life to heal from.
> Here's a good quote: "It's a lot easier to raise a healthy child than it is to fix a broken adult".

ozart,

raise God that you had the courage to speak up and break at least part of the cycle of abuse! As I reflect on he number of members right here on BSDA who have been touched by this devastating experience, I begin o wonder just how pervasive it is in our present time. Satan certainly knows how effective it is in turning a hole chain of lives upside down.

hen I read about your sister's sad choices, it brought to mind another situation that may be driven by imilar motivations. There are alleged victims whose voices are being ignored. Could it be that some in eadership want access to the "technological inheritance" so desperately that they are willing to keep silent nd not investigate the allegations for themselves? I pray that these leaders will seek God's will and way and ot be influenced by earthly power.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 6 2007, 10:54 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 6 2007, 07:34 PM)
>
> Isn't that wonderful that Jesus was there to make that miracle happen. But, as it is now, events such as these cost a great deal of money. Thankfully we know though, that no price can be put on the souls that will be won and the hearts that will be changed through the messages of this TCW.

> And you're a Pastor? Lord have mercy on us.

Sister Eirene,
was only able to watch the first two hours of TCW. I must tell you that I was so blessed by the message the Holy Spirit gave through Dwight Nelson I hope to be able to watch the program again and again. I pray ervently that each of those in leadership at 3abn and at Amazing Facts will listen to what the Lord had for each of us in that message about the two greatest commandments.

Please remind Danny and his Board that those souls outside the 3abn doors in the little town of Thompsonville are priceless as well.

Posted by: FineArt May 7 2007, 06:16 AM

I have watched 3ABN for years, I loved the times on the porch with Linda. I loved the aging Fluffy and when i realized that danny was not a dog lover...he became suspect. "never trust anyone that does not love dogs"....my words of wisdom. I am such a dog lover.

Long before this all happened at 3ABN, I had to stop listening to Danny. When he interviewed guests that i wanted to hear, he was usually the one that talked, interupted and stole the show. I got to "mute" danny for fear i would have to hear "counteract the counterfeit" one more time.

Suddenly, Linda was gone, and with her departure went the warmth and softness of 3ABN. I still watched but only the the programs that were not by 3ABN inhouse people.

I wondered what had happened and a friend directed me to this sight and for months i have been reading here. What a sad story this is. I surely am glad that there is an all knowing God of justice that will make the last call on this matter. Until this time, I appreciate what you all are trying to do to prod the earthly powers of this church to rectify so many wrongs. May they ask for wisdom and strength to be stedfast in this work.

Posted by: maggiecttr May 7 2007, 06:34 AM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 7 2007, 08:16 AM)
>
> Long before this all happened at 3ABN, I had to stop listening to Danny. When he interviewed guests that i wanted to hear, he was usually the one that talked, interupted and stole the show. I got to "mute" danny for fear i would have to hear "counteract the counterfeit" one more time.
>
> Suddenly, Linda was gone, and with her departure went the warmth and softness of 3ABN. I still watched but only the the programs that were not by 3ABN inhouse people.

Welcome FineArt! I don't post here often, but I'm reading others' posts daily. You took the words right out of my mouth!

Hugs,
Maggie

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 7 2007, 06:53 AM

SE,
Thank you for these Scriptures.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 6 2007, 09:15 PM)
>
> No one is so blind as the one who will not see. Or the ones.
>
> Isaiah 29:13-15.

13 The Lord says:
"These people come near to me with their mouth and honor me with their lips,
but their hearts are far from me.
Their worship of me
is made up only of rules taught by men. [b]

14 Therefore once more I will astound these people with wonder upon wonder;
the wisdom of the wise will perish,
the intelligence of the intelligent will vanish."

15 Woe to those who go to great depths to hide their plans from the LORD, who do their work in darkness and think,
"Who sees us? Who will know?"

> QUOTE
>
> Matthew 15:7-20.
>
> Edited. Disappointed with self for earlier post.

7You hypocrites! Isaiah was right when he prophesied about you:
8" 'These people honor me with their lips,
but their hearts are far from me.
9They worship me in vain;
their teachings are but rules taught by men.'[d]"

10Jesus called the crowd to him and said, "Listen and understand. 11What goes into a man's mouth does not make him 'unclean,' but what comes out of his mouth, that is what makes him 'unclean.' "

12Then the disciples came to him and asked, "Do you know that the Pharisees were offended when they heard this?"

13He replied, "Every plant that my heavenly Father has not planted will be pulled up by the roots. 14Leave them; they are blind guides.[e] If a blind man leads a blind man, both will fall into a pit."

15Peter said, "Explain the parable to us."

16"Are you still so dull?" Jesus asked them. 17"Don't you see that whatever enters the mouth goes into the stomach and then out of the body? 18But the things that come out of the mouth come from the heart, and these make a man 'unclean.' 19For out of the heart come evil thoughts, murder, adultery, sexual immorality, theft, false testimony, slander. 20These are what make a man 'unclean'; but eating with unwashed hands does not make him 'unclean.' "

There has been some talk about avoiding the TCW broadcast. Just a thought to ponder - wouldn't it be wise for those of us who are seeking accountability from some in these ministries to keep an ear on what is being said? We would do well not to fall into denial and possibly help sweep things under the rug. If we are upset with the weather, avoiding the weather report does not make it go away, it just makes us unprepared for the storm that is coming.

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 7 2007, 07:05 AM

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 6 2007, 10:32 PM)
>
> are they blind or choosing to be blind

I have seen people who chose to be blind to begin with, in little, seemingly inconsequential things. They told themself and others that it didn't matter, that they were in the right, etc, so long that they actually began to believe it. Then as bigger and bigger events occurred, they were so invested in being right that they couldn't back down. And they had told themself and other so often, that they seem to really believe it and will do whatever it takes to prove that they are "right" when everyone else can see it. It is sad--especially when they used to be the kind of person who would see right through the arguments they are using now.

shepherdswife

PS--I am speaking here more of DS's actions than of DB's...I agree with what lurker says about DB, in the following post.

Posted by: lurker May 7 2007, 07:09 AM

Doug mentioned that he has a window in his office and that he deliberately does not have female friends "except for Grandma". He thinks that men and women should only be friends if there is a certain number of years age difference between them. The implication is that there would be no sexual or romantic attraction between them then.

How different from Danny's actions, both public and private. When I think of the two ministries joining, "Be not unequally yoked comes to mind.

We have heard that Danny has been frank about his motives and actions with people that he feels will approve them or at least will not condemn them. I do not think that Danny has been that frank with Doug. I think that Doug has avoided investigating the talk about 3ABN because he doesn't want to be dragged down by gossip which he considers to be malicious. I honestly do not think he knows or wants to know any of the facts because of his perception of the motives of those who want action. However, his integrity could soon be compromised by association if he suspects the truth and uses his influence to cover for another. And in the eyes of some it already has been compromised.

Posted by: FineArt May 7 2007, 07:56 AM

Thanks for the welcomes.

Evangelism/revivals

I once asked my Pastor, when the church was planning for one of the above, "which desciple carried the camera and who carried the screen?" We are told how to conduct our meetings and win souls in the little book of "evangelism", but that is too simple. Man thinks he has to compete in/with the world to get the attention of the people/youth. Where is the wisdom of the "straight testimony" that is the only message that will bring those that seek with all their hearts and reach the searching heart. Where are those that will cry aloud and show the people their sins. Where are those that are willing to step on toes and leave people crying "what must I do to be saved".?

There is a place for the technology of the day, of course, but it is not for us to use, but for God to show us how it is to be used. And that does not include "for self".

Instead we seem to be using sensationalism, emotionalism, moving lights and motivational speakers that are prepared to manipulate, by well chosen words, the minds of the listeners. It used to be, messages that were given by our pioneers were wrenched from the depths of the heart by the Holy Spirit. Humor was not added to get that laugh of entertainment. Drama was not introduced behind the sacred desk to glue your attention. Man's Rational has replaced a cry for God's wisdom.

Those that will be sealed will be "crying and sighing" because of the abominations being done in God's church.

The good news is: The church will appear to fall, but does not.
The good news is: If we hang in there doing what the God almighty has for us to do with all our hearts, we will not be asleep when He comes but will go into the wedding supper as a bride.

I'm afraid i just preached a sermon.....sorry

God bless

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 08:53 AM

It is called "marketing" Lawrence. The more reminders they can send home with you, the more cd sales. Not most famous rock groups, make all, along with rap, soul, pop, anybody who is really serious about making some money. The same with movies and cartoons, especially those develpoed for children. Right now, Dora the Explorer is HUGE! Not to mention SpongeBob and a host of others.

I am not altogether sure that this is a bad thing for the church. The constant reminders of the "message" are good. I think we run into aproblem when we get a glimpse of how much money is made from the reminders...........

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 5 2007, 05:36 PM)
>
> I think it was explained on some other thread that Remnant Publications prints the books and 3abn pays Remnant publications. Also, Remnant Publications will send them directly to every address in any zip code for a small price per book. As someone has pointed out before, even a few pennies per book as a royalty adds up when hundreds of thousands of books are being moved.
>
> I can't help but remember after it became apparant last year that the Sunday church people who promoted the initial TCW did not follow through with much activity on the actual Sunday of the weekend. Someone said that it was really about selling thier little pins and other articles that they were pushing to the local churches, and not so much about activities on the weekend. My thought was that Danny sure picked up on that one in a hurry. I don't want to sound too cynical or mean, but things like t shirts, books, coffee mugs and other such incidental products can add up to a lot of money. I have heard that some of the big famous rock groups and pop entertainers travel with a big semi truck filled with t shirts etc. that bring in a significant amount of cash.

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 09:50 AM welcome FA, so good to have you here. we have all been where you are, myself just a couple of months ago, my heart aching at these revelations. i appreciate the following part of your post so much. i want to say thank you. we must pray for revival within ourselves first and then we must continue to pray for revival in our church and do that even more fervently than we complain and argue about who's right and who's wrong. i think our prayers must be very lacking for some reason. Are we sincere? Is the heart willing? Are we praying God's prayers?

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 6 2007, 09:03 PM)
>
> Revival in our churches [DB] among our people is being called for but how can the Holy Spirit use vessles that are not empty?
>
> If i remember council, the "finishing of the work" will not be by famous evangelists but by the humble quiet meek person that is willing for God to set him on fire. When the work is finished in our own hearts.....He will finish the work in the world. He will have a people whose mind is stayed on Him, not on the immpressive resume of man.
> When we stop doing evangelism "our way"....God can use those that are willing to follow His way.

Posted by: shinejoy May 7 2007, 09:59 AM i didn't sleep will last night thinking of 3abn i can't remember what i was dreaming but felt so uneasy this morning and very sad. This ten commandent thing should be very exciting for all but some reason i don't know what it is but it isn't to me.I didn't know i was thinking so hard on this.

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 10:57 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 6 2007, 10:41 PM)
>
> mozart,
> When I read about your sister's sad choices, it brought to mind another situation that may be driven by similar motivations. There are alleged victims whose voices are being ignored. Could it be that some in leadership want access to the "technological inheritance" so desperately that they are willing to keep silent and not investigate the allegations for themselves? I pray that these leaders will seek God's will and way and not be influenced by earthly power.

Glad you caught that.
I was living out of state at the time so that's why it was a letter, it's easier in a letter too because you can say all you have to say and rewrite it to cover everything the way you want to say it without the back and forth emotions of a one-on-one conversation.
about 3yrs. after that, i drove down to their home for a visit and to pick up some furniture my grandmother had left me.
my father became so furious that i would dare come to their home that he went into a rage. i had hoped we might be able to talk, but, he was making threats so my mother made him leave the house before i even got there and stay gone until i could get what i came for and go back home. my daughter and i had driven for 12hrs. to go there and we were there for about 45mins. and then had to turn around and go back home. (i'm so ashamed to be telling this but i'm thinking people may benefit from real life experience, however it is still painful 10yrs. later.) for 8yrs. i never saw him or spoke to him again. I think this is something that people really fear in familys so they stay silent. it's very painful either way.
After my father died, i went to my mother's for a while and my neice who was abused the worst and whom i had defended so vehemently came by with her mother, my sister. the air was so thick you could cut it. they pretended to be glad to see me but through pursed mouths and squinting eyes i could see and feel something very strong and negative. i believe it was their anger with me for standing up and doing what i did (go figure) i could see that her own mother and mine had manipulated her to beleive it was best kept silent than to go through all the fighting and the grief and the possible, yet probable dis-inheritence. i think when my father threatened to dis-inherit me, that put a lock on everyone else's mouth, except of course, mine and my daughter's.

we've gone over and over this with my mother and she still will not admit the truth. i know she knows who's telling the truth, but she can't bring herself to say it. i told her that was adding to the abuse because it is invalidation and invalidation is like being abused all over again.

what people don't realise is that if they do not speak out, the silent grief is even more painful and it is suffered by only the victim. it is a lonely grief and it is very hard to bear.

i know this is off topic, but i was silent for about 45yrs. about my own abuse but when i found out about my daughter and my neice, that is when i had to stand up! if any of you are in this situation, do not be silent. the burden of shame must be carried by the abuser and not the victim. the only way i know to transfer that is confrontation. that's just what i feel and think from experience. everyone has to make their own decisions.

YOU have acute observation. thank you.

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 7 2007, 07:05 AM)
>
> I have seen people who chose to be blind to begin with, in little, seemingly inconsequential things. They told themself and others that it didn't matter, that they were in the right, etc, so long that they actually began to believe it. Then as bigger and bigger events occurred, they were so invested in being right that they couldn't back down. And they had told themself and other so often, that they seem to really believe it and will do whatever it takes to prove that they are "right" when everyone else can see it. It is sad--especially when they used to be the kind of person who would see right through the arguments they are using now.
>
> shepherdswife
>
> PS--I am speaking here more of DS's actions than of DB's...I agree with what lurker says about DB, in the following post.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 7 2007, 12:01 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 7 2007, 10:57 AM)
>
> about 3yrs. after that, i drove down to their home for a visit and to pick up some furniture my grandmother had left me.
> my father became so furious that i would dare come to their home that he went into a rage. i had hoped we might be able to talk, but, he was making threats so my mother made him leave the house before i even got there and stay gone until i could get what i came for and go back home.

Thanks for sharing.

No particular connection, a different story, but it reminded me of a Phil Collin's songs...

****

The key to my survival was never in much doubt the question was how I could keep sane trying to find a way out things were never easy for me peace of mind was hard to find and I needed a place where I could hide somewhere I could call mine

I didn't think much about it til it started happening all the time soon I was living with the fear everyday of what might happen at night

I couldn't stand to hear the crying of my mother and I rememeber when I swore that, that would be the last they'd see of me and I never went home again

they say time is a healer
and now my wounds are not the same
I rang the bell with my heart in my mouth
I had to hear what he'd say

He sat me down to talk to me
he looked me straight in the eyes

he said:

You're no son, no son of mine
You're no son, no son of mine
You walked out, you left us behind and you're no son, no son of mine

oh his words how they hurt me, I'll never forget it and as the time, it went by, I lived to regret it

You're no son, no son of mine
but where should I go,
and what should I do
you're no son, no son of mine
but I came here for help, I came here for you

Well the years they passed slowly
I thought about him everyday what would I do, if we passed on the street would I keep running away in and out of hiding places soon I'd have to face the facts we'd have to sit down and talk it over and that would mean going back

they say time is a healer
and now my wounds are not the same
I rang the bell with my heart in my mouth
I had to hear what he'd say

He sat down to talk to me
he looked me straight in the eyes

he said:

You're no son of mine

Posted by: Observer May 7 2007, 12:13 PM

Powerful testimonies from several of you!

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 7 2007, 12:24 PM

mozart,
There are some, both among victims and those who are aware of the abuse, who find it far too frightening to step out of the denial that keeps them in a semblance of normal life. However, they don't realize that by taking that first terrifying step out of the secrecy they are allowing the healing process to begin.

If only we could care less about our "images" and more about our actual characters perhaps we would be willing to allow the Lord to help us take the steps necessary to make things right.

Posted by: Eirene May 7 2007, 12:56 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 7 2007, 06:16 AM)
>
> I have watched 3ABN for years, I loved the times on the porch with Linda. I loved the aging Fluffy and when i realized that danny was not a dog lover...he became suspect. "never trust anyone that does not love dogs"....my words of wisdom. I am such a dog lover.
>
> Long before this all happened at 3ABN, I had to stop listening to Danny. When he interviewed guests that i wanted to hear, he was usually the one that talked, interupted and stole the show. I got to "mute" danny for fear i would have to hear "counteract the counterfeit" one more time.
>
> Suddenly, Linda was gone, and with her departure went the warmth and softness of 3ABN. I still watched but only the the programs that were not by 3ABN inhouse people.
>
> I wondered what had happened and a friend directed me to this sight and for months i have been reading here. What a sad story this is. I surely am glad that there is an all knowing God of justice that will make the last call on this matter. Until this time, I appreciate what you all are trying to do to prod the earthly powers of this church to rectify so many wrongs. May they ask for wisdom and strength to be stedfast in this work.

I don't consider a person "not a dog lover" because they don't want an outside dog licking them in the face, or jumping up on them with muddy paws. Danny never mistreated Fluffy and, in fact, liked the dog. The only mistreatment of Fluffy was Linda going off and leaving the dog, forever, knowing how much traveling Ds has to do. Then, all the while that she had no idea what was going on with Fluffy or who was taking care of her, she claimed knowledge of fluffy in a way that insinuated she still had her and was taking care of her.
When Linda departed all the warmth left? Did you ever consider that the warmth was only "there" when the red light on the camera's went on? Ask the workers at 3abn that worked for her and around her, about her "warmth".
Your friend gave you wrong advice to come here. Most of these people are in the same position as you. They have never met any of the people involved, they have never seen any of these allegations with their own eyes. Now they criticize Doug for merging when he does have years of experience working with, dealing with, and truly "knowing" the people involved. What kind of reasoning is used here that those here that know absolutely nothing for themselves, still know, more than someone like Doug who has worked with 3abn for many years. Does that make sense to you? Let's name a few others that have worked with DS and 3abn for years and continue to do so. Jim Gilly, Dwight Nelson, T Marshall, David A., Kenneth Cox, J. Gilmore and many other respected pastors and leaders in the church. Would they continue to risk their own reputations by being involved with 3abn if these allegations were true? How many people can bsda say are corrupt, or using 3abn for personal gain, or they just don't know the truth. They have accused, even ASI of being lopsided and not truthful. Ask yourself how many people, ministries and organizations can be accused of these things before bsda and save 3abn not site starts losing validity with their accusations.

Also, it seems all those listening to Joy and pickle and believing what they say on their site has forgotten one huge, important detail. They are Linda's representatives. This fact has never been discussed in detail here that I have seen, in relation to, their website. It has been totally ignored that: 1. They are not pastors or leaders in the church.
2. They have no investigative or legal credentials of any kind
3. They are not reporters or Dr's or any other titles that they have used.
4. Their only claim to fame is being Linda's representatives which gives them a huge motive for carrying on with their slanderous allegations.
How many times has it been said here on bsda that Linda is keeping quiet and has nothing to do with all of this? Then who is supplying Pickle and Joy with much of their alleged allegations on the inside workings of 3abn?
Let's tie this together. After a somewhat bitter divorce, Joy and pickle become Linda's friends and "representatvies." Those "representatives" start a site slandering and trashing 3abn and it's people. Then Linda's "representatives" who have no credentials whatsoever make allegations and then demand answers from 3abn, DS, and the board including, opening their financial books to Linda's "representatives." When these "demands" are ignored (as they should be) then more allegations, gossip and tall tales are told with the "what does 3abn have to hide" scenerio's.
The 2 people that "work" for Linda "demand" explanations, investigations, answers to their own allegations and so on....Then, all these things are read, repeated and taken as fact and repeated some more. Then the people that are repeating all the lies that they have read and taken as fact have the audacity to question people who are "truly" in the "know" like Doug B and the many others that were named.
People, really, how insane is this situation? How many "smarts" does it take to see what has been going on here and who is behind it? How much intelligence does it take to see that just the merge tells the true tale of the "get 3abn campaign" and the credibility of those behind it.
Those here that stick with believing the gossip and lies, want to believe them. The only alternative to that would be ignorance and no one wants to be accused of that. But, if the shoe fits....

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 12:58 PM

thank you PB

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 7 2007, 12:24 PM) ☐
>
> mozart,
> There are some, both among victims and those who are aware of the abuse, who find it far too frightening to step out of the denial that keeps them in a semblance of normal life. However, they don't realize that by taking that first terrifying step out of the secrecy they are allowing the healing process to begin.
>
> If only we could care less about our "images" and more about our actual characters perhaps we would be willing to allow the Lord to help us take the steps necessary to make things right.

Posted by: shinejoy May 7 2007, 01:02 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 7 2007, 10:58 AM) ☐
>
> thank you PB

Oh brother people just don't get it

Posted by: LaurenceD May 7 2007, 01:14 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene)
>
> Those here that stick with believing the gossip and lies, want to believe them.

I'm confused. Are you talking about their lies, or possibly yours? We don't so much reach conclusions from knowing all your people, or from a familiarity with the so-called details. The picture comes together from a much broader perspective.

Just to illustrate how different perspectives can be, tell us, if you're able, do you understand what 3abn was doing wrong when it lost the court case with the State of Illinois? No comment? That's even more revealing. And you'd like to shape public perception with your DS/LS opinions? No way.

Posted by: shinejoy May 7 2007, 01:22 PM

good job thanks L

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 01:45 PM

Eirene,
Since you never answer one single question i ask, i won't bother to ask any of you. [avoidance is cowardice]

Question to the public:

Does anybody feel warmth from Mollie?
I never have, she reminds me of a pit bull.

Anyone feel warmth from Kay K.?
None here; like nails on a chalkboard. I have to mute the TV.

How about SQ? Was her slanderous insinuating analogy of Linda's daughter teaming with warmth and love?
NADA, ZIP, NEGATIVO It was teaming with venom. You could see it all over her face.

So, poor fluffy was left behind? Tell your slanderous tales elsewhere eirene. FLUFFY WAS LEFT BEHIND WITH THE NEIGHBORS WHERE SHE STAYED MOST OF THE TIME ANYWAY BECAUSE THEY LET HER STAY IN THE HOUSE AND SLEEP IN THEIR BED!! (THAT IS A QUOTE FROM DANNY AND LINDA) Any woman with an ounce of sense can figure out that Linda loved fluffy and it probably wrenched her heart out to leave her but with all on her plate, my goodness.........she did the right thing. The neighbors loved that dog. Fluffy was left in very good hands.

They have never met any of the people involved, they have never seen any of these allegations with their own eyes.
I have met several and corresponded with WT at length.

4. Their only claim to fame is being Linda's representatives which gives them a huge motive for carrying on with their slanderous allegations.
What were DS, MS, SQ, WT & JL's motives?

Let's name a few others that have worked with DS and 3abn for years and continue to do so. Jim Gilly, Dwight Nelson, T Marshall, David A., Kenneth Cox, J. Gilmore and many other respected pastors and leaders in the church.

Do these pastors, whom i respect, have the time or the ability to investigate for themselves? very doubtful
Do they know any details whatsoever? very doubtful
Have they only heard one side which was most likely not even solicited? most assuredly, yes

All anyone has ever asked for is evidence.
If DS won't give evidence then who should believe him? If, and mostly likely, these men have never heard any details, of course they are going to just wait and see what the authorities decide. At this point, it doesn't affect them personally and they don't have time to delve into what they have been told time and time again is just "the devil trying to destroy the ministry".
This is why we have to get busy with those letters ppl.
****
to Fine Art,
I say, don't listen to people who want you to stick your head back in the sand. They are trying to make you feel guilty for opening your eyes and looking for yourself. I respect you enough to trust you will come to your own conclusions.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 7 2007, 01:46 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 7 2007, 06:53 AM)
> There has been some talk about avoiding the TCW broadcast. Just a thought to ponder - wouldn't it be wise for those of us who are seeking accountability from some in these ministries to keep an ear on what is being said? We would do well not to fall into denial and possibly help sweep things under the rug. If we are upset with the weather, avoiding the weather report does not make it go away, it just makes us unprepared for the storm that is coming.

I have people I trust online and offline who watch these things faithfully with and without an ear to what's going on. We didn't do anything with the weekend, first of all because I didn't think about it (three churches is more than enough to think about without external events), but then when I realized it was coming up on us, I mentioned it to no one, because I don't want to give 3ABN a platform in my churches until the house is cleaned out.

Eirene, did you read those texts that PB and I posted? With the things you know you should be ashamed to be posting what you post here. Some say an angel is writing it all down ...

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 01:47 PM

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 7 2007, 01:02 PM)
>
> Oh brother people just don't get it

???? Could you please unpack your post #55 for me SJ? Did i miss something?

Posted by: sonshineonme May 7 2007, 01:51 PM

YOU GO MO! You're a fine representative of what "Eirene" should be paying close attention to, and isn't. But, on they go, and go, and go.....God pays attention.

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 7 2007, 12:45 PM)

> Eirene,
> Even though you never answer one single question i ask, so i won't bother to ask any of you. [avoidance is cowardice]
>
> Question to the public: Does anybody feel warmth from Mollie?
> I never have, she reminds me of a pit bull.
>
> Anyone feel warmth from Kay K.?
> None here; like nails on a chalkboard. I have to mute the TV.
>
> How about SQ? Was her slanderous insinuating analogy of Linda's daughter teaming with warmth and love?
> NADA, ZIP, NEGATIVO It was teaming with venom. You could see it all over her face.
>
> So, poor fluffy was left behind? Tell your slanderous tales elsewhere eirene. FLUFFY WAS LEFT BEHIND WITH THE NEIGHBORS WHERE SHE STAYED MOST OF THE TIME ANYWAY BECAUSE THEY LET HER STAY IN THE HOUSE AND SLEEP IN THEIR BED!! (THAT IS A QUOTE FROM DANNY AND LINDA) Any woman with an ounce of sense can figure out that Linda loved fluffy and it probably wrenched her heart out to leave her but with all on her plate, my goodness.........she did the right thing. The neighbors loved that dog. Fluffy was left in very good hands.
>
> They have never met any of the people involved, they have never seen any of these allegations with their own eyes.
> I have met several and corresponded with WT at length.
>
> 4. Their only claim to fame is being Linda's representatives which gives them a huge motive for carrying on with their slanderous allegations.
> What were DS, MS, SQ, WT & JL's motives?
>
> Let's name a few others that have worked with DS and 3abn for years and continue to do so. Jim Gilly, Dwight Nelson, T Marshall, David A., Kenneth Cox, J. Gilmore and many other respected pastors and leaders in the church.
> Do these pastors, whom i respect, have the time or the ability to investigate for themselves? very doubtful
> Do they know any details whatsoever? very doubtful
> Have they only heard one side which was most likely not even solicited? most asuredly, yes
>
> All anyone has ever asked for is evidence.
> If DS won't give evidence then who should believe him? If, and mostly likely, these men have never heard any details, of course they are going to just wait and see what the authorities decide. At this point, it doesn't affect them personally and they don't have time to delve into what they have been told time and time again is just "the devil trying to destroy the ministry".
> This is why we have to get busy with those letters ppl.
> to Fine Art,
> I say, don't listen to people who want you to stick your head back in the sand. They are want to make you feel guilty for opening your eyes and looking for yourself. I respect you enough to trust you will come to your own conclusions.

Posted by: Skyhook May 7 2007, 01:51 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 09:53 AM)
>
> It is called "marketing" Lawrence. The more reminders they can send home with you, the more cd sales. Not most famous rock groups, make all, along with rap, soul, pop, anybody who is really serious about making some money. The same with movies and cartoons, especially those develpoed for children. Right now, Dora the Explorer is HUGE! Not to mention SpongeBob and a host of others.

> I am not altogether sure that this is a bad thing for the church. The constant reminders of the "message" are good. I think we run into aproblem when we get a glimpse of how much money is made from the reminders..........

rincessdi, I notice you addressed me as Lawrence. Did you mistake me for LawrenceD or was there another eason? I don't mind, just curious.
peaking of selling books, I was told that Brenda Walsh and Kay Kuzma have a contract from Pacific Press to vrite childrens books to "replace the old ones." Some folks are concerned that the "old ones" like "The Bible tory" would go out of print. This was announced by them when they were at a local church in Tennessee. hey also asked people to send them ideas for books.
can't imagine Arthur S. Maxwell needing to ask people for ideas. I'm not saying this just to denigrate them, ut I can't imagine Brenda or Kay being able to produce anything on the level of A.S. Maxwell's children's ooks.
s you said, there are enormous potential profits involved, especially with world wide promotion over 3abn.

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 02:03 PM

Eirene, I just have to say, this is the most hateful post I have seen from you yet. Fine Art was speaking from her(assuming and too lazy to check) own experiences and feelings about this horrible situation. You cannot invalidate that. She didn't ask you about how Linda was off camera or how long she left her dog.

Once again, for you and the rest of your gan, if this place is sooooo horrible for you, why are you here each and everyday. Get ta steppin'! I really get tired of this kind of stuff. Nobody is forcing you to be here. Now, I may even get myself in trouble for this, but I have had enough. It is one thing for the rest of us who have been here to argue the points, and information presented, but you have attacked a new member for no good reason. She did not come, like some with guns blazing pronouncing judgment on one side or the other, or making demands. She came telling her own experience, and you blasted her. Stop it! Or better yet, just leave. Take your people and go! Don't let the door knob hit cha'........!

Oh and yes, for the moment, I am speaking as a member, as you too are relatively new and I believe your people have mislead into the belief that you can disrespect anybody here, and trash this site at will. [color=#CC0000]Not on my watch! They lied, so don't do it again. It is easy enough to change hats. [/color] See how eas that was?

And let me just say this, if you truly enjoy the site, then you are more than welcome to stay, however, just like you would let anybody in your house talking trash about you, we do not allow it either. I truly love BSDA and ALL it's members, I won't stand by even just as a member and let anyone trash us. You can call each other and talk all you want, go to other sites, whatever you want, but not in our house.

Ok, so everybody else, please forgive me. Calvin, I will take whatever punishment you deem applicable. I will now replace my tiara, and go back to being Princessdi

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 11:56 AM)
>
> I don't consider a person "not a dog lover" because they don't want an outside dog licking them in the face, or jumping up on them with muddy paws. Danny never mistreated Fluffy and, in fact, liked the dog. The only mistreatment of Fluffy was Linda going off and leaving the dog, forever, knowing how much traveling Ds has to do. Then, all the while that she had no idea what was going on with Fluffy or who was taking care of her, she claimed knowledge of fluffy in a way that insinuated she still had her and was taking care of her.
> When Linda departed all the warmth left? Did you ever consider that the warmth was only "there" when the red light on the camera's went on? Ask the workers at 3abn that worked for her and around her, about her > "warmth".

> Your friend gave you wrong advice to come here. Most of these people are in the same position as you. They have never met any of the people involved, they have never seen any of these allegations with their own eyes. Now they criticize Doug for merging when he does have years of experience working with, dealing with, and truly "knowing" the people involved. What kind of reasoning is used here that those here that know absolutely nothing for themselves, still know, more than someone like Doug who has worked with 3abn for many years. Does that make sense to you? Let's name a few others that have worked with DS and 3abn for years and continue to do so. Jim Gilly, Dwight Nelson, T Marshall, David A., Kenneth Cox, J. Gilmore and many other respected pastors and leaders in the church. Would they continue to risk their own reputations by being involved with 3abn if these allegations were true? How many people can bsda say are corrupt, or using 3abn for personal gain, or they just don't know the truth. They have accused, even ASI of being lopsided and not truthful. Ask yourself how many people, ministries and organizations can be accused of these things before bsda and save 3abn not site starts losing validity with their accusations.
> Also, it seems all those listening to Joy and pickle and believing what they say on their site has forgotten one huge, important detail. They are Linda's representatives. This fact has never been discussed in detail here that I have seen, in relation to, their website. It has been totally ignored that: 1. They are not pastors or leaders in the church.
> 2. They have no investigative or legal credentials of any kind
> 3. They are not reporters or Dr's or any other titles that they have used.
> 4. Their only claim to fame is being Linda's representatives which gives them a huge motive for carrying on with their slanderous allegations.
> How many times has it been said here on bsda that Linda is keeping quiet and has nothing to do with all of this? Then who is supplying Pickle and Joy with much of their alleged allegations on the inside workings of 3abn?
> Let's tie this together. After a somewhat bitter divorce, Joy and pickle become Linda's friends and "representatvies." Those "representatives" start a site slandering and trashing 3abn and it's people. Then Linda's "representatives" who have no credentials whatsoever make allegations and then demand answers from 3abn, DS, and the board including, opening their financial books to Linda's "representatives." When these "demands" are ignored (as they should be) then more allegations, gossip and tall tales are told with the "what does 3abn have to hide" scenerio's.
> The 2 people that "work" for Linda "demand" explanations, investigations, answers to their own allegations and so on....Then, all these things are read, repeated and taken as fact and repeated some more. Then the people that are repeating all the lies that they have read and taken as fact have the audacity to question people who are "truly" in the "know" like Doug B and the many others that were named.
> People, really, how insane is this situation? How many "smarts" does it take to see what has been going on here and who is behind it? How much intelligence does it take to see that just the merge tells the true tale of the "get 3abn campaign" and the credibility of those behind it.
> Those here that stick with believing the gossip and lies, want to believe them. The only alternative to that would be ignorance and no one wants to be accused of that. But, if the shoe fits....

Posted by: sonshineonme May 7 2007, 02:09 PM

Di,
you spoke for most of us, no matter what hat you had on.
personally, I am grateful for you and your words of wisdom.
you're pretty great! kudos to you!

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 01:03 PM)
>
> Eirene, I just have to say, this is the most hateful post I have seen from you yet. Fine Art was speaking from her(assuming and too lazy to check) own experiences and feelings about this horrible situation. You cannot invalidate that. She didn't ask you about how Linda was off camera or how long she left her dog.

> Once again, for you and the rest of your gan, if this place is sooooo horrible for you, why are you here each and everyday. Get ta steppin'! I really get tired of this kind of stuff. Nobody is forcing you to be here. Now, I may even get myself in trouble for this, but I have had enough. It is one thing for the rest of us who have been here to argue the points, and information presented, but you have attacked a new member for no good reason. She did not come, like some with guns blazing pronouncing judgment on one side or the other, or making demands. She came telling her own experience, and you blasted her. Stop it! Or better yet, just leave. Take your people and go! Don't let the door knob hit cha'........!
>
> Oh and yes, for the moment, I am speaking as a member, as you too are relatively new and I believe your people have mislead into the belief that you can disrespect anybody here, and trash this site at will. [color=#CC0000]Not on my watch! They lied, so don't do it again. It is easy enough to change hats. [/color] See how eas that was?
>
> And let me just say this, if you truly enjoy the site, then you are more than welcome to stay, however, just like you would let anybody in your house talking trash about you, we do not allow it either. I truly love BSDA and ALL it's members, I won't stand by even just as a member and let anyone trash us. You can call each other and talk all you want, go to other sites, whatever you want, but not in our house.
> Ok, so everybody else, please forgive me. Calvin, I will take whatever punishment you deem applicable. I will now replace my tiara, and go back to being Princessdi

---

Posted by: Pickle May 7 2007, 02:45 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 12:56 PM)
>
> Let's tie this together. After a somewhat bitter divorce, Joy and pickle become Linda's friends and "representatvies." Those "representatives" start a site slandering and trashing 3abn and it's people. Then Linda's "representatives" who have no credentials whatsoever make allegations and then demand answers from 3abn, DS, and the board including, opening their financial books to Linda's "representatives." When these "demands" are ignored (as they should be) then more allegations, gossip and tall tales are told with the "what does 3abn have to hide" scenerio's.

don't know Eirene. Maybe you're delusional. The facts have been out there for everyone to read for a long ime.

t was Shelley Quinn's "calling" Alyssa a liar on global TV on August 13 that convinced me to get involved, not .inda. I had no direct contact with her, I think, until December. On August 14 I talked with Glenn Dryden and jot his 2003 letter. Gailon received it on August 15. The rest is history.

'ou people appear to claim that evil, conniving, sinister, demonic Linda was so mad over the divorce in 2004 hat she convinced Glenn Dryden in 2003 to write that letter. And yet, unlike us, you never produce any locumentation to support such a wild-eyed idea.

Nhen I decided to become involved I had absolutely no interest in delving into who was right or wrong egarding the divorce. Didn't start digging into that until December. But when I talked to Hal, that's what he vanted to talk about. When I talked to John, that's what he wanted to talk about. When I wrote to Danny, hat's what he wanted to write about.

'he truth of the matter is that Linda is, in my opinion, incapable and/or unable to launch, guide, and ›rchestrate the type of conspiracy you claim to be going on. And in my opinion, deep down inside Danny :nows that. I believe he knows that she is fairly easy to hoodwink, buffalo, and manipulate.

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 02:47 PM

Yes, Ooops! Sorry Skyhook!! I just had a b-day and AARP just sent me my first email, which I REFUSE to open! Please me, both you and Lawrence.

Yes, I grew up with the whole series of "The Bible Story" We loved them. My Mom read to us from the every Sabbath. is that Brenda who used to be Linda's good Friend, Brenda? Just asking. hard to keep this bunch straight.

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 7 2007, 11:51 AM)
>
> Princessdi, I notice you addressed me as Lawrence. Did you mistake me for LawrenceD or was there another reason? I don't mind, just curious.
> Speaking of selling books, I was told that Brenda Walsh and Kay Kuzma have a contract from Pacific Press to write childrens books to "replace the old ones." Some folks are concerned that the "old ones" like "The Bible Story" would go out of print. This was announced by them when they were at a local church in Tennessee. They also asked people to send them ideas for books.
> I can't imagine Arthur S. Maxwell needing to ask people for ideas. I'm not saying this just to denigrate them, but I can't imagine Brenda or Kay being able to produce anything on the level of A.S. Maxwell's children's books.
> As you said, there are enormous potential profits involved, especially with world wide promotion over 3abn.

Posted by: lurker May 7 2007, 02:59 PM

Eirene's arguments might be believable if so many of the facts we have become acquainted with didn't come from official government sites, from official documents signed by the principles in the dispute, from posting of facts and dates by unbiased newspapers, from the self incriminating words of the leaders at 3ABN themselves, from a Non Adventist Church Organization years ago, from testimony of community members where someone has formerly lived as to his reputation, from family and workers, from business associates, off the record words from Church officials etc etc etc. And no, I am not going to say what or who they are as we have gone over all this before.

I suppose the response will be to attack the reputation of others as there seems to be no denial of the facts only an attempt to say that others are just as bad or worse.

Posted by: Eirene May 7 2007, 03:10 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 02:03 PM)
>
> Eirene, I just have to say, this is the most hateful post I have seen from you yet. Fine Art was speaking from her(assuming and too lazy to check) own experiences and feelings about this horrible situation. You cannot invalidate that. She didn't ask you about how Linda was off camera or how long she left her dog.
>
> Once again, for you and the rest of your gan, if this place is sooooo horrible for you, why are you here each and everyday.
>
> Oh and yes, for the moment, I am speaking as a member, as you too are relatively new and I believe your people have mislead into the belief that you can disrespect anybody here, and trash this site at will. [color=#CC0000]Not on my watch! They lied, so don't do it again. It is easy enough to change hats. [/color] See how eas that was?

Di, you are wrong on several counts and since you are so fair minded, you won't mind me pointing them out.

I was in no way attacking Fine Art. You say she was voicing her own feelings and I realize that. But, where did those feelings come from? She said a friend referred her to this site and she was sad at what she read. Certainly, I am sure she was. Me too. If I understand the rules correctly on bsda, I then have a right to point out that what she is reading may not at all, be the truth and nothing but the truth.
I also wanted to point out that hundreds of the post she is reading are from those of you that don't know anything personally, but are just repeating and expounding on what you have read and heard.
That would make most of the allegations posted here, unreliable, unverified, and unfactual. One should keep that in mind at all times while reading here.
If you all can point newbies to the trash of the evangelist and unauthorized version, why can't we point out the fallacy of believing what you read from so many people who don't know anyone involved and have never seen anything with their own eyes? If you think Lurkers cannot see the bias, you are fooling yourself.

You are greatly mistaken when you say "my side" led me to believe that you can "disrespect" people here. Absolutely not. It was your side that showed me that plenty of ridicule and disrespecting can be done here but, of course, only if it is done by "your side". Mr. J is just one poster that is a perfect example of what it means to disrespect those who disagree with him. His posts include, name calling, sexual innuendo, ridicule and degradation to the nth degree and yet, nothing was done until just recently when enough complained you just couldn't ignore it. Then was he suspended? No way. He was told to tone it down.
You Di are a disrespecter of persons if you think those just reading here can't see those obvious details. You are giving people no credit for their intelligence for seeing the truth of what goes on here. If you want to bann me for saying that, be my guest. It will just validate even more to those lurkers, exactly what I am saying.

And, no, I am not here each and everyday. Hardly. But I do post when I read something that is unfair and false. Or in the case of Fine Arts when they are mistakenly believing what people are posting about DS and 3abn with no proof to base it on.

[color=#CC0000]Fine Arts, if you took my post as attacking you, I apologize. Just as the other side like to advise newbies in all kinds of detrimental ways, we like to point out some very valid and important facts also. We also like to point out some truths about those that have mislead thousands of people. That is what I was doing.

Posted by: shinejoy May 7 2007, 03:16 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 7 2007, 11:47 AM) ☐
>
> ???? Could you please unpack your post #55 for me SJ? Did i miss something?

oh i was reading #53

Posted by: Eirene May 7 2007, 03:16 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 7 2007, 02:45 PM) ☐
>
> The truth of the matter is that Linda is, in my opinion, incapable and/or unable to launch, guide, and orchestrate the type of conspiracy you claim to be going on. And in my opinion, deep down inside Danny knows that. I believe he knows that she is fairly easy to hoodwink, buffalo, and manipulate.

Really? Is that how you and Joy came to be her "representatives."

And if that is your opinion of her then I take it, it could have been very possible that she was hoodwinked and manipulated by the doctor also?

Posted by: FineArt May 7 2007, 03:21 PM

I feel among friends, Thank you all for your support.

My!!! how an innocent post can be made into a declaration of war. I have not come here to argue with anyone. I am long in the tooth and have learned there are many who are capable of handleing such matters. I will post my opinions, based on whatever, pray for the wisdon of those under fire and ask the Lord to lead in the lives of those that are on the front lines.

I have no burden for 3ABN to be taken away from our view. My prayers are for the cleansing of powers that be and the wrong acts that have been noticed/varified but not delt with. Under the right leadership/Jesus Christ first and man second this tool may be used in a mighty way to win souls. I pray that ambition will not be behind any thrust for power in this merger.

- The Paulson Collection of Ellen G. White Letters---PG- 346
"The praise and flattery of men make ministers hungry for more, until they think as did Elder Daniels, the praise and flattery of men of more value than the approval of God."

"if pride and selfishness were laid aside, five minutes would remove most difficulties" Early Writtings pg 119

Jesus came to this world to show us a simple pattern for man to follow and it results in his salvation.....man has complicated that path to the inth degree.

I am glad i came to this forum, Attacts won't hurt/discorage me, i came to encourage not pick a fight.

God Bless

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 7 2007, 03:33 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 01:56 PM)
>
> The only mistreatment of Fluffy was Linda going off and leaving the dog, forever, knowing how much traveling Ds has to do. Then, all the while that she had no idea what was going on with Fluffy or who was taking care of her, she claimed knowledge of fluffy in a way that insinuated she still had her and was taking care of her.
> When Linda departed all the warmth left? Did you ever consider that the warmth was only "there" when the red light on the camera's went on? Ask the workers at 3abn that worked for her and around her, about her "warmth".
> Your friend gave you wrong advice to come here. Most of these people are in the same position as you. They have never met any of the people involved, they have never seen any of these allegations with their own eyes.

Eirene:

What you say here is not true. It's just plain "off the wall."

1. Linda has always been kind to me when I talked to her at 3ABN -- at the church -- or away from 3ABN. Always. I noticed no changes whether the camera lights were on or not.

2. Fluffy was left in good hands -- the same home Fluffy had when Danny and Linda travelled together. In fact, on hot summer days, Fluffy was known to go over to those neighbors' home and stay inside because the house was air-conditioned - and Fluffy knew it.

3. When you rent a new home or apartment, the landlord will sometimes allow one dog, but not two. Linda took Sheltie with her, the younger dog, but Fluffy would have been the second dog. It was not certain at the time that Linda could have rented an apartment with two dogs, rather than one.

By the way, Fluffy and I spent some quality time together. My "first-hand" observation is that there was no mistreatment of Fluffy of any kind. In fact, it was joked that there were days when Fluffy received more mail than Danny did; Whether that's true or not, I don't know, but it was funny just the same.

And welcome to BSDA, FineArt.

Posted by: Johann May 7 2007, 03:35 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 08:56 PM)
>
> Does that make sense to you? Let's name a few others that have worked with DS and 3abn for years and continue to do so. Jim Gilly, Dwight Nelson, T Marshall, David A., Kenneth Cox, J. Gilmore and many other respected pastors and leaders in the church. Would they continue to risk their own reputations by being involved with 3abn if these allegations were true?
> ns on the inside workings of 3abn?
>
> The only alternative to that would be ignorance and no one wants to be accused of that. But, if the shoe fits....

It is interesting that I have actually met some of those people recently, so I can only say that Eirene should be careful with her assumptions. One of these men told me frankly that although he preaches regularly on 3ABN it may be 18 months between his meetings with Danny Shelton personally. He told me also that his "boss" had requested of him to stay out of the complicated divorce affair. I understood that was why he did not take sides, but merely used 3ABN as a media to get out his message.

This is only told as a gentle warning to Eirene about her use of such names. I noticed that a name frequently used previously on such lists is now absent. It might be wiser not so use such lists than to have to drop some more, one by one.

Posted by: shinejoy May 7 2007, 03:41 PM

and the beat goes on on on on

Posted by: FineArt May 7 2007, 03:42 PM

let me take another moment and point out that i had been watching 3ABN for many years before the problems were revealed. I am not a viewer that hadn't noticed there were things unexplained going on. There were people i would not watch sinply because they didn't ring true.

I will also point out I am a free thinker and feel intelligent enough to know when things are not accoring to God's plan. Red flags were waving over 3ABN for quite some time before i started searching for answers. Seems to me if all this i am reading is just false truths and gossip, 3ABN would have laid all the truths out on the table for the public to see. Answer the questions asked of them and would show a christian spirit, but the opposit was what took place and is taking place.

You can't fool all the people all the time. A forum is not to blame when folks are willing to think for themselves and weigh what they read. not everyone is a blind follower.

God Bless

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 03:45 PM

"Speaking things as if they were until they are"..........See you Friday Eirene. Your friends should have told you that if you want to question or comment on an Admin action you do it PM to Calvin. That is what got your friends suspended, and now you. See ya' then!

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 01:10 PM) ☐
>
> Di, you are wrong on several counts and since you are so fair minded, you won't mind me pointing them out.
> I was in no way attacking Fine Art. You say she was voicing her own feelings and I realize that. But, where did those feelings come from? She said a friend referred her to this site and she was sad at what she read. Certainly, I am sure she was. Me too. If I understand the rules correctly on bsda, I then have a right to point out that what she is reading may not at all, be the truth and nothing but the truth.
> I also wanted to point out that hundreds of the post she is reading are from those of you that don't know anything personally, but are just repeating and expounding on what you have read and heard.
> That would make most of the allegations posted here, unreliable, unverified, and unfactual. One should keep that in mind at all times while reading here.
> If you all can point newbies to the trash of the evangelist and unauthorized version, why can't we point out the fallacy of believing what you read from so many people who don't know anyone involved and have never seen anything with their own eyes? If you think Lurkers cannot see the bias, you are fooling yourself.
>
> You are greatly mistaken when you say "my side" led me to believe that you can "disrespect" people here. Absolutely not. It was your side that showed me that plenty of ridicule and disrespecting can be done here but, of course, only if it is done by "your side". Mr. J is just one poster that is a perfect example of what it means to disrespect those who disagree with him. His posts include, name calling, sexual innuendo, ridicule and degradation to the nth degree and yet, nothing was done until just recently when enough complained you just couldn't ignore it. Then was he suspended? No way. He was told to tone it down.
> You Di are a disrespecter of persons if you think those just reading here can't see those obvious details. You are giving people no credit for their intelligence for seeing the truth of what goes on here. If you want to bann me for saying that, be my guest. It will just validate even more to those lurkers, exactly what I am saying.
> And, no, I am not here each and everyday. Hardly. But I do post when I read something that is unfair and false. Or in the case of Fine Arts when they are mistakenly believing what people are posting about DS and 3abn with no proof to base it on.
>
> Fine Arts, if you took my post as attacking you, I apologize. Just as the other side like to advise newbies in all kinds of detrimental ways, we like to point out some very valid and important facts also. We also like to point out some truths about those that have mislead thousands of people. That is what I was doing.

Posted by: Jnana15 May 7 2007, 03:53 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 7 2007, 07:16 AM) ☐
>
> I have watched 3ABN for years, I loved the times on the porch with Linda. I loved the aging Fluffy and > when i realized that danny was not a dog lover...he became suspect. "never trust anyone that does not love dogs"....my words of wisdom. I am such a dog lover.

>
> Long before this all happened at 3ABN, I had to stop listening to Danny. When he interviewed guests that i wanted to hear, he was usually the one that talked, interupted and stole the show. I got to "mute" danny for fear i would have to hear "counteract the counterfeit" one more time.
>
> Suddenly, Linda was gone, and with her departure went the warmth and softness of 3ABN. I still watched but only the the programs that were not by 3ABN inhouse people.
>
> I wondered what had happened and a friend directed me to this sight and for months i have been reading here. What a sad story this is. I surely am glad that there is an all knowing God of justice that will make the last call on this matter. Until this time, I appreciate what you all are trying to do to prod the earthly powers of this church to rectify so many wrongs. May they ask for wisdom and strength to be stedfast in this work.

rofl You go gurl!!

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 04:45 PM)
>
> "Speaking things as if they were until they are"..........See you Friday Eirene. Your friends should have told you that if you want to question or comment on an Admin action you do it PM to Calvin. Taht is what got your friends suspended, and now you. See ya' then!

'm having a laugh attack here rofl rofl

See! We tried to warn her Thank you Di.

Posted by: Johann May 7 2007, 03:57 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 11:16 PM)
>
> Really? Is that how you and Joy came to be her "representatives."
> And if that is your opinion of her then I take it, it could have been very possible that she was hoodwinked and manipulated by the doctor also?

Well, well, Eirene is also capable of spinning words into a different meaning to suit herself!!! Reading them out of context with a spin supplied seems to be a rare art. I still know nothing about the current court case Mr. Pickle is involved in, but this makes me wonder how many spin doctors are supplying the evidence used n a case like that?

Eirene supplies a strong suggestion in that direction.

May God have mercy!

Posted by: roxe May 7 2007, 08:42 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 7 2007, 03:42 PM)
>
> I am not a viewer that hadn't noticed there were things unexplained going on. There were people i would not watch sinply because they didn't ring true.
>
> I will also point out I am a free thinker and feel intelligent enough to know when things are not accoring to God's plan.
>
> You can't fool all the people all the time. A forum is not to blame when folks are willing to think for themselves and weigh what they read. not everyone is a blind follower.
>
> God Bless

welcome to BSDA, FineArt... i enjoy reading your posts... you do have a mind of your own.
so refreshing!

Posted by: seraph|m May 7 2007, 09:29 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 06:45 PM)
>
> "Speaking things as if they were until they are"..........See you Friday Eirene. Your friends should have told you that if you want to question or comment on an Admin action you do it PM to Calvin. That is what got your friends suspended, and now you. See ya' then!

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 7 2007, 09:37 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 7 2007, 02:42 PM)
>
> let me take another moment and point out that i had been watching 3ABN for many years before the problems were revealed. I am not a viewer that hadn't noticed there were things unexplained going on. There were people i would not watch sinply because they didn't ring true.
>
> I will also point out I am a free thinker and feel intelligent enough to know when things are not accoring to God's plan. Red flags were waving over 3ABN for quite some time before i started searching for answers. Seems to me if all this i am reading is just false truths and gossip, 3ABN would have laid all the truths out on the table for the public to see. Answer the questions asked of them and would show a christian spirit, but the opposit was what took place and is taking place.
>
> You can't fool all the people all the time. A forum is not to blame when folks are willing to think for themselves and weigh what they read. not everyone is a blind follower.
> God Bless

FineArt,

Welcome to BSDA! As a fellow member of the "long-in-the-tooth-club" I appreciate your clear common sense statements that cut through the smoke and mirrors that some detractors are attempting to hold up here.

I came here somewhat blind but seeking truth. I came here truly believing that I would find out that this was a rumor mill (sorry Calvin). It took me just a few weeks of reading and getting to know the folks here to realize that this was just not the case! It took me just a few weeks more to begin to feel a part of this great online family and to discover that BSDA holds far more of value than only the 3abn forum. I hope you will find the time to visit the other forums here and receive the social and spiritual blessings that they hold.

As to those who come here supporting the status quo at 3abn, the more they read posts such as yours and the more we pray for them, there is a chance that they, too, will begin to open their eyes.

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 09:41 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 7 2007, 01:45 PM)
>
> And in my opinion, deep down inside Danny knows that.

i don't think it's deep down inside at all. i don't think he believes that for a second. it' just part of the game.

Posted by: Chas May 8 2007, 12:11 AM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 7 2007, 07:56 AM)
>
> Instead we seem to be using sensationalism, emotionalism, moving lights and motivational speakers that are prepared to manipulate, by well chosen words, the minds of the listeners. It used to be, messages that were given by our pioneers were wrenched from the depths of the heart by the Holy Spirit. Humor was not added to get that laugh of entertainment. Drama was not introduced behind the sacred desk to glue your attention. Man's Rational has replaced a cry for God's wisdom.
>
> Those that will be sealed will be "crying and sighing" because of the abominations being done in God's church.
>
> The good news is: The church will appear to fall, but does not.
> The good news is: If we hang in there doing what the God almighty has for us to do with all our hearts, we will not be asleep when He comes but will go into the wedding supper as a bride.
>
> I'm afraid i just preached a sermon.....sorry
>
> God bless

FineArt,

I really like the way you preach but I hope you realize that "The Church" that appears to fall, but does not, is not a building or an organization. It is people who love God and the rest of us unloveable folks.

Matthew 23:3,15 All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.

It appears to me that DS believes the same lie that most Adventist pastors are taught and seem to believe - "The end justifies the means". I'm not excusing DS, but don't expect the "Church" to come down too hard on him for sins that many of them are guilty of.

Don't get me wrong, I've been an Adventist all my life and I love the Adventist church and God's people. It is sad to see the way modern Israel has gone.

Matthew 23:38 Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

CWS

Posted by: steffan May 8 2007, 01:12 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 7 2007, 04:35 PM)
>
> It is interesting that I have actually met some of those people recently, so I can only say that Eirene should be careful with her assumptions. One of these men told me frankly that although he preaches regularly on 3ABN it may be 18 months between his meetings with Danny Shelton personally. He told me also that his "boss" had requested of him to stay out of the complicated divorce affair. I understood that was why he did not take sides, but merely used 3ABN as a media to get out his message.
>
> This is only told as a gentle warning to Eirene about her use of such names. I noticed that a name frequently used previously on such lists is now absent. It might be wiser not so use such lists than to have to drop some more, one by one.

Johann, don't be ridiculous,please. Saying names were left out from other lists is so childish and silly. Maybe that is who Eirene was thinking of at the time since the TCW just ended. Or maybe she just had a senior moment as we all do. To say she purposely left out someone because of some secret reason is your usual type of spin.
As far as you talking to someone recently....no credibility there....Do you realize how many times you have stated that you just "recently" talked to "a high" conference official, a well known pastor, someone in leadership.....etc etc? Yet, you never name any names. Without names, where it can be verified, your statements mean nothing. If you or the ones supposedly telling you all these opinions about 3abn don't have enough grit to face up to their own comments, they are null and void.

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 04:45 PM)
>
> "Speaking things as if they were until they are"..........See you Friday Eirene. Your friends should have told you that if you want to question or comment on an Admin action you do it PM to Calvin. That is what got your friends suspended, and now you. See ya' then!

rofl Hah, you did exactly what she said you would do. You suspended her. Hilarious when you look at what your side gets by with. Good going Eirene. You knew the pattern well.

Posted by: steffan May 8 2007, 01:28 AM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 7 2007, 04:33 PM)
>
> Eirene:
>
> What you say here is not true. It's just plain "off the wall."
>
> 1. Linda has always been kind to me when I talked to her at 3ABN -- at the church -- or away from 3ABN. Always. I noticed no changes whether the camera lights were on or not.
>
> 2. Fluffy was left in good hands -- the same home Fluffy had when Danny and Linda travelled together. In fact, on hot summer days, Fluffy was known to go over to those neighbors' home and stay inside because the house was air-conditioned - and Fluffy knew it.
>
> 3. When you rent a new home or apartment, the landlord will sometimes allow one dog, but not two. Linda took Sheltie with her, the younger dog, but Fluffy would have been the second dog. It was not certain at the time that Linda could have rented an apartment with two dogs, rather than one.
>
> By the way, Fluffy and I spent some quality time together. My "first-hand" observation is that there was no mistreatment of Fluffy of any kind. In fact, it was joked that there were days when Fluffy received more mail than Danny did; Whether that's true or not, I don't know, but it was funny just the same.
>
> And welcome to BSDA, FineArt.

Pete it seems you missed the point of Eirene's post. If I am reading her correctly she is saying that Linda insinuated on her first website post that she had fluffy when she did not and knew nothing about what was going on.
Then you say she could probably only have one dog when she rented....As far as I understand, she bought the mobile home she moved into and then definitely bought the house she lives in now.
As far as being nice to you so???? It would be hard for her to be arrogant and disrespectful to everybody in the world. Did you work directly for her or under her? I have talked to several who did and get the same conclusion from all. Arrogant, no respect for the workers, most all the projects she did were about and for her, they had to cater to her ,move furniture, lights, camera's etc on her whims when she basically knew nothing at all about the technical side of television. I could go on but you get the point.
When the truths start coming out in these lawsuits, most of you guys are going to have egg on your face. When you realize how badly you have been hoodwinked by people like pickle and joy, Linda's friends, and unhappy ex employees who couldn't wait to get some kind of revenge by jumping on this bandwagon, you all will feel, foolish, deceived and betrayed. For those of you that have believed all the garbage that you have read, your feelings will be well deserved.

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 03:24 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 7 2007, 12:54 AM)
>
> Sister Eirene,
> I was only able to watch the first two hours of TCW. I must tell you that I was so blessed by the message the Holy Spirit gave through Dwight Nelson I hope to be able to watch the program again and again. I pray fervently that each of those in leadership at 3abn and at Amazing Facts will listen to what the Lord had for each of us in that message about the two greatest commandments.

> Please remind Danny and his Board that those souls outside the 3abn doors in the little town of Thompsonville are priceless as well.

'B,

:VERY single message given was like that, the holy spirit was present throughout the entire weekend, and in ıll the messages and songs of praise and worship.

'ry and catch them all when they are rebroadcast on 3 ABN, you will be equally blessed by all I am sure.

'our judgmental reminders of precious souls Jesus died for, and prayers about 3ABN, Danny and the board, vould be better applied to yourself first though is my thinking.

ɩay we all have the ears to hear and the eyes to see what God is saying, and revealing to each of us.

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 03:40 AM

> QUOTE(GrammieTana @ May 6 2007, 01:52 PM)
>
> As much as I appreciate T. Marshall Kelly, I was somewhat disappointed in his sermon on the fifth commandment. It seemed like he was talking to a lot of 'us' when he said that children should still honor their father or mother no matter what kind of parents they had been solely upon the fact that, were it not for the 'sperm donor and receiver' (my words) they would not be on this earth. That any abuse issues should just be 'given to God' and not be used to 'dishonor' the parents no matter what their ilk. (Again, my words.) Am I being too harsh here? Or did anyone else hear that as a veiled suggestion that we should just ignore Danny's behavior with Alyssa and Tommy's behavior as a sexually predatorial Pastor and 'leave it to God?' Oh, yeah, forgiveness was mentioned in there somewhere, too.
>
> Just wonderin'
>
> GrammieTana

'es, your words. I myself think it is a mistake to take every single word of a speaker and think they are alking about you or your concerns on purpose. Perhaps the holy spirit is trying to speak to all about hemselves. Certainly his words hit me that way,

'm also failing to understand the disapointment here, Marshall Kelly is a true servant of God. Humble and adiating the love of Jesus, but he said nothing that I heard which would make any unaccountable for sins or :rimes.

ɨe said we may hate what they do, but we are commanded to honor our parents. That's God's commandment ›tw, it's not negotiable, and it contains no exceptions to the rule.

ɨe also told the story of a girl who was abused and told him about her abusive Father, and asked "even him?" ɨe said as a human I would like nothing better then to tell you.... But as a minister of the gospel, I have to ;ay yes, even him"" we are to forgive all" It's not easy, but whatever God asks of us, he also provides the ȷrace for us to do so.

'raise God for that.

Posted by: Observer May 8 2007, 04:21 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 03:40 AM)
>
> Yes, your words. I myself think it is a mistake to take every single word of a speaker and think they are talking about you or your concerns on purpose. Perhaps the holy spirit is trying to speak to all about themselves. Certainly his words hit me that way,
>
> I'm also failing to understand the disapointment here, Marshall Kelly is a true servant of God. Humble and radiating the love of Jesus, but he said nothing that I heard which would make any unaccountable for sins or crimes.
>
> He said we may hate what they do, but we are commanded to honor our parents. That's God's commandment btw, it's not negotiable, and it contains no exceptions to the rule.
>
> He also told the story of a girl who was abused and told him about her abusive Father, and asked "even him?" He said as a human I would like nothing better then to tell you.... But as a minister of the gospel, I have to say yes, even him"" we are to forgive all" It's not easy, but whatever God asks of us, he also provides the grace for us to do so.
>
> Praise God for that.

Forgiveness does not release one from consequences.

We may forgive the person who steals church offerings. But, that does not require that we drop criminal charges. It does not require that we allow that person to continue to be responsible for church offerings.

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 8 2007, 07:51 AM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 01:56 PM)
>
> Your friend gave you wrong advice to come here. Most of these people are in the same position as you. They have never met any of the people involved, they have never seen any of these allegations with their own eyes. Now they criticize Doug for merging when he does have years of experience working with, dealing with, and truly "knowing" the people involved.
>
> Those here that stick with believing the gossip and lies, want to believe them.

Eirene, I have been one of those lurkers that you mentioned in another post--I have only been on here a couple weeks, but have read most of what this site and save3abn has up. First off, I have only visited 3 abn once, years ago, so do not know anyone personally. I saw Danny and Melody and his previous wife once at a Southern IL campmeeting a lot of years ago, that is it. I worked for Mark and Teenie Finley for nearly 5 years--lived with them part of the time. Met Walter Thompson. I know Pickle's mother and I believe met him once. My mom wrote a book and was interviewed at 3ABN about it around '01 or '02. (Come to think of it, after that experience, which she didn't talk about very much, she noticably cooled towards 3ABN and has not supported them financially for years--I am not sure why, I never asked her) I have not been a 3ABN viewer--not my cup of tea. But I am 4th generation SDA and have been on about every branch of the Adventist tree there is to be on. Regular member, self-supporting institution, evangelistic team, Adventist Health System, supporting ministry, pastoral, conference staff. But I didn't even know what was going on here until my mom asked me what I thought of what was happening with 3ABN. I quickly got over that condition, thanks to these two sites!

Yes, there are a lot of posts of conjecture, surmising, wondering, and accusing--back and forth by both sides. But I know the fickleness of public opinion. When we left our last district, one church believed my husband was the best thing since sliced bread. The other church thought he should leave the ministry. So I don't make judgments based on individual opinion or one person telling their experience. I don't put much stock in "proof-texting" to give guidance either, whether Bible or Spirit of Prophecy. "Press together" as reason to join AF and 3ABN can be balanced with "why did the Battle Creek fires happen?" Neither does "Look at all the work we are accomplishing for God". I believe God will use donkeys and ravens if need be, but the donkey speaking nor the beautiful Messianic prophecy that came from Balaams (unwilling) mouth did not prove that Gods stamp of approval was forever on Balaam. Also (might as well get it all off my chest at once!) it really steams me when an organization insulates itself from any chance of learning from criticism or life circumstances by saying that if things are going well, it is proof of God's favor. If they are attacked, it is proof that they are doing something right. If they are criticized, it means they are making Satan angry. If they gain a network, God is behind them, if they lose a network, God it telling them to press forward and not give up--oh, and by the way, we need your money to accomplish all this for God.

OK, deep breath, calm...enough with the "credentials" (or lack of them, since I don't actually "know" any of the interested parties)

So, the testimony of a lurker: What has impressed me is the weight of evidence. Any leader is open to untrue accusations, but the repeated accustions of sexual misconduct through the years are a pretty good indication that there is something to it, especially when you factor in the fact that Tommy has admitted at least some type of wrongdoing in one instance. That (along with what I know of pedophiles low rate of "recovery") gives me reasonable doubt of his innocence. And if Tommy did even some of it, and if Danny knew--which I think there is evidence that he probably did--and still downplayed it and put him in leadership, I have a hard time trusting him (Danny), which makes me question his perspective and judgment and truthfulness in other instances.

Though the lack of "proof" has been thrown around a lot here, if you watch CSI, you know that there rarely is "this happened here and how" left at a crime scene. "Clues" are what it is all about, and there are a lot of "clues" here and at save3ABN.com for the lurkers. Documents verifying or disproving someone's history of honesty. Testimonies of eyewitnesses, both sides. Timelines that add or don't add up. Emails that show a persons attitude when they don't know others will be reading it. Court actions where books were examined and judgments of record were made. It is like a balance sheet that all the lurkers will read with their own personal biases firmly in place--biases that come from their own background and life experience and agendas. And I have been in ministry long enough to know that there is always more than one side, and sometimes when you hear them both, you wonder if they are even talking about the same event. That doesn't mean that one is perfect and one is diabolical. Or that they are both lying. Often they are both convinced that their story is the true one, but they are looking at it through their own tinted glasses, seeing only what they want to see or are led to see by their own bias or dysfunction.

Because of this, I have as hard time believing in Linda's spotless purity or total victimhood in all this as I have believing that she is trying to orchestrate 3ABN's downfall, as some seem to claim. And I can give Danny the benefit of the doubt as to some of his actions...time will tell whether the things that have happened were unintentional and the various parties can be adults and take responsibility, make restitution, and change things. Proof of character comes after one has been held accountable. . .

It is said that a family is as sick as its secrets. And when you have a family with as many secrets as 3ABN is alleged to have, and as the Sheltons are alleged to have, the members of the family who "do not know" are often contributing to the toxic mix by keeping their eyes closed because they do not want to believe or know, or are themselves unhealthy enough emotionally that things going on all around them do not alert them to the red flags waving in their face. Maybe that is part of what Linda is facing up to these last few years since the divorce, I don't know. I have no contact with her or anyone around her. But I do know that when you are trying to survive, and especially when you have the attitude of "We are doing the Lord's work, so we don't have time for..." you can excuse things that are appalling to you when you look back later.

So, please give us lurkers credit for having some brains to sort out and make our own judgments. Truth can stand on its own, and I say the sooner the better. God can save 3ABN if it still has a work to do, even if garbage is revealed and dealt with, whoever it comes from. And if the organization has been hiding abuse issues--whether abuse of power, sexual or emotional abuse--knowingly or unknowingly, God will not allow it to go on unhindered forever. Better to cleanse it voluntarily than have it swept away...

shepherdswife--who probably can not be considered just a lurker anymore

---

Posted by: from-the-pew May 8 2007, 08:24 AM

Thank you, Shepherd's Wife. You have taken some thoughts I have, arranged them sensibly, and added a lot of good stuff....

I've had this phrase running through my head lately..... "His side, her side, and the truth"

Posted by: FineArt May 8 2007, 08:43 AM

shepherdswife,

AMEN !

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 8 2007, 08:45 AM

To the other lurkers here: keep reading. Notice which side presents documentation and evidence (save3abn.com), and which side does not.

Notice the spirit with which some of these people are posting.

It is okay to draw your own conclusions.

Do the dannyclones get paid extra for posting in the middle of the night? You may think you can make it look like there are two sides to this, but people are smart enough to see for themselves that 3ABN needs a housecleaning.

Posted by: Clay May 8 2007, 08:55 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 8 2007, 02:12 AM)
>
> Johann, don't be ridiculous,please. Saying names were left out from other lists is so childish and silly. Maybe that is who Eirene was thinking of at the time since the TCW just ended. Or maybe she just had a senior moment as we all do. To say she purposely left out someone because of some secret reason is your usual type of spin.
> As far as you talking to someone recently....no credibility there....Do you realize how many times you have stated that you just "recently" talked to "a high" conference official, a well known pastor, someone in leadership.....etc etc? Yet, you never name any names. Without names, where it can be verified, your statements mean nothing. If you or the ones supposedly telling you all these opinions about 3abn don't have enough grit to face up to their own comments, they are null and void.
> rofl Hah, you did exactly what she said you would do. You suspended her. Hilarious when you look at what your side gets by with. Good going Eirene. You knew the pattern well.

For one who said they would not return because we were slime, here you are yet again. Maybe you didn't read the guidelines or chose to ignore them, in either case, here they are:

> QUOTE
>
> You may not like the decision me and my management team make but you will respect them because I > have put them in a position of trust and I respect them. Furthermore, they are only accountable to me. Therefore, public ridicule of their decisions to close topics, temporary suspense members or any disciplinary action they take will not be allowed and can result in a permanent ban from BSDA. You can always take the issue up with me privately in a PM or email. I won't promise I will always reply, but I will take your concerns into consideration.

>
> Regards,
> Calvin Eakins
> calvin@blacksda.com

our post is a violation of the above.... take 48 hours to think about your true motive for posting ere..... your privileges have been suspended.....

Posted by: Pickle May 8 2007, 11:27 AM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 7 2007, 03:16 PM)
>
> And if that is your opinion of her then I take it, it could have been very possible that she was hoodwinked and manipulated by the doctor also?

hether she was or not is irrelevant to the question of whether Danny had biblical grounds for divorce. Based n his own testimony, almost a month after the divorce was final he still didn't know whether she had ommitted fornication.

n case you didn't know, within the Seventh-day Adventist Church, being hoodwinked and manipulated is not onsidered biblical grounds for divorce.

Posted by: Jnana15 May 8 2007, 01:26 PM

Next!! Sorry Clay and Di, but I'm lovin' the Dannyclones exit for a while.

Posted by: Pickle May 8 2007, 02:24 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 7 2007, 09:41 PM)
>
> i don't think it's deep down inside at all. i don't think he believes that for a second. it' just part of the game.

o do you think he deep down inside believes that Linda is orchestrating a conspiracy against him? I know hat's what he claims, but I don't think he really believes what he has to know can't possibly be. But you eem to disagree on that point.

Posted by: shinejoy May 8 2007, 02:39 PM

i think deep down he is afraid and that something big will happen thats why he didn't want her to say anything

---

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 03:05 PM

Heck naw! We all know had he thought she even violated the "spirit" of that gag order, he would have had that $250K back in a flash. It is a diversion. He wants everyone to believe that he believes that he can continue to play the victim. She left me for another man, and now she is try to destroy the minstry, too. Her is jes evil!! Herodias, remember?

Now, here is a story is heard from someone who was attending GC, and happened to be entering the pavillion with the booths at the same time as Danny and Brandy. At the time it didn't mean much, but as I was relaying to them the recent events, the situation took on new meaning. As they entered the door (Brandy was actually walking slightly behind Danny) where Danny's many adoring fans had mobbed him yet one more time, he was accepting all expression s of pity and support for his aching heart(you see he and Brandy did not "come in" the door together), along with a few checks. Brandy continued on to the booth. My friend then walked around, and later as she approached the 3ABN booth there was an elderly man, who was speaking to Brandy most earnestly, "What happened to Linda? I sure miss her. I pray everday that God will perform a miracle and Danny and Linda will repair their marraige.".........Brandy's response, " I'm sorry, she is not here anymore". Now, because I realy don't want to blemish my Princess status I won't tell what I thought was her only alternative answer.

Anyway, why would Danny want to stop playing the victim. I am sure is greeted most places he visit with the same reception. Yes, it is quite advantageous and profitable for him for Linda to continue to be the bad guy in this.

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 8 2007, 12:24 PM)
>
> So do you think he deep down inside believes that Linda is orchestrating a conspiracy against him? I know that's what he claims, but I don't think he really believes what he has to know can't possibly be. But you seem to disagree on that point.

Posted by: shinejoy May 8 2007, 03:27 PM

very interesting Di thanks

Posted by: Noahswife May 8 2007, 04:03 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 8 2007, 05:05 PM)
>
> ....there was an elderly man, who was speaking to Brandy most earnestly, "What happened to Linda? I sure miss her. I pray everday that God will perform a miracle and Danny and Linda will repair their marraige.".........Brandy's response, " I'm sorry, she is not here anymore". Now, because I realy don't want to blemish my Princess status I won't tell what I thought was her only alternative answer.
>
> Anyway, why would Danny want to stop playing the victim. I am sure is greeted most places he visit with the same reception. Yes, it is quite advantageous and profitable for him for Linda to continue to be the bad guy in this.

Wow Di, thanks for sharing another first hand story from the stockholders in the pews. I can only wonder how many more there are. And don't worry gurl about not sharing what you thought, my own thoughts are enough for me.

If DS was forced to stop playing the victim card which is less profitable than before apparently as the recent financials have demonstrated, he has plenty of supporters willing to let him play the Satan card with equal if not better results (listen clearly now for what sounds like a Dyson?).

And Jnana15, you so eloquently and succinctly expressed my thoughts after seeing Steffan's post early this morning......

~nw

Posted by: runner4him May 8 2007, 04:09 PM

Shepherdswife

I say AMEN too! I really appreciate your posts! Thank you for putting it all together the way you did.

Runner4Him

Posted by: mozart May 8 2007, 05:06 PM

thank you once again PP. i appreciate you more everytime i read your posts. than

---

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 7 2007, 02:33 PM)
>
> Eirene:
>
> What you say here is not true. It's just plain "off the wall."
>
> 1. Linda has always been kind to me when I talked to her at 3ABN -- at the church -- or away from 3ABN. Always. I noticed no changes whether the camera lights were on or not.
>
> 2. Fluffy was left in good hands -- the same home Fluffy had when Danny and Linda travelled together. In fact, on hot summer days, Fluffy was known to go over to those neighbors' home and stay inside because the house was air-conditioned - and Fluffy knew it.
>
> 3. When you rent a new home or apartment, the landlord will sometimes allow one dog, but not two. Linda took Sheltie with her, the younger dog, but Fluffy would have been the second dog. It was not certain at the time that Linda could have rented an apartment with two dogs, rather than one.
>
> By the way, Fluffy and I spent some quality time together. My "first-hand" observation is that there was no mistreatment of Fluffy of any kind. In fact, it was joked that there were days when Fluffy received more mail than Danny did; Whether that's true or not, I don't know, but it was funny just the same.
>
> And welcome to BSDA, FineArt.

ty johann

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 7 2007, 02:35 PM)
>
> This is only told as a gentle warning to Eirene about her use of such names. I noticed that a name > frequently used previously on such lists is now absent. It might be wiser not so use such lists than to have to drop some more, one by one.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 8 2007, 05:22 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 01:03 PM)
>
> Eirene, I just have to say, this is the most hateful post I have seen from you yet. Fine Art was speaking from her(assuming and too lazy to check) own experiences and feelings about this horrible situation. You cannot invalidate that. She didn't ask you about how Linda was off camera or how long she left her dog.
>
> Once again, for you and the rest of your gan, if this place is sooooo horrible for you, why are you here each and everyday. Get ta steppin'! I really get tired of this kind of stuff. Nobody is forcing you to be here. Now, I may even get myself in trouble for this, but I have had enough. It is one thing for the rest of us who have been here to argue the points, and information presented, but you have attacked a new member for no good reason. She did not come, like some with guns blazing pronouncing judgment on one side or the other, or making demands. She came telling her own experience, and you blasted her. Stop it! Or better yet, just leave. Take your people and go! Don't let the door knob hit cha'........!
>
> Oh and yes, for the moment, I am speaking as a member, as you too are relatively new and I believe your people have mislead into the belief that you can disrespect anybody here, and trash this site at will. [color=#CC0000]Not on my watch! They lied, so don't do it again. It is easy enough to change hats. [/color] See how eas that was?
>
> And let me just say this, if you truly enjoy the site, then you are more than welcome to stay, however, just like you would let anybody in your house talking trash about you, we do not allow it either. I truly love BSDA and ALL it's members, I won't stand by even just as a member and let anyone trash us. You can call each other and talk all you want, go to other sites, whatever you want, but not in our house.
> Ok, so everybody else, please forgive me. Calvin, I will take whatever punishment you deem applicable. I will now replace my tiara, and go back to being Princessdi

'OU GO GURL!!!
Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 05:24 PM

Of course, the elderly gentleman did not know who Brandy was, neither did my friend, but she found out soon enough. You know the more you talk to people about this thing, more you learn. That is the second piece of info that came my way fron an unpected source and time.

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 8 2007, 03:03 PM)
>
> Wow Di, thanks for sharing another first hand story from the stockholders in the pews. I can only wonder how many more there are. And don't worry gurl about not sharing what you thought, my own thoughts are enough for me.
>
> If DS was forced to stop playing the victim card which is less profitable than before apparently as the > recent financials have demonstrated, he has plenty of supporters willing to let him play the Satan card with equal if not better results (listen clearly now for what sounds like a Dyson?).

>
> And Jnana15, you so eloquently and succinctly expressed my thoughts after seeing Steffan's post early this morning......
>
> ~nw

Posted by: mozart May 8 2007, 05:30 PM

no, no, no, no a thousand times no.
i think that he knows without a doubt that she's incapable spiritually and physically of such a thing.

sorry for the misunderstanding. hit me on da head. now again please may i have another.

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 8 2007, 01:24 PM)
>
> So do you think he deep down inside believes that Linda is orchestrating a conspiracy against him? I know that's what he claims, but I don't think he really believes what he has to know can't possibly be. But you seem to disagree on that point.

.e. - papers handed out at TCW. (edited by Mo until further investigaion)

Posted by: shinejoy May 8 2007, 05:49 PM

well that is interesting poor poor danny

Posted by: mozart May 8 2007, 06:03 PM

QUOTE shepherdwife.............it really steams me when an organization insulates itself from any chance of learning from criticism or life circumstances by saying that if things are going well, it is proof of God's favor. If they are attacked, it is proof that they are doing something right. If they are criticized, it means they are making Satan angry. If they gain a network, God is behind them, if they lose a network, God it telling them to press forward and not give up--oh, and by the way, we need your money to accomplish all this for God.

OK, It's official, shepherd's wife. You are at the top of my "gotta luv um" list.
.............Emails that show a persons attitude when they don't know others will be reading it.................
.............So, please give us lurkers credit for having some brains to sort out and make our own judgments. Truth can stand on its own, and I say the sooner the better. God can save 3ABN if it still has a work to do, even if garbage is revealed and dealt with, whoever it comes from. And if the organization has been hiding abuse issues--whether abuse of power, sexual or emotional abuse--knowingly or unknowingly, God will not allow it to go on unhindered forever. Better to cleanse it voluntarily than have it swept away...

shepherdswife--who probably can not be considered just a lurker anymore..........

Posted by: LaurenceD May 8 2007, 06:41 PM

> QUOTE(mozart)
>
> so, another lady in women's ministries, not one of the two i've talked to, called me today just to chat and while we were talking she said she had watched TCW and that danny had held up a piece of paper saying that people are circulating these papers saying all manner of evil about him and that he has decided to just completely ignore it.

Maybe he was waving the latest publication of AToday ....

Excerpt:

> May 1 , 2007
>
> An open letter to Danny Shelton:
> Editorial Comment: An earlier version of this open letter to Mr. Danny Shelton, dated April 26, 2007, was e-mailed to various Seventh-day Adventist organizations and denominational officers including Adventist Today, Ms. Mollie Steensen and Mr. Danny Shelton of 3ABN, Douglas Batchelor of Amazing Facts and the Office of the President of the North American Division of Seventh-day Adventists. The original letter was not signed. Adventist Today does not publish anonymous communications, unless we have direct contact with the author, determine his or her standing including the purpose for writing the letter, and the reason for wishing the communication to be unsigned. This AToday has done. The letter writer states that he has multiple sources inside the 3ABN ministry. He has requested that his name be kept confidential and that the letter be signed only by his initials to avoid any possible embarrassment to members of his family. The letter writer does not want to see the church embarrassed by the problems at 3ABN. In the letter writer's view, these problems will "especially shake the foundation of faith of new converts to Adventism brought in by the ministry of 3ABN." - Erv Taylor, Executive Editor, AToday.
>
> ********************
>
> Danny, our money was given to 3ABN in trust. These funds were not given to Danny Shelton. They were actually gifts to God from all of us who want to help spread His message of Salvation. We did not give our money and items of value to 3ABN for the personal benefit of you and your family. Once you began asking for broader financial support in donations from SDA Church members, your personal use of 3ABN should have ceased as you had a fiduciary duty to use these monies in an appropriate manner by employing them solely in the work of spreading the Gospel. As trustees for God's funds, you and the Board of Directors are held to high standards for their use. Unfortunately, it appears that the temptation to abuse your power of the purse may have proven too strong for your own soul.
>
> Do you really think you are being persecuted, as you mentioned on a 3ABN broadcast a number of weeks ago when speaking a Conference President who had once been relieved duties by his constituency? You are not. You are, however, being called to account for your actions and asked to make things right. Your belief that you are being persecuted tells me the Holly Sprit is still working on your conscious. Ask for God's forgiveness and do not lose that beautiful crown He has waiting for you in His Kingdom. Unfortunately, the longer you stay at 3ABN, and the longer this mess festers, the longer Satan has to harden your heart against repenting publicly for your sins. You are placing your Heavenly reward in jeopardy. What a shame, you gain the whole world of 3ABN but you lose your own eternal soul.
>
> I have been impressed by God to send you this message:

For this full article, by DER of Palm Springs, go to http://www.atoday.com/index.php

---

Posted by: LaurenceD May 8 2007, 06:54 PM

Go to Adventist News Roundup, then to Andrews Univeristy gift...and the link, called open letter to danny shelton is at the bottom of that article.

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 8 2007, 07:17 PM

I don't know if this is related to the 10 commandments weekend or not, but my husband just got a call saying that there is a project underway to send Shelton's 10 Commandment book to all the other denominations pastors in the state, and "they" (I am not sure who they are) are asking that we (our church) send them $500 before Thursday to facilite the project.

Hmm-mm-mm

shepherdswife

Posted by: shinejoy May 8 2007, 07:35 PM

oh my goodness

Posted by: sonshineonme May 8 2007, 07:40 PM

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 8 2007, 06:17 PM)
>
> I don't know if this is related to the 10 commandments weekend or not, but my husband just got a call saying that there is a project underway to send Shelton's 10 Commandment book to all the other denominations pastors in the state, and "they" (I am not sure who they are) are asking that we (our church) send them $500 before Thursday to facilite the project.
>
> Hmm-mm-mm
>
> shepherdswife

Hello shepherdswife, and please accept my welcome to bsda, you are an asset!

I find this call you received very interesting...I hope you let your conscience be your guide. I do believe, and I'm sure you agree, God expects us to use that common sense He gaves us.

I have some of your background, and so I understand, relate and sympathize with much of what you have stated (especially in your "break free" from newbie post, which was awesome!) in past posts.

I have spent a great deal of time thinking about all this mess, I have talked to so many people, our stories all added up would create a library of books...and I continue to contemplate what God will do with this mess, what we will learn from it, and how it will affect (and it will, guaranteed) each of us personally. It's a sad situation.

It's been handled by MEN not by GOD, that is why it's the mess it is. I pray that ALL would look up with confidence in the ONE who will bring us through it, one way or another. God saves us, saves others, and we need to stop looking horizontally at people and realize that we NEED God to keep us close through all this. No matter where you are, what your part in this, your position, your connection, Jesus must Reign first, and people need to know they are loved by Him. That's what matters. To rest so much on those that SHOULD be doing the "right" thing, is going to be more and more disappointing, and not something I want to experience any further.

This community of people (at bsda, and it grows daily), and the technology (it's not a bad thing if used properly) is what (I believe) has a part in sorting, sifting and shaking (and comforting and uplifting) when these things happen around us. I am personally so thankful for this place. It's no wonder that there are a SMALL group that seek to tear it down TOO.

I really believe, the more people share, the more that comes together, the better picture is given on how this is really affecting our church. This forum is a way to do that, and it helps so many.

Thanks for the sharing you have done thus far.

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 09:34 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 8 2007, 04:05 PM) ☐
>
> [color=#993399]Heck naw! We all know had he thought she even violated the "spirit" of that gag order, he would have had that $250K back in a flash.

She violated the agreement over and over.. starting with her website, opened in June of 2004, she even quoted the separation order there... and claimed all kinds of negative things, and they paid her, and kept on paying her Diane, actually allowed themselves to be defrauded in the process. Why, Diane? because it was biblical??? and considering that, how can your claim be true?

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 09:40 PM

Come on now, cindy you are going to have to unpack that one sister. I don't see how paying the cofounder of a buisness severance of 250K on a technicality when the buinsess is worth millions as fair. so you tell me what I am missing(and I don't think I am the only one). So go for it Gurl!!

But then we still have to talk abouther violating the gag order. I have never heard her say a word in all this tim, bedies she wa not unfaithful in her marriage. So besides sharing with her family and friends. What are you talking about? Yeah, yeah break that down while you are at it.

Proceed!

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 08:34 PM) ☐
>
> She violated the agreement over and over.. starting with her website, opened in June of 2004, she even quoted the separation order there... and claimed all kinds of negative things, and they paid her, and kept on paying her Diane, actually allowed themselves to be defrauded in the process. Why, Diane? because it was biblical??? and considering that, how can your claim be true?

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 09:48 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 8 2007, 05:03 PM)
>
> Wow Di, thanks for sharing another first hand story from the stockholders in the pews. I can only wonder how many more there are. And don't worry gurl about not sharing what you thought, my own thoughts are enough for me.
> ...
>
> And Jnana15, you so eloquently and succinctly expressed my thoughts after seeing Steffan's post early this morning......
>
> ~nw

How very loving...

"Stockholders in the pews" is about the most ignorant claim in this whole mess... And arrogant. You try and tell God that your donations make you a owner of one of his ministries , or tell him you are owed something for your tithes and offerings and I fear your presumption here will not save you.

Next, It was not a first person account. It was secondhand, here say, as in "somebody told me", otherwise known as gossip. Something God forbids.

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 8 2007, 04:05 PM)
>
> Now, here is a story is heard from someone who was attending GC, and happened to be entering the pavillion with the booths at the same time as Danny and Brandy. At the time it didn't mean much, but as I was relaying to them the recent events, the situation took on new meaning. As they entered the door (Brandy was actually walking slightly behind Danny) where Danny's many adoring fans had mobbed him yet one more time, he was accepting all expression s of pity and support for his aching heart(you see he and Brandy did not "come in" the door together), along with a few checks. Brandy continued on to the booth. My friend then walked around, and later as she approached the 3ABN booth there was an elderly man, who was speaking to Brandy most earnestly, "What happened to Linda? I sure miss her. I pray everday that God will perform a miracle and Danny and Linda will repair their marraige.".........Brandy's response, " I'm sorry, she is not here anymore". Now, because I realy don't want to blemish my Princess status I won't tell what I thought was her only alternative answer.

So what? I see nothing wrong here in anything, or even in what was said..

your point , and motive and intent in repeating this here, was what, Diane?

Why is it all so amusing to you?

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 10:12 PM

How very loving...
"Stockholders in the pews" is about the most ignorant claim in this whole mess... And arrogant. You try and tell God that your donations make you a owner of one of his ministries , or tell him you are owed something for your tithes and offerings and your presumption here will not save you.

Next, It was not a first person account. It was secondhand, here say, as in "somebody told me", otherwise known as gossip. Something God forbids.

First of all, because Danny asks members to support his independent ministry with the time, money and viewership, it makes him answerable to them. Because he promises in return to use more than ordinary care with it all. In particulary in this case he promises to uphold the beliefs and doctrines ofn the SDA church and they "donte " to him on that basis. If he is not holding up his end of the bargain, he needs to explain why. Simple. If he wants to answer to no one but himself and God, fund his own indpendent ministry.

Now the account was told to me by someone who witnesses this upclose and personal, not from a distance, lip reading and gestures.....you all get my drif, and you believe that version of that story over the man who was standing there experiencing it. Why you worried about second or third hand now, You was happy with BS with his lip syncing and mime.

Princess Di Is giggling and you are applauding, and you both find all you so amusing, and heaven I believe must be weeping at all this.
So what? I see nothing wrong here in anything, or even in what was said..

your point , and motive and intent in repeating this here, was what, Diane?

If you don't know, then I don need to tell you, but I will anyway,because I know.....never mind. Anyway. Gurl it was HECKA embarrassing and awkward for Brandy to be in that position. If that man asked, I know he wasn't the only one. Also, I ain't got no problem saying that Danyy was still playing the victim to people who didn't know he had already "moved on". He just moved Brandy on by them, where she went to the booth to field embarrassing and awkward questions by alone, while Danny played wounded celebrity. She sould have kicked his his sorry behind right to the curbed that big ole, 3ABN truck was parked on! He took advantage. Simple. He should have thanked them for their prayers and support, told them how good God had been, and introduced them to Brandy, new love of his life......"Isnt' she cute?"....and they both went to the table and face any unfortunate situations together.....but NO! That would have been too much like right and above board.

Ain't no shame in my game, Gurl. Now, anymore questions?

Y'all ecuse me while I replace my tiara, and my earrings...........

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 10:24 PM

More gossip, evil surmisings and condemnations....

WHY do you all think everything is about you and your concerns? You need to get over yourselves, please, all this drama for nothing.

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 8 2007, 06:30 PM)
>
> so, another lady in women's ministries, not one of the two i've talked to, called me today just to chat and while we were talking she said she had watched TCW and that danny had held up a piece of paper saying that people are circulating these papers saying all manner of evil about him and that he has decided to just completely ignore it. outraged, i told her, "that is a bald-faced lie! he is in the process, as we speak, of suing two SDA men for exposing his misdeeds. he's not ignoring anything of the sort." she was appalled to hear that. we just shake our heads in disbelief at the things that are happening in our church. amazing. did anyone else see that?

The truth is That was never even said on the air, it was just a comment made in regards to papers that were being handed out by a group of three protestors from a Messianic Jewish organziation that was saying that the message being given was incomplete because it didn't include the requirement that the Jewish festivals were to be kept. In fact one of the papers said any man who "marred the edges of his beard" meaning shaving was in violation of God's law.

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 10:26 PM

BTW, Cindy, did we see you on camera? Or did you get a backstage pass? i was looking for you, Gurl!

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 09:24 PM)
>
> More gossip, evil surmisings and condemnations....
>
> WHY do you all think everything is about you and your concerns? You need to get over yourselves, please, all this drama for nothing.
> The truth is That was never even said on the air, it was just a comment made in regards to papers that were being handed out by a group of three protestors from a Messianic Jewish organziation that was saying that the message being given was incomplete because it didn't include the requirement that the Jewish festivals were to be kept. In fact one of the papers said any man who "marred the edges of his beard" meaning shaving was in violation of God's law.

Posted by: mystery- man May 8 2007, 10:28 PM

I know what I say may be taken wrong, all the same it must be said. I have heard many say that all this happening is the hand of satan and they fear that not only will 3abn go down but maybe even AF and that could hamper the work of the Lord. Many have put their trust in the carpenter Danny Shelton and the wilderness man Doug Bachelor. We have set our sites much to low and operate as if God did not live and is not in charge not only of this earth but also the universe. At the current rate of things amazing facts and 3abn would take many more hundreds of years to get the message out plus the polluting of the diluting message would cause another 300 years of wondering in the wilderness. Get a life trust God maybe it is He who is trying to bring down both ministries for the sake of the coming of Christ (I AM NOT SAYING HE IS EITHER) my point is that God is in control and this is the end of time. I have for some time understood that the last day message would go out in ways that the Lord has designed and not man. But first God is looking to reproduce the image of God in man so that truly we can have not only the message but the power that is needed to accompany the message.

If anything we have seen an example of what the right message under the wrong example leads to. Mending Broken People was the right message but the power to perform that message is often missing, thus the Linda Shelton debacle. The scribes and Pharisees traveled over land and sea to preach the Gospel of Jesus and yet when Jesus finally came he said they were about their fathers business (satan). Many think they these people in the biblical day did not have a form of Godliness but the Spirit of Prophecy says that they did.

Folks here is a shocker to some, God does not need 3abn satellites or Amazing facts to complete his work. Actually, I think these ministries become a soothing balm to many people allowing them to send their money and believe that they are doing Gods bidding. For much to long the people of God have been fooled and tricked into a sleep and slumber. Sickness abounds and we have a drought of the power of God. Even the health message is watered down to the point of a carrot and soybean, lettuce and gluten. But I have personally seen more people on the health kick getting sick than those eating meat and cheese. I asked myself why that was happening and I realized that the people of God are asleep to the spiritual things of God. That is why they need more upbeat music to make them happy or every now and then a good movie played in church.

We have heaped praise on these leaders telling them how they are needed to do the work of God and so when they go around acting like we told them we get upset. They are not humble but they are hirelings being paid to do a job (not all but many). We meaning you and I need a wake up call because we are living in fairy land. Satan is not playing he is trying his best to keep us occupied while the world dies for the real truth and that truth is Jesus the power to save heal the sick and mend the broken hearted

---

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 10:30 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 8 2007, 11:12 PM) ☐
>
> So what? I see nothing wrong here in anything, or even in what was said..
>
> your point , and motive and intent in repeating this here, was what, Diane?
>
> If you don't know, then I don need to tell you, but I will anyway,because I know.....never mind. Anyway. Gurl it was HECKA embarrassing and awkward for Brandy to be in that position. If that man asked, I know he wasn't the only one. Also, I ain't got no problem saying that Danyy was still playing the victim to people who didn't know he had already "moved on". He just moved Brandy on by them, where she went to the booth to field embarrassing and awkward questions by alone, while Danny played wounded celebrity. She sould have kicked his his sorry behind right to the curbed that big ole, 3ABN truck was parked on! He took advantage. Simple. He should have thanked them for their prayers and support, told them how good God had been, and introduced them to Brandy, new love of his life......"Isnt' she cute?"....and they both went to the table and face any unfortunate situations together.....but NO! That would have been too much like right and above board.
>
> Ain't no shame in my game, Gurl. Now, anymore questions?
>
> Y'all ecuse me while I replace my tiara, and my earrings...........

Diane. You weren't there, you don't know how the people felt, or all this stuff you are adding, regarding motives and intents and why, etc...

and gurl... It's still gossip.

Have you seen my signature?

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 10:45 PM

MM Welcome back!

I completely understan dyou message and agree. Some else said this last week or so. Peopl use 3ABN AF as a conventient ministry. As yousay sen d their money in and Voila! they have witnessed to millions with one check. This way, in their minds these men are indispensible to "God's' work, so they believe. God does not need Danny, Doug, 3ABN, AF or even us. it is our distinct privilege to serve Him in His work.

> QUOTE(mystery- man @ May 8 2007, 08:28 PM) ☐
>
> I know what I say may be taken wrong, all the same it must be said. I have heard many say that all this happening is the hand of satan and they fear that not only will 3abn go down but maybe even AF and that could hamper the work of the Lord. Many have put their trust in the carpenter Danny Shelton and the wilderness man Doug Bachelor. We have set our sites much to low and operate as if God did not live and is not in charge not only of this earth but also the universe. At the current rate of things amazing facts and 3abn would take many more hundreds of years to get the message out plus the polluting of the diluting message would cause another 300 years of wondering in the wilderness. Get a life trust God maybe it is

> He who is trying to bring down both ministries for the sake of the coming of Christ (I AM NOT SAYING HE IS EITHER) my point is that God is in control and this is the end of time. I have for some time understood that the last day message would go out in ways that the Lord has designed and not man. But first God is looking to reproduce the image of God in man so that truly we can have not only the message but the power that is needed to accompany the message.
>
> If anything we have seen an example of what the right message under the wrong example leads to. Mending Broken People was the right message but the power to perform that message is often missing, thus the Linda Shelton debacle. The scribes and Pharisees traveled over land and sea to preach the Gospel of Jesus and yet when Jesus finally came he said they were about their fathers business (satan). Many think they these people in the biblical day did not have a form of Godliness but the Spirit of Prophecy says that they did.
> Folks here is a shocker to some, God does not need 3abn satellites or Amazing facts to complete his work. Actually, I think these ministries become a soothing balm to many people allowing them to send their money and believe that they are doing Gods bidding. For much to long the people of God have been fooled and tricked into a sleep and slumber. Sickness abounds and we have a drought of the power of God. Even the health message is watered down to the point of a carrot and soybean, lettuce and gluten. But I have personally seen more people on the health kick getting sick than those eating meat and cheese. I asked myself why that was happening and I realized that the people of God are asleep to the spiritual things of God. That is why they need more upbeat music to make them happy or every now and then a good movie played in church.
> We have heaped praise on these leaders telling them how they are needed to do the work of God and so when they go around acting like we told them we get upset. They are not humble but they are hirelings being paid to do a job (not all but many). We meaning you and I need a wake up call because we are living in fairy land. Satan is not playing he is trying his best to keep us occupied while the world dies for the real truth and that truth is Jesus the power to save heal the sick and mend the broken hearted url, I ain't talking about the people Cindy, I am talking about Brandy. if she wasn't uncomfortable or mbarrassed then she should have been. it was normal. It was an awkward situation. She actually was old nough to be wise enough to let Danny handle all that buisness, let all that die down, and then proceed. That s baggage that she still has to deal with, because it wasn't handled the proper way before Danny decided to move on". You never open another door(relatinship) without closing the other(relationship). That was anny's baggage she had to carry alone while he play wounded superstar. It should have been handled by anny, before he even thought of tarting a new life with any woman. All that is besides not being above oard with the people who greeted him showing him support because he was now all alone. That was a lie of mmission.

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 08:30 PM)
>
> Diane. You weren't there, you don't know how the people felt, or all this stuff you are adding, regarding motives and intents and why, etc...
>
> and gurl... It's still gossip.
>
> Have you seen my signature?

Posted by: LaurenceD May 8 2007, 11:31 PM

> QUOTE(mystery- man @ May 8 2007, 10:28 PM)
>
> Folks here is a shocker to some, God does not need 3abn satellites or Amazing facts to complete his work. Actually, I think these ministries become a soothing balm to many people allowing them to send their money and believe that they are doing Gods bidding. For much to long the people of God have been fooled > and tricked into a sleep and slumber. Sickness abounds and we have a drought of the power of God. Even the health message is watered down to the point of a carrot and soybean, lettuce and gluten. But I have personally seen more people on the health kick getting sick than those eating meat and cheese. I asked myself why that was happening and I realized that the people of God are asleep to the spiritual things of God. That is why they need more upbeat music to make them happy or every now and then a good movie played in church.

ery perceptive.

here's nothing worse than to watch someone teaching others all about health...and yet looking like the pposite advertisement. No light in the eyes, no radiance in the countenance. You switch to a sports channel nd you fairly perceive that God has given the health message to other people.

nd there's nothing worse than listening to someone preaching the gospel, and about the Christian races...and giving off the opposite impresion. No sweet peace is felt in their presence. No gracefulness. No nderstanding. No leadership. You watch them all pompous on TV ("thank you God for speaking through ne... folks, I don't even know what I'm going to say next") --half the sermon is all about them. Somehow, ou know they are not acquainted with the destitute selflessness of even sister Teresa. "Blessed are the meek or they shall inherit the earth."

hat good is it to have worldly wealth, or some new technical tool, or preaching the secrets of 3 angel's essages, if you don't even have the basics down? Thank God these things are hidden from the worldly wise.

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 01:05 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 11:24 PM)
>
> More gossip, evil surmisings and condemnations....
>
> WHY do you all think everything is about you and your concerns? You need to get over yourselves, please, all this drama for nothing.
> The truth is That was never even said on the air, it was just a comment made in regards to papers that were being handed out by a group of three protestors from a Messianic Jewish organziation that was saying that the message being given was incomplete because it didn't include the requirement that the Jewish festivals were to be kept. In fact one of the papers said any man who "marred the edges of his beard" meaning shaving was in violation of God's law.

think this situation needs repeating. Someone told someone that DS waved around a paper on the air at CW that supposedly had "bad things" in it and DS said he was just going to ignore it. Then you all take it as act and build on it. But the reality is that DS did no such thing on air period. And, the only papers that were anded out, were the ones referred to above.
o, how do you justify this constant pattern of posting wrong information, speculating on it and adding to it? hen when it is pointed out that one of the posters was totally wrong, you all address something else and act ike it never happened. How predictable are you???

Posted by: mystery- man May 9 2007, 03:34 AM

Althea,

You might find this a little difficult to except, but personally I don't have anything against Danny except that he is still on 3abn. I perceive that if he left that God would be glorified. It is way past wether Danny has been misquoted or is wronged or even whether he had the grounds for divorce. This has instead become a struggle of wills. I believe that this whole mess would calm down if he would simply relinquish the reigns and let 3abn continue.

I know you must love him to continue to support him and that is fine, but even you must realize that he is taking away from the very message that he reports to represent. And don't worry because if God is really in control of 3abn he will see that it is just fine. Why would he not just step down seeing all the controversy that it is calling?

Posted by: awesumtenor May 9 2007, 07:27 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 05:40 AM)
>
> He said we may hate what they do, but we are commanded to honor our parents. That's God's commandment btw, it's not negotiable, and it contains no exceptions to the rule.

This is way far afield from the truth. Not even in the same zip code. Re-read Ephesians chapter 6. Where obeying one's parents would cause one to sin, a Christian child has an obligation to obey God rather than man if to "honor" parents would make one dishonor God. As such, there are a great many exceptions and a very definite bound laid out in scripture as to what extent said honor should be taken.

Child abuse of every stripe and/or hue is sin. God commands no child to accept the existence of such as the Divine order of things and a child who has been abused by a parent is not dishonoring that parent by revealing what has been done or in seeing that parent faces the consequences of his/her sin.

For any minister of the gospel to say anything else is to condone that sin.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 09:36 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 9 2007, 09:27 AM)
>
> This is way far afield from the truth. Not even in the same zip code. Re-read Ephesians chapter 6. Where obeying one's parents would cause one to sin, a Christian child has an obligation to obey God rather than man if to "honor" parents would make one dishonor God. As such, there are a great many exceptions and a very definite bound laid out in scripture as to what extent said honor should be taken.
>
> Child abuse of every stripe and/or hue is sin. God commands no child to accept the existence of such as the Divine order of things and a child who has been abused by a parent is not dishonoring that parent by revealing what has been done or in seeing that parent faces the consequences of his/her sin.
>
> For any minister of the gospel to say anything else is to condone that sin.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Mr J,

Honor and obey are 2 different things.

God doesn't contradict himself, all he says is in harmony. He is a God of order NOT chaos or confusion.

We are commanded to honor our parents, and we are commanded also to obey him first in all things, there are NO exceptions. These commands DO NOT contradict each other. .

Whenever God's word seems to be in conflict, it simply means further prayer and study on that subject is in order, and then what seems to be contradictory clears right up.

Posted by: HUGGINS130 May 9 2007, 09:40 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 10:36 AM)
>
> God doesn't contradict himself, all he says is in harmony. He is a God of order NOT chaos or confusion.

Now apply this same principle to the Danny/Linda issue...3abn included!!!

Posted by: awesumtenor May 9 2007, 10:01 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 11:36 AM)
>
> Mr J,
>
> Honor and obey are 2 different things.

Try taking off the eisegetical rose-colored glasses by which you view scripture...

> QUOTE
>
> God doesn't contradict himself, all he says is in harmony. He is a God of order NOT chaos or confusion.

Problem is God wasn't talking on that broadcast... or through you in this thread... and since neither T. Marshall Kelly nor you are God, this statement is absolutely true and utterly irrelevant.

> QUOTE
>
> We are commanded to honor our parents, and we are commanded also to obey him first in all things, there are NO exceptions. These commands DO NOT contradict each other. .
> Whenever God's word seems to be in conflict, it simply means further prayer and study on that subject is in order, and then what seems to be contradictory clears right up.

I never once said or implied scripture contradicted itself. I said your statement from T Marshall Kelly regarding the 5th commandment was predicated on a faulty hermaneutic and expresses something inconsistent with scripture.

I'd appreciate your leaving the straw men out of it; this is a discussion forum, not a cornfield so their presence is not required...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Clay May 9 2007, 10:17 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 9 2007, 11:01 AM) ☐
>
> Try taking off the eisegetical rose-colored glasses by which you view scripture...
> Problem is God wasn't talking on that broadcast... or through you in this thread... and since neither T. Marshall Kelly nor you are God, this statement is absolutely true and utterly irrelevant.
> I never once said or implied scripture contradicted itself. I said your statement from T Marshall Kelly regarding the 5th commandment was predicated on a faulty hermaneutic and expresses something inconsistent with scripture.
>
> I'd appreciate your leaving the straw men out of it; this is a discussion forum, not a cornfield so their presence is not required...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

I know Elder Kelly.... quite well.... and I know that IF he said what it is suggested he said, he was not speaking about extenuating circumstances like abuse, etc..... let's not get it twisted.... it is apparent that someone will go to great lengths to make a point.....

Posted by: Truly Blonde May 9 2007, 10:31 AM

> QUOTE(mystery- man @ May 8 2007, 08:28 PM) ☐
>
> I know what I say may be taken wrong, all the same it must be said. I have heard many say that all this happening is the hand of satan and they fear that not only will 3abn go down but maybe even AF and that could hamper the work of the Lord. Many have put their trust in the carpenter Danny Shelton and the wilderness man Doug Bachelor. We have set our sites much to low and operate as if God did not live and is not in charge not only of this earth but also the universe. At the current rate of things amazing facts and 3abn would take many more hundreds of years to get the message out plus the polluting of the diluting message would cause another 300 years of wondering in the wilderness. Get a life trust God maybe it is He who is trying to bring down both ministries for the sake of the coming of Christ (I AM NOT SAYING HE IS EITHER) my point is that God is in control and this is the end of time. I have for some time understood that the last day message would go out in ways that the Lord has designed and not man. But first God is looking to reproduce the image of God in man so that truly we can have not only the message but the power that is needed to accompany the message.
>
> If anything we have seen an example of what the right message under the wrong example leads to. Mending Broken People was the right message but the power to perform that message is often missing, thus the Linda Shelton debacle. The scribes and Pharisees traveled over land and sea to preach the Gospel of Jesus and yet when Jesus finally came he said they were about their fathers business (satan). Many think they these people in the biblical day did not have a form of Godliness but the Spirit of Prophecy says that they did.
> Folks here is a shocker to some, God does not need 3abn satellites or Amazing facts to complete his work. Actually, I think these ministries become a soothing balm to many people allowing them to send their > money and believe that they are doing Gods bidding. For much to long the people of God have been fooled and tricked into a sleep and slumber. Sickness abounds and we have a drought of the power of God. Even the health message is watered down to the point of a carrot and soybean, lettuce and gluten. But I have personally seen more people on the health kick getting sick than those eating meat and cheese. I asked myself why that was happening and I realized that the people of God are asleep to the spiritual things of God. That is why they need more upbeat music to make them happy or every now and then a good movie played in church.

> We have heaped praise on these leaders telling them how they are needed to do the work of God and so when they go around acting like we told them we get upset. They are not humble but they are hirelings being paid to do a job (not all but many). We meaning you and I need a wake up call because we are living in fairy land. Satan is not playing he is trying his best to keep us occupied while the world dies for the real truth and that truth is Jesus the power to save heal the sick and mend the broken hearted

M I agree 100% We do need to wake up and do our part (not just send our money). We are in the end of ime and the Lord wants to use us ALL. I don't know how he wants to use me but I am asking that he make is will known to me, even if it means taking me out of my comfort zone and that is scary.

have been wondering and wondering what possible purpose there could be in this merger. It seems like pples and oranges being put together. I feared for AF. We have had two really wonderful evangelistic neetings in less then a year through AF and the response has been beyond our most fervant hopes.

owever: I came across a text yesterday in Philippians and it made me look at all this in a new light.

ome indeed preach Christ even from envy and strife, and some also my goodwill. The former preach Christ rom selfish ambition, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my chains, but the latter out of love, nowing that I am appointed for the defense of the gospel. What then? Only that in every way, whether in retense or in truth Christ is preached; and in this I rejoice, yes, and will rejoice. Philippians 1:15-18 aul was in chains when he wrote this and could see people pretending to be christians for their own gain and et he was able to rejoice that the gospel was being preached no matter how or by whom.

Ve can't judge DS or DB motives and all the mess that is 3abn but we can still praise God that the gospel is eing preached. And yes God is in control and He can bring both ministries down if that is His will and if that s what is needed for those of us in the pews to wake up.

Ve mustn't put our faith in the preachers on TV or in church, no matter how sincere they sound. No matter ow much we may like the way they preach or what they say. We must each one be so firmly grounded in esus Christ and the Scriptures that we will not be led astray by the diluted message or by the messengers. Ve must not be ostriches with our heads in the sand. We must speak out for right but continue to love and ray for those who may be trying to lead us astray. We also need to be astute stewards of the funds God has o richly bestowed on us.

od gave us all minds to be used for His honor and glory. We need to use them!!!!!!!

eep praying and keep looking up for the blessed return of mine and your Lord and Savior Jesus Christ

Velcome back mm

Posted by: seraph|m May 9 2007, 10:38 AM

> QUOTE(GrammieTana @ May 6 2007, 02:52 PM) ☐
>
> As much as I appreciate T. Marshall Kelly, I was somewhat disappointed in his sermon on the fifth commandment. It seemed like he was talking to a lot of 'us' when he said that children should still honor their father or mother no matter what kind of parents they had been solely upon the fact that, were it not for the 'sperm donor and receiver' (my words) they would not be on this earth. That any abuse issues should just be 'given to God' and not be used to 'dishonor' the parents no matter what their ilk. (Again, my words.) Am I being too harsh here? Or did anyone else hear that as a veiled suggestion that we should just > ignore Danny's behavior with Alyssa and Tommy's behavior as a sexually predatorial Pastor and 'leave it to God?' Oh, yeah, forgiveness was mentioned in there somewhere, too.

>
> Just wonderin'
>
> GrammieTana

Interesting to say the least... I wonder if anyone recorded that segment? It would be ice to get a transcript.

eaven forbid sin is called by it's right name or so called "ministers of the gospel" no less, re expected to be accountable for their actions.

Posted by: shinejoy May 9 2007, 10:41 AM very nicely put thank you

Posted by: mozart May 9 2007, 11:53 AM

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 8 2007, 07:17 PM)
>
> I don't know if this is related to the 10 commandments weekend or not, but my husband just got a call saying that there is a project underway to send Shelton's 10 Commandment book to all the other denominations pastors in the state, and "they" (I am not sure who they are) are asking that we (our church) send them $500 before Thursday to facilite the project.
>
> Hmm-mm-mm
>
> shepherdswife

ow i just don't like the sound of that. i know a small ministry that wrote and published a booklet titled What's Behind the New Word Order". they sent it to all ministers in US and all Senators, Congressmen and he President. they didn't ask for any special donaations to do this. they felt impressed and just did it and hen told us about it in a newsletter.
hall we call this: "different strokes for different folks"?
mm-mm-mm-m-
****
TW, i received a PM this morning telling me the paper Danny was holding up saying he was going to ignore as a condemning commentary from a Messianic Jewish group that were claiming 3ABN was not telling the hole truth about the commandments, that they should include the feasts, etc. the PMer said they had a ermit to solicit these in front of the auditorium and were doing so. I have decided to give this person the benefit of the doubt" and edit that out of my previous post as i do not want to be one who starts rumors and akes hasty assumptions. forgive me for jumping to that conclusion. the way she described the event to me ounded like it was of a more personal nature, but i guess anyone with anything to say against 3abn would be ersonal to Danny as it should be.
have requested this PMer provide me with a copy of that document.

Posted by: shinejoy May 9 2007, 12:01 PM

that would be interesting thank you for the info

Posted by: mozart May 9 2007, 12:12 PM

it must have been said "on the air" because this woman saw it "on the air". please note however, that, for the time being, i have edited that post and this is the second time i have made people aware of it.

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 10:24 PM)
>
> More gossip, evil surmisings and condemnations....
>
> WHY do you all think everything is about you and your concerns? You need to get over yourselves, please, all this drama for nothing.
> The truth is That was never even said on the air, it was just a comment made in regards to papers that were being handed out by a group of three protestors from a Messianic Jewish organziation that was saying that the message being given was incomplete because it didn't include the requirement that the Jewish festivals were to be kept. In fact one of the papers said any man who "marred the edges of his beard" meaning shaving was in violation of God's law.

Posted by: mozart May 9 2007, 12:25 PM

TY, MM- this is exactly what i wrote and told the 3ABN pastoral staff. my email was then directed to walt thompson for reply....and now it looks like danny is planning a slip away in the night, exit; without apology or repentence. that's his loss. pride is a mocker. now that's JMO. time will tell.

> QUOTE(mystery- man @ May 9 2007, 03:34 AM)
>
> Althea,
>
> You might find this a little difficult to except, but personally I don't have anything against Danny except that he is still on 3abn. I perceive that if he left that God would be glorified. It is way past wether Danny has been misquoted or is wronged or even whether he had the grounds for divorce. This has instead become a struggle of wills. I believe that this whole mess would calm down if he would simply relinquish the reigns and let 3abn continue.
>
> I know you must love him to continue to support him and that is fine, but even you must realize that he is taking away from the very message that he reports to represent. And don't worry because if God is really in control of 3abn he will see that it is just fine. Why would he not just step down seeing all the controversy that it is calling?

Posted by: watchbird May 9 2007, 12:43 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 9 2007, 02:25 PM)
>
> TY, MM- this is exactly what i wrote and told the 3ABN pastoral staff. my email was then directed to walt thompson for reply....and now it looks like danny is planning a slip away in the night, exit; without apology or repentence. that's his loss. pride is a mocker. now that's JMO. time will tell.

And where have you seen any evidence that Danny is planning to relinquish control of 3abn?

And if he were to plan a "slip away in the night, exit"..... is this God's way of doing things? Was Achan sneaked out of the camp at night and sent away in a posh chariot? Was Korah Dathan and Abiram quietly asked to move elsewhere? Did Sodom just mysteriously disappear in the night so no one would notice they were gone? Were Ananias and Sapphira ushered into a back room... after being accoladed in public... before they were told of the Holy Spirit's disapproval of their actions?

Or were these things all done publicly.... and not only that.... but their sins plainly identified and the record of how they were dealt with written as part of scripture for all of all ages to see?

Do our people... to say nothings of the victims of the Shelton regime... deserve anything less that for full disclosure, restitution, and safeguards against any of those involved ever holding positions of trust in our church to be publicly put in place?

Posted by: mozart May 9 2007, 05:17 PM

no, no one deserves any less, what i meant was that it probably wouldn't be on 3abn.
i can't say i have seen evidence in the sense of documentation. it's just an observation. i said, JMO.

> QUOTE(watchbird @ May 9 2007, 11:43 AM)
>
> And where have you seen any evidence that Danny is planning to relinquish control of 3abn?

> And if he were to plan a "slip away in the night, exit"..... is this God's way of doing things? Was Achan sneaked out of the camp at night and sent away in a posh chariot? Was Korah Dathan and Abiram quietly asked to move elsewhere? Did Sodom just mysteriously disappear in the night so no one would notice they were gone? Were Ananias and Sapphira ushered into a back room... after being accoladed in public... before they were told of the Holy Spirit's disapproval of their actions?
>
> Or were these things all done publicly.... and not only that.... but their sins plainly identified and the record of how they were dealt with written as part of scripture for all of all ages to see?
>
> Do our people... to say nothings of the victims of the Shelton regime... deserve anything less that for full disclosure, restitution, and safeguards against any of those involved ever holding positions of trust in our church to be publicly put in place?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 9 2007, 05:26 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 01:24 AM)
>
> PB,
>
> EVERY single message given was like that, the holy spirit was present throughout the entire weekend, and in all the messages and songs of praise and worship.
>
> Try and catch them all when they are rebroadcast on 3 ABN, you will be equally blessed by all I am sure.
>
> Your judgmental reminders of precious souls Jesus died for, and prayers about 3ABN, Danny and the board, would be better applied to yourself first though is my thinking.
>
> May we all have the ears to hear and the eyes to see what God is saying, and revealing to each of us.

Judgmental?

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 10 2007, 10:05 PM

It's interesting that right after Jesus said, "Judge not," in just a few verses He says, "By their fruits you will recognize them."

The more I read from Danny's own lips, the more fruit I see ... and to use Our Lord's terminology from Matthew 7, I see a false prophet.

Based on the evidence from Danny his-own-self.

Posted by: awesumtenor May 10 2007, 10:29 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 11 2007, 12:05 AM)
>
> It's interesting that right after Jesus said, "Judge not," in just a few verses He says, "By their fruits you will recognize them."
>
> The more I read from Danny's own lips, the more fruit I see ... and to use Our Lord's terminology from Matthew 7, I see a false prophet.
>
> Based on the evidence from Danny his-own-self.

Of course, Matt 7:1 is one of the most poorly applied verses in scripture... given more than a cursory glance and it quickly becomes evident that Jesus is railing against hypocrisy in Matt 7:1-6... not against judging. He is merely pointing out that if one judges, he will be weighed in the same balance he has weighed others... not to mention those who try to say that verse means not to judge have no answer for verse 7 of the same chapter which plainly says "Give not that which is holy unto dogs neither cast ye your pearls before swine..."

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Jnana15 May 10 2007, 11:18 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 10 2007, 11:29 PM)
>
> Of course, Matt 7:1 is one of the most poorly applied verses in scripture... given more than a cursory glance and it quickly becomes evident that Jesus is railing against hypocrisy in Matt 7:1-6... not against judging. He is merely pointing out that if one judges, he will be weighed in the same balance he has weighed others... not to mention those who try to say that verse means not to judge have no answer for verse 7 of the same chapter which plainly says "Give not that which is holy unto dogs neither cast ye your pearls before swine..."
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Preach!! Mr. J

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 10 2007, 11:56 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 10 2007, 10:29 PM) ☐
>
> Of course, Matt 7:1 is one of the most poorly applied verses in scripture... given more than a cursory glance and it quickly becomes evident that Jesus is railing against hypocrisy in Matt 7:1-6... not against judging. He is merely pointing out that if one judges, he will be weighed in the same balance he has weighed others... not to mention those who try to say that verse means not to judge have no answer for verse 7 of the same chapter which plainly says "Give not that which is holy unto dogs neither cast ye your pearls before swine..."

Well, I would say that the opening verses of chapter 7 are about trying to control another person's behavior by condemning it. Anyone with experience supervising teenagers knows how well that works.

If it's about mere hypocrisy, is Jesus saying that once we give up gossiping we can then judge gossipers? Or once we quit looking at porn we can condemn porn addicts? I think the "log in my own eye" is my own attempt control others by telling them how wrong they are.

Of course the Dannyfingers (☒ for that term) will be all over me, and will immediately say we've judged Danny and are attempting to control his behavior. Or theirs for that matter. But there is a difference between the verbal manipulation Jesus condemns in this text, and calling out sin publicly when all private forums have failed.

I do think that those who defend Danny on these pages are doing a disservice to themselves and to their church--and even 3ABN. "They know not what they do." In the larger scheme (perhaps God's plan?), whether they realize it or not, their purpose is merely to show how indefensible his position has become.

Posted by: awesumtenor May 11 2007, 07:36 AM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 11 2007, 01:56 AM) ☐
>
> Well, I would say that the opening verses of chapter 7 are about trying to control another person's behavior by condemning it. Anyone with experience supervising teenagers knows how well that works.

True; but in essence the entire Sermon on the Mount was a rebuke of the practice of control via condemnation, particularly when that condemnation proceeded from a religous bent. From the beatitudes, where Jesus turned the perceived order of standing with God based on one's visible circumstances on it's head by declaring the situations where one was deemed afflicted of God if he was poor, or in mourning or reviled etc to be indications of being blessed of God, to His teaching on how one should render service to God to His teaching the letter and the spirit of the law and the need for one's "righteousness" to exceed that of the scribes and the pharisees up to and including this passage in chapter 7... it all addresses, ultimately, that Dimmesdalian bent men have to condemn and excoriate most stridently where they know themselves to come short...

> QUOTE
>
> If it's about mere hypocrisy, is Jesus saying that once we give up gossiping we can then judge gossipers? Or once we quit looking at porn we can condemn porn addicts? I think the "log in my own eye" is my own attempt control others by telling them how wrong they are.

It also encompasses John chapter 8... let he among you who is without sin cast the first stone...

> QUOTE
>
> Of course the Dannyfingers (for that term) will be all over me, and will immediately say we've judged Danny and are attempting to control his behavior. Or theirs for that matter. But there is a difference between the verbal manipulation Jesus condemns in this text, and calling out sin publicly when all private forums have failed.

Absolutely... for all their railing and complaining, they ignore the fact that it was DS who put this into the court of public opinion... and now he's boo-hooing having to reap what he has sown.

> QUOTE
>
> I do think that those who defend Danny on these pages are doing a disservice to themselves and to their church--and even 3ABN. "They know not what they do." In the larger scheme (perhaps God's plan?), whether they realize it or not, their purpose is merely to show how indefensible his position has become.

Iwill only disagree with the "They know not what they do."; this collective of latter day Hamans knows exactly what they are doing; it is all premeditated with malice aforethought. What they are missing is how Haman, with what appeared to him to be victory within reach, ended up the biggest loser, hanged from the very gallows he had prepared for those he sought to destroy...

There be a lesson in that for the Dannyfingers, n'est-ce pas?

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 11 2007, 05:53 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 11 2007, 07:36 AM)
>
> True; but in essence the entire Sermon on the Mount was a rebuke of the practice of control via condemnation, particularly when that condemnation proceeded from a religous bent. From the beatitudes, where Jesus turned the perceived order of standing with God based on one's visible circumstances on it's head by declaring the situations where one was deemed afflicted of God if he was poor, or in mourning or reviled etc to be indications of being blessed of God, to His teaching on how one should render service to God to His teaching the letter and the spirit of the law and the need for one's "righteousness" to exceed that of the scribes and the pharisees up to and including this passage in chapter 7... it all addresses, ultimately, that Dimmesdalian bent men have to condemn and excoriate most stridently where they know themselves to come short...
> It also encompasses John chapter 8... let he among you who is without sin cast the first stone...

Perhaps a "both-and" situation? If the opening verses of chapter 7 are specifically about condemnation-control, might not verse 6 be about a similar kind of control--forcing on people spiritual things they're not ready for? When my dog is hungry, I don't try to feed him the SS lesson--I give him dog food. My sister's drug-dealing ex-boyfriend is spiritually interested, but I've not really considered giving him a copy of The Great Controversy. Pigs don't eat pearls; they eat corn.

> QUOTE
>
> Absolutely... for all their railing and complaining, they ignore the fact that it was DS who put this into the > court of public opinion... and now he's boo-hooing having to reap what he has sown.

> Iwill only disagree with the "They know not what they do."; this collective of latter day Hamans knows exactly what they are doing; it is all premeditated with malice aforethought. What they are missing is how Haman, with what appeared to him to be victory within reach, ended up the biggest loser, hanged from the very gallows he had prepared for those he sought to destroy...
>
> There be a lesson in that for the Dannyfingers, n'est-ce pas?

sometimes picture a scene in which Aletheia and Eirene radio back to the mothership and tell them it's not vorking, this posting of Danny-defense-diatribes on BlackSDA, only to be ordered back ablaze into the fray...

don't want to believe it's with malice aforethought, but if they're getting paid in dollars or quid pro quo, it's iot even malice ... but the word which best describes it doesn't belong on a spiritual website. I prefer to elieve they're sincerely misled, and if I am wrong, I will accept it.

Posted by: shinejoy May 11 2007, 06:16 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 11 2007, 05:36 AM)
>
> True; but in essence the entire Sermon on the Mount was a rebuke of the practice of control via condemnation, particularly when that condemnation proceeded from a religous bent. From the beatitudes, where Jesus turned the perceived order of standing with God based on one's visible circumstances on it's head by declaring the situations where one was deemed afflicted of God if he was poor, or in mourning or reviled etc to be indications of being blessed of God, to His teaching on how one should render service to God to His teaching the letter and the spirit of the law and the need for one's "righteousness" to exceed that of the scribes and the pharisees up to and including this passage in chapter 7... it all addresses, ultimately, that Dimmesdalian bent men have to condemn and excoriate most stridently where they know themselves to come short...
> It also encompasses John chapter 8... let he among you who is without sin cast the first stone...
> Absolutely... for all their railing and complaining, they ignore the fact that it was DS who put this into the court of public opinion... and now he's boo-hooing having to reap what he has sown.
> Iwill only disagree with the "They know not what they do."; this collective of latter day Hamans knows exactly what they are doing; it is all premeditated with malice aforethought. What they are missing is how Haman, with what appeared to him to be victory within reach, ended up the biggest loser, hanged from the very gallows he had prepared for those he sought to destroy...
>
> There be a lesson in that for the Dannyfingers, n'est-ce pas?
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

lanny fingers i like that the info was wonderful mr. J thank you

---

Posted by: mozart May 11 2007, 06:33 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 11 2007, 04:53 PM)
>
> Pigs don't eat pearls; they eat corn.

may never eat corn again!

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 11 2007, 06:39 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 11 2007, 06:33 PM)
>
> I may never eat corn again!

Pig farmers often feed them corn of lower quality than we eat. I'm told. They eat what they're fed--and if you try to feed them jewelry, they get hungry and eventually go after the farmer--because the farmer at least is edible!

Posted by: Jnana15 May 11 2007, 06:49 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 11 2007, 06:53 PM)
>
> I sometimes picture a scene in which Aletheia and Eirene radio back to the mothership and tell them it's not working, this posting of Danny-defense-diatribes on BlackSDA, only to be ordered back ablaze into the fray...
>
> I don't want to believe it's with malice aforethought, but if they're getting paid in dollars or quid pro quo, it's not even malice ... but the word which best describes it doesn't belong on a spiritual website. I prefer to believe they're sincerely misled, and if I am wrong, I will accept it.

rofl rofl You have to give credit to Aletheia. She has managed not to get herself banned from this site as some of the others have. She just waits for the re-inforecements to register before loosing control again.

JMHO

Posted by: sonshineonme Jun 8 2007, 07:08 PM

RECEIVED THIS IN EMAIL TODAY - JUST POSTING FOR ANY DESIRED DISCUSSION.

+++

Message: 19

Date: Fri, 8 Jun 2007 01:28:19 +0000

From: "Kevin Paulson"

Subject: Shelley Quinn

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

One further word on Shelley Quinn and the Ten Commandments book. Many have rightly raised concern about this book's implied support for organized prayer and the posting of the Ten Commandments in public schools. The idea is clearly conveyed by Danny and Shelley that the government should not have removed these elements, and thus they come across as supporting the efforts of the Religious Right to unite church and state.

Let's remember, folks: If the Ten Commandments are posted in public schools, which version will be posted? Congressman Jerrold Nadler of New York, who represents the West Side here in our City, asked the right question when this issue was debated in Congress:

"Whose Ten Commandments? The Catholic version? The Protestant version? They're different, you know."

That's just the trouble, however. Many DON'T know!

The whole point here is that by posting ANY version of the commandments in public schools, the government is making a theological statement. This is not the place of civil authority in a society where those of all faiths and of none share equal status under the law.

The same is true of the issue of prayer in the same context. Whose prayers will they be? Catholics pray to Mary and the saints; Protestants don't. Christians pray in Jesus' name; Jews and Muslims don't/ Again, the state should not be making theological statements. And prayer is very much a theological statement, any way you look at it.

The idea that God has been "thrown out" of public schools by the exclusion of such activities from the curriculum, is absurd for the simple reason that no one can stop anyone from praying, anytime, anywhere. We can all pray silently any time we wish, and more importantly, we can act like Christians wherever we find ourselves. No law can possibly prevent this.

With this in mind, I and many others found the Shelton/Quinn Ten Commandments book deficient and likely misleading. And others in responsibile positions, including many in our religious liberty department, expressed the same concerns.

God bless!

Kevin

Posted by: Clay Jun 8 2007, 07:44 PM

posting the 10 commandments is akin to "worshiping" them in my opinion.... overemphasis on something that was not given for the believer to "keep" as much as to help them see that they needed a savior.... leave it to us to get it twisted....

Posted by: princessdi Jun 8 2007, 07:54 PM

ITA!!! People don't even know what they are inferring when they want prayer and th 10Commandments in public schools/buildings. There is supposed to be a separation fo church and state, and the line gets blurred all the time. Is that not what we are supposed to be looking out for according to our prophecy doctrine? When governement starts governing religion?

BTW, prayer is in school as long as there is someone there praying. Why is it necessary for the teacher/counsleor/principal to pray. And as the email says, what kind of prayer is it, and to whom or to everybody, or nobody in particular.

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jun 8 2007, 05:08 PM)
>
> RECEIVED THIS IN EMAIL TODAY - JUST POSTING FOR ANY DESIRED DISCUSSION.
> +++
>
> Message: 19
>
> Date: Fri, 8 Jun 2007 01:28:19 +0000

From: "Kevin Paulson"

Subject: Shelley Quinn

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

One further word on Shelley Quinn and the Ten Commandments book. Many have rightly raised concern about this book's implied support for organized prayer and the posting of the Ten Commandments in public schools. The idea is clearly conveyed by Danny and Shelley that the government should not have removed these elements, and thus they come across as supporting the efforts of the Religious Right to unite church and state.

Let's remember, folks: If the Ten Commandments are posted in public schools, which version will be posted? Congressman Jerrold Nadler of New York, who represents the West Side here in our City, asked the right question when this issue was debated in Congress:

"Whose Ten Commandments? The Catholic version? The Protestant version? They're different, you know."

That's just the trouble, however. Many DON'T know!

The whole point here is that by posting ANY version of the commandments in public schools, the government is making a theological statement. This is not the place of civil authority in a society where those of all faiths and of none share equal status under the law.

The same is true of the issue of prayer in the same context. Whose prayers will they be? Catholics pray to Mary and the saints; Protestants don't. Christians pray in Jesus' name; Jews and Muslims don't/ Again, the state should not be making theological > statements. And prayer is very much a theological statement, any way you look at it.

>
> The idea that God has been "thrown out" of public schools by the exclusion of such activities from the curriculum, is absurd for the simple reason that no one can stop anyone from praying, anytime, anywhere. We can all pray silently any time we wish, and more importantly, we can act like Christians wherever we find ourselves. No law can possibly prevent this.
>
> With this in mind, I and many others found the Shelton/Quinn Ten Commandments book deficient and likely misleading. And others in responsibile positions, including many in our religious liberty department, expressed the same concerns.
>
> God bless!
>
> Kevin

Posted by: mozart Jun 8 2007, 10:20 PM

Mt 5:19
Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

Joh 14:15
If ye love me, keep my commandments. (this is the only time or place in scripture, that i am aware of, where Jesus tells us how to show our love for HIM)

Joh 15:10
If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jun 8 2007, 06:44 PM)
>
> posting the 10 commandments is akin to "worshiping" them in my opinion.... overemphasis on something that was not given for the believer to "keep" as much as to help them see that they needed a savior....

> ....leave it to us to get it twisted

:lay could you please unpack this for me. who is "us" and what is twisted? i'm confused about what you are ;aying.

Posted by: Clay Jun 9 2007, 06:25 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Jun 8 2007, 11:20 PM)
>
> Mt 5:19
> Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.
>
> Joh 14:15
> If ye love me, keep my commandments. (this is the only time or place in scripture, that i am aware of, where Jesus tells us how to show our love for HIM)
>
> Joh 15:10
> If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love.
> clay could you please unpack this for me. who is "us" and what is twisted? i'm confused about what you are saying.

get it twisted" simply means we have confused the issue.... the text you have quoted are fine, but most who ıse them skip over the MOST important part so that they can get to the part they want i.e. telling people to :eep the commandments.... The text says, IF you LOVE me..... most of us do not love God as Jesus ;uggested we love God.... Love him with our total being.... and we would be able to do that before we can ɜven get to the "keeping" part......

ᵓerhaps the thread on the message to Galatians found here:
ıttp://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=13601

vould help in understanding the purpose of the law and the reality that we cannot "keep" anything, egardless of how many times we say we can....

f Adam and Eve in their perfection were not able to keep the one law given to them, how does anyone think hat after thousands of years of sin they can keep (in and of themselves) the 10 commandments? It's not ɔossible....

Vhen Jesus told his disciples, without me you can do nothing, that suggests to me that even in our "keeping" ɪr "doing" it is with divine help. Thus if Christ is assisting us, and covering us with his righteousness, we :annot claim that we are keeping the law.... we aren't..... it is Christ in us....

.astly I like this verse, because I think it speaks directly to us as adventists because we are so adamant ıbout working our way into the kingdom.....

ɜalatians 3:21-22 emphasis mine

> QUOTE
>
> If such is the case, is the law, then, an anti-promise, a negation of God's will for us? Not at all. Its purpose was to make obvious to everyone that we are, in ourselves, out of right relationship with God, and therefore to show us the futility of devising some religious system for getting by our own efforts what we can only get by waiting in faith for God to complete his promise. For if any kind of rule-keeping had power to create life in us, we would certainly have gotten it by this time.

Posted by: watchbird Jun 9 2007, 07:23 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jun 9 2007, 08:25 AM)
>
> If Adam and Eve in their perfection were not able to keep the one law given to them, how does anyone think that after thousands of years of sin they can keep (in and of themselves) the 10 commandments? It's not possible....
>
> When Jesus told his disciples, without me you can do nothing, that suggests to me that even in our "keeping" or "doing" it is with divine help. Thus if Christ is assisting us, and covering us with his righteousness, we cannot claim that we are keeping the law.... we aren't..... it is Christ in us....

Agreed with your emphasis above, Clay... except for two caveats....

1) Adam and Eve WERE able to keep the one law given to them.... they CHOSE to disobey it. We, by contrast would not even be able to CHOOSE to obey... except for the fact that Christ gives the ability to choose back to us... even before we know or ask. But... as you say... we are not able to do anything without "divine help". But...

2) Christ assisting us and covering us with His righteousness.. does not mean that we cannot claim that we are doing the good we are doing.... we are... and the phrase should not be merely "Christ in us"... even though that is a Biblical phrase... for that phrase has been all too often misconstrued to support a passive do-nothing attitude in which we expect Christ to do everything while we effortlessly stand idly by and attempt nothing.

Relationship is the key word here... as you so often point out... and it should always appear when we speak of Christ in us.... ie. it should be Christ in relationship with us.. and we in relationship with Him. In this arrangement He provides the protection for our will so that we may use it to make right choices... and He provides the divine assistance that we need to enable us to do whatever He requires of us. And that is, what he individually requires of us... He does not always require the same things... objectively speaking.... from different individuals.

Posted by: Clay Jun 9 2007, 07:27 AM

good points... let me start another thread... did Adam and Eve choose or was one of them deceived?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 9 2007, 07:49 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Jun 8 2007, 08:20 PM)
>
> Joh 14:15
> If ye love me, keep my commandments. (this is the only time or place in scripture, that i am aware of, where Jesus tells us how to show our love for HIM)

Mo,

Are you saying that by keeping the commandments we show Jesus that we love Him or that when we love Him we will keep His commandments?

My personal interpretation of this verse is that when we truly love Jesus, really know Him personally, obedience will be a natural result, not anything that we manufacture ourselves. If we are keeping His commands, it is not by our own might or power in the way that the Pharisees did, but is instead the fruit, the evidence, of our close relationship with Him.

John 14:15"If you love me, you will obey what I command."

John 14:23Jesus replied, "If anyone loves me, he will obey my teaching."

Clay,

Thanks for bringing in these awesome words from Paul to the Galations!

> QUOTE
>
> If such is the case, is the law, then, an anti-promise, a negation of God's will for us? Not at all. Its purpose was to make obvious to everyone that we are, in ourselves, out of right relationship with God, and therefore to show us the futility of devising some religious system for getting by our own efforts what we can only get by waiting in faith for God to complete his promise. For if any kind of rule-keeping had power to create life in us, we would certainly have gotten it by this time.

Posted by: mozart Jun 9 2007, 08:39 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 9 2007, 07:49 AM)
>
> Mo,
>
> Are you saying that by keeping the commandments we show Jesus that we love Him or that when we love Him we will keep His commandments?
> i don't see any difference in these two.
>
> My personal interpretation of this verse is that when we truly love Jesus, really know Him personally, obedience will be a natural result, not anything that we manufacture ourselves. If we are keeping His commands, it is not by our own might or power in the way that the Pharisees did, but is instead the fruit, the evidence, of our close relationship with Him.
> i just quoted scripture. i'm not sure how that could bring into question my thinking like a pharisee.
> John 14:15"If you love me, you will obey what I command."
>
> John 14:23Jesus replied, "If anyone loves me, he will obey my teaching."
> Clay,
>
> Thanks for bringing in these awesome words from Paul to the Galations!

sorry you misunderstood the point of my Bible quotes. i am not inferring that keeping the law is our salvation by works. i think we all know that is not scriptural. the point of the scripture is to show how important keeping the commandments is to Christ, to the point of saying "if you love me", then giving the order "keep my commandments".
if we believe that we cannot truly love the Lord and therefore cannot keep His commandments, then how do we grow in Christ?

these are not my words, they are God's.

we are broken vessels, we are weak in the flesh but that should not be used as an excuse to say, "since we can't fully keep the commandments, we should therefore push them aside and not even try". nor should we dance around them until we find a way for them to not be intrusive in our lives. someone said once, "i want God in my life as long as He doesn't interfere".
Jesus gives an order here, pre-empted by the phrase, "If you love me...". that can only mean that the order is directed to those who meet the condition mentioned. if a parent tells a child, "go do your homework", that is an order. how well the child does his homework is judged by their teacher. a good teacher, such as our Lord, will reward his efforts even if his homework is not perfect.

-The Reward-
further scripture in Ch. 14 of John, verse 21 continues in this vein. "He who has my commandments with him and obeys them is the one who loves me; he who loves me will be loved by my Father, and I will love him and reveal myself to him.

my deductions is: that our efforts in trying to keep the commandments as an expression of our love for Jesus will be rewarded by His love and His Father's love and in so doing, Him revealing Himself to us further.

God's commandments, as any parent's, mean nothing to one who has no love. but to one who trusts in Jesus, obeying them is an expression of the love in which they were given.

because the teachings were given, out of love, by our Redeemer, we do our best to obey because we love Him and care what He thinks of us. this attitude toward obedience is the result of the teachings given in love by our God. The Holy God who created us in love, who taught us in love and who sacrificed His Son in love for our transgressions. we all fall short, we all have "shortcomings", but if we love the Lord, we will try to do as He commands us. as children of a Most Holy and Perfect God should we do any less? the commandments tell us right from wrong. our civil laws were built on them. how else would anyone know right from wrong lest God tell them Himself?

Posted by: Clay Jun 9 2007, 08:44 PM

thanks Mozart.... you aren't getting it, and I don't have the words to explain it at the moment.... you believe you can keep the law... knock yourself out...

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 9 2007, 09:20 PM

Mo,

I wasn't challenging your statement, I was trying to get clarification of what you were saying. I also was posting my own opinion of the verse you posted. I'm not saying you are thinking like a Pharisee, I was referring to the way they kept the law - in their own power. Our denomination has been rife with legalism for generations and finally seems to be moving away from that "You will be saved only if you follow all of these rules" mentality.

Each of us has to determine for ourselves how we interpret the scriptures because each journey is unique. What I find amazing in my own life is that these interpretations often change the more I learn about Who is saving who in this wonderful plan of salvation.

PB

Posted by: mozart Jun 10 2007, 11:43 AM

NP, PB, i was just quoting scripture for consideration, letting the Bible speak for itself.

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 9 2007, 08:20 PM) ☐
>
> Mo,

> I wasn't challenging your statement, I was trying to get clarification of what you were saying. I also was posting my own opinion of the verse you posted. I'm not saying you are thinking like a Pharisee, I was referring to the way they kept the law - in their own power. Our denomination has been rife with legalism for generations and finally seems to be moving away from that "You will be saved only if you follow all of these rules" mentality.
> Each of us has to determine for ourselves how we interpret the scriptures because each journey is unique. What I find amazing in my own life is that these interpretations often change the more I learn about Who is saving who in this wonderful plan of salvation.
>
> PB

n reference to the bolded statement you make here, (if i am understanding your statment correctly), i can't igree with that. the Bible says scripture interprets itself. are you saying that we can interpret scripture iccording to our own personal preferences? do you not mean to say "we apply scripture to our individual ituations"? please explain. you may pm on this since it is "off topic".

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 10 2007, 12:07 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Jun 10 2007, 09:43 AM)
>
> NP, PB, i was just quoting scripture for consideration, letting the Bible speak for itself.
>
> in reference to the bolded statement you make here, (if i am understanding your statment correctly), i can't agree with that. the Bible says scripture interprets itself. are you saying that we can interpret scripture according to our own personal preferences? don't you not mean to say "we apply scripture to our individual situations"? please explain. you may pm on this since it is "off topic".

Nould it help if I changed "interpret" to "understand"? When we are mature we have a much different inderstanding of the universe around us than when we were babies. I believe this applies to spiritual things is well. JMO.

Posted by: mozart Jun 10 2007, 12:28 PM

ya, i can agree with that.

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 10 2007, 11:07 AM)
>
> Would it help if I changed "interpret" to "understand"? When we are mature we have a much different understanding of the universe around us than when we were babies. I believe this applies to spiritual things as well. JMO.

Posted by: Brick Step Jun 10 2007, 09:15 PM

I feel we need always to be careful not to speak of love as though it were something different from obedience to the Ten Commandments. Love IS God's law. "God is love. 1 John 4:16. His nature, His law is love. It ever has been; it ever will be." Patriarchs and Prophets, p. 33.

Commands from God not to kill, or commit adultery or dishonour your parents, or require your servants to work on the Sabbath, or covet your neighbours wife, would have been meaningless to the unfallen who had never experimented with sin. I believe in its original form God's law must have simply stated, "Love God supremely, and all others unselfishly." Lucifer came along and wanted to be loved supremely, like God, and that's where the great controversy started. But for us, God's law is still the same law of love. The Ten Commandments are just the special adaptation of this law of love for this fallen planet.

The problem with the scribes and Pharisees was that they divested law-keeping of love. "Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you pay tithe of mint and anise and cumin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law: justice and mercy and faith. These you ought to have done, without leaving the others undone." Matthew 23:23, NKJV. "Justice and mercy and faith" are spiritual exercises, each being just different dimensions of the one principle of love. "Faith works by love." Galatians 5:6. Unbelief is sin. Faith and love, as placed in the heart by the covenant-keeping God, and exercised, are one connecting link with Christ, not two, and it is impossible to have this spiritual link with Christ, apart from outward manifestations that this has occurred.

The entrance of sin demanded a new demonstration of God's love in which the fallen must exercise faith, but the command to exercise faith in God has never changed. It has always been there, and always will be. The very decision to look to Jesus, exercise faith in Him, put on the covering robe of His unblemished righteousness, is the first step in obedience to the first commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." For the fallen, justifying faith itself is a dimension of law-keeping!

"Whoever confesses that Jesus is the Son of God, God [love, see context] abides in him, and he in God." 1 John 4:15.

"... true love is an ingredient in true and living faith, and is what is most essential and distinguishing in it. ... That a justifying faith, as a most distinguishing mark of Christianity, is comprehended in the great command of loving God, appears also, very plainly, form what Christ says to the Jews, John 5:40-43, etc.." Jonathan Edwards, Christian Love, p. 7. "But you are not willing to come to me that you may have life. I do not receive honour from men. But I know you, that you do not have the love of God in you. I have come in my Father's name, and you do not receive me; if another comes in his own name, him you will receive." John 5:40-43, NKJV.

There are only two classes at the end, those who have "patience", who "keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus" (Revelation 14:12), and the unbelieving or disobedient. Commandment keepers, and commandment breakers. It is VERY important to give focus to what commandment-keeping means. This is the blueprint on our relationship with God, and with all others. There are differences between the law and the gospel. There are also some vitally imporant similarities.

I feel it is important to remember that what God thundered out at Sinai and wrote with His finger on those two tables of stone, were also the words, "I am, the LORD thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." Exodus 20:2; cf Deuteronomy 5:1-22. The actual promise of deliverance from the bondage of sin, and the exodus story that it might typify our literal endtime deliverance from bondage in this world (see Revelation 15:3), is indelibly inscribed on the tables of God's law! Wow!

While I feel there is need for an investigation, I personally felt 3ABN, in the overall, as seen over satellite TV, did wonderfully in its up front Ten Commandments Weekend presentations. Praise God for the souls who have been won as a result.

Posted by: mozart Jun 11 2007, 12:43 AM

> QUOTE(Brick Step @ Jun 10 2007, 08:15 PM) ☐
>
> I feel it is important to remember that what God thundered out at Sinai and wrote with His finger on those two tables of stone, were also the words, "I am, the LORD thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." Exodus 20:2; cf Deuteronomy 5:1-22. The actual promise of deliverance from the bondage of sin, and the exodus story that it might typify our literal endtime deliverance from bondage in this world (see Revelation 15:3), is indelibly inscribed on the tables of God's > law! Wow!

>
> While I feel there is need for an investigation, I personally felt 3ABN, in the overall, as seen over satellite TV, did wonderfully in its up front Ten Commandments Weekend presentations. Praise God for the souls who have been won as a result.

AMEN

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Maybe, It Is More Smoke Then Fire?

Posted by: sdaguy Jun 6 2007, 06:07 PM

Maybe we should keep in mind, what the GC came out with, about being "more smoke then fire." We have heard the saying, if it looks like a duck, walks like a duck and quacks like a duck, ha; you have no spring chicken! But, maybe in this case of all what we have been hearing here about 3ABN, really there is no duck? Could it be all smoke, and just smoke? Personally, I have nothing to gain to defend 3ABN. I do not know of any person working at 3ABN or have a program on the air there or I don't even get it on my TV! I just believe in the U.S. Constitutional way, the "presumption of innocents!" It is DUE PROCESS I am defending. It seems that the GC or the NAD would be a proper forum to have fair hearings. For them to hear from witnesses involved from both sides, looking at documentations to back up either witnesses who are in the know, and of course all being Christ like all through this, then what GC or NAD concludes after much prayer for either the Church to support or not to support 3ABN, then we will know if there is fire, or if it is a duck. JM(Humble)O, ☐

I know I am new here and have lots to learn, but I am a big supporter of the GC and NAD, true at times they are slow, but still I support them, and I am sure many others here do also.

Posted by: watchbird Jun 6 2007, 07:10 PM

> QUOTE(sdaguy @ Jun 6 2007, 08:07 PM) ☐
>
> Maybe we should keep in mind, what the GC came out with, about being "more smoke then fire." We have heard the saying, if it looks like a duck, walks like a duck and quacks like a duck, ha; you have no spring chicken! But, maybe in this case of all what we have been hearing here about 3ABN, really there is no duck? Could it be all smoke, and just smoke? Personally, I have nothing to gain to defend 3ABN. I do not know of any person working at 3ABN or have a program on the air there or I don't even get it on my TV! I just believe in the U.S. Constitutional way, the "presumption of innocents!" It is DUE PROCESS I am defending. It seems that the GC or the NAD would be a proper forum to have fair hearings. For them to hear from witnesses involved from both sides, looking at documentations to back up either witnesses who are in the know, and of course all being Christ like all through this, then what GC or NAD concludes after much prayer for either the Church to support or not to support 3ABN, then we will know if there is fire, or if it is a duck. JM(Humble)O, ☐
>
> I know I am new here and have lots to learn, but I am a big supporter of the GC and NAD, true at times they are slow, but still I support them, and I am sure many others here do also.

☒ welcome.gif

sdaguy. There is a lot of information on this site... and you sound as though you were beginning with a mind that is open to learning.

You can learn much if you will just take your time, start with the pinned items at the top of the menu... work your way through all of them carefully.... and when they point to other threads, go there and read also. At some point in time, try to go back to the beginning and see how things have developed over the last three years.

You will find that many of us began by sharing heartily in the same thoughts as you express... especially when it comes to the role that GC and NAD might have played as soon as the first indications of problems began to be seen. But that is not the way that it happened.

As you read, it will be well for you to keep in mind that "truth is stranger than fiction". And it will also be helpful if you will keep in mind that even on this board, there is only a small fraction of the story that has been told.

You will find fire. You will find smoke. Proceed with caution.

Posted by: Artiste Jun 6 2007, 07:48 PM

> QUOTE(sdaguy @ Jun 6 2007, 04:07 PM) ☐
>
> Maybe we should keep in mind, what the GC came out with, about being "more smoke then fire." We have heard the saying, if it looks like a duck, walks like a duck and quacks like a duck, ha; you have no spring chicken! But, maybe in this case of all what we have been hearing here about 3ABN, really there is no duck? Could it be all smoke, and just smoke? Personally, I have nothing to gain to defend 3ABN. I do not know of any person working at 3ABN or have a program on the air there or I don't even get it on my TV! I just believe in the U.S. Constitutional way, the "presumption of innocents!" It is DUE PROCESS I am defending. It seems that the GC or the NAD would be a proper forum to have fair hearings. For them to hear from witnesses involved from both sides, looking at documentations to back up either witnesses who are in the know, and of course all being Christ like all through this, then what GC or NAD concludes after much prayer for either the Church to support or not to support 3ABN, then we will know if there is fire, or if it is a duck. JM(Humble)O, ☐
>
> I know I am new here and have lots to learn, but I am a big supporter of the GC and NAD, true at times they are slow, but still I support them, and I am sure many others here do also.

So glad you believe in the efficacy of DUE PROCESS. However I wonder that you have such confidence in your choice of a proper forum to decide this case, especially since you indicate that you have neither seen 3ABN on TV, nor had experience with persons connected with 3ABN as many of the rest of us on this forum have.

Many of us here do support the GC and NAD in theory and would be happy if they were to handle this matter expeditiously. That has not happened so far.

****

Posted by: LaurenceD Jun 6 2007, 07:50 PM

> QUOTE(sdaguy)
>
> I just believe in the U.S. Constitutional way, the "presumption of innocents!" It is DUE PROCESS I am defending.

You're too late, guy. They needed you on board back when the accused one (LS) was determined guilty w/o a fair hearing.

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 6 2007, 08:43 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ Jun 6 2007, 07:50 PM) ☐
>
> You're too late, guy. They needed you on board back when the accused one (LS) was determined guilty w/o a fair hearing.

Agreed, Laurence, and nice to see you back! That being said...... ☒ welcome.gif .....sdaguy!

I came here with similar sentiments as yours....then I started to read....and read....and read...and read....well, you get the idea. When I first came here, I thought I'd gotten through most of the 3ABN postings...and then I discovered the little page buttons that go with each topic!! Turns out I'd only read the most recent pages, and many topics have many, manypages! Matter of fact, I'm still reading and trying to catch up!

Like Watchbird says, keep an open mind and be willing to dig through a lot of information to form your own opinions. You can still keep the faith, but you might find your perspective changing as you read.

~~Snoopy~~

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 7 2007, 09:09 AM

Don't forget, www.save3abn.com is still running too.

Posted by: Noahswife Jun 7 2007, 10:07 AM

> QUOTE(sdaguy @ Jun 6 2007, 08:07 PM) ☐
>
> Maybe we should keep in mind, what the GC came out with, about being "more smoke then fire." We have heard the saying, if it looks like a duck, walks like a duck and quacks like a duck, ha; you have no spring chicken! But, maybe in this case of all what we have been hearing here about 3ABN, really there is no duck? Could it be all smoke, and just smoke? Personally, I have nothing to gain to defend 3ABN. I do not know of any person working at 3ABN or have a program on the air there or I don't even get it on my TV! I just believe in the U.S. Constitutional way, the "presumption of innocents!" It is DUE PROCESS I am defending. It seems that the GC or the NAD would be a proper forum to have fair hearings. For them to hear from witnesses involved from both sides, looking at documentations to back up either witnesses who are in the know, and of course all being Christ like all through this, then what GC or NAD concludes after much prayer for either the Church to support or not to support 3ABN, then we will know if there is fire, or if it is a duck. JM(Humble)O, ☐
>
> I know I am new here and have lots to learn, but I am a big supporter of the GC and NAD, true at times they are slow, but still I support them, and I am sure many others here do also.

Today's Soap box......... ☒ off

3abn is not the only not for profit that is raising eyebrows and associated with the SDA Church.....

Maybe DS should hire Florida Hospital's PR Department?

Pastor Orville Parchment

Revisiting statements of Pastor Orville Parchment the #2 ranking official of the 7th Day Adventist Church in North America.
Published: September 29, 2005

On July 1st of this year, Pastor Orville Parchment the 2nd ranking official of the 7th Day Adventist Church in North America apologized to the mother of young Rodney Vega, the son of a 7th Day Adventist Pastor who allegedly was turned away from 7th Day Adventist not-for-profit Florida Hospital simply because he was uninsured.
That day he prayed for young Rodney Vega to live a long life, and implied he would look into the matter.
On August 22 Pastor Parchment was quoted in the Washington Post as saying he did not have time to "dig deeply" into the charges.
Well when just one of the 7th Day Adventist not-for-profit health systems is raking in $715.3 MILLION in profits over a 4 year period you have to question why Pastor Parchment doesn't have time to "dig deeply" into charges of price gouging the uninsured.
Is his church benefiting from this un Christian like behavior?

Rodney Vega is in a better place today.

Description: The passing of young Rodney Vega.
Published: December 11, 2006
He is with God, having arrived in heaven yesterday (Sunday).
Full of life and love for friends, especially KB Forbes, family, especially his loving mother, and the people who worked to save his life, and make the end less painful.
Rodney deserved better than he got.
There is an Amber alert, there is Megans law, it's time for Rodneys law.
The son of a Seventh Day Pastor who was denied care by not-for-profit Florida Hospital which is owned and operated by Adventist Health System, a part of the worldwide organization of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, simply because he was uninsured.
I wish God could explain to us why these Seventh-day Adventists acted as coldly and cruelly as they did.
Was it just that they wanted to protect their bottom line.
Over the past five years (2000-2005) this hospital reported making a profit of over 376 MILLION DOLLARS!
Do you believe Thomas Werner, the Pres/CEO of Adventist Health System Sunbelt, a man who received a $1.4 million increase in total compensation in just one year (bringing his total to just over $2.5 million) will be anything but glad to have this PR nightmare start to fade?
Or what about Pastor Orville Parchment who in a PR move knelt and prayed with Rodney's mother, and vowed to investigate what happened.
That promise was made over a year and a half ago.
It's been more than a year since Pastor Orville told the Washington Post, he hadn't had time to look into the matter.
Do you think he'll absolve his guilt by remembering Rodney in prayers.
It should be noted that Rodney passed away in a for profit hospital that has covered all of his expenses.
On the website of not-for-profit Florida Hospital it reads To Our God
"We are responsible to communicate through caring service that God is a loving, gracious and protecting Father who places infinite value on every individual and is worthy of our admiration, affection and willing commitment."
It's a shame they didn't value young Rodney Vega.
Rodney we will not let you.

A personal note.

Description: Religious hospitals. Published: January 12, 2007
You can become numb when day after day you look at the profits being made by not-for-profit hospitals, and the excessive compensation being taken home by hospital executives, but I cannot get out of my mind the fact that when it comes to making health care more affordable, America's religious leaders are duplicitous.
Sister 'half my brain is a clinking cash register" Keehan is the embodiment of duplicity.

It's been almost 2 years since I spoke to Cardinal George about these issues and asked him to provide the moral leadership needed to end the abuses of the lay people who now run Catholic health care systems.

Last August I wrote, "It has now been 373 days since Pastor Orville Parchment, the 2nd highest ranking member of the 7th Day Adventist Church in North America knelt and prayed for young Rodney Vega whose mother alleged had been turned away for treatment by a not-for-profit 7th Day Adventist hospital simply because he was uninsured.

"What made this story particularly appalling was the fact that Rodney's father was a pastor in this church. After kneeling, he promised Rodney's mother to investigate her claims.

"It has now been 291 days since Pastor Orville Parchment told the Washington Post that he had not had the time to 'dig deeply' into the charges.'

You can add another approximately 150 days to both those numbers-and Rodney is in heaven, while Pastor Orville does nothing to prevent any more abuses.

These are not the only ones, but if religious institutions are not going to act compassionately, they shouldn't be called religious institutions, and if they are not-going to act like not-for-profits, it's time to TAX THEM!

☒

nw
C"i"

Posted by: Clay Jun 7 2007, 10:17 AM

sobering info NW... the kicker of course will be that if the move is made to tax these not for profit church run institutions the cry will be heard "they are persecuting us...." The fact is some stuff we might bring on ourselves... as my grandfather often said, "if you give a man a stick and he hits you in the head with it, don't cry..."

Posted by: Clay Jun 7 2007, 10:30 AM

> QUOTE
>
> I have been so caught up in reporting the disgraceful conduct of this so called faith based system with regards to Rodney Vega, that I realized that I don't believe I have ever reported the profits for this entire system for 2005.
> Well, according to the annual report, profits for year end 12/31/05 were $251,400,000!
>
> Just over a quarter of a billion dollars.
>
> Profits in the three previous years came in as follows.
>
> 2002--$170.6 MILLION.
>
> 2003--$203.1 MILLION.
>
> 2004--$236.2 MILLION.
>
> Add them together, and you will see that in just four years, this not-for-profit hospital has made $861.3 MILLION in PROFITS!
>
> You could see how they might have felt that caring for Rodney Vega the son of a Seventh-day Adventists Pastor, might have been too expensive.
>
> They will tell you that "Today, our mission of extending the healing ministry of Christ depends not only on our commitment to Christian ideals but on our efforts to provide nothing less than extraordinary compassionate care."

http://wherethemoneygoes.com/newSearch.php?SearchString=adventist+health+system&Submit=Search+WTMG

Posted by: erik Jun 7 2007, 10:41 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Jun 7 2007, 09:07 AM) ☐
>
> Today's Soap box......... ☒ off
>
> 3abn is not the only not for profit that is raising eyebrows and associated with the SDA Church.....
>
> Maybe DS should hire Florida Hospital's PR Department?
>
> ## Pastor Orville Parchment
>
> Revisiting statements of Pastor Orville Parchment the #2 ranking official of the 7th Day Adventist Church in North America.
> Published: September 29, 2005
>
> On July 1st of this year, Pastor Orville Parchment the 2nd ranking official of the 7th Day Adventist Church in North America apologized to the mother of young Rodney Vega, the son of a 7th Day Adventist Pastor who allegedly was turned away from 7th Day Adventist not-for-profit Florida Hospital simply because he was uninsured.
> That day he prayed for young Rodney Vega to live a long life, and implied he would look into the matter.
> On August 22 Pastor Parchment was quoted in the Washington Post as saying he did not have time to "dig deeply" into the charges.
> Well when just one of the 7th Day Adventist not-for-profit health systems is raking in $715.3 MILLION in profits over a 4 year period you have to question why Pastor Parchment doesn't have time to "dig deeply" into charges of price gouging the uninsured.
> Is his church benefiting from this un Christian like behavior?

Rodney Vega is in a better place today.

Description: The passing of young Rodney Vega.
Published: December 11, 2006
He is with God, having arrived in heaven yesterday (Sunday).
Full of life and love for friends, especially KB Forbes, family, especially his loving mother, and the people who worked to save his life, and make the end less painful.
Rodney deserved better than he got.
There is an Amber alert, there is Megans law, it's time for Rodneys law.
The son of a Seventh Day Pastor who was denied care by not-for-profit Florida Hospital which is owned and operated by Adventist Health System, a part of the worldwide organization of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, simply because he was uninsured.
I wish God could explain to us why these Seventh-day Adventists acted as coldly and cruelly as they did.
Was it just that they wanted to protect their bottom line.
Over the past five years (2000-2005) this hospital reported making a profit of over 376 MILLION DOLLARS!
Do you believe Thomas Werner, the Pres/CEO of Adventist Health System Sunbelt, a man who received a $1.4 million increase in total compensation in just one year (bringing his total to just over $2.5 million) will be anything but glad to have this PR nightmare start to fade?
Or what about Pastor Orville Parchment who in a PR move knelt and prayed with Rodney's mother, and vowed to investigate what happened.
That promise was made over a year and a half ago.
It's been more than a year since Pastor Orville told the Washington Post, he hadn't had time to look into the matter.
Do you think he'll absolve his guilt by remembering Rodney in prayers.
It should be noted that Rodney passed away in a for profit hospital that has covered all of his expenses.
On the website of not-for-profit Florida Hospital it reads To Our God
"We are responsible to communicate through caring service that God is a loving, gracious and protecting Father who places infinite value on every individual and is worthy of our admiration, affection and willing commitment."
It's a shame they didn't value young Rodney Vega.
Rodney we will not let you.

A personal note.

Description: Religious hospitals. Published: January 12, 2007
You can become numb when day after day you look at the profits being made by not-for-profit hospitals, and the excessive compensation being taken home by hospital executives, but I cannot get out of my mind the fact that when it comes to making health care more affordable, America's religious leaders are duplicitous.
Sister 'half my brain is a clinking cash register" Keehan is the embodiment of duplicity.

It's been almost 2 years since I spoke to Cardinal George about these issues and asked him to provide the moral leadership needed to end the abuses of the lay people who now run Catholic health care systems.

Last August I wrote, "It has now been 373 days since Pastor Orville Parchment, the 2nd highest ranking member of the 7th Day Adventist Church in North America knelt and prayed for young Rodney Vega whose mother alleged had been turned away for treatment by a not-for-profit 7th Day Adventist hospital simply because he was uninsured.

"What made this story particularly appalling was the fact that Rodney's father was a pastor in this church. After kneeling, he promised Rodney's mother to investigate her claims.

"It has now been 291 days since Pastor Orville Parchment told the Washington Post that he had not had the time to 'dig deeply' into the charges.'

You can add another approximately 150 days to both those numbers-and Rodney is in heaven, while Pastor Orville does nothing to prevent any more abuses.

These are not the only ones, but if religious institutions are not going to act compassionately, they shouldn't be called religious institutions, and if they are not-going to act like not-for-profits, it's time to TAX THEM!

nw
C"i"

Vell Fellow Blacksdaer's i guess we can see clearly why the GC so unconcerned about the little sancadal over at 3abn, it is small time stuff.

LEASE can someone tell how our health message got this warped, that we can have that much money being made and we still can help the unfortunate around us.

am noticing the connection is that we are much more worried about building the SDA kingdom on earth then we are at building god's kingdom(which is the whole reason ve even exist has a church.)
pray that god sends his vomit out message to full fruit very soon so we can stop embrassing him.

rik

Posted by: Clay Jun 7 2007, 10:51 AM

> QUOTE(erik @ Jun 7 2007, 11:41 AM)
>
> Well Fellow Blacksdaer's i guess we can see clearly why the GC so unconcerned about the little sancadal over at 3abn, it is small time stuff.
>
> PLEASE can someone tell how our health message got this warped, that we can have that much money being made and we still can help the unfortunate around us.
>
> I am noticing the connection is that we are much more worried about building the SDA kingdom on earth then we are at building god's kingdom(which is the whole reason we even exist has a church.)
> I pray that god sends his vomit out message to full fruit very soon so we can stop embrassing him.
>
> Erik

is I said Erik in another thread... I was reading in a old book written late 60s... the author said this about sda's:

> QUOTE
>
> sda's are always preaching the kingdom to come, while in the meantime they appear to be trying to establish their kingdom here on earth...

wonder what his observation would be now...

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 7 2007, 11:18 AM

The exclusion of young Rodney Vega from treatment in our Florida SDA hospital for lack of insurance reminds me of another exclusion for an equally absurd reason from another of our SDA hospitals back in the first half of the 20th century.

From an article "The Beginning of Regional Conferences in the US III" dated Tuesday, September 5th, 2006:

"One of the impetuses for the petition was the tragic case of Lucy Byard. Byard was a light-skinned Black SDA from Brooklyn who was admitted to the SDA owned and operated Washington Sanitarium and hospital based on her appearance. When her true racial identity was discovered from her admittance forms, Byard was wheeled into a hallway without examination or treatment, while a place in another hospital was sought for her. She was eventually taken to Freedman's Hospital where she died shortly after of pneumonia. While it is impossible to ascertain, it is often stated that her condition—at the very least—worsened due to the time spent in the drafty hallway of Washington Sanitarium." http://h0bbes.wordpress.com/2006/09/

While it was unconscionable for an SDA hospital to deny service, one question that was not adequately clarified in the articles about Rodney Vega is the timing. How did the denial of treatment on July 1, 2005 contribute to the young man's death on December 10, 2006?

Posted by: YogusBearus Jun 7 2007, 11:27 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jun 7 2007, 10:51 AM) ☐
>
> sda's are always preaching the kingdom to come, while in the meantime they appear to be trying to establish their kingdom here on earth...as I said Erik in another thread... I was reading in a old book written late 60s... the author said this about sda's: I wonder what his observation would be now...

Yes Clay, one might wonder that. It appears that there are now some rather material reasons to be involved in the "work." Reading about some of the compensation being paid the "workers" now is downright unbelievable.

Try searching "Adventist Health System" at http://wherethemoneygoes.com/newSearch.php?SearchString=adventist+health+system&Submit=Search+WTMG

-bear

Posted by: Noahswife Jun 7 2007, 11:55 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 7 2007, 12:18 PM) ☐
>
> While it was unconscionable for an SDA hospital to deny service, one question that was not adequately clarified in the articles about Rodney Vega is the timing. How did the denial of treatment on July 1, 2005 contribute to the young man's death on December 10, 2006?

PB, I have not yet traced the entire Rodney Vega story but that is not what my post is about.

I personally resent how many in this country hijack issues in the name of their brand of Christianity. However, the spin here by the NAD is interesting to me and I can't help but wonder what the ultimate follow up was? I am also angered by the salaries paid to the CEOs and others in our institutions when I know many older SDAs have been forced into early retirements to avoid the payment of benefits after years of "service" to this church. They were replaced with younger workers with minimal accrued benefits. An example of this was my own father who in his early 60s was a gardener at one of our renowned SDA medical centers who was always the first to be called in the middle of the night to plow the snow. I also personally know that one of those mentioned on this site hires illegals to do much of his home maintenance.

I also wonder how many of these CEOs are ASI members?

Just an inquiring mind and two more cents.

nw
C"i"

Posted by: Jnana15 Jun 7 2007, 12:17 PM

Thank you NW for this enlightening information. This just sickens me to my stomach! I have heard more stories like this over and over. I guess sometimes we "are" like Israel of the old testament. Then we start snotin' and cryin' to God for deliverance from the messes we create from following the examples of the world in being the tails and not the heads. JMHO

This scripture comes to mind:

"No man can serve tow masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. 6:24 KJV

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 7 2007, 12:25 PM

NW,

I get your point! Will there be those successful CEO's, ASI members and otherwise, who will be expecting a plush ride to heaven but will instead hear solemn words below echoing in their ears on that day?

Matthew 7:21 - 23:

21 "Not everyone who says to me, 'Lord, Lord,' will enter the kingdom of heaven, but only he who does the will of my Father who is in heaven. 22 Many will say to me on that day, 'Lord, Lord, did we not prophesy in your name, and in your name drive out demons and perform many miracles?' 23 Then I will tell them plainly, 'I never knew you. Away from me, you evildoers!'

Posted by: Observer Jun 7 2007, 12:56 PM

Folks, I would like to share some concerns regarding some of the posts that I am reading here. These are simply my personal opinions and concerns. Of course they probably are not 100 per-cent correct.

1) This section has served a noble purpose well. A diverse group of people have gathered here in BSDA united in a central focus--3-ABN, Danny Shelton, and Linda Shelton. I will suggest that we are an example to the world of a very diverse group of people who have generally worked together while maintaining that central focus. We have not split off into splinter groups who have attacked each other.

2) Throughout the history of the development of our denomination, we have seen sin, disregard of God's instruction, challenges, and the working of God. Those who know our history certainly have sin and corruption to point out. It is there. I am concerned that a focus on some of this in that past, may serve to splinter us, and to take us away from our central focus.

There are some events that I personally believe we should never forget. I spent a week at the General Conference Headquarters in May. During that time the group I was with toured the REVIEW. Several of us used that opportunity to remind the leadership who was taking us on that tour of the time when an African American employee of the General Conference could not eat in the GC cafeteria, with the rest of the employees, and of the death of the African American due to refused medical treatment at Washington Sanatarium. There are part of our history that should never be forgotten.

However, I do not have the emotional energy to involve myself in every scandal and misdeed that I have been aware of during the past 50 years in the Church. If I were to do so today, it would divert my time and effort from my present central focus.

In addition, I will suggest that an increased focus on some of thes past issues will serve to divide us.

3) As I read some of the posts that have been made, I find that I often have agreement with them, but, often I do not agree with everypoint that is made. I do not believe that every representation is accurate. Yet, I do not want to divide the effort that I am putting into this 3-ABN mess to some of these other issues.

4) Here is what may be happening: With the legal order to impound the records, some may feel that we are in a holding pattern. In one sense we are in a holding pattern. With this in mind, some may have the energy to fight other dragons. I will suggest that the holding pattern is only temporary. We will again need our energy for whatever direction this battle takes. Let us use this time to regroup.

Posted by: YogusBearus Jun 7 2007, 01:06 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Jun 7 2007, 01:56 PM) ☐

> Folks, I would like to share some concerns regarding some of the posts that I am reading here. These are simply my personal opinions and concerns. Of course they probably are not 100 per-cent correct.
>
> 1) This section has served a noble purpose well. A diverse group of people have gathered here in BSDA united in a central focus--3-ABN, Danny Shelton, and Linda Shelton. I will suggest that we are an example to the world of a very diverse group of people who have generally worked together while maintaining that central focus. We have not split off into splinter groups who have attacked each other.
>
> 2) Throughout the history of the development of our denomination, we have seen sin, disregard of God's instruction, challenges, and the working of God. Those who know our history certainly have sin and corruption to point out. It is there. I am concerned that a focus on some of this in that past, may serve to splinter us, and to take us away from our central focus.
>
> There are some events that I personally believe we should never forget. I spent a week at the General Conference Headquarters in May. During that time the group I was with toured the REVIEW. Several of us used that opportunity to remind the leadership who was taking us on that tour of the time when an African American employee of the General Conference could not eat in the GC cafeteria, with the rest of the employees, and of the death of the African American due to refused medical treatment at Washington Sanatarium. There are part of our history that should never be forgotten.
>
> However, I do not have the emotional energy to involve myself in every scandal and misdeed that I have been aware of during the past 50 years in the Church. If I were to do so today, it would divert my time and effort from my present central focus.
>
> In addition, I will suggest that an increased focus on some of thes past issues will serve to divide us.
>
> 3) As I read some of the posts that have been made, I find that I often have agreement with them, but, often I do not agree with everypoint that is made. I do not believe that every representation is accurate. Yet, I do not want to divide the effort that I am putting into this 3-ABN mess to some of these other issues.
>
> 4) Here is what may be happening: With the legal order to impound the records, some may feel that we are in a holding pattern. In one sense we are in a holding pattern. With this in mind, some may have the energy to fight other dragons. I will suggest that the holding pattern is only temporary. We will again need our energy for whatever direction this battle takes. Let us use this time to regroup.

Gregory, if your point is that it might be better to have discussion tangents such as the Rodney Vega/Adventist Health System fiasco discussed in a different thread, I have no argument. If you are suggesting that we don't collectively have the resources or the interest to look at abuses other than 3abn, I absolutely disagree. I'm sure we all have our pet issues that we feel are most worthy of support. I just don't think we need to limit the scope of our interest and/or discussion.

I apologize in advance if I've misread your post.

-bear

Posted by: watchbird Jun 7 2007, 01:18 PM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ Jun 7 2007, 03:06 PM) ☐

> Gregory, if your point is that it might be better to have discussion tangents such as the Rodney Vega/Adventist Health System fiasco discussed in a different thread, I have no argument. If you are suggesting that we don't collectively have the resources or the interest to look at abuses other than 3abn, I absolutely disagree. I'm sure we all have our pet issues that we feel are most worthy of support. I just don't think we need to limit the scope of our interest and/or discussion.
>
> I apologize in advance if I've misread your post.
>
> -bear

I would say not only in another thread, but also in another forum. I agree with Gregory. This forum was created for the purpose of containing information on the 3abn Saga in one place where those who wished to learn what has been said could come and read. And the more we add unrelated topics in this forum, the more it is unnecessarily made cumersome and difficult for new comers to find material relative to 3abn and difficult for old-times to be able to review and compare old material with new. And this is true no matter how great the urgency or how trivial the light-hearted comments.

The admins here have been quite cooperative in moving much of the distractive material. I hope they will soon see this block of posts and move them to an appropriately titled thread in an appropriate forum so that those who are interested in these topics may have access to them and be able to continue discussing them, and those who come to find information about 3abn will be able to do so more easily.

Thanks much admins!

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 7 2007, 01:19 PM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ Jun 7 2007, 12:06 PM) ☐
>
> Gregory, if your point is that it might be better to have discussion tangents such as the Rodney Vega/Adventist Health System fiasco discussed in a different thread, I have no argument. If you are suggesting that we don't collectively have the resources or the interest to look at abuses other than 3abn, I absolutely disagree. I'm sure we all have our pet issues that we feel are most worthy of support. I just don't think we need to limit the scope of our interest and/or discussion.
>
> I apologize in advance if I've misread your post.
>
> -bear

Plus, it would be a mistake to shrug it off if one has the burden to tackle that particular dragon, wherever the thread might be located.

PB

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 7 2007, 01:19 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Jun 7 2007, 12:55 PM) ☐
>
> PB, I have not yet traced the entire Rodney Vega story but that is not what my post is about.
>
> I personally resent how many in this country hijack issues in the name of their brand of Christianity. However, the spin here by the NAD is interesting to me and I can't help but wonder what the ultimate follow up was? I am also angered by the salaries paid to the CEOs and others in our institutions when I know many older SDAs have been forced into early retirements to avoid the payment of benefits after years of "service" to this church. They were replaced with younger workers with minimal accrued benefits. An example of this was my own father who in his early 60s was a gardener at one of our renowned SDA medical centers who was always the first to be called in the middle of the night to plow the snow. I also personally know that one of those mentioned on this site hires illegals to do much of his home maintenance.
>
> I also wonder how many of these CEOs are ASI members?
>
> Just an inquiring mind and two more cents.
>
> nw
> C"i"

I totally agree with you, NW, and share your indignation without a doubt......

Posted by: YogusBearus Jun 7 2007, 01:26 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jun 7 2007, 01:18 PM) ☐
>
> I would say not only in another thread, but also in another forum. I agree with Gregory. This forum was created for the purpose of containing information on the 3abn Saga in one place where those who wished to learn what has been said could come and read. And the more we add unrelated topics in this forum, the more it is unnecessarily made cumersome and difficult for new comers to find material relative to 3abn and difficult for old-times to be able to review and compare old material with new. And this is true no matter how great the urgency or how trivial the light-hearted comments.
>
> The admins here have been quite cooperative in moving much of the distractive material. I hope they will soon see this block of posts and move them to an appropriately titled thread in an appropriate forum so that those who are interested in these topics may have access to them and be able to continue discussing them, and those who come to find information about 3abn will be able to do so more easily.
>
> Thanks much admins!

I have no disagreement with your points about placement Watchbird. I am a little uneasy with the implication that the 3abn scandal is the only thing that people are or should be interested in. Some may find the downside potential of what used to be a church controlled health system run amok, even more frightening than the 3abn debacle.

-bear

Posted by: Artiste Jun 7 2007, 01:34 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jun 7 2007, 11:18 AM) ☐
>
> I would say not only in another thread, but also in another forum. I agree with Gregory. This forum was created for the purpose of containing information on the 3abn Saga in one place where those who wished to learn what has been said could come and read. And the more we add unrelated topics in this forum, the more it is > unnecessarily made cumersome and difficult for new comers to find material relative to 3abn and difficult for old-times to be able to review and compare old material with new. And this is true no matter how great the urgency or how trivial the light-hearted comments.

>
> The admins here have been quite cooperative in moving much of the distractive material. I hope they will soon see this block of posts and move them to an appropriately titled thread in an appropriate forum so that those who are interested in these topics may have access to them and be able to continue discussing them, and those who come to find information about 3abn will be able to do so more easily.
>
> Thanks much admins!

agree, Watchbird, and have spent countless hours myself over the last 6 or 8 weeks reading the material on this forum, as well as on save3abn.com. So it continues to erve its purpose.

aving a very personal interest in seeing certain problems/people with 3ABN being served justice, I appreciate so much what is being done here at this forum!

Posted by: princessdi Jun 7 2007, 01:36 PM

Ok, I know this has been said before, sometimes the thread waunders, topics intersect, especially as we see that the topics have some facts and principals in common---3ABN, ASI, AHS, GC...... As we see this has already been spun off into it's own thread, and I am sure this will waunder back to 3ABN in due time. There is no need to move the post, especially since they ahve been copied and quoted, etc.

Posted by: YogusBearus Jun 7 2007, 01:37 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jun 7 2007, 01:18 PM) ☐
>
> The admins here have been quite cooperative in moving much of the distractive material. I hope they will soon see this block of posts and move them to an appropriately titled thread in an appropriate forum so that those who are interested in these topics may have access to them and be able to continue discussing them, and those who come to find information about 3abn will be able to do so more easily.
>
> Thanks much admins!

roblem Solved!

see there is a thread started in Adventism: Theology and Related Subjects addressing these issues. Off topic bear moving in there. Wait! It was just seen leaving the Sista Talk" section heading for "Aging Gracefully"....

bear

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 7 2007, 01:58 PM

Perhaps we need a forum where we could discuss and discover:

"Which SDA Organization Shows the True Face of Adventism?"

Posted by: Observer Jun 7 2007, 02:03 PM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ Jun 7 2007, 12:06 PM) ☐
>
> Gregory, if your point is that it might be better to have discussion tangents such as the Rodney Vega/Adventist Health System fiasco discussed in a different thread, I have no argument. If you are suggesting that we don't collectively have the resources or the interest to look at abuses other than 3abn, I absolutely disagree. I'm sure we all have our pet issues that we feel are most worthy of support. I just don't think we need to limit the scope of our interest and/or discussion.
>
> I apologize in advance if I've misread your post.
>
> -bear

ear:

may not have been clear. My dear wife occasionally (?) tells me that is the case with me.

hank you for helping me to clairfy it.

do not have a problem with any discussiong that subject, or others. Each can make their own decision as to where they spend their emotional energy.

y wish was to do it somewhere other than in this 3-ABN section.

hank you,
regory Matthews

Posted by: Jnana15 Jun 7 2007, 02:37 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 7 2007, 02:58 PM) ☐
>
> Perhaps we need a forum where we could discuss and discover:
>
> "Which SDA Organization Shows the True Face of Adventism?"

Amen Sista! Let me know when you find one.

Posted by: Noahswife Jun 7 2007, 02:51 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 7 2007, 03:36 PM)
>
> Ok, I know this has been said before, sometimes the thread waunders, topics intersect, especially as we see that the topics have some facts and principals in common----3ABN, ASI, AHS, GC...... As we see this has already been spun off into it's own thread, and I am sure this will waunder back to 3ABN in due time. There is no need to move the post, especially since they ahve been copied and quoted, etc.

For the Record:

Before posting on this thread, I first posted in another subforum:
http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=3604&hl=

After some discussion, it was decided that an off topic post would be made in the 3abn forum and this thread was not chosen without thought. If there is anything of significance regarding 3abn on this thread for potential newbies please point it out if you would. THE POST IS CLEARY MARKED OFF TOPIC.

However, many of us are looking at more than just 3abn as we watch how the GC and NAD and other related SDA organizations conduct themselves consistent with their stated mission statements or not.

As is pointed out, a new thread has also be started here:
http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=13763&hl=

I am not aware that discussion of 3abn issues is objected to so quickly and so vehemently in other areas as linkage is often seen cross threads and cross sub forums. I thank the admins for their patience and independence.

nw
C"i"

Posted by: mikell Jun 7 2007, 02:55 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 7 2007, 01:58 PM)
>
> Perhaps we need a forum where we could discuss and discover:
>
> "Which SDA Organization Shows the True Face of Adventism?"

Good question, if answered, let me know,

Posted by: Artiste Jun 7 2007, 03:01 PM

I am sure there is something...somewhere...

****

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 7 2007, 03:14 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 7 2007, 02:36 PM)
>
> Ok, I know this has been said before, sometimes the thread waunders, topics intersect, especially as we see that the topics have some facts and principals in common----3ABN, ASI, AHS, GC...... As we see this has already been spun off into it's own thread, and I am sure this will waunder back to 3ABN in due time. There is no need to move the post, especially since they ahve been copied and quoted, etc.

Amen, Sistah!! And thank you for that. I totally agree!

I appreciated the other stories, and as a 3ABN supporter I personally don't want to look at the 3ABN situation in a vacuum. It is all I can do to keep up with this forum, so if NW had not placed the extraneous information here, I would have missed it. I saw some very distinct parallels in the non-3ABN material provided today, and it was actually beneficial to me in helping to visualize the overall framework (or lack of) that has enabled the 3ABN soap opera to evolve to its current condition. Not only do I want to see resolution and an end to the (alleged) scandal, I want to know what broke down to allow it to happen in the first place and how it can be prevented from happening again. In the overall process of problem solving, a good investigator will take a step back and ask "what was the environment that allowed this to happen?" BTJM...

~~Snoopy~~

Posted by: mozart Jun 7 2007, 03:58 PM

Gregory,
may i recommend that we start a forum called "Dragons" ?
i'd also like to suggest that when we speak of Adventist Organizations that we make it clear that we are talking about organizations and not SDAs all inclusive as in "SDAs are building their kingdom here instead of in Heaven" type posts. i know we know what we mean (most of the time) but others who view here may get the impression we are putting down our church (group of individuals-church). just as with DS, MS, GMc, etc. not being 3ABN but individuals. can we maybe use the term "org." when we are referring to those situations? just a suggestion so we are not mis-preceived.

NW,
i appreciate your posting all that info. sometimes i'd rather crawl in a cave than know some of this stuff, but it is important that we do know and hopefully we will use the information to make a difference.

To Most,
you are very bright and i'm glad to be here to discuss things that matter and even those that don't.

> QUOTE(Observer @ Jun 7 2007, 02:03 PM)
>
> Bear:
>
> I may not have been clear. My dear wife occasionally (?) tells me that is the case with me.
>
> Thank you for helping me to clairfy it.
>
> I do not have a problem with any discussiong that subject, or others. Each can make their own decision as to where they spend their emotional energy.
>
> My wish was to do it somewhere other than in this 3-ABN section.
>
> Thank you,
> Gregory Matthews

Posted by: Clay Jun 7 2007, 06:03 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jun 7 2007, 02:18 PM)
>
> I would say not only in another thread, but also in another forum. I agree with Gregory. This forum was created for the purpose of containing information on the 3abn Saga in one place where those who wished to learn what has been said could come and read. And the more we add unrelated topics in this forum, the more it is unnecessarily made cumersome and difficult for new comers to find material relative to 3abn and difficult for old-times to be able to review and compare old material with new. And this is true no matter how great the urgency or how trivial the light-hearted comments.
>
> The admins here have been quite cooperative in moving much of the distractive material. I hope they will soon see this block of posts and move them to an appropriately titled thread in an appropriate forum so that those who are interested in these topics may have access to them and be able to continue discussing them, and those who come to find information about 3abn will be able to do so more easily.
>
> Thanks much admins!

ummmm not quite.... discussions wander, as this one does.... and since there is really no new information as well as some information known only to a select few and they can't say what they know, then a tangent here and there is fine.....

This sub forum was reluctantly created to keep all the 3abn discussion in one place... that some people have found it helpful because all the stuff is in one place is a by-product of its creation.... as for moving the posts relating to the hospital stuff, to me its related so for now it can stay where it is..... its not like people can't multitask... I am sure folks can keep track of multiple thoughts....

Lastly, those who are interested in the information here need to join and participate in all areas of BSDA and not just 3abn.... but that's just me....

Posted by: Fran Jun 7 2007, 09:06 PM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ Jun 7 2007, 01:26 PM)
>
> I have no disagreement with your points about placement Watchbird. I am a little uneasy with the implication that the 3abn scandal is the only thing that people are or should be interested in. Some may find the downside potential of what used to be a church controlled health system run amok, even more frightening than the 3abn debacle.
>
> -bear

To whom it may concern;

WARNING! WARNING! This post is not for everyone. If you are sensitive or get you feeling hurt over others opinions, please do not read past this line of this post.

Bear;

I totally, unequivocally agree with you and Noah's wife. I am a free thinker and can think about more than one thing at a time.

Gregory;

I have deleted this post about 4 times. This is my chilled/watered down version of a response to your objection over Noah's wife's post about Vega.

I am so glad the Vega event was posted; you know, out of sight, out of mind.

Yes, we are concerned about 3ABN! However, I also feel that there was gross abuse in the Vega situation also! The father was a Seventh-day Adventist preacher for goodness sake!

There are times I need help in doing what I cannot do. Do I look to my church? No way. They would take no action and then say no! I trust in the world for these things. Shame, huh?

When I am hospitalized, I pass by the local SDA Hospital! I have seen my daughter in agony in that hospital. She was there for about 4 months. At least 3-4 times a week, she was not delivered a meal. She was a vegetarian, but they would always bring her meat. They never got that right. The meals they just forgot, bought Dinty Moore stew as a substitute. I called them and they said, "If she wants to eat, she better eat what she is served!" None of my family will go there again!

Just because a poster posted about another case of abuse that maybe could have saved a life, there is no need to attack or disagree with the poster because of how you or Watchbird personally feel. This is not your forum, nor is it mine! Just because you let us know, at every given opportunity, that you are better informed than most of us, does not mean we are not able to read/ignore the matters we want/don't want to see. We should decide this without hearing your displeasure/pleasure about the post or where it should be located.

I would strongly suggest that we that can "Walk and chew bubble gum at the same time," read what we please and ignore what we choose to ignore.

Are you a moderator here? Shouldn't these suggestions and decisions come from a BSDA moderator?

Freedom of choice is why I come here now instead of parking at Club Adventist. I do not fit into their mold any longer. Please do not try to bring that subculture over here. Club Adventist is known for the moderators taking bites out of members/people. When I get bit, I tend to bite back! Right?

You are correct, we are diverse, praise God. In my opinion, I like to see things from as many views as possible. I am able to make decisions on my own. I am in the group and do not need to regroup!

I feel Vega is important! It is about Administrative abuse; So is 3ABN! The similarities are overwhelming. Both are important. I can gasp both and not let my thinking about 3ABN to wave.

If you desire we continue to be united, then stop saying we might be swayed away by other information! This is sort of like the JW's telling their people they are not allowed to read this or the other!

I believe our past experiences have made me see red at your post. I am sorry. I also believe you owe Noah's wife and apology. Your first comments were uncalled for.

The Vega post has not caused any splitting off the objective in any permanent way. We ARE United without being treated like children. Sorry for being so blunt. That is me, right; A bull dog that never lets go? Shock and Awe; and all that other garbage.

I also believe we are well aware that the battle has not been won. No need to point that out either. Please allow us to be free thinkers and decision makers. Stop trying to chase me away, because I am here for the duration!

Watchbird;

I am praying you will understand the emotions of some who are grieving for 3ABN and members of the SDA Church. We are so different. I believe another poster made the comment that a previous post of yours about emotions was "Cold". I agree 100%

Now, I am finished with my opinions and will turn everyone back to the regularly scheduled program.

Posted by: calvin Jun 7 2007, 10:41 PM

> QUOTE
>
> Are you a moderator here? Shouldn't these suggestions and decisions come from a BSDA moderator?

We the administrators always welcome suggestions and often act positively on them.

Posted by: Jnana15 Jun 8 2007, 01:44 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ Jun 7 2007, 10:06 PM)
>
> ## To whom it may concern;
>
> ## WARNING! WARNING! This post is not for everyone. If you are sensitive or get you feeling hurt over others opinions, please do not read past this line of this post.
>
> Bear;
>
> I totally, unequivocally agree with you and Noah's wife. I am a free thinker and can think about more than one thing at a time.
>
> Gregory;
>
> I have deleted this post about 4 times. This is my chilled/watered down version of a response to your objection over Noah's wife's post about Vega.
>
> I am so glad the Vega event was posted; you know, out of sight, out of mind.
>
> Yes, we are concerned about 3ABN! However, I also feel that there was gross abuse in the Vega situation also! The father was a Seventh-day Adventist preacher for goodness sake!
>
> There are times I need help in doing what I cannot do. Do I look to my church? No way. They would take no action and then say no! I trust in the world for these things. Shame, huh?
>
> When I am hospitalized, I pass by the local SDA Hospital! I have seen my daughter in agony in that hospital. She was there for about 4 months. At least 3-4 times a week, she was not delivered a meal. She was a vegetarian, but they would always bring her meat. They never got that right. The meals they just forgot, bought Dinty Moore stew as a substitute. I called them and they said, "If she wants to eat, she better eat what she is served!" None of my family will go there again!
>
> Just because a poster posted about another case of abuse that maybe could have saved a life, there is no need to attack or disagree with the poster because of how you or Watchbird personally feel. This is not your forum, nor is it mine! Just because you let us know, at every given opportunity, that you are better informed than most of us, does not mean we are not able to read/ignore the matters we want/don't want to see. We should decide this without hearing your displeasure/pleasure about the post or where it should be located.
>
> I would strongly suggest that we that can "Walk and chew bubble gum at the same time," read what we please and ignore what we choose to ignore.
>
> Are you a moderator here? Shouldn't these suggestions and decisions come from a BSDA moderator?
>
> Freedom of choice is why I come here now instead of parking at Club Adventist. I do not fit into their mold any longer. Please do not try to bring that subculture over here. Club Adventist is known for the moderators taking bites out of members/people. When I get bit, I tend to bite back! Right?
>
> You are correct, we are diverse, praise God. In my opinion, I like to see things from as many views as possible. I am able to make decisions on my own. I am in the group and do not need to regroup!

> I feel Vega is important! It is about Administrative abuse; So is 3ABN! The similarities are overwhelming. Both are important. I can gasp both and not let my thinking about 3ABN to wave.
>
> If you desire we continue to be united, then stop saying we might be swayed away by other information! This is sort of like the JW's telling their people they are not allowed to read this or the other!
>
> I believe our past experiences have made me see red at your post. I am sorry. I also believe you owe Noah's wife and apology. Your first comments were uncalled for.
>
> The Vega post has not caused any splitting off the objective in any permanent way. We ARE United without being treated like children. Sorry for being so blunt. That is me, right; A bull dog that never lets go? Shock and Awe; and all that other garbage.
>
> I also believe we are well aware that the battle has not been won. No need to point that out either. Please allow us to be free thinkers and decision makers. Stop trying to chase me away, because I am here for the duration!
>
> Watchbird;
>
> I am praying you will understand the emotions of some who are grieving for 3ABN and members of the SDA Church. We are so different. I believe another poster made the comment that a previous post of yours about emotions was "Cold". I agree 100%
>
> Now, I am finished with my opinions and will turn everyone back to the regularly scheduled program.

hank you my brave Sista!/Brother. I am right by your side.

Posted by: Shepherdswife Jun 8 2007, 08:16 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ Jun 7 2007, 11:06 PM) ☐
>
> [b]
>
> The father was a Seventh-day Adventist preacher for goodness sake!

know this has been stated over and over, but I have a question--not aimed at Fran, just put it here because she mentioned it again.

DA pastors' sons have very good insurance. Why did this kid not have any? Unless his dad was a lay pastor? Something about this story smells funny to me...

am appalled as well as you all are when injustice happens, but if some of the facts don't sound right, it makes me at least not take everything the article says for ranted.

OW, I don't always believe everything I read--which is why I fit in here so well, I think!

hepherdswife

Posted by: princessdi Jun 8 2007, 08:23 PM

I was wondering ther same thing, I actually was assuming that he might have been grown.

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ Jun 8 2007, 07:16 PM) ☐
>
> I know this has been stated over and over, but I have a question--not aimed at Fran, just put it here because she mentioned it again.
>
> SDA pastors' sons have very good insurance. Why did this kid not have any? Unless his dad was a lay pastor? Something about this story smells funny to me...
>
> I am appalled as well as you all are when injustice happens, but if some of the facts don't sound right, it makes me at least not take everything the article says for granted.
>
> IOW, I don't always believe everything I read--which is why I fit in here so well, I think!
>
> shepherdswife

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 8 2007, 08:43 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 8 2007, 06:23 PM) ☐
>
> I was wondering ther same thing, I actually was assuming that he might have been grown.

Google search of images brought this up yesterday. Rodney was not an adult. The outrage is totally justified, IMO! (I hope the link below works - it was huge!)

ttp://images.google.com/imgres?imgurl=http://media.washingtonpost.com/wp-yn/content/photo/2005/08/21/PH2005082101011.jpg&imgrefurl=http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-yn/content/article/2005/08/21/AR2005082101010.html&h=190&w=146&sz=13&hl=en&start=3&sig2=v9hTMGBeKOJVcvwEFQzo0w&tbnid=fFC4z9D4Xg5JaM:&tbnh=103&tbnw=79&ei=EhJqRtadF5YggPjkZHgAg&prev=/images%3Fq%3Drodney%2Bvega%26gbv%3D2%26svnum%3D10%26hl%3Den

hepherdswife,

It definitely is a good quality not to believe everything we read, but we must take the next step and check it out to see if it is true before we consider dismissing it because of perceived inconsistancies.

Posted by: Observer Jun 8 2007, 09:00 PM

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ Jun 8 2007, 08:16 PM)
>
> I know this has been stated over and over, but I have a question--not aimed at Fran, just put it here because she mentioned it again.
>
> SDA pastors' sons have very good insurance. Why did this kid not have any? Unless his dad was a lay pastor? Something about this story smells funny to me...
>
> I am appalled as well as you all are when injustice happens, but if some of the facts don't sound right, it makes me at least not take everything the article says for granted.
>
> IOW, I don't always believe everything I read--which is why I fit in here so well, I think!
>
> shepherdswife

You have raised a very good question.

I got involved in it some time back. As I looked into it, I discovered that some of the claims made were not allthat they were said to be. I.e. found there was in some cases partial truth, and partial error.

As a bottom line, I ramained on the side of the child and the parents. I felt that there were some major points that were valid in regard to how he was treated.

But, my memory and sources of facts has failed in the time that has passed. So, I will not pontificate on them now.

On a technical point: SDA pastors have a good medical plan. I question whether it will typically quqalify as insurance, under the laws that govern insurance. However, as I have not been on a denominational payroll for many years, it may be that they are now covered by an insurance plan.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 8 2007, 09:04 PM

Ok so why was he not covered under his father's insurance?

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 8 2007, 07:43 PM)
>
> A Google search of images brought this up yesterday. Rodney was not an adult. The outrage is totally justified, IMO! (I hope the link below works - it was huge!)
>
> http://images.google.com/imgres?imgurl=http://media.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/photo/2005/08/21/PH2005082101011.jpg&imgrefurl=http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2005/08/21/AR2005082101010.html&h=190&w=146&sz=13&hl=en&start=3&sig2=v9hTMGBeKOJVcvwEFQzo0w&tbnid=fFC4z9D4Xg5JaM:&tbnh=103&tbnw=79&ei=EhJqRtadF5-YggPjkZHgAg&prev=/images%3Fq%3Drodney%2Bvega%26gbv%3D2%26svnum%3D10%26hl%3Den
>
> Shepherdswife,
>
> It definitely is a good quality not to believe everything we read, but we must take the next step and check it out to see if it is true before we consider dismissing it because of perceived inconsistancies.

Posted by: Clay Jun 8 2007, 09:14 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 8 2007, 10:04 PM)
>
> Ok so why was he not covered under his father's insurance?

as if insurance covers everything? maybe he was under-insured?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 8 2007, 09:46 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 8 2007, 07:04 PM)
>
> Ok so why was he not covered under his father's insurance?

Does the denomination provide insurance for every pastor's family in every country? The Washington Post article portrays the family as Venezuelan and the father as an Adventist minister:

> QUOTE
>
> Rodney's parents are practicing Adventists; his father, a Venezuelan, is here on a special visa granted to religious ministers. Yet each time the family sought care at Florida Hospital, one of 38 owned by Adventist Health System, they say the hospital demanded money up front -- tens of thousands of dollars the family does not have.

Was Rodney deemed to have been an acceptable sacrifice to maintain the Florida Hospital's bottom line just as the alleged victims of some of 3abn's leadership have appeared to be acceptable sacrifices to maintain the ministry image and bottom line?

There appear to be some striking parallels that bring one to wonder what the true missions of these organizations actually are.

Posted by: roxe Jun 8 2007, 11:23 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ Jun 7 2007, 09:06 PM) ☐
>
> To whom it may concern;
> WARNING! WARNING! This post is not for everyone. If you are sensitive or get you feeling hurt over others opinions, please do not read past this line of this post.
>
> Bear;
> I totally, unequivocally agree with you and Noah's wife. I am a free thinker and can think about more than one thing at a time.
>
> Gregory;
> I have deleted this post about 4 times. This is my chilled/watered down version of a response to your objection over Noah's wife's post about Vega.
> I am so glad the Vega event was posted; you know, out of sight, out of mind.
> Yes, we are concerned about 3ABN! However, I also feel that there was gross abuse in the Vega situation also! The father was a Seventh-day Adventist preacher for goodness sake!
> There are times I need help in doing what I cannot do. Do I look to my church? No way. They would take no action and then say no! I trust in the world for these things. Shame, huh?
> When I am hospitalized, I pass by the local SDA Hospital! I have seen my daughter in agony in that hospital. She was there for about 4 months. At least 3-4 times a week, she was not delivered a meal. She was a vegetarian, but they would always bring her meat. They never got that right. The meals they just forgot, bought Dinty Moore stew as a substitute. I called them and they said, "If she wants to eat, she better eat what she is served!" None of my family will go there again!
>
> Just because a poster posted about another case of abuse that maybe could have saved a life, there is no need to attack or disagree with the poster because of how you or Watchbird personally feel. This is not your forum, nor is it mine! Just because you let us know, at every given opportunity, that you are better informed than most of us, does not mean we are not able to read/ignore the matters we want/don't want to see. We should decide this without hearing your displeasure/pleasure about the post or where it should be located.
>
> I would strongly suggest that we that can "Walk and chew bubble gum at the same time," read what we please and ignore what we choose to ignore.
> Are you a moderator here? Shouldn't these suggestions and decisions come from a BSDA moderator?
> Freedom of choice is why I come here now instead of parking at Club Adventist. I do not fit into their mold any longer. Please do not try to bring that subculture over here. Club Adventist is known for the moderators taking bites out of members/people. When I get bit, I tend to bite back! Right?
> You are correct, we are diverse, praise God. In my opinion, I like to see things from as many views as possible. I am able to make decisions on my own. I am in the group and do not need to regroup!
> I feel Vega is important! It is about Administrative abuse; So is 3ABN! The similarities are overwhelming. Both are important. I can gasp both and not let my thinking about 3ABN to wave.
> If you desire we continue to be united, then stop saying we might be swayed away by other information! This is sort of like the JW's telling their people they are not allowed to read this or the other!
> I believe our past experiences have made me see red at your post. I am sorry. I also believe you owe Noah's wife and apology. Your first comments were uncalled for.
> The Vega post has not caused any splitting off the objective in any permanent way. We ARE United without being treated like children. Sorry for being so blunt. That is me, right; A bull dog that never lets go? Shock and Awe; and all that other garbage.
> I also believe we are well aware that the battle has not been won. No need to point that out either. Please allow us to be free thinkers and decision makers. Stop trying to chase me away, because I am here for the duration!
>
> Watchbird;
> I am praying you will understand the emotions of some who are grieving for 3ABN and members of the SDA Church. We are so different. I believe another poster made the comment that a previous post of yours about emotions was "Cold". I agree 100%
> Now, I am finished with my opinions and will turn everyone back to the regularly scheduled program.

thank you Fran for your very kind words. i agree with you 100%, and have wished i could have said similar things at times - but refrained cuz i didn't want to start WW3,4,5&6!

boldings above in the quoted post are mine...

Posted by: watchbird Jun 9 2007, 04:29 AM

> QUOTE(roxe @ Jun 9 2007, 01:23 AM) ☐
>
> thank you Fran for your very kind words. i agree with you 100%, and have wished i could have said similar things at times - but refrained cuz i didn't want to start WW3,4,5&6!
>
> boldings above in the quoted post are mine...

I'm surprised and dissappointed, roxe, that you would call those words that you bolded "kind words". As for my understanding the emotions of those "grieving" for 3abn and the church.... I don't think you understand the grieving process that I have been going through for the last three years as I learned of more and move victims of abuse.... and as one after another of my illusions that the church would step up to what I see as their responsibility as shepherds of the flock have been swept away.

Nor do you understand my emotions as I saw person after person come on BSDA and attack those who were attempting to expose evil where ever it might be found... trying... and in some cases succeeding... in building guilt complexes in those who were being thus attacked.

Nor do you understand my understanding as to how severe will be the trauma for those who either are not exposed gradually to the things we have learned.... or who have denied that such things exist.... when they finally are forced suddenly to face the facts of what lies behind the facades of those they have watched and adored and felt they knew intimately because of the frequency which they "visited" their living rooms.

Had you been here from the beginning, you might have recalled that I was one of the first ones to call attention to the reality of this grieving process that would have to be faced by many... and urged this as one of the important values in having an open site like BSDA so as many as possible could be warned ahead of the eventual exposure time.

Grieving ... and even being torn between love for the abuser and pity for the abused.... is a natural and necessary part of being a sensitive loving person. But when this is spoken of publicly in ways which do not give positive recognition to those who make some moves toward righting the wrongs... then it becomes... not merely an expresion of warmth and caring... but one more blow on the already wounded psyche of the abused... who need and should be allowed to express an emotion of rejoicing that deliverance and vindication may be "just around the corner". And when it moves on to fostering "guilt" for having that anticipatory joy in the prospects of freedom from fear... then my own sensitivities are aroused and I feel for and with the abused rather than for those who must grieve for their lost illusions.

And my mind goes to scripture... way back to the story of Absolom... who sat in the gate, winning the hearts of the people away from his father, David, the King of Israel... and who organized a revolt that drove David from his throne and into exile.... and to the faithful warriors in Israel who stayed loyal to David, followed him into exile and then fought... some giving their very lives... to put down the rebellion and return David to the throne.

Picture with me the scene as a messenger brings David the news that his army has been successful.. and his rebellious son has been slain.. And David breaks out into a lament for his son.... Oh Absolom my son... ... but read it in 2 Sam 19....

> 1 Joab was told, "The king is weeping and mourning for Absalom." 2 And for the whole army the victory that day was turned into mourning, because on that day the troops heard it said, "The king is grieving for his son." 3 The men stole into the city that day as men steal in who are ashamed when they flee from battle. 4 The king covered his face and cried aloud, "O my son Absalom! O Absalom, my son, my son!"
>
> 5 Then Joab went into the house to the king and said, "Today you have humiliated all your men, who have just saved your life and the lives of your sons and daughters and the lives of your wives and concubines. 6 You love those who hate you and hate those who love you. You have made it clear today that the commanders and their men mean nothing to you. I see that you would be pleased if Absalom were alive today and all of us were dead.

The wise man has said... there is a time for rejoicing and a time for weeping. And the time for weeping is not as a response to news that there is progress being made towards routing out the evil from the camp. Nor did it prove that David was "cold" when he heeded the words of Joab, and went out to thank his returning men for the victory they had achieved.

Posted by: Rosyroi Jun 9 2007, 11:42 PM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ Jun 7 2007, 11:37 AM) ☐
>
> Problem Solved!
>
> I see there is a thread started in Adventism: Theology and Related Subjects addressing these issues. Off topic bear moving in there. Wait! It was just seen leaving the "Sista Talk" section heading for "Aging Gracefully"....
>
> -bear

After getting all that smoke in my eyes, YogusBearus I needed that... ☒ ☒ rofl Thanks!!

Rosyroi

Posted by: Whitey Jun 10 2007, 01:49 AM

"Maybe it is more smoke than fire?" seems to be the initial sentiments of sdaguy who started this thread. The subject is the Shelton ongoing drama. He admitted to being a novice on sizing up the allegations toward DS and org for misconduct, injustice done against others, misappropriation of donated moneies, and breaking the adultry law.
Good advice was given by experienced ones to read and read all these topic threads pertaining to ongoing discussion of the 3ABN saga. It is a good 'ole patriotic American attitude to approach a matter with "I just believe in the U.S. Constitutional way, the "presumption of innocents!" It is DUE PROCESS I am defending." Those of us having read all the threads have had a process shown us of fair hearings of Eyewitnesses who have spoken on this Forum from boths sides about the fire admidst the smoke. Documents have been brought forth on this Forum for all to read to inform why this is fire is now flaming from years long smoldering embers. Those who are in the know have spoken on this BSDA Forum. The grassroots of Adventism have expressed their dismay and grief at what has been going on and as yet not been healed.

Gregory and Watchbird are sound minded equitable reporters who have stablized discussions that were going off into personal emotional eruptions many a times. The Rodney Vega story warrants it's own forum thread and just distracts from the Sheldon travesty, even though the issue of merciless injustice are to be found in both cases. I missed the link from whatever Gregory and Watchbird mentioned that triggered off Fran's intense reaction of defending her right to grieve over the Sheldon drama abuse. However, ... it was done for a good cause. It showed up in Fran a reflection through words of what hundreds of us grassroot SDA's are feeling presently. We could read, rejoice and respond with a 'Yes, that's it' and feel understood in some minute way. Thank you Fran for being passionate and being a fighting defender.

Now it was Watchbird who just came through our monitor and talked out from her heart to us. The strength of her words mirrored the strength of her soul's agony about this issue that has oppressed the Church.... of which we are living stones who feel too about all this in a bad way. W-bird is one of deep feelings as we see by her candid epistle. Obviously because of years of sanctified growth in self-control she needn't act the foolish ways of unrestrained sentimentalim in crisis problems. Her words are weighed before entering her arsenal of verbal campaigns. Let's avoid any indications that she be a cold fish toward what goes on in our Church. I for one appreciate her and her actions.

☒
[font=Comic Sans Ms]

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 10 2007, 09:14 AM

Whitey,

While our opinions differ slightly on the value of bringing the AHS in to this discussion briefly, I stand and applaud all of your other observations!

Nicely put! ☒

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ John Lomacang : Saturday's Campmeeting Sermonette

---

Posted by: maggiecttr May 31 2007, 02:11 PM

Being the procrastinator I am, I just watched the tape I had made of 3ABN's Spring '07 campmeeting for Sabbath, May 26th.

Herewith, my transcription of John Lomacang's sermonette highlights:

He speaks about Satan opening the gates of Hell against Christ when Christ was on Earth, then:

"...Last year, on the heels of the Ten Commandments weekend -- and I want to say this in context -- the Gates of Hell were opened on 3ABN. And I want to say because we continue to go forward telling it like it is, the Gates of Hell are still opened against 3ABN. But what Satan did to Jesus was nothing compared to what Jesus did to Satan."

Speaks about the agricultural benefits of rain, then:

"So God does not bring rain to frighten us; God brings rain to prepare us for the planting of the seed, so that when the Latter Rain comes, we will be ready for the coming of the Lord. And so, my brethren, when it looks like it's not going to happen, there's God. When it looks like it's not possible at all, there's God. When your eyes contradict what your heart believes, there is God. I believe that God is allowing it to rain on 3ABN so that we can grow better than we have grown before--whaddoyousay? (amens from mostly elderly audience)...So I'm not concerned about the direction of 3ABN. I'm not concerned about the fight that we're fighting....I'm not concerned about that because Jeremiah the prophet said, 'Is there anything too hard for God?' And, brethren, God can do more with those with a lack of faith [sic] than God can do with those who think they can do all by their own strength...So I'm not concerned with the enemy that pursues us, because He said to the Church of Israel, 'The enemy that you see today, you'll see no more forever.' So I'm not concerned--and I'm going to say this clearly--(dismissive wave of hand) I'm not concerned about what the Internet says. I'm concerned about what God says. (Amens from audience; JL grins)
I'm not concerned about the sounds of the chariots from Egypt, because i know that the God that brought us out can block their way with His divine flame...So I'm not concerned about what I hear behind me -- I'm going to have my eyes fixed on the God that's ahead of me, whaddoyousay?

So they--they become fearful you know, there are times we don't know how it's going to happen --how it's going to pan out. But we gotta do what God has told us to do. You see, there are certain things that we have forgotten. You see, it was not Moses that delivered Israel from Egypt, it was God. It was not Pharoah that decided to let them go, it was God. It was not Moses that saved them from the hand of the Angel of Destruction, it was God. It was not Moses that gave them water or provided them bread, it was God. It was not Moses that protected them from the serpients [sic] and scorpons--err, scorpions---it was God. It was not the people (points to audience) who provided the finances for 3ABN -- it was God." (Amens from audience)

"...When you fail to see God's goodness, all you'll see is Satan's badness. Don't let fear dilute your faith. Don't be afraid--stand still and see the salvation of the Lord. I believe that God, in these last days, is going to pull off something that we could not possibly have imagined could happen with a deficit -- to be down is nothing to God, because God never runs out of resources. But God sometimes brings you to the point where your plate is empty, so that He can fill it to the brim and you'll know that when it happens, only God could've done it. Whaddoyousay? Sometimes God has to remind us that there is only one way to home. He said to the Children of Israel, 'Don't spend time looking in the rearview mirror; it's time to go forward. Whaddoyousay? Don't spend time in the Pit of Nostalgia and in the Maze of Mediocrity, wondering why things are not the way they used to be. The reason why they're not is because God has a different plan than He had for the past. God's gotta clear our mind from how it used to be, so that God can show us how it's going to be. So we look back at the last 22 years of 3ABN and we say,'Man, things were great!' But brethren, things are going to be better than they were before! God has not diminished.

God is better than He has ever been. Whaddoyousay?

Talks about Israel having to dip their toes in the River of Faith before they could go forward, etc., then:

"...You gotta know when to stand still and you gotta know when to go forward. Stand still, and see God defeat your enemy, then go forward so that God can part the way, and every obstacle that appears to be designed to defeat you will become the very way which God pronounces your deliverance. And, so, my brother, obstacles don't move if the people of God just decide to stand still....I'm going to close with something that I feel is absolutely necessary to do: And that is to remind Brother Danny Shelton, Mollie Steenson, Shelly Quinn, Pastor C.A. Murray, Pastor John Dinzy and everybody that walks through the doors of 3ABN and those of you that always join us every day, to pray for 3ABN. It's time for us to stop looking to man and look unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith. This work is not going to be completed by 3ABN, God's going to use 3ABN in the completion process, but Paul the apostle says God will finish the work and cut it short in righteousness. So today, will you stand with me, as we do something that I believe we should always do when we hear the enemy coming behind us. We oughta pray. I believe that when the enemy hears us pray, he's got to stop at the command of God. And do something for me...join hands with the person next to you. And we're going to believe together that the fervent prayer of the righteous will avail much. (Prayer, including, "We've come too far to give the enemy credit for our defeats.." He also says, "...And so Father, today, give back to Danny Shelton the faith he had 23 years ago--give him back the vision he had when the night showed zero in the bank and You delivered the very next day. Help him to understand that before the asphalt was laid, the vision was laid. Before the antenna went up, the angels were ready to carry the message around the globe. Help him to look back to find courage to look forward. Help him to stand at his windows somedays and look out and see what mighty things that God has done. And, Father, may Danny give God the credit. May Danny give God the burden. May he give God the nights when his eyes are watered from the tears of uncertainty. And when he stands up and comes and wonders what to say to the people, may he say: 'The God whom I serve is able.' "

Whew! This took a long time of starting & stopping the tape, so I'm ready for a nap. If the sermonette seems disjointed at times, that's just the way he decided to present it, I guess.

Comments?

Blessings,
Maggie

Posted by: Pickle May 31 2007, 03:15 PM

> QUOTE(maggiecttr @ May 31 2007, 03:11 PM)
>
> He speaks about Satan opening the gates of Hell against Christ when Christ was on Earth, then:
>
> "...Last year, on the heels of the Ten Commandments weekend -- and I want to say this in context -- the Gates of Hell were opened on 3ABN. And I want to say because we continue to go forward telling it like it is, the Gates of Hell are still opened against 3ABN. But what Satan did to Jesus was nothing compared to what Jesus did to Satan."

Kind of encouraging, isn't it? If you tell it like it is, the devil gets mad, and the gates of hell open up. So if you tell it like it is and you get sued to try to shut you up, who's behind the lawsuit?

But I don't think it is safe to conclude that just because you're getting picked on that you have to be on the right side. If I give my body to be burned and have not love, I am nothing. So we can't take John's words in an absolute sense.

Another difficulty is that these folks consider no problems at all to be evidence of the blessing of God, and lots of problems to be evidence of their being on God's side. Sorry. We can't insulate ourselves in that way from ever considering whether we are in the faith or not. We have to be open to the possibility that we might be wrong.

After the 10 Commandments Weekend? Or does he mean after Danny remarried, or his remarriage became known?

Posted by: Artiste May 31 2007, 03:55 PM

[

It sounds like Elder Lomacang is trying to enourage the others, and gives me the impression that some are in panic mode.

Posted by: Skyhook May 31 2007, 04:17 PM

It sounds like the the 3abn crisis is escalating. I notice he prayed that Danny would give God the credit when he fixes everything for them. There must be a lot of anxiety among Danny and his inner circle for JL to talk like that.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 31 2007, 04:36 PM

Among other things said, JL prayed:

> QUOTE
>
> (Prayer, including, "We've come too far to give the enemy credit for our defeats.." He also says, "...And so Father, today, give back to Danny Shelton the faith he had 23 years ago--give him back the vision he had when the night showed zero in the bank and You delivered the very next day. Help him to understand that before the asphalt was laid, the vision was laid. Before the antenna went up, the angels were ready to carry the message around the globe. Help him to look back to find courage to look forward. Help him to stand at his windows somedays and look out and see what mighty things that God has done. And, Father, may Danny give God the credit. May Danny give God the burden. May he give God the nights when his eyes are watered from the tears of uncertainty. And when he stands up and comes and wonders what to say to the people, may he say: 'The God whom I serve is able.' "

EGW counsels:

> QUOTE
>
> "The prejudice which has arisen against us because we have reproved the wrongs that God has shown me existed, and the cry that has been raised of harshness and severity, are unjust. God bids us speak, and we will not be silent. If wrongs are apparent among His people, and if the servants of God pass on indifferent to them, they virtually sustain and justify the sinner, and are alike guilty and will just as surely receive the displeasure of God; for they will be made responsible for the sins of the guilty. In vision I have been pointed to many instances where the displeasure of God has been incurred by a neglect on the part of His servants to deal with the wrongs and sins existing among them. Those who have excused these wrongs have been thought by the people to be very amiable and lovely in disposition, simply because they shunned to discharge a plain Scriptural duty. The task was not agreeable to their feelings; therefore they avoided it. {3T 265.2}"

God says through Paul in 1Corinthians 6:1-6:

> QUOTE
>
> 1 If any of you has a dispute with another, dare he take it before the ungodly for judgment instead of before the saints? 2 Do you not know that the saints will judge the world? And if you are to judge the world, are you not competent to judge trivial cases? 3 Do you not know that we will judge angels? How much more the things of this life! 4 Therefore, if you have disputes about such matters, appoint as judges even men of little account in the church! 5 I say this to shame you. Is it possible that there is nobody among you wise enough to judge a dispute between believers? 6 But instead, one brother goes to law against another—and this in front of unbelievers!

And then God further says through Paul in 1 Corinthians 6:7, 8:

> QUOTE
>
> 7 The very fact that you have lawsuits among you means you have been completely defeated already. Why not rather be wronged? Why not rather be cheated? 8 Instead, you yourselves cheat and do wrong, and you do this to your brothers.

Do they not realize that in this year that is supposed to be "The Year of Victory", instead of trusting in God to fight their battles as JL said in his sermon, instead they decide, perhaps by following after the pattern of their true leader, to sue Bob and Gailon who have followed scriptural and EGW principle of our duty to reprove sin. If what we read in 1 Cor. 6:7,8 is to be trusted, they have now been completely defeated. Sad.

Posted by: steffan May 31 2007, 07:53 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 31 2007, 05:36 PM)
>
> Among other things said, JL prayed:
> EGW counsels:
> God says through Paul in 1Corinthians 6:1-6:
> And then God further says through Paul in 1 Corinthians 6:7, 8:
>
> Do they not realize that in this year that is supposed to be "The Year of Victory", instead of trusting in God to fight their battles as JL said in his sermon, instead they decide, perhaps by following after the pattern of their true leader, to sue Bob and Gailon who have followed scriptural and EGW principle of our duty to reprove sin. If what we read in 1 Cor. 6:7,8 is to be trusted, they have now been completely defeated. Sad.

No PB. What is sad is that you or anyone that calls themselves christians would try and justify what these men have done. They have not followed any biblical principle and have went directly against SOP council by making unproven allegations public to the world. Remember that PB? Unproven?
For months you have been one of the main ones who continually try to quote EG and the Bible to try to "Make Right" what is 100% wrong. I have one question for you. As time goes on things begin to unfold, how will you feel, deep in your heart and soul, if you find out that you have been wrong? If you find that allegations against 3abn are unfounded and this has been a bitter campaign to bring 3abn down, how will you truly feel knowing that you have been a very vocal player in whatever damage has been done to the ministry? By all of your post history, it seems it has never occured to you or any of the others that you could be wrong. Maybe you need not only to think about that, but to dwell on it a little. The word tells us there will be an accountability for hurting God's work and his workers. What a precarious position you and others are putting yourselves in with no information other than what you hear and what you read. If you are wrong, you could be risking your very soul.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 31 2007, 08:20 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 31 2007, 05:53 PM)
>
> No PB. What is sad is that you or anyone that calls themselves christians would try and justify what these men have done. They have not followed any biblical principle and have went directly against SOP council by making unproven allegations public to the world. Remember that PB? Unproven?
> For months you have been one of the main ones who continually try to quote EG and the Bible to try to "Make Right" what is 100% wrong. I have one question for you. As time goes on things begin to unfold, how will you feel, deep in your heart and soul, if you find out that you have been wrong? If you find that allegations against 3abn are unfounded and this has been a bitter campaign to bring 3abn down, how will you truly feel knowing that you have been a very vocal player in whatever damage has been done to the ministry? By all of your post history, it seems it has never occured to you or any of the others that you could be wrong. Maybe you need not only to think about that, but to dwell on it a little. The word tells us there will be an accountability for hurting God's work and his workers. What a precarious position you and others are putting yourselves in with no information other than what you hear and what you read. If you are wrong, you could be risking your very soul.

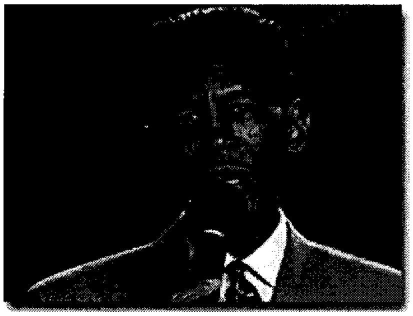
Hang onto all those beliefs. You will need them.

edited for content...

Rosyroi

Posted by: Clay May 31 2007, 08:26 PM

maybe John L is preaching what he is paid to preach.....



Posted by: Rosyroi May 31 2007, 08:30 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 31 2007, 06:26 PM)
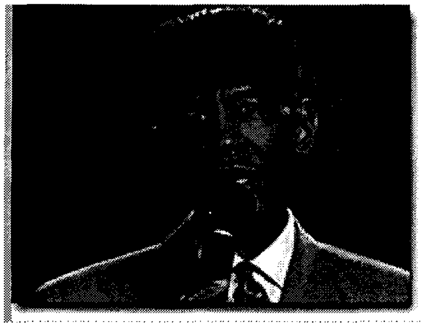
>
> maybe John L is preaching what he is paid to preach.....



h yea.... half his salary is paid by DannyShelton/3ABN.

ou have revealed the problem.

osyroi

Posted by: Clay May 31 2007, 08:37 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 31 2007, 09:30 PM) ☐
>
> Oh yea.... half his salary is paid by DannyShelton/3ABN.
>
> You have revealed the problem.
>
> Rosyroi

here you go.....

Posted by: inga May 31 2007, 10:31 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 31 2007, 08:53 PM) ☐
>
> No PB. What is sad is that you or anyone that calls themselves christians would try and justify what these men have done. They have not followed any biblical principle and have went directly against SOP council by making unproven allegations public to the world.

here've you been all this time, Steffan??

ob Pickle has been absolutely scrupulous about verifying details to make sure he was not spreading mere umors. And he went right to the source, to Danny himself, as the Bible counsels. It was when 3ABN folks tarted waffling and backing out of promises to "show the evidence" that Bob started to smell a rat. And he ound a bunch of dead, stinking rats! Every one of them he identified with the backing of witnesses.

o, no, Bob did not make "unproven allegations"! Danny & the 3ABN board made "unproven allegations" gainst Linda. This seems to be a clear case of projecting one's own sins on others.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 31 2007, 11:11 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ May 31 2007, 09:31 PM) ☐

> Where've you been all this time, Steffan??
>
> ... This seems to be a clear case of projecting one's own sins on others.

Some specialize in projecting.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 31 2007, 11:21 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 31 2007, 05:53 PM) ☐
>
> No PB. What is sad is that you or anyone that calls themselves christians would try and justify what these men have done. They have not followed any biblical principle and have went directly against SOP council by making unproven allegations public to the world. Remember that PB? Unproven?

The Bible counsels us about having two or three witnesses. Bob and Gailon do. The things posted on save3abn.com are not careless allegations, they have been carefully documented. Since those in leadership have turned a blind eye to the questionable behavior of some involved in the ministry that much of the world sees as "the face of Adventism", Bob and Gailon finally were convicted that action must be taken and answered the call.

> QUOTE
>
> For months you have been one of the main ones who continually try to quote EG and the Bible to try to "Make Right" what is 100% wrong.

When the Lord puts a burden on one's heart it is dangerous not to go forward as called. It is not something that I have done lightly or with any delight. Instead, I have attempted to prayerfully weigh the evidence I have seen from many sources, including from those who you consider your comrades in arms, and to state my opinions as carefully and in the most Christian manner that I possibly can. I have leaned heavily on God's word and Sister White as well to understand what I am to do here.

> QUOTE
>
> I have one question for you. As time goes on things begin to unfold, how will you feel, deep in your heart and soul, if you find out that you have been wrong? If you find that allegations against 3abn are unfounded and this has been a bitter campaign to bring 3abn down, how will you truly feel knowing that you have been a very vocal player in whatever damage has been done to the ministry? By all of your post history, it seems it has never occured to you or any of the others that you could be wrong. Maybe you need not only to think about that, but to dwell on it a little. The word tells us there will be an accountability for hurting God's work and his workers. What a precarious position you and others are putting yourselves in with no information other than what you hear and what you read. If you are wrong, you could be risking your very soul.

If the evidence that has been presented and upon which I have reached my personal opinions proves to be wrong I WILL REJOICE!!! If it is proven that this has been an unfounded, bitter campaign to bring 3abn down, I will turn my attention to those who are proven to have waged such a campaign.

On the other hand, if what has been alleged against some of those who have been in leadership positions at 3abn is true as it appears to be, perhaps they should be concerned about the accountability they will have for hurting God's work, His workers and for supporting the abuse of some of the very people He views as precious enough to give His only Begotten Son to die to redeem.

And the bottom line is still that it was Biblically WRONG for the leadership at 3abn, who claim to be presenting the undiluted truth to the world, to try to resolve the issues between themselves and Bob Pickle/Gailon Joy with a lawsuit. That is diluting the message.

Posted by: mystery- man May 31 2007, 11:50 PM

Steffon,

I don't think you understand, at least I believe you don't. I have not really seen anyone attacking 3abn but rather the sin of the leaders. I am always confused when I hear statements like what if you are wrong as tho Danny and the like have not been given ample time to respond to the alligations. I am also very troubled by the references made (likening Danny to Moses and the like). If Danny stepped down and there was a change in the board it would seem to me that the mission of 3abn would still go forward since the majority of programs are taped sermons and the like. I truly believe that most of the individuals posting hear would like to see 3abn continue but not Danny and the rest that seem to uphold a contrary priciple to what they are preaching. If you would simply give a open mind and eye you could see that the people closest to Danny (step daughter) (ex-wife) (brother) are the ones in question and that have spoken.

People would be acting out of stupidity if they did not act and would be accountable for a worse sin than that alleged if they stood idly by. Steffon, I have nothing personally against Danny but you would have to be crazy not to be able to see there is a definite problem there. What is so terrible about Danny stepping down, in the case of Linda that was acceptable even with out her getting all the information as to why. Why not just give Danny 150.000 dollars and let him step away that would be fair wouldn't it?

What would be wrong with a change of leadership is not the Lord the one really in charge?

Posted by: sonshineonme Jun 1 2007, 12:03 AM

> QUOTE(mystery- man @ May 31 2007, 10:50 PM) ☐
>
> .....
> What would be wrong with a change of leadership is not the Lord the one really in charge?

First of all, the leadership needs to make up their mind what the "Lord has told (or showed) me....". If they are going to communicate to the masses "the Lord has told (or showed) me....", knowing that no one can really argue with what the Lord tells them, obviously, they can still do as they please, even if this means that the "Lord" has changed His mind (you know, tell one person one thing, and another the opposite). How do they know it's the Lord anyway (ut oh, did I say that?)

So, how much can the Lord really be in charge if free-will human beings make their own choices based on their own wants...The Lord will have His way, one way or another, but, if some are unwilling to be in God's will, God will just use another option. It's happened this way for 6000 years. JMO.

Posted by: Artiste Jun 1 2007, 12:05 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 31 2007, 09:21 PM)
>
> When the Lord puts a burden on one's heart it is dangerous not to go forward as called. It is not something that I have done lightly or with any delight. Instead, I have attempted to prayerfully weigh the evidence I have seen from many sources, including from those who you consider your comrades in arms, and to state my opinions as carefully and in the most Christian manner that I possibly can. I have leaned heavily on God's word and Sister White as well to understand what I am to do here.some of the very people He views as precious enough to give His only Begotten Son to die to redeem.

It is comforting to know that, taking the issues seriously, you have put in the effort indicated above.

It does seem at times that the latest tidbits of information are passed along, and how do you know where serious and constructive interest ends and gossip begins.

(Not that I would want to stop hearing about the tidbits...)

Posted by: mozart Jun 1 2007, 12:16 AM thanks so much maggie for taking all the time to transcribe that for us. i've done that before and i know how time consuming it can be. we appreciate you. God bless, Mo than

---

Posted by: steffan Jun 1 2007, 10:51 AM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 31 2007, 05:17 PM)
>
> It sounds like the the 3abn crisis is escalating. I notice he prayed that Danny would give God the credit when he fixes everything for them. There must be a lot of anxiety among Danny and his inner circle for JL to talk like that.

No sorry. That is just his pattern. Whenever he prays for anyone for physical healing, mental, family problems or a ministry he usually prays that whatever happens they would give God the credit, praise and glory. This was not a "unique" prayer for your speculation.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 1 2007, 11:11 AM

Uh, nice to see you Steffan. You are here just in time. Your attention is needed here>>>>>>>> http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=13633&st=60

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 1 2007, 09:51 AM)
>
> No sorry. That is just his pattern. Whenever he prays for anyone for physical healing, mental, family problems or a ministry he usually prays that whatever happens they would give God the credit, praise and > glory. This was not a "unique" prayer for your speculation.

Posted by: Skyhook Jun 1 2007, 04:35 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 1 2007, 11:51 AM)
>
> No sorry. That is just his pattern. Whenever he prays for anyone for physical healing, mental, family problems or a ministry he usually prays that whatever happens they would give God the credit, praise and glory. This was not a "unique" prayer for your speculation.

teffan, I figure that John L. and the others are not stupid regardless of other faults they might have, and can ee as well as anyone that with Danny there is an ego problem, a self promotion problem, and it is definately oticed even by his supporters. When one thinks of Danny, the word "humility" would never come to mind. ince you seem to know John L. I think you would be doing him a favor to explain to him that when he ddresses God in his prayers as "Father God" (which sounds a little odd anyway) it is half of the way neo agans address thier god. The complete phrase is "Father God, Mother God." Apparantly people in other hristian denominations have picked that habit up from the neo-pagans as well. That and the other aspects of he vocabulary that is used by 3abn's inner circle, do seem to indicate a strong spiritual influence from a ource that should be carefully avoided.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 1 2007, 05:00 PM

That is very strange, Skyhook. I have heard that phrase all my life in prayers to God. Since it is Neo pagans, and the people whom I've heard use the phrase wouldn't know a pagan if they walked upa nd slapped them, let alone how they pray, also that the name is quite appropriate an daccurate being that God is Our Heavenly Father, could it be that their phrasing is just an imitation of the original, as with satan's other counterfeits. If so, why should we let the thief keep his goods?

Now, I know we can find plenty things to say about the computer guy.......Oooops! JL, but in this one thing, I believe we have to let him address his Heavenly Father out of the depths of his own heart. It is something akin got Michal criticizing David's dance before the Ark. Definititely, do not want to incur God's wrath as she did. Do we?

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Jun 1 2007, 03:35 PM)
>
> Steffan, I figure that John L. and the others are not stupid regardless of other faults they might have, and can see as well as anyone that with Danny there is an ego problem, a self promotion problem, and it is definately noticed even by his supporters. When one thinks of Danny, the word "humility" would never come to mind.
> Since you seem to know John L. I think you would be doing him a favor to explain to him that when he addresses God in his prayers as "Father God" (which sounds a little odd anyway) it is half of the way neo pagans address thier god. The complete phrase is "Father God, Mother God." Apparantly people in other Christian denominations have picked that habit up from the neo-pagans as well. That and the other aspects of the vocabulary that is used by 3abn's inner circle, do seem to indicate a strong spiritual influence from a source that should be carefully avoided.

Posted by: mozart Jun 1 2007, 06:05 PM

skyhook is correct. here is more info on the subject.

http://www.angelfire.com/mo/PsychicOrSatan/Praying.html

i sent this info to danny and linda about 10yrs. ago when i noticed a couple of pastors & mollie using the term regularly. linda wrote me a nice long letter back and said "it just makes me truly sick to my stomach to think of people doing this"...
within a matter of months, i noticed that everyone on 3abn had stopped using the term. the only time i heard it on 3abn after that was on rare occassions when "non-regulars" would be on "live". that was up until Psychidelic Shelly showed up however! She and C.A. Murray usually use that term when they pray and of course Linda isn't there to say anything to them about it.

Guess it's time to send another letter.

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 1 2007, 05:00 PM)
>
> That is very strange, Skyhook. I have heard that phrase all my life in prayers to God. Since it is Neo pagans, and the people whom I've heard use the phrase wouldn't know a pagan if they walked upa nd slapped them, let alone how they pray, also that the name is quite appropriate an daccurate being that God is Our Heavenly Father, could it be that their phrasing is just an imitation of the original, as with satan's other counterfeits. If so, why should we let the thief keep his goods?
>
> Now, I know we can find plenty things to say about the computer guy.......Oooops! JL, but in this one thing, I believe we have to let him address his Heavenly Father out of the depths of his own heart. It is something akin got Michal criticizing David's dance before the Ark. Definititely, do not want to incur God's wrath as she did. Do we?

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 1 2007, 06:12 PM

Doesn't the Lord know those who are His? (2 Tim 2:19)

I would assume the other guy knows who are his, too.

IMO it's not the words one uses but the intention of the heart ....

... and if a person is using prayer to cover up wrongdoing, well ... (John 8:44)

Posted by: mozart Jun 1 2007, 06:17 PM

SE,
did you read the link above?

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Jun 1 2007, 06:12 PM)
>

> Doesn't the Lord know those who are His? (2 Tim 2:19)
>
> I would assume the other guy knows who are his, too.
>
> IMO it's not the words one uses but the intention of the heart ....
>
> ... and if a person is using prayer to cover up wrongdoing, well ... (John 8:44)

Posted by: awesumtenor Jun 1 2007, 06:23 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Jun 1 2007, 08:05 PM)
>
> skyhook is correct. here is more info on the subject.
>
> http://www.angelfire.com/mo/PsychicOrSatan/Praying.html
>
> i sent this info to danny and linda about 10yrs. ago when i noticed a couple of pastors & mollie using the term regularly. linda wrote me a nice long letter back and said "it just makes me truly sick to my stomach to think of people doing this"...
> within a matter of months, i noticed that everyone on 3abn had stopped using the term. the only time i heard it on 3abn after that was on rare occassions when "non-regulars" would be on "live". that was up until Psychidelic Shelly showed up however! She and C.A. Murray usually use that term when they pray and of course Linda isn't there to say anything to them about it.
> Guess it's time to send another letter.

skyhook is partly correct. The term Father God is ubiquitous in the african-american church where prayers tend to be directed to God the Father in the name of Jesus and does not stem from any new age or pagan roots. Caucasians have adopted the terminology in some cases as you say leaning on new age thinking... but in others, particularly among televangelists, because they are seeking to have more of a black "feel" to their praying... usually overlooking the fact that the way people pray in the black church is not an outward form to be emulated but instead is an outworking of their walk with Christ and that is not just how they pray publicly; it is how they pray...period whether alone of in corporate worship... and the overwhelming majority of them are oblivious to new age thinking... and have been praying that way long before new age paganism came to be; it's how they learned to pray, while listening to their mothers and grandmothers and the old prayer warriors from the church of their youth... many of whom were barely literate at best and whose prayers were the result of their pouring out their souls before God.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 1 2007, 06:32 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Jun 1 2007, 05:17 PM)
>
> SE,
> did you read the link above?

I went back and read it, yes, but I stand by my statement. "Father God" distinguishes Him from earthly fathers in the same way that "Heavenly Father" does, even if one appears in the Bible and one does not. Is anyone here willing to say that because a person gets the words wrong, God won't listen to their prayers? If so, what does that say about God?

I'm Caucasian, and I didn't know about the history of the phrase moving from black-to-white churches or Christians. All the people I know who use the phrase are white, and I've seen God answer prayers addressed to "Father God."

Mo ... did you look up my texts?

Posted by: Clay Jun 1 2007, 06:51 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Jun 1 2007, 07:23 PM)
>
> skyhook is partly correct. The term Father God is ubiquitous in the african-american church where prayers tend to be directed to God the Father in the name of Jesus and does not stem from any new age or pagan roots. Caucasians have adopted the terminology in some cases as you say leaning on new age thinking... but in others, particularly among televangelists, because they are seeking to have more of a black "feel" to their praying... usually overlooking the fact that the way people pray in the black church is not an outward form to be emulated but instead is an outworking of their walk with Christ and that is not just how they pray publicly; it is how they pray...period whether alone of in corporate worship... and the overwhelming majority of them are oblivious to new age thinking... and have been praying that way long before new age paganism came to be; it's how they learned to pray, while listening to their mothers and grandmothers and the old prayer warriors from the church of their youth... many of whom were barely literate at best and whose prayers were the result of their pouring out their souls before God.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

preach on preacha...... the person (or persons) who gave the intercessory prayer when I was growing up in church back in the day more often than not begin their prayer with Father God, or Father God, Creator of the Universe..... and there was no new age back then....

Posted by: princessdi Jun 1 2007, 06:57 PM

Ok???!! Somebody needs to let them know that the phrase Pre dates New Age.

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jun 1 2007, 04:51 PM)
>
> preach on preacha...... the person (or persons) who gave the intercessory prayer when I was growing up in church back in the day more often than not begin their prayer with Father God, or Father God, Creator of the Universe..... and there was no new age back then....

Posted by: Skyhook Jun 2 2007, 01:07 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 1 2007, 06:00 PM)
>
> That is very strange, Skyhook. I have heard that phrase all my life in prayers to God. Since it is Neo pagans, and the people whom I've heard use the phrase wouldn't know a pagan if they walked upa nd slapped them, let alone how they pray, also that the name is quite appropriate an daccurate being that God is Our Heavenly Father, could it be that their phrasing is just an imitation of the original, as with satan's other counterfeits. If so, why should we let the thief keep his goods?
>
> Now, I know we can find plenty things to say about the computer guy.......Oooops! JL, but in this one thing, I believe we have to let him address his Heavenly Father out of the depths of his own heart. It is > something akin got Michal criticizing David's dance before the Ark. Definititely, do not want to incur God's wrath as she did. Do we?

rincessdi, I have more information on that somewhere. Sylvia Brown the Medium psychic uses "Father God other God." the other version for neo-pagans is "Father God, Mother Earth."

have never personally heard Christians besides JL address God like that except for one that I can recall a ew years ago.
s for Michel, I don't know about God's wrath, but she shre incurred David's. He in effect made a nun out of er. He put her in a convent.

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon Jun 2 2007, 04:45 AM

Addressing God as a mother is unbiblical, except in a rare metaphorical sense. We are enjoined by Jesus Himself to address God as our Father. Does that mean that we can only address Him as "Our Father who art in Heaven?" Of course not. Does that mean that we cannot address Jesus or the Holy Spirit directly either? If we get caught up in pronouncing just the right name, or just the right formula, then we are no better than superstitious Catholics or Jehovah Witnesses. Is God our Father? Then there is nothing wrong with addressing Him as "Father God." Pagans have addressed their god in a fatherly way ever since Baal. Does that mean we should shun addressing the true God in a fatherly way. Of course not. Neo-pagans even address Jesus as 'the son.' Should we stop doing that? The use of the title 'Father God' is wide spread among African American Christians. Does that mean they are all unwittingly invoking the neo-pagan deity? Balderdash!
On a side note, my experience with the use of the title "Father God" in public intercessory prayer is that it is often used in a highly repetitious way, more than most appellations for God. Often every sentence has the title used. I am not sure how this practice began. Would we address any other person in this way? They would probably think we were crazy or tell us to stop. Why then do we address God this way? Is it possible that this practice originated in a superstitious way? If Jesus enjoined us to address God as Father, then doing so more often than normal will be even more efficacious? Or, is it because sometimes public prayer is not only coveted for its heartfelt sincerity and theological relevance, but also for its poetic and musical quality? (Father/God rhymes)

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 2 2007, 05:43 AM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Jun 2 2007, 12:07 AM)
>
> I have never personally heard Christians besides JL address God like that except for one that I can recall a few years ago.

n my circles for five or ten years there was a praise song making the rounds ...

ather God, just for today
elp me walk the narrow way ...

> QUOTE
>
> As for Michel, I don't know about God's wrath, but she shre incurred David's. He in effect made a nun out of her. He put her in a convent.

ow would you interpret 2 Sam 6:23, in context, then? Was that something David determined? What's this bout putting her in a convent? I was unable to find it in the Bible.

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ Jun 2 2007, 03:45 AM) ☐
>
> On a side note, my experience with the use of the title "Father God" in public intercessory prayer is that it is often used in a highly repetitious way, more than most appellations for God. Often every sentence has the title used. I am not sure how this practice began. Would we address any other person in this way? They would probably think we were crazy or tell us to stop. Why then do we address God this way? Is it possible that this practice originated in a superstitious way? If Jesus enjoined us to address God as Father, then doing so more often than normal will be even more efficacious?

I don't know, Voktar, I talk to my friends, Voktar, like this all the time, Voktar, just to let them know, Voktar, how much I care, Voktar ...

Yeah drives me bananas too.

Posted by: watchbird Jun 2 2007, 06:49 AM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ Jun 2 2007, 06:45 AM) ☐
>
> Addressing God as a mother is unbiblical, except in a rare metaphorical sense. We are enjoined by Jesus Himself to address God as our Father.

What we need to remember when we read scripture is that God met people where they were. And most likely the reason for not making more of God's mothering of his children has to do with the prominence of female deities in scriptural times. But God does liken himself to a mother at times... as he also likens himself to a father. But in Bible times, the father was the protector of the family or clan, and females were mere possessions. This undoubtedly restrained God from picturing himself as mother equally much as father. But the facts are that it was male and female together which were created in his image.... suggesting, not that God was bi-sexual, but that his attributes were represented by both male and female together.

If God were directly meeting today's "neopagan" views of the earth as "Mother-god" He would no doubt emphasize that the earth was NOT a god, nor the Mother of all... but that it was only a created object and HE was both the Creator of it and the genuine Mother of all.

But that is, of course, mere speculation. What is not mere speculation is the fact that some women have been abused so much by their earthly fathers, that they simply cannot relate to a God who is presented as being Father. Thus it is useful in those cases to allow ... and even encourage... them to look for the non-gender specific descriptors of God in scripture, and to even think of God as their Mother rather than only as Father.

> QUOTE
>
> Does that mean that we can only address Him as "Our Father who art in Heaven?" Of course not. Does that mean that we cannot address Jesus or the Holy Spirit directly either? If we get caught up in pronouncing just the right name, or just the right formula, then we are no better than superstitious Catholics or Jehovah Witnesses. Is God our Father? Then there is nothing wrong with addressing Him as "Father God." Pagans have addressed their god in a fatherly way ever since Baal. Does that mean we should shun addressing the true God in a fatherly way. Of course not. Neo-pagans even address Jesus as 'the son.' Should we stop doing that? The use of the title 'Father God' is wide spread among African American Christians. Does that mean they are all unwittingly invoking the neo-pagan deity? Balderdash!

As I mentioned above, pagans have also invoked female goddesses. And just as with many acts of worship enjoined in scripture, the act itself was often similar to that of the "nations around". The significant difference was in WHOM the act of worship addressed. The commands were to "have no other gods before me" and "do not bow down to them nor serve them". There is no command to not bow down to God because pagans bow down to their gods.

As for using terms adopted by new agers....

When I first began researching new age philosophies some 25 years ago, I was dismayed at the "new content" that I found in standard Christian terms. My first reaction was as has been expressed here on BSDA... "We should avoid using that term!"

I soon found, though, that nearly every term we as Christians used had been pre-empted by these various new age groups. So my next exclamation was, "They have stolen my vocabulary, so how shall I speak?!" For even words like "atonement"... especially our way of "explaining" the concept by saying "at-one-ment"... were widespread in new age and neo-pagan groups... with mystical pagan meanings of becoming actually "one" with their god.

So I came to the conclusion that, yes, we should be aware of new age and neo-pagan uses of Christian terms.... but not for the purpose of eliminating them from our vocabulary. Rather, it should be for a two-fold purpose.... on the one hand to make sure that we understand what new converts mean when they say the terms so as to sufficiently instruct them on the difference where we find they have understandings different from Christian meanings. and on the other hand to be alert to the context of the terms when they are used in Christian settings, so as to be able to recognize when the one using them is putting non-Christian meanings into them.

> QUOTE
>
> On a side note, my experience with the use of the title "Father God" in public intercessory prayer is that it is often used in a highly repetitious way, more than most appellations for God. Often every sentence has the title used. I am not sure how this practice began. Would we address any other person in this way? They would probably think we were crazy or tell us to stop. Why then do we address God this way? Is it possible that this practice originated in a superstitious way? If Jesus enjoined us to address God as Father, then doing so more often than normal will be even more efficacious? Or, is it because sometimes public prayer is not only coveted for its heartfelt sincerity and theological relevance, but also for its poetic and musical quality? (Father/God rhymes)

This may be one that you have noticed... but it is certainly not the only one that is used in excessively repetitious ways. Any title or name for God that is habitual with the speaker will appear multiple times in prayers made by those with the annoying habit of repeating that title of name after, before, and sometimes in the middle of every sentence. They simply need a little kindly instruction on constructing public prayers... rather than burdening them with guilt over the name for God with which they are most comfortable.

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 2 2007, 08:42 AM

I suppose we could make a few heads spin by pointing out that the Israelite sanctuary was identical in layout to pagan temples that had been around for hundreds of years before the Hebrews returned from Egypt and were established as a nation ...

I still remember in seminary when a guy from the archaeology department dropped that bomb in Sanctuary class ... there was dead silence for about 10 seconds.

Posted by: mozart Jun 2 2007, 04:54 PM

yeppers i did. i can't say that i agree it is the same thing tho'. if a person gets the words wrong, of course i don't think our Lord has a problem with it. God doesn't hold us accountable if we do not know better right? but, isn't it a good thing to discover truth about things picked up unknowingly? i would want to know.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Jun 1 2007, 05:32 PM) ☐

> I went back and read it, yes, but I stand by my statement. "Father God" distinguishes Him from earthly fathers in the same way that "Heavenly Father" does, even if one appears in the Bible and one does not. Is anyone here willing to say that because a person gets the words wrong, God won't listen to their prayers? If so, what does that say about God?
>
> I'm Caucasian, and I didn't know about the history of the phrase moving from black-to-white churches or Christians. All the people I know who use the phrase are white, and I've seen God answer prayers addressed to "Father God."
>
> Mo ... did you look up my texts?

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 2 2007, 06:13 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Jun 2 2007, 03:54 PM)
>
> yeppers i did. i can't say that i agree it is the same thing tho'. if a person gets the words wrong, of course i don't think our Lord has a problem with it. God doesn't hold us accountable if we do not know better right? but, isn't it a good thing to discover truth about things picked up unknowingly? i would want to know.

I think I agree at least in principle. God--the real one--may deign to answer prayers offered in ignorance by pagans praying to a god that doesn't exist, but if they come to know better, well ... I just don't think calling the Father of Jesus Father God falls into the category of paganism even if some pagans hijacked the term.

Since we're it bears saying that while John Lomocang can be fairly criticized for his role in the 3ABN scandal, how he addresses the Almighty, at least to me, isn't an issue. I'm just one guy though.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 2 2007, 06:47 PM

Skyhook, I believe by now you will ahve read Awsumtenor's short history of the phrase. The name Father God, used in prayer, predates New Age/NeoPagans, and Sylvia Brown. It has long been a way of addressing God, the Father in prayer in the black community. So if anyone has "borrowed" the term, it is the other groups. We all know that the enemy has acounterfeit for everything that is of God. this y et another one of his counterfeits.

Skyhook, that was God's wrath that Michal incurred. It was God who made her barren. No one would have known if it was a matter of David ceasing to have marital relations with her. But she more no children, in spite of ahving relations. That is how it is known she was barren. She was barren like Sarah.

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Jun 1 2007, 11:07 PM)
>
> princessdi, I have more information on that somewhere. Sylvia Brown the Medium psychic uses "Father God Mother God." the other version for neo-pagans is "Father God, Mother Earth."
>
> I have never personally heard Christians besides JL address God like that except for one that I can recall a few years ago.
> As for Michel, I don't know about God's wrath, but she shre incurred David's. He in effect made a nun out > of her. He put her in a convent.

Posted by: joyce Jun 2 2007, 06:50 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Jun 2 2007, 07:42 AM)
>
> I suppose we could make a few heads spin by pointing out that the Israelite sanctuary was identical in layout to pagan temples that had been around for hundreds of years before the Hebrews returned from Egypt and were established as a nation ...
>
> I still remember in seminary when a guy from the archaeology department dropped that bomb in Sanctuary class ... there was dead silence for about 10 seconds.

hat info is fascinating for sure. I never heard about that before in my whole life. Where could I find out more bout the pagan temples being like the sanctuary?

oes to show that just because the pagans do something, it does not make it necessarily evil.

oyce

Posted by: Skyhook Jun 2 2007, 07:56 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jun 2 2007, 07:47 PM)
>
> Skyhook, I believe by now you will ahve read Awsumtenor's short history of the phrase. The name Father God, used in prayer, predates New Age/NeoPagans, and Sylvia Brown. It has long been a way of addressing God, the Father in prayer in the black community. So if anyone has "borrowed" the term, it is the other groups. We all know that the enemy has acounterfeit for everything that is of God. this y et another one of his counterfeits.
>
> Skyhook, that was God's wrath that Michal incurred. It was God who made her barren. No one would have known if it was a matter of David ceasing to have marital relations with her. But she more no children, in spite of ahving relations. That is how it is known she was barren. She was barren like Sarah.

Vell, I guess its almost unanymous that JL can just keep praying the way he wants to.
couple of days ago one of our members showed me pictures of John and his wife taken when they were isiting at her home some years ago. One picture showed John riding a horse. He and his wife are very well hought of. I think the pictures were taken when he was pastoring at Weaverville.

think 2 Samuel 6:23 can reasonably be interpreted to imply that David put Michal aside. The text says that he "had no child" not that she was barren. Barren, as in "Sarah was barren" Gen. 11:30 means sterile-an nnability to conceive. It is possible to infer that David put Michal aside in the same way he did his 10 oncubines after his son Absalom "went in to his father's concubines" 2:Sam. 16:22.
And David came to his house at Jerusalem; and the king took the ten women his concubines, whom he had eft to keep house, and put them in ward, and fed them, but went not in unto them. So they were shut up nto the day of thier death, living in widowhood." 2 Samuel 20:3.
hat's what I meant by the convent remark.

The history of David and Michal's relationship is interesting in that David took her as his wife when she was actually married to someone else. 2Sam. 3:14-16

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 3 2007, 08:45 AM

> QUOTE(joyce @ Jun 2 2007, 05:50 PM)
>
> That info is fascinating for sure. I never heard about that before in my whole life. Where could I find out more about the pagan temples being like the sanctuary?
>
> Goes to show that just because the pagans do something, it does not make it necessarily evil.
>
> Joyce

Well, God meets people where they are. People in those days were used to thinking of their temples as "models of the universe," so God directed one to be made that would lay out the plan of salvation--the prime activity of the cosmos. There were some major differences--the Most Holy Places of Canaanite temples had idols in them, and if I remember right it was a lot easier to go before the false gods than before the Real One.

I tried googling it but didn't have much luck--getting the right search terms is probably the trick. Perhaps a good local library? A book on Palestinian archaeology is where I ran across the material in print--Canaanite architecture in particular. I think Egyptian temples are very similar too.

Posted by: beartrap Jun 3 2007, 11:24 AM

PBS recently aired a documentary on the history of God that showed footage of those pagan temples, and followed the parallels between the gods and worship of the "pagans" and the Hebrews. It was very interesting.

> QUOTE(joyce @ Jun 2 2007, 05:50 PM)
>
> That info is fascinating for sure. I never heard about that before in my whole life. Where could I find out more about the pagan temples being like the sanctuary?
>
> Goes to show that just because the pagans do something, it does not make it necessarily evil.
>
> Joyce

Posted by: inga Jun 3 2007, 11:36 AM

You might also want to consider several other possible options:

The pagan sacrifices were a counterfeit of the sacrifices that pointed forward to Christ. The sacrificial system was instituted at the gates of Eden. Thus all humanity would have this in their history.

It is even possible that there were earlier temples dedicated to the worship of the true God, though there's no evidence on which to base that assumption. I agree with SE that God meets people where they are. The Hebrew temple was not precisely like the pagan temples, but only so in approximate features.

All archeology can discover is the physical ruins of the temples, not a lot about how they were used. If a thousand years from now, someone dug up the ruins of our house and yours and found the dimensions to be similar, it would likely be a wrong deductions that those who lived in these houses were very similar, had similar habits, beliefs, etc. They'd even be wrong about assuming the same architect.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Jun 3 2007, 09:45 AM)
>
> Well, God meets people where they are. People in those days were used to thinking of their temples as "models of the universe," so God directed one to be made that would lay out the plan of salvation--the prime activity of the cosmos. There were some major differences--the Most Holy Places of Canaanite temples had idols in them, and if I remember right it was a lot easier to go before the false gods than before the Real One.
>
> I tried googling it but didn't have much luck--getting the right search terms is probably the trick. Perhaps a good local library? A book on Palestinian archaeology is where I ran across the material in print--Canaanite architecture in particular. I think Egyptian temples are very similar too.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 3 2007, 12:02 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jun 2 2007, 05:49 AM)
>
> What we need to remember when we read scripture is that God met people where they were. And most likely the reason for not making more of God's mothering of his children has to do with the prominence of female deities in scriptural times. But God does liken himself to a mother at times... as he also likens himself to a father. But in Bible times, the father was the protector of the family or clan, and females were mere possessions. This undoubtedly restrained God from picturing himself as mother equally much as father. But the facts are that it was male and female together which were created in his image.... suggesting, not that God was bi-sexual, but that his attributes were represented by both male and female together.
>
> If God were directly meeting today's "neopagan" views of the earth as "Mother-god" He would no doubt emphasize that the earth was NOT a god, nor the Mother of all... but that it was only a created object and HE was both the Creator of it and the genuine Mother of all.
>
> But that is, of course, mere speculation. What is not mere speculation is the fact that some women have been abused so much by their earthly fathers, that they simply cannot relate to a God who is presented as being Father. Thus it is useful in those cases to allow ... and even encourage... them to look for the non-gender specific descriptors of God in scripture, and to even think of God as their Mother rather than only as Father.
> As I mentioned above, pagans have also invoked female goddesses. And just as with many acts of worship enjoined in scripture, the act itself was often similar to that of the "nations around". The significant difference was in WHOM the act of worship addressed. The commands were to "have no other gods before me" and "do not bow down to them nor serve them". There is no command to not bow down to God because pagans bow down to their gods.
>
> As for using terms adopted by new agers....
>
> When I first began researching new age philosophies some 25 years ago, I was dismayed at the "new content" that I found in standard Christian terms. My first reaction was as has been expressed here on BSDA... "We should avoid using that term!"
>
> I soon found, though, that nearly every term we as Christians used had been pre-empted by these various new age groups. So my next exclamation was, "They have stolen my vocabulary, so how shall I speak?!" For even words like "atonement"... especially our way of "explaining" the concept by saying "at-one-> ment"... were widespread in new age and neo-pagan groups... with mystical pagan meanings of becoming actually "one" with their god.

>
> So I came to the conclusion that, yes, we should be aware of new age and neo-pagan uses of Christian terms.... but not for the purpose of eliminating them from our vocabulary. Rather, it should be for a two-fold purpose.... on the one hand to make sure that we understand what new converts mean when they say the terms so as to sufficiently instruct them on the difference where we find they have understandings different from Christian meanings. and on the other hand to be alert to the context of the terms when they are used in Christian settings, so as to be able to recognize when the one using them is putting non-Christian meanings into them.
> This may be one that you have noticed... but it is certainly not the only one that is used in excessively repetitious ways. Any title or name for God that is habitual with the speaker will appear multiple times in prayers made by those with the annoying habit of repeating that title of name after, before, and sometimes in the middle of every sentence. They simply need a little kindly instruction on constructing public prayers... rather than burdening them with guilt over the name for God with which they are most comfortable.

VB,
his is fascinating information! It seems that, perhaps, the gender of God issue falls into the same realm as he man's time vs. God's time issue - we measure ours in minutes, hours, days, etc. and God may not even ave clocks.

Posted by: mozart Jun 3 2007, 12:04 PM

good observation inga, as the world is always looking into the "which came first. the chicken or the egg" theory i suppose many think that the pagan temple came first.

> QUOTE(inga @ Jun 3 2007, 11:36 AM)
>
> You might also want to consider several other possible options:
>
> The pagan sacrifices were a counterfeit of the sacrifices that pointed forward to Christ. The sacrificial system was instituted at the gates of Eden. Thus all humanity would have this in their history.
>
> It is even possible that there were earlier temples dedicated to the worship of the true God, though there's no evidence on which to base that assumption. I agree with SE that God meets people where they are. The Hebrew temple was not precisely like the pagan temples, but only so in approximate features. All archeology can discover is the physical ruins of the temples, not a lot about how they were used. If a thousand years from now, someone dug up the ruins of our house and yours and found the dimensions to be similar, it would likely be a wrong deductions that those who lived in these houses were very similar, had similar habits, beliefs, etc. They'd even be wrong about assuming the same architect.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 3 2007, 12:08 PM

> QUOTE(beartrap @ Jun 3 2007, 10:24 AM)
>
> PBS recently aired a documentary on the history of God that showed footage of those pagan temples, and followed the parallels between the gods and worship of the "pagans" and the Hebrews. It was very interesting.

This was actually also airing in our area yesterday. I was amazed at the similarities between the two. It shouldn't come as a big surprise though, for the very reasons that Inga points out.

SE,

ITA! I doubt that the Egyptian high priests needed that rope around their ankles, LOL!

Posted by: SoulEspresso Jun 3 2007, 02:44 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jun 3 2007, 11:36 AM)
>
> You might also want to consider several other possible options:
>
> The pagan sacrifices were a counterfeit of the sacrifices that pointed forward to Christ. The sacrificial system was instituted at the gates of Eden. Thus all humanity would have this in their history.
>
> It is even possible that there were earlier temples dedicated to the worship of the true God, though there's no evidence on which to base that assumption. I agree with SE that God meets people where they are. The Hebrew temple was not precisely like the pagan temples, but only so in approximate features. All archeology can discover is the physical ruins of the temples, not a lot about how they were used. If a thousand years from now, someone dug up the ruins of our house and yours and found the dimensions to be similar, it would likely be a wrong deductions that those who lived in these houses were very similar, had similar habits, beliefs, etc. They'd even be wrong about assuming the same architect.

Of course. All of these are possibilities. We don't have archaeological evidence of Eden, but the textual evidence of Genesis indicates some strong sanctuary resemblences.

As for the Canaanite/Egyptian temples, it all depends on how much you rely on archaeological dating techniques. Some of these can be fairly reliable. Which came first is theologically irrelevant to me. You can interpret similarities as Satan's attempt to deceive people, or as attempts by pagans at reaching truth, without the advantage of revelation that God's people have.

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jun 3 2007, 12:08 PM)
>
> ITA! I doubt that the Egyptian high priests needed that rope around their ankles, LOL!

Ya know? Unlike the pagans' temples, in the Hebrew one Someone was actually in the Most Holy Place for a good many years!

Different subject, same general idea: If you want to make your head spin, think on this: how clearly would you get a picture of the Messiah's death and resurrection just by reading the Old Testament? Can you think of any clear prophecies that can't only be understood in retrospect?

You get a hint here, and a hint there, but the idea of a dying-and-resurrecting deity only comes through loud and clear in paganism. You can say that Satan originated the Osiris, Balder, etc myths to lead people away from the reality of Christ; or you can say that God permitted them to figure it out thus far so they could be prepared for hearing about the historical death and resurrection of the True God, God the Son, Jesus of Nazareth.

Posted by: Pickle Jun 8 2007, 09:03 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Jun 3 2007, 03:44 PM) ☐
>
> Different subject, same general idea: If you want to make your head spin, think on this: how clearly would you get a picture of the Messiah's death and resurrection just by reading the Old Testament? Can you think of any clear prophecies that can't only be understood in retrospect?

Abraham told Isaac that God would "provide" a lamb. A ram, not a lamb, died in the place of Isaac. Thus the ram must have symbolized the lamb that God would one day provide to die in our place.

The place where that happened was called Jehovah Jireh, for "in the mount of the Lord it shall be seen." The Hebrew for "seen" is the same as "provide." Thus it would be right there, on Mount Moriah where the temple was later built, where God would one day provide the lamb.

On that occasion with Abraham as when Noah got off the boat and when the destroying angel stopped short of reaching Jerusalem in the days of David, God showed mercy and grace prior to the sacrifice, but then poured out a huge blessing after the sacrifice was offered. This showed that blessings come only because of the merit of a sacrifice, but it also showed that the sacrifice of the ram by Abraham, the clean beasts by Noah, and the animals by David did not merit the blessings but only typified the merits of the lamb God would one day provide.

If you became poor and sold yourself and your land, you could be redeemed by a kinsman at any time, and if not, you were redeemed by God Himself at the jubilee, which suggests that God Himself would become our kinsman, if it really be true that only kinsmen can redeem.

Ahab sold himself to do evil, so slavery is used in the OT as a symbol of bondage to sin, from which a redeemer needs to buy us back. Now since God Himself sold His people into the hands of their oppressors when they would sell themselves to do evil, it appears that it is God that must buy them back.

The reason you could get your freedom and land back is because you had entered into a covenant with God. Because of that you received an inheritance of land. Sometimes that land is called God's inheritance, which points to the fact that the land was inherited from and given by God.

But in order to inherit something from someone, that someone has to die. And thus tied in with jubilee theology is the notion that the God who would become a man would also die that we might inherit the blessings of the covenant/testament/will.

If no kinsman stepped in to redeem you prior to the jubilee, God did it Himself. Twice in the latter part of Isaiah it refers to this when it pictures God wondering that there was no man, and then His own bringing salvation. The surrounding verses speak of a) God being our Redeemer, b) His people being the redeemed, c) the desolate land blossoming as the rose (thus being reclaimed as in the jubilee year), and d) God bringing vengeance upon the oppressors of His people.

On the idea of vengeance being tied to redemption, it is interesting to note that often salvation/saved/redeemed is tied together with the idea of vengeance upon the oppressors. Indeed, the Hebrew word translated "Redeemer" is also translated as "avenger" in the phrase "avenger of blood," and as "kinsman."

As far as how much of all this the people understood in OT times, consider the wise woman whom Joab used to convince David to bring Absalom home. One thing she said was that God makes a way to bring His banished back home. She evidently understood quite a lot.

Posted by: mozart Jun 8 2007, 11:06 PM

WOW Bob what a great post. i feel so blessed. We truly have an AWESOME GOD.
thank you so much for posting this.

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Jun 8 2007, 08:03 PM) ☐

Abraham told Isaac that God would "provide" a lamb. A ram, not a lamb, died in the place of Isaac. Thus the ram must have symbolized the lamb that God would one day provide to die in our place.

The place where that happened was called Jehovah Jireh, for "in the mount of the Lord it shall be seen." The Hebrew for "seen" is the same as "provide." Thus it would be right there, on Mount Moriah where the temple was later built, where God would one day provide the lamb.

On that occasion with Abraham as when Noah got off the boat and when the destroying angel stopped short of reaching Jerusalem in the days of David, God showed mercy and grace prior to the sacrifice, but then poured out a huge blessing after the sacrifice was offered. This showed that blessings come only because of the merit of a sacrifice, but it also showed that the sacrifice of the ram by Abraham, the clean beasts by Noah, and the animals by David did not merit the blessings but only typified the merits of the lamb God would one day provide.

If you became poor and sold yourself and your land, you could be redeemed by a kinsman at any time, and if not, you were redeemed by God Himself at the jubilee, which suggests that God Himself would become our kinsman, if it really be true that only kinsmen can redeem.

Ahab sold himself to do evil, so slavery is used in the OT as a symbol of bondage to sin, from which a redeemer needs to buy us back. Now since God Himself sold His people into the hands of their oppressors when they would sell themselves to do evil, it appears that it is God that must buy them back.

The reason you could get your freedom and land back is because you had entered into a covenant with God. Because of that you received an inheritance of land. Sometimes that land is called God's inheritance, which points to the fact that the land was inherited from and given by God.

But in order to inherit something from someone, that someone has to die. And thus tied in with jubilee theology is the notion that the God who would become a man would also die that we might inherit the blessings of the covenant/testament/will.

If no kinsman stepped in to redeem you prior to the jubilee, God did it Himself. Twice in the latter part of Isaiah it refers to this when it pictures God wondering that there was no man, and then His own bringing salvation. The surrounding verses speak of a) God being our Redeemer, His people being the redeemed, c) the desolate land blossoming as the rose (thus being reclaimed as in the jubilee year), and d) God bringing vengeance upon the oppressors of His people.

On the idea of vengeance being tied to redemption, it is interesting to note that often salvation/saved/redeemed is tied together with the idea of vengeance upon the oppressors. Indeed, the Hebrew word translated "Redeemer" is also translated as "avenger" in the phrase "avenger of blood," and as "kinsman."

As far as how much of all this the people understood in OT times, consider the wise woman whom Joab used to convince David to bring Absalom home. One thing she said was that God makes a way to bring His banished back home. She evidently understood quite a lot.

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ AToday NewBreak Article on 3ABN

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 12 2007, 01:49 PM

Just got this in my email - I went to get the link off the web so I could just post it here, but I don't see they have it yet (or I can't find it) listed on the website as it is a "newsbreak" and will be there. So, forgive the long post, if I should do this a different way (Calvin, Clay, Di) let me know. It's worth the read.

****
**
ADVENTIST NEWS Round up

Tommy Shelton Retires from 3ABN
Virginia church meets to address allegations of sexual misconduct

By Edwin D. Schwisow, for ATNewsbreak (09 February 2007).

Facing multiple allegations of sexual misconduct, Tommy Shelton, production manager at Three Angels Broadcasting Network (3ABN) and brother of 3ABN President Danny Shelton, announced his retirement in a December 31, 2006 broadcast of 3ABN Live. Although not owned or operated by the Seventh-day Adventist Church, many of 3ABN's employees and volunteers are Adventist Church members. In a telephone interview with a representative of Adventist Today, Danny Shelton confirmed that his brother had left the employ of 3ABN for "health reasons."
Virginia Church Allegations

Tommy Shelton's retirement comes just four weeks after the Community Church of God in Dunn Loring, Virginia, held a December 3, 2006, business meeting to address accusations made by several young men that Tommy had molested them while he was pastor of the church. Following the meeting, church leaders read a carefully-worded statement, apprising the congregation of the accusations against Shelton and how they, as parishioners, should best respond. The church leaders prepared the statement under the advisement of their insurance carrier, Brotherhood Mutual, which had become involved after a young man came to the church with allegations that Tommy, during his pastorate, had molested him. The young was a minor when he says was abused. He is the third in recent months to come forward to Community Church of God leaders, accusing Shelton of making inappropriate sexual advances, according to Glenn Dryden, current pastor of the church.

A History of Allegations

This is not the first time Tommy has been accused of inappropriate sexual activity with underage males. During much of the 1980s, Tommy pastored the Ezra Church of God in his hometown of West Frankfort, Illinois. While there, he worked closely with a 12-grade school, whose property bordered the church. During this time, a teenage boy, who was a student at the school, accused Tommy of soliciting him for a sexual relationship. According to Dryden, who pastored the West Frankfort church in the 1990s, three additional boys also made similar allegations, prompting civil authorities to become involved. Following a police investigation, Tommy was not charged with a crime, but the allegations were serious enough to prompt Church of God officials to intervene. In a letter dated October 25, 1985, the General Assembly of the Church of God in Illinois revoked Tommy's ordination. They listed their reasons for doing so as "improper counseling procedures," "numerous charges of misconduct," a criminal investigation into sexual abuse charges by the local police, and controversy surrounding Tommy's ministry and lifestyle. Ultimately Tommy's lack of cooperation in the disciplinary process, Dryden says, led the Church of God in Illinois to drop the Ezra Church of God from its roster of affiliated congregations.

In the early 1990s, further allegations of sexual misconduct were brought against Tommy and in 1991 Tommy resigned as pastor of the Ezra Church of God, citing health concerns.

Allegations at 3ABN

Shortly after Tommy resigned his post as pastor, Danny invited him to join 3ABN as production manager. During his time at 3ABN, a member of Tommy's production staff, who was in his early twenties at the time, says Tommy made a sexual advance toward him. Shortly after what he calls his "uncomfortable situation," the former employee says he confronted Danny Shelton with what had happened. In response, Danny assured the young man that he would no longer have to answer to Tommy and that 3ABN administrators would "work things out."

In late 1992, Elder Bj Christensen, then president of the Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, approached two members of Danny's family, asking them to make a statement in regard to improprieties they had observed in Tommy's behavior. Elder Christiansen transcribed the statement and brought it to the attention of the 3ABN board, on which he then sat.

At a subsequent 3ABN board meeting, Tommy was terminated as production manager. Shortly thereafter, 3ABN outfitted him with a touring bus and sent him as a 3ABN representative, giving gospel concerts and promoting 3ABN to cable companies throughout the United States.

Connections in Virginia

During the time he was promoting 3ABN, he visited the Community Church of God in Dunn Loring. After learning that Tommy had experience with media ministry, the church offered him a position as a media consultant. Later he was hired as assistant pastor for media ministries. When the church's senior pastor left for missionary service in March 1996, Tommy was named as his replacement.

Further allegations of sexual misconduct surfaced during his tenure in Dunn Loring, and in 2000, members of Tommy's own family confronted him about what they saw as inappropriate activities between him and his adopted son. His family also shared their concerns about his relationship with an underage male from the church.

In the face of the new allegations, Tommy once again announced he was having medical problems in 2002 and resigned as pastor of the Community Church of God, moving with his wife and family to Marion, Kentucky, an hour and a half drive from 3ABN. Later that year, Tommy was hired as 3ABN tape and masters archive librarian, without the formal approval of the 3ABN board of directors, a group that had fired him just 10 years before.

Pastor Contacts 3ABN

In the spring of 2003, Dryden, then pastor of the Ezra Church of God in West Frankfort, penned a letter outlining his concerns about Tommy Shelton. He distributed it to a handful of leaders of Church of God camp meeting associations, whom he knew, in the past, had invited Tommy to speak at their church meetings.

He later sent the letter to Dr. Walter Thompson, 3ABN board chairman, advising him that "at least six boys in our community were sexually abused" by Tommy. He told Thompson that Tommy's ordination was not in good standing with either the Church of God in Illinois or Virginia and offered to give Thompson the phone numbers of the family members of Tommy's purported victims so that 3ABN could follow up on the situation.

Thompson spoke with Dryden and then brought the letter to the attention of Danny Shelton. Danny brushed the letter off as 30-year old news, attributing it to a long-standing feud between Dryden and Tommy. After meeting with Danny, Thompson brought the letter to the full 3ABN board at its June 2003 meeting. The board, due to its belief that the events had happened many years before; Tommy's assurance that he had attempted to make things right; and the fact that no legal action had been taken against Tommy, voted to allow Tommy's relationship with 3ABN to continue.

Further Allegations

In the Spring of 2004, Roger W. Clem, a 32 year-old man who had attended the Ezra Church of God during his teenage years, released a letter he had written to Tommy, accusing him of sexual abuse. In his letter, which he later posted on the Internet, Clem claims Tommy had ruined 15 years of his life. He says that he is sick of Tommy's manipulative behavior, including his claims of illness to divert attention away from allegations of sexual misconduct.

On June 4, 2004, Linda Shelton signed a Separation Agreement with 3ABN, ending her employment with the ministry. Later that year, Tommy moved into her old office at 3ABN and assumed her role as programming director. During his time at 3ABN he traveled with his brother to 3ABN gatherings around the world, many times playing the piano as Danny sang. He also began playing the piano for the Kids Time show on 3ABN.

Late in 2006, Duane Klem, Roger's brother, shared with close associates that Tommy had molested him, as well. In a statement released in January 2007, Klem accused Tommy of initiating a sexual relationship with him when he was 19, at times using 3ABN buildings for their assignations. Klem says the growing number of allegations against Tommy prompted him to come forward with his claims.

Adventist Investigators

Much of the pressure that Tommy Shelton now faces has come from the efforts of a small, informal network of Seventh-day Adventist individuals. Many in the group categorize themselves as conservative Adventists, a constituency 3ABN has long relied on for key support. For the past five months, this unpaid volunteer group has investigated a number of allegations against Danny Shelton and 3ABN. Some they have found to be true, while others have proved to be false. Doing their work primarily via telephone and e-mail, the group has interviewed dozens of people who have had connections with 3ABN and the Shelton family over the last 20 years.

Two members of the network—Gailon Arthur Joy, a loan officer trainer from Sterling, Massachusetts, and Bob Pickle, a webmaster and Adventist apologist from Halstad, Minnesota—have posted the findings of their investigation on the Internet. Both men espouse belief in a historical, conservative Adventist theology, including the traditional church teachings about 1844 and Ellen G. White, and say that before starting their investigation, they had positive feelings toward 3ABN and its ministry.

"3ABN was an integral part of our home TV viewing for more than a decade. My family members have contributed heavily to 3ABN (financially)," says Joy. Joy spearheaded an effort as late as May 2006 to pass out over 6,000 copies of Danny Shelton's book Ten Commandments Twice Removed.

Joy and Pickle say they only began investigating when concerned Adventist friends urged them to help them verify or dismiss rumors of misconduct at the 3ABN. As they conducted their initial investigation, both men became impressed that what was happening behind the scenes at 3ABN didn't mesh with the rosy picture they had seen on their television screens.

In late 2006, Joy, who has experience as a legal clerk, was asked by Linda Shelton to represent her as she negotiated the ground rules for an inquiry by Adventist-laymen's Services and Industries (ASI) into the propriety of her divorce from Danny Shelton. Harold Lance, a retired attorney and former president of the self-supporting organization, Outpost Centers Incorporated, led the inquiry. In early 2007, the ASI-brokered negotiations fell apart early, due in part to the inability of the two parties to reach an understanding on the manner or scope of the inquiry. Lance, who had been asked to head up the inquiry by the ASI Executive Committee in October, summarized the dissolution of the inquiry in an e-mail statement on January 5.

"For approximately three months ASI has deeply considered its' involvement in issues involving 3ABN in three special Executive Committee meetings called for that purpose and multiple other contacts." Lance wrote. "It now appears that it is not appropriate for ASI to be involved."

Joy has registered a website at www.save3abn.com that contains documents and statements from various sources involved in the group's investigation of Tommy Shelton. As of press time, the site had received more than 1,900 hits.

Joy and Pickle have a growing list of e-mail contacts, many in church leadership, to whom they plan to send periodic communication, chronicling what they see as areas in which 3ABN must be held to higher accountability.

Adventist Today offered Dr. Thompson, in his capacity as 3ABN Board Chairman, an opportunity to confirm, disconfirm, or provide additional information concerning the accuracy of the parts of this report that cover areas about which he had direct, personal knowledge.

In an e-mail to the Executive Editor of Adventist Today, he stated that in view of a conversation that he had had with Danny Shelton, he would "withhold further comment at present." [To comment or inquire about this story, e-mail AToday]

Southern Illinois Hometown City Leaders Laud Danny Shelton's Support

By Edwin D. Schwisow, for ATNewsbreak (09 February 2007).

Danny Shelton, 3ABN president, is very willing to lend a helping hand financially to the civic needs of his boyhood town of West Frankfort, Illinois, say several prominent people there. "If our city had a meaningful project we needed to have a joint relationship financially with Three Angels, I anticipate that wouldn't be a problem," says Larry Warren, mayor of West Frankfort.

Warren goes on to describe how Shelton used 3ABN to promote the Roan Center, a home for abused women and children. On a November 24, 2006, broadcast of 3ABN Today, Shelton interviewed Sara Bond, one of the Center's founders about mission of the organization and asked his viewers to send in donations to help Bond accomplish her goals. Shelton also pledged $5,000 from 3ABN to help Bond with her project. Bond recently thanked 3ABN in an article published in the February 1 edition of the West Frankfort Press American. In the article, she said that the broadcast had raised $4,490 so far and that she continued to receive consistent donations from 3ABN viewers. "We have had donations from Oregon, California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arizona," Bond said in the article.

Franklin Community High School (FCHS) in West Frankfort has received thousands of dollars from Shelton as well according to Richard Glodich, athletic director at the school. "Danny Shelton and 3ABN are an asset to our school. There's no doubt about it," says Glodich. "Any time we're in need of help, Mr. Shelton is always willing to help." Glodich estimates 3ABN has donated $30,000 to the athletic department of FCHS alone during the 10 years he's been athletic director. He says that Shelton donated several thousand dollars to the school to help modernize their weight room and donated money towards athletic fields at the local junior high school. 3ABN donated close to $10,000 in prizes for the school's Red Ribbon Week, Glodich says. He says they brought cameramen out to videotape the event so it could be publicized locally.

According to Glodich, it was a donation by 3ABN and Shelton that was the catalyst for a peer-mentoring program to begin on campus. Dubbed Alpha groups, the program enables juniors and seniors at the school to spend an hour each Thursday visiting with students in the freshman and sophomore classes, building friendships and urging them to stay clear of alcohol and drugs.

Danny Shelton is also a regular at FCHS Cardinal athletic events, especially men's' varsity basketball games Glodich says. "Oh yeah, we see him all the time, probably at least 10 times a year, he's here for games."

For many in West Frankfort, Danny Shelton is a man to admire. His philanthropy and personal "rags to riches" story of establishing 3ABN has endeared him to many admirers in the town his hometown. Interestingly many in the small city of Thompsonville have very different sentiments. Their viewpoints will be explored in an upcoming edition of Adventist Today.

Posted by: Clay Feb 12 2007, 01:54 PM

so I guess now they are going to sue AToday?

Posted by: erik Feb 12 2007, 02:04 PM

[Looks like the church is starting to move to provide some leadership on this topic.

Praise the lord.

erik

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 12 2007, 11:54 AM)
>
> so I guess now they are going to sue AToday?

I was wondering the same thing

Posted by: Grace Feb 12 2007, 02:13 PM

I'm glad to see leaders of our church waking up!

Posted by: Observer Feb 12 2007, 02:15 PM

> QUOTE(Grace @ Feb 12 2007, 01:13 PM)
>
> I'm glad to see leaders of our church waking up!

Where?

The citation came from the Adventist Today website. AT is independent. It is not comprised of SDA leaders. They are independent, just like us!

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Feb 12 2007, 02:25 PM

Gregory,

I would think there would be one difference.

The group they refer to, I am going to assume, would be Gailon A. Joy, Bob Pickle, and yourself. They identify you as "conservative" in your theological leanings. They also identify 3ABN viewership and financial supports as being largely "conservative."

On the other hand, isn't AT considered to be rather liberal in their theology and editorial direction? Don't most church leaders view them as being left of the old Spectrum publication?

- FHB

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 12 2007, 04:15 PM)
>
> Where?
>
> The citation came from the Adventist Today website. AT is independent. It is not comprised of SDA leaders. They are independent, just like us!

Posted by: erik Feb 12 2007, 02:28 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 12 2007, 12:15 PM)
>
> Where?
>
> The citation came from the Adventist Today website. AT is independent. It is not comprised of SDA leaders. They are independent, just like us!

Well thank you for that information, maybe the leadership will still act while there is time to act.

Erik

Posted by: Clay Feb 12 2007, 02:37 PM

> QUOTE
>
> Franklin Community High School (FCHS) in West Frankfort has received thousands of dollars from Shelton as well according to Richard Glodich, athletic director at the school. "Danny Shelton and 3ABN are an asset to our school. There's no doubt about it," says Glodich. "Any time we're in need of help, Mr. Shelton is always willing to help." Glodich estimates 3ABN has donated $30,000 to the athletic department of FCHS alone during the 10 years he's been athletic director. He says that Shelton donated several thousand dollars to the school to help modernize their weight room and donated money towards athletic fields at the local junior high school. 3ABN donated close to $10,000 in prizes for the school's Red Ribbon Week, Glodich says. He says they brought cameramen out to videotape the event so it could be publicized locally.

so 3abn has enough money that they can give it away.... interesting... to the public school system no less....

Posted by: lurker Feb 12 2007, 03:11 PM

That was my first thought too. The widow's mite going for atheletic equipment and to provide good p.r. for Danny Shelton and for 3ABN! I know he is a sports fan but that is not what people think ABN is going to with their offerings, some even send tithe money and it goes for this? And they know some of the money they get is tithe money. I think it is a very fair article though and better to come out there than evening news.

Posted by: Grace Feb 12 2007, 03:17 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 12 2007, 09:15 PM)
>
> Where?

> The citation came from the Adventist Today website. AT is independent. It is not comprised of SDA leaders. They are independent, just like us!

h! I didn't know. So the waking up has not happened yet. But it has to come. And I'm glad for the article.

Posted by: Observer Feb 12 2007, 03:23 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Feb 12 2007, 01:25 PM)
>
> Gregory,
>
> I would think there would be one difference.
>
> The group they refer to, I am going to assume, would be Gailon A. Joy, Bob Pickle, and yourself. They identify you as "conservative" in your theological leanings. They also identify 3ABN viewership and financial supports as being largely "conservative."
>
> On the other hand, isn't AT considered to be rather liberal in their theology and editorial direction? Don't most church leaders view them as being left of the old Spectrum publication?
>
> - FHB

consider myself to be a middle of the road SDA. Some of my views may seem to be conservative, and some nay seem to be liberal. But, I think I am a moderate.

n my opinion, many people consider Adventist Today and Spectrum to be liberal. I do not think that they onsider AT to be "left" of Spectrum.

ver a period of time both, in my opinon, Adventist Today, and Spectrum have take a complementary role hat is not in conflict with each other. AT focuses more on current news. Spectrum focuses more on a cholarly discussion of issues within Adventistm.

IOTE: I subscribe to AT and Spectrum. I have subscribed for years to Perspective Digest, and am now ubscribing to the Journal of the Adventist Theological Society. If you recognize those, you know that they go rom conservative to liberal. But, again, I consider myself to be a moderate.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 12 2007, 05:09 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 12 2007, 12:54 PM)
>
> so I guess now they are going to sue AToday?

r at least they may receive the warning letter from the Minnesota Fourteen.

Posted by: gardener Feb 12 2007, 05:44 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 12 2007, 03:37 PM)
>
> so 3abn has enough money that they can give it away.... interesting... to the public school system no less....

I for one am not happy to hear this. I remember my mother before she died a couple years ago would send 3ABN a good portion of her measly monthly check from the government. Truely a "Widows Mite". Now to find out where it may have been going makes me sick to my stomach. I am glad she is not alive to hear all this. I quit giving soon after Linda was ousted.

Posted by: watchbird Feb 12 2007, 09:25 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 12 2007, 02:54 PM)
>
> so I guess now they are going to sue AToday?

They were threatened even before they came out with the article. You can be sure that they have fully documented everything they have printed.

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Feb 12 2007, 03:25 PM)
>
> Gregory,
>
> I would think there would be one difference.
>
> The group they refer to, I am going to assume, would be Gailon A. Joy, Bob Pickle, and yourself. They identify you as "conservative" in your theological leanings. They also identify 3ABN viewership and financial supports as being largely "conservative."
>
> On the other hand, isn't AT considered to be rather liberal in their theology and editorial direction? Don't most church leaders view them as being left of the old Spectrum publication?
> - FHB

Conservative or liberal has next to nothing to do with questions of morals and fiscal responsibility ... and honesty. Conservatives and liberals may disagree on such things as what happened in 1844... but they stand shoulder to shoulder when it comes to basic integrity, decency, honesty, fairness, and handling funds in a manner that is congruent with their mission and publicly stated purposes for their gathering of funds.

Posted by: justme Feb 12 2007, 11:47 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Feb 12 2007, 11:25 PM)
>
> They were threatened even before they came out with the article. You can be sure that they have fully documented everything they have printed.
> Conservative or liberal has next to nothing to do with questions of morals and fiscal responsibility ... and honesty. Conservatives and liberals may disagree on such things as what happened in 1844... but they > stand shoulder to shoulder when it comes to basic integrity, decency, honesty, fairness, and handling funds in a manner that is congruent with their mission and publicly stated purposes for their gathering of funds.

WIDOW'S' Mites" indeed! Truly sickening to think of how they are used. It has been long known that Danny an get by with anything in that county, because he has the sheriff just where he wants him.

bout the donations: Anyone who has been to a 3ABN rally and who has watched Danny has seen him be pproached by individuals who hand Danny an envelope. Danny usually asks, "Do you need a receipt for his?" and if the answer is "NO" it goes into Danny's pants pocket. If the answer is "Yes, please, .. thank you". e refers them to someone who will make out a receipt. 3ABN has been saying that the "Receipts are more han ever no that Linda is gone" because of the need to write more receipts to keep records looking better ow that so many eyes are asking to look. Maybe the dollar amount is getting smaller but the number of ecorded contributions is going up.

know of no one who was giving to 3ABN and is still giving. I know of many who have moved their ontributions to "The HOPE Channel" instead.

anny has been ultra-upset at both Adventist Today and BSDA for what is reported about 3ABN. Danny has penly attacked AT on his platforms across the country.

Liberal? / conservative? Which would apply to Jesus during His ministry. (Please, Don't get into it here but hink about that He was accused of both, it depends on whether they were Pharisees or Gentiles.)

T is composed largely of students and other in Southern California according to one conversation I had with hem. They answer to no one, but try to offer a view that you probably wont find anywhere else. And yes they re fussy about their sources. That's probably why it has taken so long to hear about 3ABN again since the iring of Linda.

eep on asking questions? lots of them? Let Danny and Mollie and Hal know that they are under the icroscope. It still looks like Danny is the "Buffoon" along the way. It would appear that Hal and Mollie have een pushing the buttons and Danny sings the tunes. Danny actually believes what Hal and Mollie and Shellie nd Kuzma tell him, "You're the chosen one". Chosen to be the "fall guy" for all the rest of the stuff. Danny ctually thought he could cover up for Tommy by putting him "on the road for 3ABN" and then hiring and ehiring Tommy behind everybody's back. It's tempting to be "loyal" to family, but the family is unhappy with ommy as well as with Danny.

Run, Brandy, run!"(Too late).

anny believes that Christians are not supposed to sue each other, until it's someone HE wants to sue. Think f how much discovery and documentation would come out of the woodwork in these lawsuits. Support would rop like a rock if the public saw this in the open.

he church leaders, as did ASI, will take a step back from this. They will neither support nor condemn 3ABN. hey will, however side against child abuse as an issue, but they will steer clear from condemning Danny and ABN. I dare say the church leaders know all that we know and more. They, too have their "snoops" and ricks.

et's remember that every one of these individuals in question is a soul that Jesus died for and they need our rayers. They need to listen to God's spirit and humble their hearts and repent.

ray without ceasing, OK!?

Posted by: Whtz Happenin Feb 13 2007, 07:07 AM

notworkir Has anyone been able to load www.atoday.com?

Posted by: Observer Feb 13 2007, 09:04 AM

> QUOTE(Whtz Happenin @ Feb 13 2007, 06:07 AM)
>
> notworkir Has anyone been able to load www.atoday.com?

It is down.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 13 2007, 10:28 AM

> QUOTE(Whtz Happenin @ Feb 13 2007, 08:07 AM)
>
> notworkir Has anyone been able to load www.atoday.com?

Too many hits overloading their bandwidth?

nw

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 13 2007, 11:56 AM

It's back up now.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: watchbird Feb 16 2007, 01:59 PM

There was a time lag of several days before the article that was sent out to those who had signed up for Adventist Today email news letters was posted to the website. The "NewsBreak" article has been posted now, and may be accessed there as well as read in the first post of this thread.

Headlines are:

Tommy Shelton Retires from 3ABN
Virginia church meets to address allegations of sexual misconduct

By Edwin D. Schwisow, for ATNewsbreak (09 February 2007).

http://www.atoday.com/email/2007/02/12/

Since this is a much more concisely written account than those which have appeared in our forum, or which have been posted on the Save3ABN.com website, this would be a very good article to use for sharing... either by giving out the url, or by printing and sharing hard copy.

Posted by: Grace Feb 16 2007, 02:04 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Feb 16 2007, 08:59 PM)
> There was a time lag of several days before the article that was sent out to those who had signed up for Adventist Today email news letters was posted to the website. The "NewsBreak" article has been posted now, and may be accessed there as well as read in the first post of this thread.
>
> Headlines are:
>
> Tommy Shelton Retires from 3ABN
> Virginia church meets to address allegations of sexual misconduct
>
> By Edwin D. Schwisow, for ATNewsbreak (09 February 2007).
>
> http://www.atoday.com/email/2007/02/12/
>
> Since this is a much more concisely written account than those which have appeared in our forum, or which have been posted on the Save3ABN.com website, this would be a very good article to use for sharing... either by giving out the url, or by printing and sharing hard copy.

The link works perfectly. Thank you, WB!

Happy Sabbath everybody!

Grace

Posted by: no_cults Feb 19 2007, 11:18 PM

> QUOTE(gardener @ Feb 12 2007, 06:44 PM)
>
> I for one am not happy to hear this. I remember my mother before she died a couple years ago would send 3ABN a good portion of her measly monthly check from the government. Truely a "Widows Mite". Now to find out where it may have been going makes me sick to my stomach. I am glad she is not alive to hear all this. I quit giving soon after Linda was ousted.

Well, my mom gave pretty nearly all of her savings (via irrevokable trust) because she wanted to "help spread the word". When I say "all".... I would say 98% of what she had accumulated after working at Brandoms until she was 72 yrs old. Of course, if she had consulted any of her children, or her SDA pastor son-in-law, they would have advised against this. Now, we are all wondering what will happen to the annuity cks should 3abn fold or change ownership.

Money for athletic equipment and money for horses is not what she had in mind, I am sure.

Posted by: ida Feb 20 2007, 02:28 AM

> QUOTE(no_cults @ Feb 20 2007, 05:18 AM)
>
> Well, my mom gave pretty nearly all of her savings (via irrevokable trust) because she wanted to "help spread the word". When I say "all".... I would say 98% of what she had accumulated after working at Brandoms until she was 72 yrs old. Of course, if she had consulted any of her children, or her SDA pastor son-in-law, they would have advised against this. Now, we are all wondering what will happen to the annuity cks should 3abn fold or change ownership.
>
> Money for athletic equipment and money for horses is not what she had in mind, I am sure.

She must have been honest in her desire to spread the gospel. But can we call it honesty to use the funds for a puclic high school athletic eqipment? How can we help others understand it may be better supporting our own church?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 20 2007, 10:35 AM

> QUOTE(ida @ Feb 20 2007, 01:28 AM)
>
> She must have been honest in her desire to spread the gospel. But can we call it honesty to use the funds for a puclic high school athletic eqipment? How can we help others understand it may be better supporting our own church?

ida,
Danny Shelton said, on the Behind the Scenes program aired Thursday, February 15, 2007 and as transcribed by Ralph:

> QUOTE
>
> Danny For crying out loud what are we supposed to do as Christians? Right? That is what we are supposed to do. Help those who can't help themselves, but they want to put a twist on things so it looks like....people will say, well I'm sending money for the three angels messages but they are giving it to local sports or athletes or what have you. Our board members alone have given tremendous amounts of money. At one time one board member gave $60,000 for me to distribute in the community to help these causes. And they are all non-profit causes so everything is legal that we did but see they don't look at the other side.

You can see the rest of what Ralph has transcribed of the second hour here:
http://mypage.direct.ca/r/rseland/private/second.html

Posted by: Bystander Feb 20 2007, 12:34 PM

> QUOTE(ida @ Feb 20 2007, 02:28 AM) ☐
>
> She must have been honest in her desire to spread the gospel. But can we call it honesty to use the funds for a puclic high school athletic eqipment? How can we help others understand it may be better supporting our own church?

The giving to the community was explained on the live. Maybe I can make it clearer. Because their is many astute business people on the 3abn board, they believe it is very important to have community support. For this reason certain ones that can afford to have given donations specifically earmarked for community projects. These donations are in addition to, what they give to support 3abn. Ida, if you are seeking truth with an open mind, you will find that most talk about finances are always twisted to insinuate that the hard earned money that someone gives is going to pay for all sorts of things it shouldn't. Not true. The accountability factor is higher than usual for a non profit organization. There are 7 financial workers, accountants, a chief financial officer with a very impressive resume, there are outside auditors and the 3abn board goes over the financial statements at every meeting.
This board takes anything and everything said and puts the "I heard", I think, It appears, and It seems spin on it with no facts to back it up. Also, if you will notice, sonshineonme, watchbird, johann, beartrap, sister, pickle, joy and observer and probably several I don't know about, get their information directly from Linda or others who use her as the source, while at the same time, they say she is humbly going about her own life and not trashing anyone. A child could see the discrepancies here.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 20 2007, 12:45 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 02:34 PM) ☐
>
> This board takes anything and everything said and puts the "I heard", I think, It appears, and It seems spin on it with no facts to back it up. Also, if you will notice, sonshineonme, watchbird, johann, beartrap, sister, pickle, joy and observer and probably several I don't know about, get their information directly from Linda or others who use her as the source, while at the same time, they say she is humbly going about her own life and not trashing anyone. A child could see the discrepancies here.

...and may I ask who do you get your information from?

Who do you get your "handy tidbits" from? Danny? Tommy?

Same boat.

Pot. Kettle. Mad Black.

☒ sn

Posted by: erik Feb 20 2007, 12:47 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 10:34 AM) ☐

> The giving to the community was explained on the live. Maybe I can make it clearer. Because their is many astute business people on the 3abn board, they believe it is very important to have community support. For this reason certain ones that can afford to have given donations specifically earmarked for community projects. These donations are in addition to, what they give to support 3abn. Ida, if you are seeking truth with an open mind, you will find that most talk about finances are always twisted to insinuate that the hard earned money that someone gives is going to pay for all sorts of things it shouldn't. Not true. The accountability factor is higher than usual for a non profit organization. There are 7 financial workers, accountants, a chief financial officer with a very impressive resume, there are outside auditors and the 3abn board goes over the financial statements at every meeting.
> This board takes anything and everything said and puts the "I heard", I think, It appears, and It seems spin on it with no facts to back it up. Also, if you will notice, sonshineonme, watchbird, johann, beartrap, sister, pickle, joy and observer and probably several I don't know about, get their information directly from Linda or others who use her as the source, while at the same time, they say she is humbly going about her own life and not trashing anyone. A child could see the discrepancies here.

Bystander,

Thank you for making it clear that no gifts when to the sports equipment.

Secondly, If linda is the source of everything are you saying that she has written the letters the accusers of ommy have written? or in some way cause that whole mess to come out?

ust wondering?

Erik

Posted by: Bystander Feb 20 2007, 02:23 PM

> QUOTE(erik @ Feb 20 2007, 12:47 PM) ☐
>
> Bystander,
>
> Thank you for making it clear that no gifts when to the sports equipment.
>
> Secondly, If linda is the source of everything are you saying that she has written the letters the accusers of tommy have written? or in some way cause that whole mess to come out?
>
> Just wondering?
> Erik

Erik, thanks for understanding my post without trying to tear it apart.
My opinion on the other since you ask....Of course she didn't write the letters. Do I believe she was esponsible in some way? I believe she is. Who would have given Glenn Drydens name to Gailon Joy or Bob Pickle. Everything snowballed from there. guilt or innocence of TS is a moot point here. All that was needed was a name dropped to start a circus. Dryden's name is not known in Adventist circles. Add it up.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 20 2007, 02:47 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 11:34 AM)
>
> The giving to the community was explained on the live. Maybe I can make it clearer. SNIP..

Bystander,

I just wanted to point out that in my answer to ida's concern about her mother's money and the sports donations, I quoted Danny Shelton's explanation about the donations specified for the community from the live program. I also provided her with a link to the transcription of the 2nd hour so she could see the full quote for herself.

Posted by: IMM Feb 20 2007, 02:51 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 12:34 PM)
>
> The giving to the community was explained on the live. Maybe I can make it clearer. Because their is many astute business people on the 3abn board, they believe it is very important to have community support. For this reason certain ones that can afford to have given donations specifically earmarked for community projects. These donations are in addition to, what they give to support 3abn. Ida, if you are seeking truth with an open mind, you will find that most talk about finances are always twisted to insinuate that the hard earned money that someone gives is going to pay for all sorts of things it shouldn't. Not true. The accountability factor is higher than usual for a non profit organization. There are 7 financial workers, accountants, a chief financial officer with a very impressive resume, there are outside auditors and the 3abn board goes over the financial statements at every meeting.
> This board takes anything and everything said and puts the "I heard", I think, It appears, and It seems spin on it with no facts to back it up. Also, if you will notice, sonshineonme, watchbird, johann, beartrap, sister, pickle, joy and observer and probably several I don't know about, get their information directly from Linda or others who use her as the source, while at the same time, they say she is humbly going about her own life and not trashing anyone. A child could see the discrepancies here.

Uhmm, BS, I'm sure the 3ABN Board wouldn't like to hear you talking about them that way. You've been so loyal up to now...

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 20 2007, 02:54 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 01:23 PM)
>
> Erik, thanks for understanding my post without trying to tear it apart.
> My opinion on the other since you ask....Of course she didn't write the letters. Do I believe she was responsible in some way? I believe she is. Who would have given Glenn Drydens name to Gailon Joy or Bob Pickle. Everything snowballed from there. guilt or innocence of TS is a moot point here. All that was needed was a name dropped to start a circus. Dryden's name is not known in Adventist circles. Add it up.

No, it is not a moot point here. TS is still responsible for TS's own behavior and, if DS attempted to keep that behavior secret by intimidation, cover-up or obfuscation DS is responsible as well.

Pastoral sexual assault + pastoral sexual assault = pastoral sexual assault

---

Posted by: erik Feb 20 2007, 03:28 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 12:23 PM)
>
> Erik, thanks for understanding my post without trying to tear it apart.
> My opinion on the other since you ask....Of course she didn't write the letters. Do I believe she was responsible in some way? I believe she is. Who would have given Glenn Drydens name to Gailon Joy or Bob Pickle. Everything snowballed from there. guilt or innocence of TS is a moot point here. All that was needed was a name dropped to start a circus. Dryden's name is not known in Adventist circles. Add it up.

Bystander,

I believe that pickle said he got the name from a church leader, so not sure how that can be Linda's doing.

Secondly did not Mr. Dryden write to the 3abn board president about Tommy, and it greatly appears that that Issue was not checked out correctly at that time, based on the facts that have come forward.

Also am i understand you correctly that you linda(if she is the only source of Dryden name) should have said nothing and let a pastor that preys on young men have plenty of face time on global TV, I personal have a great problem with that idea.

Tommy is not a moot point in this whole thing, if nothing else it shows a HUGE, HUGE double standard at 3abn, that being female sexual sin is punished, and male sexual sin is not.

Try and find a text in the bible that backs that one up.

I fully Agree that Linda "sins" that are said to have been why she was released from 3abn, Are in act totally different then the "sins" of tommy. but that does not make Tommy's actions moot.

I would have thought you could see that.

Erik

Posted by: ida Feb 20 2007, 05:21 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 06:34 PM)
>
> - - -
> Also, if you will notice, sonshineonme, watchbird, johann, beartrap, sister, pickle, joy and observer and probably several I don't know about, get their information directly from Linda or others who use her as the source, while at the same time, they say she is humbly going about her own life and not trashing anyone. A child could see the discrepancies here.

You have to pardon me, Bystander, but I am not a child, so I have no way of seeing the discrepancies that you see. I see a much greater discrepancy in what you are saying about the source of information. But I was not born in Southern Illinois, so the gift of seeing things the way you see was not given to me at birth. And I see a lot more dicrepancies in many of your other posts. I wish you would write and explain things so that I can understand it - that would make this all so much easier.

You remind me of a chemistry teacher I had in an adult class, who assured us that anyone with common sence would clearly see what he was explaing to us. In reality not a single student in that class had any idea what he was talking about. You, Bystader, formulate your thoughts and ideas in a similar vein. Use honest and plain language and you might be able to clear up all of this mess within a short time.

Posted by: Johann Feb 25 2007, 03:32 PM

> QUOTE(ida @ Feb 21 2007, 01:21 AM)
>
> You have to pardon me, Bystander, but I am not a child, so I have no way of seeing the discrepancies that you see. I see a much greater discrepancy in what you are saying about the source of information. But I was not born in Southern Illinois, so the gift of seeing things the way you see was not given to me at birth. And I see a lot more dicrepancies in many of your other posts. I wish you would write and explain things so that I can understand it - that would make this all so much easier.
>
> You remind me of a chemistry teacher I had in an adult class, who assured us that anyone with common sence would clearly see what he was explaing to us. In reality not a single student in that class had any idea what he was talking about. You, Bystader, formulate your thoughts and ideas in a similar vein. Use honest and plain language and you might be able to clear up all of this mess within a short time.

What happened to Bystander? Did he get whisked away?

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 25 2007, 06:52 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Feb 25 2007, 01:32 PM)
>
> What happened to Bystander? Did he get whisked away?

Probably a changing of the guard.. or Reloading of crapola to spew and spin...or you get the idea...

I'm sure that wwjd/bystander sure wish they had gagged Linda for many more years...they seem aweful worried about what she might say given the chance. If they could, they would put tape over her mouth, bribe and convince all her "friends" to go away, because she shouldn't have any friends, and cut off all the "leaders" in the church from her fully to keep her pinned down and out of the public eye all together. Ever wonder WHY???? But, they can't do that, so they come here and work their evil from here. Can you spell t r a n s p a r a n c y??? As from the beginning, they seek to crush her to keep the attention off THEM. Yep...NOT WORKING. Didnt' work then, not working now (especially).

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 25 2007, 07:08 PM

Maybe he's off on the jet somewhere. More likely the Dannynites and Dannyscribes finally figured out what some of us have been saying, that they are doing more harm than good by defending themselves here.

Richard

> QUOTE(Johann @ Feb 25 2007, 04:32 PM)
>
> What happened to Bystander? Did he get whisked away?

Posted by: Johann Feb 25 2007, 09:49 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 08:34 PM)
>
> - - -
>
> This board takes anything and everything said and puts the "I heard", I think, It appears, and It seems spin on it with no facts to back it up. Also, if you will notice, sonshineonme, watchbird, johann, beartrap, sister, pickle, joy and observer and probably several I don't know about, get their information directly from Linda or others who use her as the source, while at the same time, they say she is humbly going about her own life and not trashing anyone. A child could see the discrepancies here.

This statement entitles you to use the title Byslander.

I have a lot more information from Mr. Danny Shelton than from Linda. In conformity with her gag order Linda has rather restrained me. My statements here are based on what I experienced right from the beginning.

If the Dannyscribes think they gain more credibility by blaming Linda for being behind all the information given, they missed the boat and saddled the wrong horse in their escapades.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 26 2007, 12:02 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Feb 25 2007, 09:49 PM)
>
> This statement entitles you to use the title Byslander.
>
> I have a lot more information from Mr. Danny Shelton than from Linda. In conformity with her gag order Linda has rather restrained me. My statements here are based on what I experienced right from the beginning.

Restrained you from what if she isn't telling you anything. You have stated that you and your first wife loved her as a daughter. You have said the same for your second wife. since when does a "daughter" not tell all to her surrogate parents, if, she loves and trusts them in return.

Posted by: Lee Feb 26 2007, 12:11 AM

Exactly right Bystander! I'd like to hear Pastor Johann's answer.

Posted by: Johann Feb 26 2007, 01:04 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 26 2007, 08:02 AM)
>
> Restrained you from what if she isn't telling you anything. You have stated that you and your first wife loved her as a daughter. You have said the same for your second wife. since when does a "daughter" not tell all to her surrogate parents, if, she loves and trusts them in return.

You have noticed here on this net that several people, who were in doubt, were convinced because of the information given by Danny Shelton and his scribes.

I my former reply to you I stated that Danny Shelton was also my main source. If it had not been for him I would never have suspected what happened. He made too many blunders to be trustworthy. It was not worthy of a man in charge of such a great ministry.

> QUOTE(Lee @ Feb 26 2007, 08:11 AM)
>
> Exactly right Bystander! I'd like to hear Pastor Johann's answer.

I trust that you have digested my reply!

Posted by: Whtz Happenin Feb 26 2007, 01:43 AM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Feb 12 2007, 02:49 PM)
>
> ADVENTIST NEWS Round up
>
> Tommy Shelton Retires from 3ABN
> ...
>
> Allegations at 3ABN
>
> Shortly after Tommy resigned his post as pastor, Danny invited him to join 3ABN as production manager. During his time at 3ABN, a member of Tommy's production staff, who was in his early twenties at the time, says Tommy made a sexual advance toward him. Shortly after what he calls his "uncomfortable situation," the former employee says he confronted Danny Shelton with what had happened. In response, Danny assured the young man that he would no longer have to answer to Tommy and that 3ABN administrators would "work things out."
>
> In late 1992, Elder Bj Christensen, then president of the Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, approached two members of Danny's family, asking them to make a statement in regard to improprieties they had observed in Tommy's behavior. Elder Christiansen transcribed the statement and brought it to the attention of the 3ABN board, on which he then sat.
>
> At a subsequent 3ABN board meeting, Tommy was terminated as production manager. Shortly thereafter, 3ABN outfitted him with a touring bus and sent him as a 3ABN representative, giving gospel concerts and promoting 3ABN to cable companies throughout the United States.

> ...
> Connections in Virginia
> ...
> Further allegations of sexual misconduct surfaced during his tenure in Dunn Loring, and in 2000, members of Tommy's own family confronted him about what they saw as inappropriate activities between him and his adopted son. His family also shared their concerns about his relationship with an underage male from the church.
>
> In the face of the new allegations, Tommy once again announced he was having medical problems ... Later that year, Tommy was hired as 3ABN tape and masters archive librarian, without the formal approval of the 3ABN board of directors, a group that had fired him just 10 years before.
> ...

ired by 3ABN in the early 1990's?

onfronted by his own family?

efore this article was published, had anyone heard about the two items above? I do not remember reading bout this on this site or the save3abn site. Did I miss something?

Posted by: Johann Feb 26 2007, 04:13 AM

> QUOTE(Whtz Happenin @ Feb 26 2007, 09:43 AM)
>
> Fired by 3ABN in the early 1990's?
>
> Confronted by his own family?
>
> Before this article was published, had anyone heard about the two items above? I do not remember reading about this on this site or the save3abn site. Did I miss something?

his is getting the attention of the media and various nets, bloggs, etc.,

---

Posted by: Johann Feb 26 2007, 04:53 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 26 2007, 08:02 AM)
>
> Restrained you from what if she isn't telling you anything. You have stated that you and your first wife loved her as a daughter. You have said the same for your second wife. since when does a "daughter" not tell all to her surrogate parents, if, she loves and trusts them in return.

erhaps you have never experienced a decent love relationship? It can be much more than that. What specially endeared Linda to Irmgard was when she witnessed the cruelty and lies that Danny Shelton and his cribes served on Linda to the whole world.

nd when my present wife reads all of your cruel statements and sees the disdain with which you treat the o-founder of 3ABN, she feels that Linda needs our love and protection. It appears to her that this great institution, 3ABN, no longer is ruled by Heavenly Agents, but by people overtaken by cruelty, who use sacrilegious methods in an attempt to appear genuine. You can judge by yourself, but this is how the picture painted by you appears in these quarters, and not only by us, but by a growing number of Church leaders I have associated with during the 50 years I served the Seventh-day Adventist Church as a church school teacher, pastor, Bible teacher, director of lay activities, Sabbath School, youth and pathfinder, stewardship, health and temperance, literature, and longest of all as Director of Media and Communications, in about seven various conferences and unions in about that many different countries in three hemispheres.

Therefore I have many friends, and they are also watching your cruelty and lack of deportment behind the official facade. Best of all, many of them are praying for us, and that this institution will be cleansed of evil, that it can perform the task it was called to perform for the Lord.

Posted by: sister Feb 26 2007, 07:10 AM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Feb 12 2007, 02:49 PM)
>
> Just got this in my email - I went to get the link off the web so I could just post it here, but I don't see they have it yet (or I can't find it) listed on the website as it is a "newsbreak" and will be there. So, forgive the long post, if I should do this a different way (Calvin, Clay, Di) let me know. It's worth the read.
>
> **
> **
> ADVENTIST NEWS Round up
>
> Tommy Shelton Retires from 3ABN
> Virginia church meets to address allegations of sexual misconduct
>
> By Edwin D. Schwisow, for ATNewsbreak (09 February 2007).
>
> Facing multiple allegations of sexual misconduct, Tommy Shelton, production manager at Three Angels Broadcasting Network (3ABN) and brother of 3ABN President Danny Shelton, announced his retirement in a December 31, 2006 broadcast of 3ABN Live. Although not owned or operated by the Seventh-day Adventist Church, many of 3ABN's employees and volunteers are Adventist Church members. In a telephone interview with a representative of Adventist Today, Danny Shelton confirmed that his brother had left the employ of 3ABN for "health reasons."
> Virginia Church Allegations
>
> Tommy Shelton's retirement comes just four weeks after the Community Church of God in Dunn Loring, Virginia, held a December 3, 2006, business meeting to address accusations made by several young men that Tommy had molested them while he was pastor of the church. Following the meeting, church leaders read a carefully-worded statement, apprising the congregation of the accusations against Shelton and how they, as parishioners, should best respond. The church leaders prepared the statement under the advisement of their insurance carrier, Brotherhood Mutual, which had become involved after a young man came to the church with allegations that Tommy, during his pastorate, had molested him. The young was a minor when he says was abused. He is the third in recent months to come forward to Community Church of God leaders, accusing Shelton of making inappropriate sexual advances, according to Glenn Dryden, current pastor of the church.
>
> A History of Allegations
>
> This is not the first time Tommy has been accused of inappropriate sexual activity with underage males. During much of the 1980s, Tommy pastored the Ezra Church of God in his hometown of West Frankfort, Illinois. While there, he worked closely with a 12-grade school, whose property bordered the church. During this time, a teenage boy, who was a student at the school, accused Tommy of soliciting him for a sexual relationship. According to Dryden, who pastored the West Frankfort church in the 1990s, three additional boys also made similar allegations, prompting civil authorities to become involved. Following a police investigation, Tommy was not charged with a crime, but the allegations were serious enough to prompt Church of God officials to intervene. In a letter dated October 25, 1985, the General Assembly of the Church of God in Illinois revoked Tommy's ordination. They listed their reasons for doing so as "improper counseling procedures," "numerous charges of misconduct," a criminal investigation into sexual abuse charges by the local police, and controversy surrounding Tommy's ministry and lifestyle. Ultimately Tommy's lack of cooperation in the disciplinary process, Dryden says, led the Church of God in Illinois to drop the Ezra Church of God from its roster of affiliated congregations.

In the early 1990s, further allegations of sexual misconduct were brought against Tommy and in 1991 Tommy resigned as pastor of the Ezra Church of God, citing health concerns.

Allegations at 3ABN

Shortly after Tommy resigned his post as pastor, Danny invited him to join 3ABN as production manager. During his time at 3ABN, a member of Tommy's production staff, who was in his early twenties at the time, says Tommy made a sexual advance toward him. Shortly after what he calls his "uncomfortable situation," the former employee says he confronted Danny Shelton with what had happened. In response, Danny assured the young man that he would no longer have to answer to Tommy and that 3ABN administrators would "work things out."

In late 1992, Elder Bj Christensen, then president of the Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, approached two members of Danny's family, asking them to make a statement in regard to improprieties they had observed in Tommy's behavior. Elder Christiansen transcribed the statement and brought it to the attention of the 3ABN board, on which he then sat.

At a subsequent 3ABN board meeting, Tommy was terminated as production manager. Shortly thereafter, 3ABN outfitted him with a touring bus and sent him as a 3ABN representative, giving gospel concerts and promoting 3ABN to cable companies throughout the United States.

Connections in Virginia

During the time he was promoting 3ABN, he visited the Community Church of God in Dunn Loring. After learning that Tommy had experience with media ministry, the church offered him a position as a media consultant. Later he was hired as assistant pastor for media ministries. When the church's senior pastor left for missionary service in March 1996, Tommy was named as his replacement.

Further allegations of sexual misconduct surfaced during his tenure in Dunn Loring, and in 2000, members of Tommy's own family confronted him about what they saw as inappropriate activities between him and his adopted son. His family also shared their concerns about his relationship with an underage male from the church.

In the face of the new allegations, Tommy once again announced he was having medical problems in 2002 and resigned as pastor of the Community Church of God, moving with his wife and family to Marion, Kentucky, an hour and a half drive from 3ABN. Later that year, Tommy was hired as 3ABN tape and masters archive librarian, without the formal approval of the 3ABN board of directors, a group that had fired him just 10 years before.

Pastor Contacts 3ABN

In the spring of 2003, Dryden, then pastor of the Ezra Church of God in West Frankfort, penned a letter outlining his concerns about Tommy Shelton. He distributed it to a handful of leaders of Church of God camp meeting associations, whom he knew, in the past, had invited Tommy to speak at their church meetings.

He later sent the letter to Dr. Walter Thompson, 3ABN board chairman, advising him that "at least six boys in our community were sexually abused" by Tommy. He told Thompson that Tommy's ordination was not in good standing with either the Church of God in Illinois or Virginia and offered to give Thompson the phone numbers of the family members of Tommy's purported victims so that 3ABN could follow up on the situation.

Thompson spoke with Dryden and then brought the letter to the attention of Danny Shelton. Danny brushed the letter off as 30-year old news, attributing it to a long-standing feud between Dryden and Tommy. After meeting with Danny, Thompson brought the letter to the full 3ABN board at its June 2003 > meeting. The board, due to its belief that the events had happened many years before; Tommy's assurance that he had attempted to make things right; and the fact that no legal action had been taken against Tommy, voted to allow Tommy's relationship with 3ABN to continue.

>
> Further Allegations
>
> In the Spring of 2004, Roger W. Clem, a 32 year-old man who had attended the Ezra Church of God during his teenage years, released a letter he had written to Tommy, accusing him of sexual abuse. In his letter, which he later posted on the Internet, Clem claims Tommy had ruined 15 years of his life. He says that he is sick of Tommy's manipulative behavior, including his claims of illness to divert attention away from allegations of sexual misconduct.
>
> On June 4, 2004, Linda Shelton signed a Separation Agreement with 3ABN, ending her employment with the ministry. Later that year, Tommy moved into her old office at 3ABN and assumed her role as programming director. During his time at 3ABN he traveled with his brother to 3ABN gatherings around the world, many times playing the piano as Danny sang. He also began playing the piano for the Kids Time show on 3ABN.
>
> Late in 2006, Duane Klem, Roger's brother, shared with close associates that Tommy had molested him, as well. In a statement released in January 2007, Klem accused Tommy of initiating a sexual relationship with him when he was 19, at times using 3ABN buildings for their assignations. Klem says the growing number of allegations against Tommy prompted him to come forward with his claims.

have bolded a passage above, in red, pertaining to an issue that no one as commented upon. Both Danny and Tommy have been accused of inappropriate activities" toward individuals that were raised in their own omes, as their own children. Linda's daughter was raised in Danny's home nd Tommy's adopted son was raised in his home, in both cases there are llegations of "inappropriate activities". Two Brothers, Danny and Tommy, hare the same behavior; the only difference is the gender of the victims. Is pattern developing before us? Why do both Danny and Tommy find this ehavior acceptable within their families? Is it still incest when the child has o blood connection with the father figure, but has been raised within the ame home as his child? Ethically, I believe the answer is a resounding, YES!".

ister

Posted by: Lee Feb 26 2007, 09:25 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Feb 26 2007, 05:53 AM)
>
> Perhaps you have never experienced a decent love relationship? It can be much more than that. What especially endeared Linda to Irmgard was when she witnessed the cruelty and lies that Danny Shelton and his scribes served on Linda to the whole world.
>
> And when my present wife reads all of your cruel statements and sees the disdain with which you treat the co-founder of 3ABN, she feels that Linda needs our love and protection.
>
> Therefore I have many friends, and they are also watching your cruelty and lack of deportment behind the official facade. Best of all, many of them are praying for us, and that this institution will be cleansed of evil, that it can perform the task it was called to perform for the Lord.

Bystander cruel? You must have the wrong person Pastor Johann. I know him personally and he is not cruel. I'm afraid you and your wife have been duped by Linda as well as others by her willingness to alledgedly play the part of the victim--you know, the "poor me" syndrome and "pity party" method. But then many on this board have been rude and condescending towards Bystander, making fun of him, using his forum name as a means of ridicule--it would seem your wife might feel sorry for Bystander because of this.

Bystander lies with distain? Nope--wrong again! Could you list his lies here for me? I happen to know that if any of his information posted was incorrect, Bystander would be the first to correct it.

So there you have it folks--the truth of the matter. Just remember when you read accusations against a brother--remember who the "accuser of the brethren" is.

Posted by: Clay Feb 26 2007, 09:39 AM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Feb 26 2007, 09:25 AM)
>
> Bystander cruel? You must have the wrong person Pastor Johann. I know him personally and he is not cruel. I'm afraid you and your wife have been duped by Linda as well as others by her willingness to alledgedly play the part of the victim--you know, the "poor me" syndrome and "pity party" method. But then many on this board have been rude and condescending towards Bystander, making fun of him, using his forum name as a means of ridicule--it would seem your wife might feel sorry for Bystander because of this.
>
> Bystander lies with distain? Nope--wrong again! Could you list his lies here for me? I happen to know that if any of his information posted was incorrect, Bystander would be the first to correct it.
>
> So there you have it folks--the truth of the matter. Just remember when you read accusations against a brother--remember who the "accuser of the brethren" is.

stated like a true dannyclone..... spin on spin on.....

Posted by: watchbird Feb 26 2007, 10:50 AM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Feb 26 2007, 10:25 AM)
>
> Bystander cruel? You must have the wrong person Pastor Johann. I know him personally and he is not cruel. I'm afraid you and your wife have been duped by Linda as well as others by her willingness to alledgedly play the part of the victim--you know, the "poor me" syndrome and "pity party" method. But then many on this board have been rude and condescending towards Bystander, making fun of him, using his forum name as a means of ridicule--it would seem your wife might feel sorry for Bystander because of this.
>
> Bystander lies with distain? Nope--wrong again! Could you list his lies here for me? I happen to know that if any of his information posted was incorrect, Bystander would be the first to correct it.
>
> So there you have it folks--the truth of the matter. Just remember when you read accusations against a brother--remember who the "accuser of the brethren" is.

Ah yes.... "the "poor me" syndrome and "pity party" method." What a simply GREAT description of the Thursday night "live" TV specials....

.... TVsnack ....

all together now... let's hear it for the announcer and supporting cast.....

Sorry Lee... the mirror trick ain't workin no mo.......

We know who the words apply to... so trying to project them onto Johann and this board......

Not working.... the spin mechanism done broke down..... ....

Posted by: ex3ABNemployee Feb 26 2007, 11:01 AM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Feb 26 2007, 09:25 AM)
>
> So there you have it folks--the truth of the matter. Just remember when you read accusations against a brother--remember who the "accuser of the brethren" is.

Hmm...interesting that you should use that phrase. I noticed yesterday on the sign in front of the Thompsonville SDA church that Hal Steenson was going to be preaching on that very topic.

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 26 2007, 11:13 AM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Feb 26 2007, 07:25 AM)
>
> Bystander cruel? You must have the wrong person Pastor Johann. I know him personally and he is not cruel. I'm afraid you and your wife have been duped by Linda as well as others by her willingness to alledgedly play the part of the victim--you know, the "poor me" syndrome and "pity party" method. But then many on this board have been rude and condescending towards Bystander, making fun of him, using his forum name as a means of ridicule--it would seem your wife might feel sorry for Bystander because of this.
>
> Bystander lies with distain? Nope--wrong again! Could you list his lies here for me? I happen to know that if any of his information posted was incorrect, Bystander would be the first to correct it.
>
> So there you have it folks--the truth of the matter. Just remember when you read accusations against a brother--remember who the "accuser of the brethren" is.

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ Monday, 09:01 AM)

> Hmm...interesting that you should use that phrase. I noticed yesterday on the sign in front of the Thompsonville SDA church that Hal Steenson was going to be preaching on that very topic.

.ove those "aaahhhh hhhaaaa" moments??

Posted by: Grace Feb 26 2007, 11:20 AM

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ Feb 26 2007, 06:01 PM)
>
> Hmm...interesting that you should use that phrase. I noticed yesterday on the sign in front of the Thompsonville SDA church that Hal Steenson was going to be preaching on that very topic.

Interesting!

Posted by: Bystander Feb 26 2007, 02:07 PM

[quote name='Whtz Happenin' date='Feb 26 2007, 01:43 AM' post='180679']
Fired by 3ABN in the early 1990's?

Confronted by his own family?

Before this article was published, had anyone heard about the two items above? I do not remember reading about this on this site or the save3abn site. Did I miss something?
[/quote

If you missed anything, it was only lies. TS was never fired in the 90's or any other time from 3abn and confronted by the family? I would think you would have to be in the family to know whether that was true or not.

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ Feb 26 2007, 11:01 AM)
>
> Hmm...interesting that you should use that phrase. I noticed yesterday on the sign in front of the Thompsonville SDA church that Hal Steenson was going to be preaching on that very topic.

'es that is interesting since Lee is thousands of miles away from southern Illinois. Maybe it was the Lord mpressing her.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 26 2007, 02:09 PM

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ Feb 26 2007, 10:01 AM)
>
> Hmm...interesting that you should use that phrase. I noticed yesterday on the sign in front of the Thompsonville SDA church that Hal Steenson was going to be preaching on that very topic.

That is quite a coincidence!

Posted by: Bystander Feb 26 2007, 02:12 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Feb 26 2007, 02:09 PM)
>
> That is quite a coincidence!

Read the post above yours PB. With God there are no coincidences.

Posted by: Ralph Feb 26 2007, 02:14 PM

Bystander wrote:

> QUOTE
>
> If you missed anything, it was only lies. TS was never fired in the 90's or any other time from 3abn and confronted by the family? I would think you would have to be in the family to know whether that was true or not .

Hmmm . . . . . Interesting implication.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 26 2007, 02:25 PM

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Feb 26 2007, 02:14 PM)
>
> Bystander wrote:
>
> Hmmm . . . . . Interesting implication.

Yes it is...considering how many outsiders like to tell like to say, what happened, in the family. As always, they go on speculation, rumor and gossip. There is nothing more tiresome than strangers and outsiders discussing what goes on " at 3abn. " For lack of a better comparison, That would be like Joe blow on the street telling you what goes in your own household. Joe knows more than you because he "heard" it. By the time Joe gets through telling everyone he knows, and speculating and adding to it, YOU are the outsider. Doesn't make a lot of sense does it?

Posted by: princessdi Feb 26 2007, 02:41 PM

Uhhhh, Bystander, I think you missed the point.........and as Forrest says, "that's all I have to say about that".

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 26 2007, 12:25 PM)
>
> Yes it is...considering how many outsiders like to tell like to say, what happened, in the family. As always, they go on speculation, rumor and gossip. There is nothing more tiresome than strangers and outsiders discussing what goes on " at 3abn. " For lack of a better comparison, That would be like Joe blow on the street telling you what goes in your own household. Joe knows more than you because he "heard" it. By the time Joe gets through telling everyone he knows, and speculating and adding to it, YOU are the outsider. Doesn't make a lot of sense does it?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 26 2007, 02:49 PM

> QUOTE
>
> ADVENTIST NEWS Round up
>
> Tommy Shelton Retires from 3ABN
> ...
>
> Allegations at 3ABN
>
> Shortly after Tommy resigned his post as pastor, Danny invited him to join 3ABN as production manager. During his time at 3ABN, a member of Tommy's production staff, who was in his early twenties at the time, says Tommy made a sexual advance toward him.[/b] Shortly after what he calls his "uncomfortable situation," the former employee says he confronted Danny Shelton with what had happened. In response, Danny assured the young man that he would no longer have to answer to Tommy and that 3ABN administrators would "work things out."
>
> In late 1992, Elder Bj Christensen, then president of the Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, [b]approached two members of Danny's family, asking them to make a statement in regard to improprieties they had observed in Tommy's behavior. Elder Christiansen transcribed the statement and brought it to the attention of the 3ABN board, on which he then sat.
>
> At a subsequent 3ABN board meeting, Tommy was terminated as production manager. Shortly thereafter, 3ABN outfitted him with a touring bus and sent him as a 3ABN representative, giving gospel concerts and promoting 3ABN to cable companies throughout the United States.
>
> ...
> Connections in Virginia
> ...
> Further allegations of sexual misconduct surfaced during his tenure in Dunn Loring, and in 2000, members of Tommy's own family confronted him about what they saw as inappropriate activities between him and his adopted son. His family also shared their concerns about his relationship with an underage male from the church.
> In the face of the new allegations, Tommy once again announced he was having medical problems ...
> Later that year, Tommy was hired as 3ABN tape and masters archive librarian, without the formal approval of the 3ABN board of directors, a group that had fired him just 10 years before....

Bystander,
Would you characterize the Adventist Today article as truthful? Would you charaterize the Adventist Today article as untruthful? Do you know either way? Your response to Whtz Happenin (pasted in below) was a little unclear. It seems you were saying "it was only lies". But then why was Tommy removed as production manager and sent touring in a bus? Or did he never actually leave the production department and then never went touring on a bus?

I would be very appreciative if you would take the Adventist Today article and critique it section by section. I think that would be extremely helpful and informative.

> QUOTE
>
> If you missed anything, it was only lies. TS was never fired in the 90's or any other time from 3abn and confronted by the family? I would think you would have to be in the family to know whether that was true or not.

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 26 2007, 01:25 PM)
>
> Yes it is...considering how many outsiders like to tell like to say, what happened, in the family. As always, they go on speculation, rumor and gossip. There is nothing more tiresome than strangers and outsiders discussing what goes on " at 3abn. " For lack of a better comparison, That would be like Joe blow on the street telling you what goes in your own household. Joe knows more than you because he "heard" it. By the time Joe gets through telling everyone he knows, and speculating and adding to it, YOU are the outsider. Doesn't make a lot of sense does it?

So, I take it that since you know that the claims Whtz Happenin was referring to are all lies, you aren't Joe Blow on the street - you are, instead, someone within the Shelton family who knows for a fact that the claims are untrue?

If not part of the Shelton clan, wouldn't you be just speculating yourself?

Posted by: princessdi Feb 26 2007, 03:00 PM

PB, you were supposed to give him jes a little more rope with that one, and you would have had to asked this question.

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Feb 26 2007, 12:49 PM)
>
> So, I take it that since you know that the claims Whtz Happenin was referring to are all lies, you aren't Joe Blow on the street - you are, instead, someone within the Shelton family who knows for a fact that the claims are untrue?
>
> If not part of the Shelton clan, wouldn't you be just speculating yourself?

Posted by: Whtz Happenin Feb 26 2007, 04:01 PM

> QUOTE
>
> ADVENTIST NEWS Round up

> Tommy Shelton Retires from 3ABN
> ...
>
> Allegations at 3ABN
>
> Shortly after Tommy resigned his post as pastor, Danny invited him to join 3ABN as production manager. During his time at 3ABN, a member of Tommy's production staff, who was in his early twenties at the time, says Tommy made a sexual advance toward him. Shortly after what he calls his "uncomfortable situation," the former employee says he confronted Danny Shelton with what had happened. In response, Danny assured the young man that he would no longer have to answer to Tommy and that 3ABN administrators would "work things out."
>
> In late 1992, Elder Bj Christensen, then president of the Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, approached two members of Danny's family, asking them to make a statement in regard to improprieties they had observed in Tommy's behavior. Elder Christiansen transcribed the statement and brought it to the attention of the 3ABN board, on which he then sat.
>
> At a subsequent 3ABN board meeting, Tommy was terminated as production manager. Shortly thereafter, 3ABN outfitted him with a touring bus and sent him as a 3ABN representative, giving gospel concerts and promoting 3ABN to cable companies throughout the United States.
>
> ...
> Connections in Virginia
> ...
> Further allegations of sexual misconduct surfaced during his tenure in Dunn Loring, and in 2000, members of Tommy's own family confronted him about what they saw as inappropriate activities between him and his adopted son. His family also shared their concerns about his relationship with an underage male from the church.
>
> In the face of the new allegations, Tommy once again announced he was having medical problems ... Later that year, Tommy was hired as 3ABN tape and masters archive librarian, without the formal approval of the 3ABN board of directors, a group that had fired him just 10 years before.
> ...

> QUOTE(Whtz Happenin @ Feb 26 2007, 02:43 AM) ☐
>
> Fired by 3ABN in the early 1990's?
>
> Confronted by his own family?
>
> Before this article was published, had anyone heard about the two items above? I do not remember reading about this on this site or the save3abn site. Did I miss something?

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 26 2007, 03:07 PM) ☐
>
> If you missed anything, it was only lies. TS was never fired in the 90's or any other time from 3abn and confronted by the family? I would think you would have to be in the family to know whether that was true or not.

\ strong statement, which yours is, does not mean that the statement is true. If you are going to answer with ı strong statement and use a word such as "never" then you have to include a reason we should believe you.)therwise, do not reply.

would think you would have to be in the human resources department and "in the family" to know whether ʼour "never" statement is true.

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 26 2007, 03:25 PM) ☐

> Yes it is...considering how many outsiders like to tell like to say, what happened, in the family. As always, they go on speculation, rumor and gossip. There is nothing more tiresome than strangers and outsiders discussing what goes on " at 3abn. " For lack of a better comparison, That would be like Joe blow on the street telling you what goes in your own household. Joe knows more than you because he "heard" it. By the time Joe gets through telling everyone he knows, and speculating and adding to it, YOU are the outsider. Doesn't make a lot of sense does it?

If Joe Blow told others about a crime in my household that did not happen and it spread around the world; when it came back to me I would open up my house and do everything I could to show the world that it did not happen. I would ask questions like, "what did you see Joe that would make you think this happened?" I would defend my household and show the world that Joe Blow is a phony.

If the crime did happen in my household, then I would have already reported it. If I was the one that committed the crime, then I pray that I would state the truth and accept the consequences, not that this would be easy.

If the crime did happen in my household and I did not want to take responsiblity for what happened, then I would lock the place down and have my lawyers send out threatening letters to anyone that steps on my property. Even then I would not send out letters blaming everyone for what I "might" have done and how hard it is on me because of what others are doing to me. Doesn't make a lot of sense does it?

Now, thtz Whtz Happenin!

Ok... my 20 centz. Anyone have some change?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 26 2007, 04:14 PM

> QUOTE(Whtz Happenin @ Feb 26 2007, 03:01 PM) ☐
>
> A strong statement, which yours is, does not mean that the statement is true. If you are going to answer with a strong statement and use a word such as "never" then you have to include a reason we should believe you. Otherwise, do not reply.
>
> I would think you would have to be in the human resources department and "in the family" to know whether your "never" statement is true.
> If Joe Blow told others about a crime in my household that did not happen and it spread around the world; when it came back to me I would open up my house and do everything I could to show the world that it did not happen. I would ask questions like, "what did you see Joe that would make you think this happened?" I would defend my household and show the world that Joe Blow is a phony.
>
> If the crime did happen in my household, then I would have already reported it. If I was the one that committed the crime, then I pray that I would state the truth and accept the consequences, not that this would be easy.
>
> If the crime did happen in my household and I did not want to take responsiblity for what happened, then I would lock the place down and have my lawyers send out threatening letters to anyone that steps on my property. Even then I would not send out letters blaming everyone for what I "might" have done and how hard it is on me because of what others are doing to me.
>
> Now, thtz Whtz Happenin!
>
> Ok... my 20 centz. Anyone have some change?

Whtz Happenin,

You spent that 20 centz wizely and I hope it brings some change!

PB

Posted by: LaurenceD Feb 26 2007, 04:30 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander)
>
> With God there are no coincidences.

Knowing how to tell if something is a coincidence, or not, is one of the secrets of life. We can't have God involved in every accident, every illness, or every arising situation. That kind of thinking is the cause of superstition. Everyone must learn the answers for themselves. This is the first step in knowledge.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 26 2007, 11:57 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Feb 26 2007, 02:49 PM) ☐
>
> Bystander,
> Would you characterize the Adventist Today article as truthful? Would you charaterize the Adventist Today article as untruthful?
>
> Untruthful
>
> Do you know either way? Your response to Whtz Happenin (pasted in below) was a little unclear. It seems you were saying "it was only lies". But then why was Tommy removed as production manager and sent touring in a bus? Or did he never actually leave the production department and then never went touring on a bus?
>
> I personally don't know anything about any touring, but I do know there was no bus of any kind. I also know he was not "removed."
>
> If not part of the Shelton clan, wouldn't you be just speculating yourself?

You misunderstood my comparison PB. My point is this...how can so many complete strangers that have never met the people involved or ever even been to 3abn argue and fight with people that have? And that goes for whatever camp you are in. Those that have worked there or whatever and don't like it, or those that have been there and loved it, either way, at least they have something with which to base an opinion on. All the outsiders here do not. Where DS and LS are concerned, If you don't know them personally, it's all he said/she said and I don't understand how strangers can have such strong and argumentative opinions about, people they don't know, situations they have never been around, and a place that they have never been. Yet, they will argue to the death with people that maybe do know something about the people involved or the situations. I think I make a reasonable and valid point with this.

Posted by: sister Feb 27 2007, 12:38 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Feb 26 2007, 2:49 AM)
>
> Bystander,

> Would you characterize the Adventist Today article as truthful? Would you charaterize the Adventist Today article as untruthful?
>
> Untruthful
>
> Do you know either way? Your response to Whtz Happenin (pasted in below) was a little unclear. It seems you were saying "it was only lies". But then why was Tommy removed as production manager and sent touring in a bus? Or did he never actually leave the production department and then never went touring on a bus?
>
> I personally don't know anything about any touring, but I do know there was no bus of any kind. I also know he was not "removed."
>
> If not part of the Shelton clan, wouldn't you be just speculating yourself?

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 27 2007, 12:57 AM)
>
> You misunderstood my comparison PB. My point is this...how can so many complete strangers that have never met the people involved or ever even been to 3abn argue and fight with people that have? And that goes for whatever camp you are in. Those that have worked there or whatever and don't like it, or those that have been there and loved it, either way, at least they have something with which to base an opinion on. All the outsiders here do not. Where DS and LS are concerned, If you don't know them personally, it's all he said/she said and I don't understand how strangers can have such strong and argumentative opinions about, people they don't know, situations they have never been around, and a place that they have never been. Yet, they will argue to the death with people that maybe do know something about the people involved or the situations. I think I make a reasonable and valid point with this.

Bystander, you seemed to have overlooked PB's last question or were you ignoring it?

> QUOTE
>
> If not part of the Shelton clan, wouldn't you be just speculating yourself?

Sister

Posted by: SoulEspresso Feb 27 2007, 10:49 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Feb 27 2007, 12:38 AM)
>
> Bystander, you seemed to have overlooked PB's last question or were you ignoring it?
> Sister

Bystander has painted himself into a corner.

1. If he does know firsthand, then he can only establish his credibility by identifying himself.
2. If he does not know firsthand, then he is only here to deny and dissemble on behalf of Danny. In other words, he has no interest in the truth.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 27 2007, 11:34 AM

> QUOTE
>
> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Feb 26 2007, 02:49 PM)
>
> Bystander,
> Would you characterize the Adventist Today article as truthful? Would you charaterize the Adventist Today article as untruthful?
>
> Untruthful
>
> Do you know either way? Your response to Whtz Happenin (pasted in below) was a little unclear. It seems you were saying "it was only lies". But then why was Tommy removed as production manager and sent touring in a bus? Or did he never actually leave the production department and then never went touring on a bus?
>
> I personally don't know anything about any touring, but I do know there was no bus of any kind. I also know he was not "removed."
>
> If not part of the Shelton clan, wouldn't you be just speculating yourself?

Bystander,

Thank you for commiting to answer my queston about the AT article. I would have preferred a more detailed response but now I know you view the entire article as untruthful. Regarding Tommy's touring for 3abn, can you make a call to him or to Danny and get the details of what actually happened after he left the production department in the 90's. If he wasn't doing Gospel concerts and contacting cable companies on behalf of 3abn what was he actually doing?

> QUOTE
>
>]You misunderstood my comparison PB. My point is this...how can so many complete strangers that have never met the people involved or ever even been to 3abn argue and fight with people that have? And that goes for whatever camp you are in. Those that have worked there or whatever and don't like it, or those that have been there and loved it, either way, at least they have something with which to base an opinion on. All the outsiders here do not. Where DS and LS are concerned, If you don't know them personally, it's all he said/she said and I don't understand how strangers can have such strong and argumentative opinions about, people they don't know, situations they have never been around, and a place that they have never been. Yet, they will argue to the death with people that maybe do know something about the people involved or the situations. I think I make a reasonable and valid point with this[/color].

What about the 12 members of a jury? They are not personally aquainted with "the accused" but are asked to weigh testimony and come to a judgement.

Sometimes those closest to a situation are the most blind as to what has actually happened. Loyalty and family ties can cause some folks to close their eyes to the facts.

Posted by: erik Feb 27 2007, 12:25 PM

Sometimes those closest to a situation are the most blind as to what has actually happened. Loyalty and family ties can cause some folks to close their eyes to the facts.

[/quote]

PB,

Maybe a solution would be to take 12 sda's drawn by picking of lots like from the bible times, and have them in a room and have danny bring his side, and linda bring her side and then lets see what happens, no questions off limits just the information and 12 independent church members and i think it would be better if they were all latity.

erik

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 27 2007, 12:36 PM

> QUOTE(erik @ Feb 27 2007, 01:25 PM) ☐
>
> Sometimes those closest to a situation are the most blind as to what has actually happened. Loyalty and family ties can cause some folks to close their eyes to the facts.
> PB,
> Maybe a solution would be to take 12 sda's drawn by picking of lots like from the bible times, and have them in a room and have danny bring his side, and linda bring her side and then lets see what happens, no questions off limits just the information and 12 independent church members and i think it would be better if they were all latity.
>
> erik

☒ ☒

Talk about loss of control........

nw

Posted by: erik Feb 27 2007, 12:53 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Feb 27 2007, 10:36 AM) ☐
>
> ☒ ☒
>
> Talk about loss of control........
>
> nw

NW,

IF 3abn is really concerned about the truth then my idea is at least worth trying, before going and jumping off the cliff called court. To me going to court is totally lossing control of the whole thing court cases have a life of their own.

Erik

Posted by: sister Feb 27 2007, 01:02 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Feb 27 2007, 11:49 AM)
>
> Bystander has painted himself into a corner.
>
> 1. If he does know firsthand, then he can only establish his credibility by identifying himself.
> 2. If he does not know firsthand, then he is only here to deny and dissemble on behalf of Danny. In other words, he has no interest in the truth.

SoulEspresso, that appears to be a correct evaluation of the situation. Unfortunately, given the choice of option number one or option number two, Bystander's answer will probably be option number three: ignore the question. For him it is a lose/lose situation, which is an inconceivable option.

Sister

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 27 2007, 01:05 PM

> QUOTE(erik @ Feb 27 2007, 01:53 PM)
>
> NW,
> IF 3abn is really concerned about the truth then my idea is at least worth trying, before going and jumping off the cliff called court. To me going to court is totally lossing control of the whole thing court cases have a life of their own.
>
> Erik

Erik,

I hope you understood that I could not imagine DS or 3ABN doing such a thing because "controlling the message" is what they seem to be very much about. The forum you propose would be their worst nightmare.

As for court, I am afraid I disagree. There is a great deal of control in the legal world. I think that is one thing that posters here need to understand. There is control in who files a complaint first and their burden of going forward and burden of proof. There are issues of law as well as issues of fact. We discuss the concept of hearsay on this board but there are many exceptions. If 3abn decides to litigate I assure you they will chose competent legal counsel that will keep the issues narrow and on points 3abn believes they have a good chance of being successful on whether in negotiated settlement or court. That is not to say that some information would not come out in legal proceedings. But remember truth is not the same as evidence. I also doubt that there would be any one grand legal proceeding that would include all the issues mentioned in this subforum.

nw

Posted by: erik Feb 27 2007, 01:14 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Feb 27 2007, 11:05 AM)
>
> Erik,
>
> I hope you understood that I could not imagine DS or 3ABN doing such a thing because "controlling the message" is what they seem to be very much about. The forum you propose would be their worst nightmare.
>
> I realize that, but IF they are really interested in the truth, and if they are 100% in the right on all of this then they would jump on my idea, because it would save a ton of money over going to court and it is bible based. The fact they have not done anything of the kind speaks volumes to me about were the truth really is and it does not appear to be on their side. ew
>
> As for court, I am afraid I disagree. There is a great deal of control in the legal world. I think that is one thing that posters here need to understand. There is control in who files a complaint first and their burden of going forward and burden of proof. There are issues of law as well as issues of fact. We discuss the concept of hearsay on this board but there are many exceptions. If 3abn decides to litigate I assure you they will chose competent legal counsel that will keep the issues narrow and on points 3abn believes they have a good chance of being successful on whether in negotiated settlement or court. That is not to say that some information would not come out in legal proceedings. But remember truth is not the same as evidence. I also doubt that there would be any one grand legal proceeding that would include all the issues mentioned in this subforum.
>
> nw

NW,

I agree that they will try and tightly control the legal action, but once they walk out that door they open the door for others to file counter actions, which might not be limited to the court room, i am right now the public media is not got this out,but going to court greatly increase the chances that this whole mess will leave the smaller circle that is in now, and only God knows what will happen.

In the court room it self, yes 3abn lawyers will try and frame the case in such a manner that they will only discuss very limited subject matter, but look at all the stuff that came out of the last court case about the tax's, In fact if you want my humble option that was God's wake up call to 3abn one that to this point they have not listened to.

If 3abn only goes after the copyright issue then they might be able to control the court room but if they go after slander then they are really opening up the whole ball of wax.

Erik

Posted by: Bystander Feb 27 2007, 01:53 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Feb 27 2007, 10:49 AM)
>
> Bystander has painted himself into a corner.
>
> 1. If he does know firsthand, then he can only establish his credibility by identifying himself.
> 2. If he does not know firsthand, then he is only here to deny and dissemble on behalf of Danny. In other > words, he has no interest in the truth.

'ou are making the same mistake as others here, you are jumping to conclusions. If I know anything irsthand, why would I have to identify myself. Sister claims to know all first hand, yet she has never dentified herself. That has never stopped any of you on this board from believing her. Now be fair here, folks. f you can believe her without ID, then the same should apply to me. One keep in mind, sister is just one ıere, that claims to know first hand without telling who she is. There are several others. You and others never juestion them, like you just did me, because they say what you want to hear. They back up your opinions. A ittle one sided isn't it?

Posted by: erik Feb 27 2007, 02:04 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 27 2007, 11:53 AM)
>
> You are making the same mistake as others here, you are jumping to conclusions. If I know anything firsthand, why would I have to identify myself. Sister claims to know all first hand, yet she has never identified herself. That has never stopped any of you on this board from believing her. Now be fair here, folks. If you can believe her without ID, then the same should apply to me. One keep in mind, sister is just one here, that claims to know first hand without telling who she is. There are several others. You and others never question them, like you just did me, because they say what you want to hear. They back up your opinions. A little one sided isn't it?

ȝystander,

agree that both you and sister would make the whole process easier for the outsiders if you would print your ıames. But out side of that happening, and i am not calling for that. i can very well understand why you and ıer do not.

he question applied to you would also apply to her, although i am not sure she has made the same claims of :loseness to the people involved.

will say this you bring this up a lo, like you really need and want to know who she is, other then linda, which think at this point is pretty much know that sister and Linda are not the same person.

n closing bystander i will ask you the question my mother always asked me when my brothers and sisters vere fighting, WHO IS GOING TO THE BIG PERSON? Lead by example bystander, put your name out there ;ee what happens, or even better then your name put the facts of the matter out there and then the truth will ›e known!!!!!!!!!!!!

'Ou can do that by selling my idea of 12 Sdas jury to 3abn and danny

:rik

Posted by: Johann Feb 27 2007, 02:18 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 27 2007, 09:53 PM)
>
> You are making the same mistake as others here, you are jumping to conclusions. If I know anything firsthand, why would I have to identify myself. Sister claims to know all first hand, yet she has never identified herself. That has never stopped any of you on this board from believing her. Now be fair here, > folks. If you can believe her without ID, then the same should apply to me. One keep in mind, sister is just one here, that claims to know first hand without telling who she is. There are several others. You and others never question them, like you just did me, because they say what you want to hear. They back up your opinions. A little one sided isn't it?

\lot quite, Bystander. A number of us recognize most of what Sister says from our own experiences and that jives her credibility. As a contrast some of us know from our own experiences in this matter that what you ıre saying is a thoroughly thwarted image of reality. It could be that you are just too close to see those ssues, or you have too much at stake personally to face the facts.

Posted by: SoulEspresso Feb 27 2007, 02:32 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 27 2007, 01:53 PM) ☐
>
> You are making the same mistake as others here, you are jumping to conclusions. If I know anything firsthand, why would I have to identify myself. Sister claims to know all first hand, yet she has never identified herself. That has never stopped any of you on this board from believing her. Now be fair here, folks. If you can believe her without ID, then the same should apply to me. One keep in mind, sister is just one here, that claims to know first hand without telling who she is. There are several others. You and others never question them, like you just did me, because they say what you want to hear. They back up your opinions. A little one sided isn't it?

'here is a difference, Bystander. It's called a power imbalance.

.et me break it down for you.

)anny has got a satellite channel and all the people on it shilling for him, and the thousands or millions who)elieve what he says--not to mention all the people, like yourself, shilling for him here. Have you been hired)y 3ABN, Bystander, to come on here and muddy the waters?

Vho is sister? Sister does not have her own satellite channel or talking heads to repeat what she says. If vhat we're to read on these boards is plausible, sister may be afraid of retribution from Danny and 3ABN. I lon't know for myself that that's the case, but any casual student of human nature or history can tell you that)eople who are not in power have plenty to fear from the people who are. (300 years of slavery in the New Vorld, for example ...)

Vho do you have to be afraid of? Surely sister doesn't have secrets on you she wants to expose to the world!

\nyway, I didn't automatically believe her. I thought it might be plausible, because "power corrupts" (history ınd human nature again) and I already knew that my church, the Adventist Church, has a horrible history of :orruption, particularly when it comes to sexual sin. But I came back here after months of absence because of ;ave3abn.com--and suddenly sister's accounts became 100x more credible.

[echniques used in this post by Bystander:
.. Deflect the issue in question by comparing himself with another poster who has greater reason to remain ınonymous.

3ack to the issue, Bystander--we're to believe you because you're close to the situation. How do we know? Vhy can't you tell us who you are? Can you at least explain why you choose to remain anonymous?

> QUOTE(erik @ Feb 27 2007, 02:04 PM) ☐
>
> In closing bystander i will ask you the question my mother always asked me when my brothers and sisters were fighting, WHO IS GOING TO THE BIG PERSON? Lead by example bystander, put your name out there > see what happens, or even better then your name put the facts of the matter out there and then the truth will be known!

rik is right. In spades.

Posted by: LaurenceD Feb 27 2007, 02:49 PM

I think I'd rather not know who this character Bystander admittedly is. I would hate to think he is who he appears to be. This character likes to leave people to guess. By contrast, Christ didn't. And, that speaks as much for itself as does, "by their fruits shall ye know them."

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 27 2007, 03:38 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 27 2007, 01:17 PM)
>
> Until you apply your statement about Christ to the others on this board who say they have first hand evidence, you only show your partiality to that side. Have you applied your statement to sister who has given a large percentage of the information that has been posted. Certainly down through the months, everyone else has carried on with it but we are talking origination. Sonshineonme and watchbird also speak (by their own admission) for Linda. Have you applied your statement to them also?
> Sorry, criticism just for my identity doesn't fly here, when there are so many others. Just happens, I am on the wrong side, so receive all the flak. That's ok I can take it.

o, you can't take it. That is why you keep at what you are keeping at. No one buys it. You know this, but ou keep at it anyway...
nd I beg your pardon....to say that by my own admission I speak for Linda? What are you trying to say gain? I have a brain. I don't "speak" for anyone. I speak. I tell my opinons and I tell what I know. The fact hat Linda has friends that won't keep quiet is what eats at you, period. Stop trying to make that a bad thing. y origination didn't come from Sister. Many of us has personal expiriences that neither you or DS (and you eing whoever you are at this moment) can take away from us. We arne't talking heads - mouth pieces for inda. We speak what we know, get over it. If you don't like it, too bad. You only understand being a obot/slave/pawn for someone else, and so you assume that's all anyone can do with their mouth or brain. aybe one day you will find liberty to be yourself and think for yourself. You clearly have a lot to learn in this rea.

Posted by: Rosyroi Feb 27 2007, 04:13 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 20 2007, 10:34 AM)
>
> The giving to the community was explained on the live. Maybe I can make it clearer. Because their is many astute business people on the 3abn board, they believe it is very important to have community support. For this reason certain ones that can afford to have given donations specifically earmarked for community projects. These donations are in addition to, what they give to support 3abn. Ida, if you are seeking truth with an open mind, you will find that most talk about finances are always twisted to insinuate that the hard earned money that someone gives is going to pay for all sorts of things it shouldn't. Not true. The accountability factor is higher than usual for a non profit organization. There are 7 financial workers, accountants, a chief financial officer with a very impressive resume, there are outside auditors and the 3abn board goes over the financial statements at every meeting.
> This board takes anything and everything said and puts the "I heard", I think, It appears, and It seems spin > on it with no facts to back it up. Also, if you will notice, sonshineonme, watchbird, johann, beartrap, sister, pickle, joy and observer and probably several I don't know about, get their information directly from Linda or others who use her as the source, while at the same time, they say she is humbly going about her own life and not trashing anyone. A child could see the discrepancies here.

'ou claim to be very very close to the 3ABN compound and innerworkings, I was wondering if you and Linda ıad some sort of falling out while she was there. Care to comment? I must have missed the kind remarks you nade about Linda in this forum.

Posted by: Johann Feb 27 2007, 04:39 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 27 2007, 11:17 PM)
>
> \- - -
>
> Another point I wanted to make to you is a suit for slander is a suit for slander. You are not allowed to bring in all kinds of other things. If a person is charged with murder, evidence of a possible robbery that he may have done that has absolutely no bearing on the murder trial, cannot be brought up. that would be a separate case altogether.
> Another important thing to think about is, that whoever is charged with slander and served papers, will not only have to pay their own transportation fees to whatever state or city, they will have to pay an attorney to defend them unless they want to be their own defense. Many attorneys, now days, charge 500.00 an hour. In my opinion, there is no way I would want to involve myself and others in something so serious just to be able to "air" my opinions in a chat room. It is one thing to say He might have, or she may have it is quite another to refer to specific individuals as Pedophiles, embezzlers, child molesters, adulterers, liars ...that is where it gets serious, especially, if you are wrong and making these judgments and statements on the heresay of others and can be proven that what you are involved in has caused harm to the organization and public figures involved.
> \- - - -

o we should live in fear and trembling??? Does that remind of one or more texts from the Bible?

ıow many millions through the centuries have had to suffer from the hands of those who forced their "truth" n others? Claimed to be Christian?

ime is short. Satan knows that he might be able to get us away from what is right by having people sho laim to be preaching the Advent message threaten us like this. How else can he reach us who belong to hrist? He knows that infidels would not have any influence on us or intimidate us. He is very clever!

Posted by: calvin Feb 27 2007, 04:41 PM

Point of information: All members of BSDA can be as anonymous or open with their identity as they want to be. I know, we can't help to speculate and wonder who some of us are. But I don't consider any of you any more worthy or privileged as members because of your identity...and you should not either.

So please don't badger anyone to reveal themselves. They have there reasons to remain anonymous, respect them for that.

To the point: When they tell you no, I ain't telling, LEAVE IT ALONG.

Posted by: Rosyroi Feb 27 2007, 04:49 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Feb 27 2007, 12:32 PM)
>
> There is a difference, Bystander. It's called a power imbalance.
>
> Let me break it down for you.
>
> Danny has got a satellite channel and all the people on it shilling for him, and the thousands or millions who believe what he says--not to mention all the people, like yourself, shilling for him here. Have you been hired by 3ABN, Bystander, to come on here and muddy the waters?
>
> Who is sister? Sister does not have her own satellite channel or talking heads to repeat what she says. If what we're to read on these boards is plausible, sister may be afraid of retribution from Danny and 3ABN. I don't know for myself that that's the case, but any casual student of human nature or history can tell you that people who are not in power have plenty to fear from the people who are. (300 years of slavery in the New World, for example ...)
>
> Who do you have to be afraid of? Surely sister doesn't have secrets on you she wants to expose to the world!
>
> Anyway, I didn't automatically believe her. I thought it might be plausible, because "power corrupts" (history and human nature again) and I already knew that my church, the Adventist Church, has a horrible history of corruption, particularly when it comes to sexual sin. But I came back here after months of absence because of save3abn.com--and suddenly sister's accounts became 100x more credible.
>
> Techniques used in this post by Bystander:
> 1. Deflect the issue in question by comparing himself with another poster who has greater reason to remain anonymous.
>
> Back to the issue, Bystander--we're to believe you because you're close to the situation. How do we know? Why can't you tell us who you are? Can you at least explain why you choose to remain anonymous?
> Erik is right. In spades.

Bystander's identity is not really the issue for me.

Bystander's posts = confusion and lies and coverups (says he has truth but wll hold till court time. Mabe the court will never mention Bystander's wonderful secrets... tooo bad about that, Bystander won't have his day in court.)

Sister's posts = telling a story thus victims and personal testimonies come forward putting clothes on the stories and more to come.

Bystander please don't tell us those victims and personal testimonies are parotting what Linda wants to tell the world.

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 27 2007, 04:52 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Feb 27 2007, 05:41 PM)
>
> Point of information: All members of BSDA can be as anonymous or open with their identity as they want to be. I know, we can't help to speculate and wonder who some of us are. But I don't consider any of you > any more worthy or privileged as members because of your identity...and you should not either.

>
> So please don't badger anyone to reveal themselves. They have there reasons to remain anonymous, respect them for that.
>
> To the point: When they tell you no, I ain't telling, LEAVE IT ALONG.

he flip side of this is they cant complain when their perspective is disregarded because it's credibility is lependent on their being who and what they claim to be; without identifying themselves their argument is pecious.... granted even if they were to indentify themselves, their argument could remain specious... but vhen an argument like Bystanders "joe Blow" defense is made, in making the argument he puts his identity nto play, unsolicited, of his own volition.

erhaps he does so because he knows you wont force him to 'fess up... perhaps not... but the argument is tterly devoid of credibility without divulging identity. he retains the right to not respond to the question... nd those with whom he debates retain the right to view him as not credible when he exercises that right...

hat, IMO, is the sole intent of the question being posed... and had he not hung his position so heavily on his dentity, it probably would not have been asked at all...

TJM.

n His service,
r. J

Posted by: Clay Feb 27 2007, 05:07 PM

Bystander, wwjd, Aletheia, Lee, make comments that instead of clarifying actually confound, or muddy the waters... their intent clearly is to confuse and misdirect.... is not Babylon symbolic of a place of confusion?

Posted by: calvin Feb 27 2007, 05:33 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Feb 27 2007, 04:52 PM)
>
> The flip side of this is they cant complain when their perspective is disregarded because it's credibility is dependent on their being who and what they claim to be; without identifying themselves their argument is specious.... granted even if they were to indentify themselves, their argument could remain specious... but when an argument like Bystanders "joe Blow" defense is made, in making the argument he puts his identity into play, unsolicited, of his own volition.
>
> Perhaps he does so because he knows you wont force him to 'fess up... perhaps not... but the argument is utterly devoid of credibility without divulging identity. he retains the right to not respond to the question... and those with whom he debates retain the right to view him as not credible when he exercises that right...
>
> That, IMO, is the sole intent of the question being posed... and had he not hung his position so heavily on his identity, it probably would not have been asked at all...
>
> BTJM.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

agree, and this question of creditbility holds for the other side too. We got a whole book here on the history f 3ABN, that most of us don't know who wrote it.

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 27 2007, 05:39 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 27 2007, 03:15 PM) ☐
>
> The ONLY reason for 3abn and Danny taking anyone to court is so that their lawyers can speak for them on their terms in a tightly controlled venue. If they really wanted the truth to be known they could just state it on here or on their web site. If Danny really wanted the truth to get out there would not be any need for the courts. They are just so sad and pitiful. It's all about the money IMO.
>
> Richard

At this point, would you really know if or what is truth if it came from DS? I'm not sure he knows how to tell the straight truth. He mixes a little truth with a lot of error. I think the court room is the only place for the real truth to come out now. AND, many who have come together here to tell their stories. What DS doesn't realize (or maybe he does) is there are MANY who are here...not all have spoken yet. What has worked and still works here is how many tellings of expiriences from those that have shared so far here fit together so well without anyone forcing it. It just comes together, because truth is what it is - truth. You can't just change truth as some have tried. It is what it is.

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 27 2007, 05:44 PM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Feb 26 2007, 10:25 AM) ☐
>
> Bystander cruel? You must have the wrong person Pastor Johann. I know him personally and he is not cruel. I'm afraid you and your wife have been duped by Linda as well as others by her willingness to alledgedly play the part of the victim--you know, the "poor me" syndrome and "pity party" method. But then many on this board have been rude and condescending towards Bystander, making fun of him, using his forum name as a means of ridicule--it would seem your wife might feel sorry for Bystander because of this.
>
> Bystander lies with distain? Nope--wrong again! Could you list his lies here for me? I happen to know that if any of his information posted was incorrect, Bystander would be the first to correct it.
>
> So there you have it folks--the truth of the matter. Just remember when you read accusations against a brother--remember who the "accuser of the brethren" is.

Interesting that you quoted Hal Steenson's sermon "Accuser of the Brethren."

Posted by: SoulEspresso Feb 27 2007, 07:22 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Feb 27 2007, 05:44 PM) ☐
>
> Interesting that you quoted Hal Steenson's sermon "Accuser of the Brethren."

Well, Danny can make veiled accusations against his ex all day long on international television for two years, but when the accusations start to fly at him from multiple directions, the shoe is on the other foot.

What's really unfortunate is that typically, ministries who reach this level of conflict lose their effectiveness regardless of who is right. The Spirit doesn't often move in the same room as contention.

This is why a free and open inquiry is so critical to the channel and to the Adventist Church. The board, the good doctor, Danny and all must step down and open the doors, the books, everything. To a panel of unbiased, thinking Adventist leaders (I don't mean church employees either, I mean leaders). 12 is a good number, was it Erik that suggested 12?

I know it means giving up control, but all control was ultimately an illusion anyway ... God is in control.

Souls are at stake, and souls are not served, God is not served, by dissembling, denial, covering up, and a general lack of transparency.

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 27 2007, 07:38 PM

Well put sir. And it all could happen, if only Danny humbles himself before the Creator and repents.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ Feb 27 2007, 08:22 PM)
>
> Well, Danny can make veiled accusations against his ex all day long on international television for two years, but when the accusations start to fly at him from multiple directions, the shoe is on the other foot.
>
> What's really unfortunate is that typically, ministries who reach this level of conflict lose their effectiveness regardless of who is right. The Spirit doesn't often move in the same room as contention.
>
> This is why a free and open inquiry is so critical to the channel and to the Adventist Church. The board, the good doctor, Danny and all must step down and open the doors, the books, everything. To a panel of unbiased, thinking Adventist leaders (I don't mean church employees either, I mean leaders). 12 is a good number, was it Erik that suggested 12?
>
> I know it means giving up control, but all control was ultimately an illusion anyway ... God is in control.
>
> Souls are at stake, and souls are not served, God is not served, by dissembling, denial, covering up, and a general lack of transparency.

Posted by: roxe Feb 27 2007, 07:47 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Feb 27 2007, 04:39 PM)
>
> At this point, would you really know if or what is truth if it came from DS? I'm not sure he knows how to tell the straight truth. He mixes a little truth with a lot of error. I think the court room is the only place for the real truth to come out now.

all those who believe that the Dannyites in court will tell the truth and nothing but the truth raise your hands...

all those who believe that the evidence given by the Dannyites in court will be the truth and nothing but the truth raise your hands...

Posted by: wwjd Feb 27 2007, 07:53 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 27 2007, 07:38 PM) ☐
>
> Well put sir. And it all could happen, if only Danny humbles himself before the Creator and repents.

Why would he need to repent to allow unbiased parties to look at 3abn? I would think a comment like that should be saved until conclusions are reached by whatever panel would be appointed.

Posted by: LaurenceD Feb 27 2007, 08:15 PM

Best out of seven!! One panel only isn't enough. Move around the country to the various SDA municipalities (and there are a few) and let the elected officials, who are familiar with quasi-judicial procedings, make the determination.

Just kidding. The whole thing sounds like a joke. Can you imagine the first seven questions from the panel? Might pay to go through them to see how shallow this whole idea is.

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 27 2007, 08:26 PM

Because just like you and I he is a sinner. God has the ability, with Danny's help, to extract him from this mess but it will take a soul seaching humbleness before God on Danny's part. I think that is only with the Holy Spirit's leading that Danny will agree to have an unbiased party look at all the goings on at 3abn. And Danny will also need to be contrite enough, if anything unfavorable is found, to step down from the day to day operations of 3abn. The ball is really in Danny's court, but going to court will only make matters worse, win or lose.

Richard

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 27 2007, 08:53 PM) ☐
>
> Why would he need to repent to allow unbiased parties to look at 3abn? I would think a comment like that should be saved until conclusions are reached by whatever panel would be appointed.

At this point I don't think any panel investigating will do any good unless Danny is willing to aid that panel. And personally I don't believe that Danny will aid any panel that might go against him. However that could change, if the Holy Spirit is allowed to work on broken hearts, and only a broken heart can be mended.

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ Feb 27 2007, 09:15 PM) ☐
>
> Best out of seven!! One panel only isn't enough. Move around the country to the various SDA municipalities (and there are a few) and let the elected officials, who are familiar with quasi-judicial procedings, make the determination.

> Just kidding. The whole thing sounds like a joke. Can you imagine the first seven questions from the panel? Might pay to go through them to see how shallow this whole idea is.

Posted by: erik Feb 27 2007, 09:43 PM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 27 2007, 05:53 PM) ☐
>
> Why would he need to repent to allow unbiased parties to look at 3abn? I would think a comment like that should be saved until conclusions are reached by whatever panel would be appointed.

VWJD, ıe needs to repent of the appearance of making charges that the facts just do back up, for that matter that ıis action bring into question. IF the TRUTH is really were he says it is why the secrecy, why not just put the ruth out into the open and let truth defend it's self. instead of Danny defending himself.

he truth is never scared of being reveled, it never runs and hides behind lawyers and the bible. it stands as h judge of all, even God is judged by the TRUTH. Why is danny unwilling to be Judged by the same standard hat god is judged????????????

:rik

just read the whole 46 page discussion by the judge.

he following points jump out at me.

.. danny appears to run the show, with some input from linda, and less from the board.
linda gone folks guess tha means danny runs the show?)

!. 3abn has had poor legal and accounting controls to help it mantian its various tax status.

3. 3abn gives the appearence of being a private company staking on the edge of the law.

I. danny hurt his own case from the judges statements.

5. this was not a real court but a administrative court, there is a difference.

5. Based on a lack of clarity to the records of 3abn, i would now join the camp of people who think linda got he short end of the stick when she left with the 250,000.00 seems to me that much more then that is due ıer.

'. Folks danny could leave tomorrow sell everything pay the bills, and walk way with a nice check in his ›ockets(" i am not saying that he will, but he could.)

8. the board that is made to appear to run 3abn is really a rubber stamp for 3abn and has no real control.

9. I would strongly encourage every one to read this report.

Erik

Posted by: Johann Feb 27 2007, 11:27 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Feb 28 2007, 01:44 AM)
>
> Interesting that you quoted Hal Steenson's sermon "Accuser of the Brethren."

And I sure an happy to see you back, HOTY

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 28 2007, 01:30 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Feb 27 2007, 10:27 PM)
>
> And I sure an happy to see you back, HOTY

HOTY,

Me too! I was a little worried you had been "found out".

PB

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 28 2007, 07:21 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Feb 28 2007, 02:30 PM)
>
> HOTY,
>
> Me too! I was a little worried you had been "found out".
>
> PB

Nope, still hanging around.

Maybe there will be another fast.

rofl

Posted by: Bystander Feb 28 2007, 07:50 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Feb 28 2007, 07:21 PM) ☐
>
> Nope, still hanging around.
>
> Maybe there will be another fast.

We can only hope. Fasting and prayer can only be good. Where you been hoty? Trying to get your internet service changed? (you know, to throw em off track) Or maybe some of those appy's you sent paid off and you had go for some interviews. My bet would be on the interview.

Posted by: Clay Feb 28 2007, 07:53 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 28 2007, 07:50 PM) ☐
>
> We can only hope. Fasting and prayer can only be good. Where you been hoty? Trying to get your internet service changed? (you know, to throw em off track) Or maybe some of those appy's you sent paid off and you had go for some interviews. My bet would be on the interview.

interesting to see a person full of so much haterade....

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 28 2007, 08:06 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 28 2007, 08:50 PM) ☐

> Where you been hoty? Trying to get your internet service changed? (you know, to throw em off track) Or maybe some of those appy's you sent paid off and you had go for some interviews. My bet would be on the interview.

)h, and you would be wrong. Just plain wrong. Did I say wrong? Yes, you are wrong.

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 28 2007, 08:12 PM

Throw them off track eh? Nice that you admit that 3abn is trying to track down HOTY and take away his freedom of speech. I wonder how legal that is? Or ethical. But when you are the anointed one you can do as you please I guess. (sigh)

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 28 2007, 08:50 PM) ☐
>
> We can only hope. Fasting and prayer can only be good. Where you been hoty? Trying to get your internet service changed? (you know, to throw em off track) Or maybe some of those appy's you sent paid off and you had go for some interviews. My bet would be on the interview.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 28 2007, 09:23 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 28 2007, 09:53 PM) ☐
>
> interesting to see a person full of so much haterade....
>
>
>

☒ You know.... ☒

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 28 2007, 10:12 PM) ☐

> Throw them off track eh? Nice that you admit that 3abn is trying to track down HOTY and take away his freedom of speech. I wonder how legal that is? Or ethical. But when you are the anointed one you can do as you please I guess. (sigh)

..and I'm wrong for calling THEM demonic forces of Satan.....

don't think so.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Mar 1 2007, 12:38 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 28 2007, 06:50 PM) ☐
>
> We can only hope. Fasting and prayer can only be good. Where you been hoty? Trying to get your internet service changed? (you know, to throw em off track) Or maybe some of those appy's you sent paid off and you had go for some interviews. My bet would be on the interview.

ystander, was hoping that you, wwjd and Lee would have joined us in our season of prayer here last Thursday. Sorry ou couldn't be there.

B

Posted by: LadyTenor Mar 3 2007, 11:24 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 27 2007, 06:07 PM) ☐
>
> Bystander, wwjd, Aletheia, Lee, make comments that instead of clarifying actually confound, or muddy the waters... their intent clearly is to confuse and misdirect.... is not Babylon symbolic of a place of confusion?

..or the Tower of Babel.....

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 28 2007, 09:12 PM) ☐
>
> Throw them off track eh? Nice that you admit that 3abn is trying to track down HOTY and take away his freedom of speech. I wonder how legal that is? Or ethical. But when you are the anointed one you can do as you please I guess. (sigh)

3ABN is under no obligation to protect one's freedom of speech...the First Amendment ays the GOVERNMENT shall not abridge the right to free speech. I does not guarantee ree speech with regard to private entities...

..having said that, I still would not be surprised if Danny Shelton's lackeys were nonitoring this site for "disgruntled" employees, for lack of a better term, for the urpose of terminating their employment.....the fact that they are here spilling the eans would mean that they are not lackey or minion material.....

Posted by: wwjd Mar 4 2007, 02:45 AM

> QUOTE(LadyTenor @ Mar 3 2007, 11:24 PM)
>
> [
>
> ...having said that, I still would not be surprised if Danny Shelton's lackeys were monitoring this site for "disgruntled" employees, for lack of a better term, for the purpose of terminating their employment.....the fact that they are here spilling the beans would mean that they are not lackey or minion material.....
> [/size][/font][/color]

So everyone else is "minion material." ASI, Conference leaders, Mark F, Doug B, David A, Wintley P, Garwin M, Ellsworth M., the hundreds of ministries represented on 3abn, all the well known musical people that perform there.........all of these people are stupid or minions?.....right......

Posted by: sister Mar 4 2007, 08:14 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Mar 4 2007, 03:45 AM)
>
> So everyone else is "minion material." ASI, Conference leaders, Mark F, Doug B, David A, Wintley P, Garwin M, Ellsworth M., the hundreds of ministries represented on 3abn, all the well known musical people that perform there.........all of these people are stupid or minions?.....right......

Perhaps betters terms would be uninformed or deceived...

Posted by: wwjd Mar 4 2007, 08:24 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Mar 4 2007, 08:14 AM)
>
> Perhaps betters terms would be uninformed or deceived...

Just as ludicrous either way.

Posted by: Johann Mar 4 2007, 04:28 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 1 2007, 03:50 AM)
>
> We can only hope. Fasting and prayer can only be good. Where you been hoty? Trying to get your internet service changed? (you know, to throw em off track) Or maybe some of those appy's you sent paid off and you had go for some interviews. My bet would be on the interview.

You still have that jet plane a while longer from where you can grab your assumptions in mid air!

Posted by: Johann Mar 4 2007, 04:38 PM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Mar 4 2007, 10:45 AM) ☐
>
> So everyone else is "minion material." ASI, Conference leaders, Mark F, Doug B, David A, Wintley P, Garwin M, Ellsworth M., the hundreds of ministries represented on 3abn, all the well known musical people that perform there.........all of these people are stupid or minions?.....right......

Some of these have started wondering why they are invited to come to 3ABN. They are asked to preach or sing, and lo and behold it is not so difficult any more. When they get there someone else does most of the preaching and singing for them. So what is the purpose of having them there?

Posted by: Bystander Mar 4 2007, 08:53 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Mar 4 2007, 04:38 PM) ☐
>
> Some of these have started wondering why they are invited to come to 3ABN. They are asked to preach or sing, and lo and behold it is not so difficult any more. When they get there someone else does most of the preaching and singing for them. So what is the purpose of having them there?

☒ ☒ ☒ rofl
This, is desperation in all it's glory....

Posted by: Johann Mar 4 2007, 09:56 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 5 2007, 04:53 AM) ☐
>
> ☒ ☒ ☒ rofl
> This, is desperation in all it's glory....

That is exactly what I am saying. Thanks for admitting it. ☒

Posted by: Panama_Pete Mar 4 2007, 09:57 PM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Mar 4 2007, 02:45 AM) ☐
>
> So everyone else is "minion material." ASI, Conference leaders, Mark F, Doug B, David A, Wintley P, Garwin M, Ellsworth M., the hundreds of ministries represented on 3abn, all the well known musical people > that perform there.........all of these people are stupid or minions?.....right......

f you carry these people around in your back pocket like poker cards to be played the cards will resent being o close to your fanny.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 20 2007, 10:54 PM

> QUOTE(justme @ Feb 12 2007, 10:47 PM)
>
> "WIDOW'S' Mites" indeed! Truly sickening to think of how they are used. It has been long known that Danny can get by with anything in that county, because he has the sheriff just where he wants him.
>
> About the donations: Anyone who has been to a 3ABN rally and who has watched Danny has seen him be approached by individuals who hand Danny an envelope. Danny usually asks, "Do you need a receipt for this?" and if the answer is "NO" it goes into Danny's pants pocket. If the answer is "Yes, please, .. thank you". he refers them to someone who will make out a receipt. 3ABN has been saying that the "Receipts are more than ever no that Linda is gone" because of the need to write more receipts to keep records looking better now that so many eyes are asking to look. Maybe the dollar amount is getting smaller but the number of recorded contributions is going up.
>
> I know of no one who was giving to 3ABN and is still giving. I know of many who have moved their contributions to "The HOPE Channel" instead.
>
> Danny has been ultra-upset at both Adventist Today and BSDA for what is reported about 3ABN. Danny has openly attacked AT on his platforms across the country.
>
> (Liberal? / conservative? Which would apply to Jesus during His ministry. (Please, Don't get into it here but think about that He was accused of both, it depends on whether they were Pharisees or Gentiles.)
>
> AT is composed largely of students and other in Southern California according to one conversation I had with them. They answer to no one, but try to offer a view that you probably wont find anywhere else. And yes they are fussy about their sources. That's probably why it has taken so long to hear about 3ABN again since the firing of Linda.
>
> Keep on asking questions? lots of them? Let Danny and Mollie and Hal know that they are under the microscope. It still looks like Danny is the "Buffoon" along the way. It would appear that Hal and Mollie have been pushing the buttons and Danny sings the tunes. Danny actually believes what Hal and Mollie and Shellie and Kuzma tell him, "You're the chosen one". Chosen to be the "fall guy" for all the rest of the stuff. Danny actually thought he could cover up for Tommy by putting him "on the road for 3ABN" and then hiring and rehiring Tommy behind everybody's back. It's tempting to be "loyal" to family, but the family is unhappy with Tommy as well as with Danny.
>
> "Run, Brandy, run!"(Too late).
>
> Danny believes that Christians are not supposed to sue each other, until it's someone HE wants to sue. Think of how much discovery and documentation would come out of the woodwork in these lawsuits. Support would drop like a rock if the public saw this in the open.

> The church leaders, as did ASI, will take a step back from this. They will neither support nor condemn 3ABN. They will, however side against child abuse as an issue, but they will steer clear from condemning Danny and 3ABN. I dare say the church leaders know all that we know and more. They, too have their "snoops" and tricks.
>
> Let's remember that every one of these individuals in question is a soul that Jesus died for and they need our prayers. They need to listen to God's spirit and humble their hearts and repent.
>
> Pray without ceasing, OK!?

portion of this thread which is not all included here discusses Danny Shelton giving lots of money to the ocal high school for specific projects. Looks like he gives away lots of money. Apparently Danny needs to ppear so very generous and getting lots of thanks from the school. Makes Danny Shelton appear to be a ero.

asen't Danny been fighting against paying taxes where some of it goes to school use? Wasen't it for some aultry sum of less than $2600.00/year?

f course my faulty memory can be playing tricks on me again.

osyroi

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 20 2007, 11:13 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 20 2007, 09:54 PM)
>
> A portion of this thread which is not all included here discusses Danny Shelton giving lots of money to the local high school for specific projects. Looks like he gives away lots of money. Apparently Danny needs to appear so very generous and getting lots of thanks from the school. Makes Danny Shelton appear to be a hero.
>
> Hasen't Danny been fighting against paying taxes where some of it goes to school use? Wasen't it for some paultry sum of less than $2600.00/year?
>
> Of course my faulty memory can be playing tricks on me again.
>
> Rosyroi

osyroi,

ccording to various leaders at 3abn, the money that was donated to the various projects was not from egular donors. It was from a donor or donors that specified it was to be used for such projects.

aurenceD was not certain that the fight against paying taxes would amount to such a paultry sum. He threw ut that figure if the taxes were to be figured on an assessed value of $550,000. I commented that this would e an awfully low figure to fight about and he clarified that he was not sure of the actual figures.

Vith so much information to keep track of I know it is a challenge to make sure we are accurate in what we ost, but it is vital to do so in order to prevent a distorting of the facts.

Posted by: lurker May 21 2007, 06:30 AM

"We can do nothing against the truth but for the truth." 2Cor 13:8

If he hadn't tried to fight the property tax, a lot more information would have remained hidden that has now come to light.

By the way, the money was given in the name of 3ABN not in the name of the "generous donor" and Danny claimed the glory. Was this money listed as income on 3ABN's books and was it pre-tagged for a special project?

In one report of a donation, Danny gave a large donation in the name of 3ABN then publicly impulsively gave an additional large amount on the spur of the moment. Had the donor preauthorized it or did it show that Danny was pledging 3ABN funds and presuming that the donor would come through to cover it.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 21 2007, 06:34 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 21 2007, 05:30 AM) ☐
>
> "We can do nothing against the truth but for the truth." 2Cor 13:8
> If he hadn't tried to fight the property tax, a lot more information would have remained hidden that has now come to light.

Posted by: lurker May 21 2007, 07:38 AM

A concern I have is that it is claimed that a certain donor is giving money to 3ABN to be used for local community schools and projects. I think someone said that the plane might be sponsored by someone. We are led to assume that 3ABN's (and Danny's?) legal fees are being sponsored because of the law firm being used (though at this point that is merely circumstantial evidence). I am sure that each of the principal donors are thinking that the others or one of the others are paying. What evidence is there that any of them are responsible and that the money isn't being taken out of general funds?

And if money is being given by a principal donor (a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) Is this reported as income to 3ABN and handled correctly or is Danny (Danny is also a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) reporting any of it to the IRS as income accrued to him? Since this is supposedly given by principal donors for specific reasons has the IRS investigated to see if any of this giving adversely affects 3ABN's non profit status?

Posted by: runner4him May 21 2007, 08:50 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 21 2007, 08:38 AM) ☐
>
> A concern I have is that it is claimed that a certain donor is giving money to 3ABN to be used for local community schools and projects. I think someone said that the plane might be sponsored by someone. We are led to assume that 3ABN's (and Danny's?) legal fees are being sponsored because of the law firm being used (though at this point that is merely circumstantial evidence). I am sure that each of the principal donors are thinking that the others or one of the others are paying. What evidence is there that any of them are responsible and that the money isn't being taken out of general funds?
>
> And if money is being given by a principal donor (a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) Is this reported as income to 3ABN and handled correctly or is Danny (Danny is also a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) reporting any of it to the IRS as income accrued to him? Since this is supposedly given by principal donors for specific reasons has the IRS investigated to see if any of this giving adversely affects 3ABN's non profit status?

Very good points, Lurker! A new thought....monies given for the legal fees ...would these monies be seen as income for Danny and then would he have to pay TAXES on that money? That could present as a real problem for him. Money donated vs money given for other purposes like the plane or whatever ....how is the money viewed through the eyes of the IRS? Hope Danny has good counsel with all this. Anyone out there...have some light on this?

Posted by: Johann May 21 2007, 09:26 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 21 2007, 03:38 PM) ☐
>
> A concern I have is that it is claimed that a certain donor is giving money to 3ABN to be used for local community schools and projects. I think someone said that the plane might be sponsored by someone. We are led to assume that 3ABN's (and Danny's?) legal fees are being sponsored because of the law firm being used (though at this point that is merely circumstantial evidence). I am sure that each of the principal donors are thinking that the others or one of the others are paying. What evidence is there that any of them are responsible and that the money isn't being taken out of general funds?
>
> And if money is being given by a principal donor (a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) Is this reported as income to 3ABN and handled correctly or is Danny (Danny is also a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) reporting any of it to the IRS as income accrued to him? Since this is supposedly given by principal donors for specific reasons has the IRS investigated to see if any of this giving adversely affects 3ABN's non profit status?

Regulations are not the same everywhere, but in certtain parts of the world if you receive such aid from another person it would count as taxable personal income. This could also apply to funds donated to pay for the private investigators who trailed us when we were around there back in 2004.

Posted by: Fran May 21 2007, 10:19 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 21 2007, 08:38 AM) ☐

> A concern I have is that it is claimed that a certain donor is giving money to 3ABN to be used for local community schools and projects. I think someone said that the plane might be sponsored by someone. We are led to assume that 3ABN's (and Danny's?) legal fees are being sponsored because of the law firm being used (though at this point that is merely circumstantial evidence). I am sure that each of the principal donors are thinking that the others or one of the others are paying. What evidence is there that any of them are responsible and that the money isn't being taken out of general funds?
>
> And if money is being given by a principal donor (a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) Is this reported as income to 3ABN and handled correctly or is Danny (Danny is also a disqualified person in the eyes of the government) reporting any of it to the IRS as income accrued to him? Since this is supposedly given by principal donors for specific reasons has the IRS investigated to see if any of this giving adversely affects 3ABN's non profit status?

Lurker,

We must do lunch one day! I just love your language!

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 21 2007, 10:23 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 21 2007, 09:26 AM)
>
> Regulations are not the same everywhere, but in certtain parts of the world if you receive such aid from another person it would count as taxable personal income. This could also apply to funds donated to pay for the private investigators who trailed us when we were around there back in 2004.

If you take the names Desi Arnaz and Lucille Ball and combine them, you can get Desilu Productions.

If you take the names Garwin and Marilee McNeilus, and combine them, you can get the Garmar Foundation. This is just an observation. Anyone here heard of Garmar?

Garmar Foundation
Address 1: 65742 State Highway 56
Address 2:
City: Dodge Center
State: MN
Zip Code: 55927-7750
Contact:
Telephone: 507-374-2000
http://www.tgci.com/funding/fdnresultnew.asp?thisID=6502

page 22

http://www.religionandsocialpolicy.org/docs/research/6-22-2003_private_foundation_giving_patterns.pdf

Aimee and Frank Batten, Jr. Foundation $ 13,225,685 2000
Dr. Scholl Foundation $ 12,815,494 2000
Booth Ferris Foundation $ 12,449,500 2000
Helen Bader Foundation, Inc. $ 12,385,092 2000
Garmar Foundation $ 11,894,351 2000

Posted by: lurker May 21 2007, 11:09 AM

Well Pete, since you opened up that can of worms, Garmar's 990's are available for viewing at Guidestar. They are there are 2 Garmars there. The Dodge Center one is the one you want, not the Hawaii one.

Posted by: Grith May 21 2007, 06:36 PM

Does anyone know why the Garmar Foundation is sharing the same address with G. McNeilus Wind Energy Company when the latter is a for profit company and the former is a Tax Exempt/NonProfit Organization (other than Garwin McNeilus heading both)?
Compare http://www.taxexemptworld.com/organization.asp?tn=857480 and http://www.elcon.org/Documents/FERCFilings/091205EPSA-ELCON-etcAlliantFiling.pdf [see page 10]

Posted by: lurker May 21 2007, 06:54 PM

> QUOTE(Grith @ May 21 2007, 06:36 PM)
>
> Does anyone know why the Garmar Foundation is sharing the same address with G. McNeilus Wind Energy Company when the latter is a for profit company and the former is a Tax Exempt/NonProfit Organization (other than Garwin McNeilus heading both)?
> Compare http://www.taxexemptworld.com/organization.asp?tn=857480 and > http://www.elcon.org/Documents/FERCFilings/091205EPSA-ELCON-etcAlliantFiling.pdf [see page 10]

The Wind Energy Company funds the Garmar Foundation. This is perfectly legitimate and on the up and up. If you read the GarMar 990's you will see that they state that is where the money is coming from and it also states the causes that money is donated to by the foundation and the amounts donated.

Posted by: st mary May 21 2007, 06:59 PM

This my first time accessing you site but I had been reading for a few weeks. I am just a regular member of the SDA church and I have watched with much disappointment at first but now with interest at what has been taking place at 3ABN and the church. I now see this as sad as it is, as a good thing as nothing can happen without God's permission.For those of us who have placed our faith in the church,this has come to shatter our faith and for us to reexamine our faith and place it where it belongs which is in God and for those of us who already have strong faith in God, this should strength our faith.

Posted by: runner4him May 21 2007, 07:12 PM

> QUOTE(st mary @ May 21 2007, 06:59 PM)
>
> This my first time accessing you site but I had been reading for a few weeks. I am just a regular member of the SDA church and I have watched with much disappointment at first but now with interest at what has been taking place at 3ABN and the church. I now see this as sad as it is, as a good thing as nothing can happen without God's permission.For those of us who have placed our faith in the church,this has come to shatter our faith and for us to reexamine our faith and place it where it belongs which is in God and for those of us who already have strong faith in God, this should strength our faith.

Welcome st mary! You will feel most welcome here. You are right...we need to place our faith where it belongs....in God and not in man. It is a wakeup call for all of us....time to stop and rethink what we are doing and what IS our mission here on earth? It is not a work to leave to others but a work we must do ourselves...work out our Salvation in Him and then pray that we hear that still small voice behind us saying "here is the way....walk ye in it". We all fall short of the glory of God and need that redeeming blood and grace to follow Him. This is a sad time as we become aware of corruption where we thought only good things were happening but it is also a time to glory as we see our Lord work to refine His people.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 21 2007, 07:17 PM

> QUOTE(st mary @ May 21 2007, 04:59 PM) ☐
>
> This my first time accessing you site but I had been reading for a few weeks. I am just a regular member of the SDA church and I have watched with much disappointment at first but now with interest at what has been taking place at 3ABN and the church. I now see this as sad as it is, as a good thing as nothing can happen without God's permission.For those of us who have placed our faith in the church,this has come to shatter our faith and for us to reexamine our faith and place it where it belongs which is in God and for those of us who already have strong faith in God, this should strength our faith.

☒ welc to BSDA st mary. ☒

Rosyroi

Posted by: st mary May 21 2007, 07:58 PM

Thank you so much for welcoming me.
For a number of years we had the sky angel network in our home and was truly blessed by it as I watched Miss Linda so sincere in her praise and service to God. God used her greatly to reach me at a defining moment in my life and I have been praying for her ever since her ordeal began. The details of what had happened is not nearly as important as the result of it all. The impotent 3ABN board under the instruction of demons have taken it upon themselves to destroy one whom Christ died for, one created in the image of God. I had been told by a pastor at 3ABN when I called the Pastoral Department asking why was there no room for forgiveness even if she was to have committed the sin and I was told that there is much more to what I am hearing. But if any 3abn supporter would dare to comment please spare me the details. I do not need to know them. They are totally unimportant and irrelevant to me and I believe, it is to God also. Forgiveness is a must without any conditions attached.
I received an amazing understanding of forgiveness and redemption from Miss Linda while watching her speak on tv. I could feel the presence of the Holy Spirit shining through her when I watched and I was blessed. Time passed and I started to feel an evil presence coming through. The talk was evil, crude and even the sermons of Mr Lomacong,one whom I had respected was shockingly,demonic. I started to select what and who I watched on 3ABN. IT was a relief though for my family and me when it was taken off Sky angel network. I just refuse to listen to to the toxic talk and atmosphere of what once was a good thing.

Posted by: princessdi May 21 2007, 08:09 PM

Merciliations!!!! Welcome to BSDA st mary!!!!

> QUOTE(st mary @ May 21 2007, 06:58 PM) ☐
>
> Thank you so much for welcoming me.
> For a number of years we had the sky angel network in our home and was truly blessed by it as I watched Miss Linda so sincere in her praise and service to God. God used her greatly to reach me at a defining moment in my life and I have been praying for her ever since her ordeal began. The details of what had happened is not nearly as important as the result of it all. The impotent 3ABN board under the instruction of demons have taken it upon themselves to destroy one whom Christ died for, one created in the image of God. I had been told by a pastor at 3ABN when I called the Pastoral Department asking why was there no room for forgiveness even if she was to have committed the sin and I was told that there is much more to what I am hearing. But if any 3abn supporter would dare to comment please spare me the details. I do > not need to know them. They are totally unimportant and irrelevant to me and I believe, it is to God also.

> Forgiveness is a must without any conditions attached.
> I received an amazing understanding of forgiveness and redemption from Miss Linda while watching her speak on tv. I could feel the presence of the Holy Spirit shining through her when I watched and I was blessed. Time passed and I started to feel an evil presence coming through. The talk was evil, crude and even the sermons of Mr Lomacong,one whom I had respected was shockingly,demonic. I started to select what and who I watched on 3ABN. IT was a relief though for my family and me when it was taken off Sky angel network. I just refuse to listen to to the toxic talk and atmosphere of what once was a good thing.

Posted by: roxe May 21 2007, 10:39 PM

> QUOTE(st mary @ May 21 2007, 07:58 PM) ☐
>
> Thank you so much for welcoming me.
> ...under the instruction of demons...
> ...Time passed and I started to feel an evil presence coming through. The talk was evil, crude and even the sermons of Mr Lomacong,one whom I had respected was shockingly,demonic...
> ...it was taken off Sky angel network...

☒ welc

☒ wow.gif who is this lady? you are ☒ !!

t's called fundamentalist charismatic pentecostalism... demon worship... dressed up in SDA terminology...
nd to me, this is much worse than anything else going on...

lus sad news... not only are they back on sky angel, but the dish network has made 3abn part of their basic ackage... now even more people can be exposed to this...

ersonally, i hope and pray that this court case breaks WIDE open across this country and around the world... eople get their eyes open and the funds dry up as the dew before the morning sun.

MHO...

Posted by: Fran May 22 2007, 12:34 AM

> QUOTE(roxe @ May 21 2007, 11:39 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ welc
>
> ☒ wow.gif who is this lady? you are ☒ !!

> it's called fundamentalist charismatic pentecostalism... demon worship... dressed up in SDA terminology... and to me, this is much worse than anything else going on...
>
> plus sad news... not only are they back on sky angel, but the dish network has made 3abn part of their basic package... now even more people can be exposed to this...
>
> personally, i hope and pray that this court case breaks WIDE open across this country and around the world... people get their eyes open and the funds dry up as the dew before the morning sun.
>
> JMHO...

Are you actually getting 3ABN? I just looked again. They said they would have the same Chanel. There is nothing there. ??????

Posted by: LaurenceD May 22 2007, 03:46 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 21 2007, 12:13 AM)
>
> LaurenceD was not certain that the fight against paying taxes would amount to such a paultry sum. He threw out that figure if the taxes were to be figured on an assessed value of $550,000. I commented that this would be an awfully low figure to fight about and he clarified that he was not sure of the actual figures.

've learned a little more about property taxes in Illinois. Here's an overview of how they work...
http://www.iltax.com/Publications/LocalGovernment/PTAX1004.pdf

And an example of the breakdown with the different taxing districts within a county in Illinois...

Understanding Your Property Tax Bill

How is a tax bill calculated?

Once tax rates for all taxing bodies in a county have been set, the County Clerk must add up the rates which apply to particular areas in the county. Different parts of the county are under jurisdiction of different combinations of taxing districts. The County Clerk divides the county into tax code areas, in which all property is subject to the jurisdiction of the same combination of taxing units and thus has the same combination of tax rates. Aggregate rates are computed for each code area. A tax bill is calculated by multiplying the equalized assessed value of a property (less any homestead exemptions) by the aggregate rate for the tax code area in which the property lies.

The aggregate rate seen on a bill will be a combination of a county rate, a township rate, a school district, a city rate (if a taxpayer lives within the boundaries of an incorporated municipality), and rates for any special districts, such as fire, sanitary, etc., which service the area. In Illinois, the rate is generally expressed in terms of dollars per hundred dollars of equalized assessed valuation (the same as a percent).

As an example, an aggregate rate of 9.964 might include:

County	1.068
City	2.570
School District	4.485
Jr. College	.420
Forest Preserve District	.080

> Sanitary District .525
> Park District .816
> Total - 9.964
>
> A taxpayer whose home had an equalized assessed value of $20,000 (after the homestead exemptions were deducted) would have had, based on this rate, a tax bill of $1,993.
> http://www.iltax.com/LocalGovernment/PropertyTax/taxbill.htm

Notice in the example, a home valued at $20,000 is taxed nearly $2,000. That's huge. That's $10,000 per $100,000 valuation. Unheard of around here. I actually know of a house around here valued at $550,000 and the anual property taxes are only $3,300. I looked it up online via the county's website...which has every parcel in the county listed for public viewing. It also shows the sales history for the last several years. Yep, you can easily find out what the seller paid for it.

The state doesn't collect a percentage of the property tax, as I previously suggested. It does in my state. Rather, it stays at the local levels. Also, by law, only 33.3% of the total equalized value is taxed. The tax rate is generally higher than I thought. I don't know the rates in Franklin Co., but If you were to take a value of $550,000, and multiply that by an average aggregate rate of 7.000...that would be $550,000 x .0700 = $38,500. But, we don't know if the 550K is the total value or the assessed value (based on 33.3%). If the 550K is the total assessment, then one third of that would mean the property tax bill would be $12,833. Anyway, however you look at it, the school might only end up with half the total property tax. That would be worth challenging 3abn over, whether the net benefit to the school was only $6,417, or even better if it was $19, 250 (half of $38,500).

Posted by: roxe May 22 2007, 10:07 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 22 2007, 12:34 AM) ☐
>
> Are you actually getting 3ABN? I just looked again. They said they would have the same Chanel. There is nothing there. ??????

Fran, sorry... but i posted that before reading in other threads that there seems to be troubled silence about what is supposed to be happening... grammietana was gracious to send me her vhs tape of the merger... watching it several times, i was just going by their excited assurances that all this was/is really happening.

i don't have a tv... so have no way of knowing if all that "excitement" is just "blowing in the wind" and more "nothingness"...

if nothing is really happening... then why waste 2 hours of airtime and money leading us down the garden path?? perhaps they did the broadcast hoping to receive more $$...

who knows...

Posted by: Rosyroi May 22 2007, 10:17 PM

> QUOTE(roxe @ May 22 2007, 08:07 PM) ☐
>
> Fran, sorry... but i posted that before reading in other threads that there seems to be troubled silence about what is supposed to be happening... grammietana was gracious to send me her vhs tape of the merger... watching it several times, i was just going by their excited assurances that all this was/is really happening.

> i don't have a tv... so have no way of knowing if all that "excitement" is just "blowing in the wind" and more "nothingness"...
>
> if nothing is really happening... then why waste 2 hours of airtime and money leading us down the garden path?? perhaps they did the broadcast hoping to receive more $$...
>
> who knows...

t i$ alway$ the $$$$$.

$hould $tart counting the time$ Danny or other$ talk about a$king for donor monie$ at each program. They hink we are all $ucker$.

Ro$yRoi

Posted by: Fran May 22 2007, 10:24 PM

> QUOTE(roxe @ May 22 2007, 11:07 PM) ☐
>
> Fran, sorry... but i posted that before reading in other threads that there seems to be troubled silence about what is supposed to be happening... grammietana was gracious to send me her vhs tape of the merger... watching it several times, i was just going by their excited assurances that all this was/is really happening.
>
> i don't have a tv... so have no way of knowing if all that "excitement" is just "blowing in the wind" and more "nothingness"...
>
> if nothing is really happening... then why waste 2 hours of airtime and money leading us down the garden path?? perhaps they did the broadcast hoping to receive more $$...
>
> who knows...

Well, I thought they may have changed their channel.

You ask some the same questions I do about all the hoop-la!

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 22 2007, 11:17 PM) ☐
>
> It i$ alway$ the $$$$$.
>
> I $hould $tart counting the time$ Danny or other$ talk about a$king for donor monie$ at each program. They think we are all $ucker$.
>
> Ro$yRoi

☒ ☒ rofl ☐ ☒ ☒ rofl ☐ ☒ rofl ☒ rofl

Posted by: roxe May 22 2007, 10:37 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 22 2007, 10:17 PM)
>
> It i$ alway$ the $$$$$.
> I $hould $tart counting the time$ Danny or other$ talk about a$king for donor monie$ at each program.
> They think we are all $ucker$.
> Ro$yRoi

Ro$yRoi, you're a breath of fre$h air!

...and $o is Fran...

Posted by: sonshineonme May 22 2007, 10:56 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 22 2007, 09:17 PM)
>
> It i$ alway$ the $$$$$.
>
> I $hould $tart counting the time$ Danny or other$ talk about a$king for donor monie$ at each program.
> They think we are all $ucker$.
>
> Ro$yRoi

what a spot on post!!! love it!!!!!!!!!!

Posted by: Noahswife May 23 2007, 12:35 PM

There have been many questions regarding 501(c)(3) organizations. I thought I would share the following if anyone is interested......

Q: What is the difference between a public charity and private foundation?

A: All organizations which apply for tax exemption under 501(c)(3) are either classified as "public charities" or "private foundations." A 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organization is classified as a "private foundation" unless it falls under one of three exceptions, in which case it is classified as a public charity: (1) by virtue of its activities (churches, schools, hospitals, and a few others); (2) it is organized and operated exclusively for the benefit of, to perform the functions of, or to carry out the purposes of, a public charity; or (3) it can show that it is "publicly supported" (which generally means receiving financial support from a broad group of funding sources).

With regard to "publicly supported" public charities, the determination of whether an organization is publicly supported is based initially on the information provided by the Organization on its Application for Tax Exemption (IRS Form 1023) and then on the informational tax returns filed annually with the IRS (IRS Form 990 or 990-EZ). Additionally, at the end of its "Advance Ruling Period" the Organization should file IRS Form 8734 to prove that its sources of revenue meet the "public support test" or otherwise meets the operating tests for remaining a public charity.

Why does this classification make a difference? Determination as a public charity, rather than as a private foundation, is generally more desirable for most nonprofit organizations, for several reasons: private foundations are subject to a 2% tax on net investment income; private foundations are generally prohibited from engaging in a number of activities that public charities may undertake, including an absolute prohibition on lobbying activities; contributions to private foundations are not deductible to the donor to the same extent as contributions to public charities; and reporting and disclosure requirements for private foundations are more strict than for public charities.

For those interested here is a bit more regarding these organizations:

http://www.probonopartner.org/publications/pbpfaq.htm

Posted by: lurker Jun 5 2007, 07:03 AM

Much has been made of the influence of a few wealthy donors. I looked at the Garmar 990's and then at this website. http://tinyurl.com/37a2za

And it seems to me that the bulk of the money comes instead from the stockholders in the pews. This site refers to charitable gift annuities from donors in one state only and for a limited period of time.

Posted by: Rosyroi Jun 5 2007, 12:40 PM

> QUOTE(lurker @ Jun 5 2007, 05:03 AM)
>
> Much has been made of the influence of a few wealthy donors. I looked at the Garmar 990's and then at this website. http://tinyurl.com/37a2za
>
> And it seems to me that the bulk of the money comes instead from the stockholders in the pews. This site refers to charitable gift annuities from donors in one state only and for a limited period of time.

Thank you lurker.

This information you have provided has helped me feel less fearful about the presumed power these big money doners seem to have in control over the situation at 3ABN.

There are so many powerful people in our church who apparently effertlessly control quite a bit of our church activities. This is present from the local level all the way up the GC.

I need to remind myself God is in control. He just lets the pharasees get away with things just so long before truth comes out. Today with www truth is comming out years faster than it used to. Of course gossip also travels at least as fast or faster.

JMO

Rosyroi

Posted by: lurker Jun 8 2007, 06:43 AM

As we have been reminded, just becase the GC has made a statement doesn't mean that it is all over. And as I digest some of the information I am still finding, I would like to point out that in this particular document, it was noted that 3ABN issued 18 charitable gift annuities in Washington state after having knowledge that it was required to obtain a certificate of exemption. http://tinyurl.com/37a2za

What is the consensus here? In your opinions did they, in their hunger for money, deliberately break the law? Would the fine have been less if they had waited to issue them until it was legal after they found out they needed a certificate? Were they afraid that the donors would tire of waiting and go with another ministry or to the church with their money?

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Doug In Denial? Or Danny's Bluff?

Posted by: Pickle May 4 2007, 04:27 PM

http://www.3abn.org/pdf/world/3ABN-World-2007-06.pdf. The cover story is all about the merger, and the cover says that the magazine is "Published Monthly by 3ABN/Amazing Facts."

I still haven't heard Doug come out and state how he feels about Danny covering up his brother's child molestation allegations, or Danny's divorcing Linda when he didn't know whether or not she had committed fornication. Anyone know where Doug stands on these questions?

Notice how the ASI president who also sits on the ASI Mission, Inc. board, Debbie Young, has an article in the magazine too. Does that suggest that the ASI Missions, Inc. board will indeed be the new constituency?

The way this issue is put together you'd think Doug and Debbie are 100% behind Danny. Is that reality or is this just an illusion created by Danny?

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 5 2007, 07:16 AM

I hate to call somebody's competency into question, but it's better than attacking their character.

Right now I prefer to believe that Doug and AF asked Danny about the allegations on the 'net, and were told they were all lies told by people trying to "destroy the ministry." And believed it.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 5 2007, 10:40 AM

I also am giving Doug the benefit of the doubt at the moment. However, Eve believed what that serpent told her when it would have been better for all if she had attempted to confirm whether or not what the serpent had told her was true before she put her trust in him.

Posted by: Noahswife May 5 2007, 12:05 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 08:16 AM)
>
> I hate to call somebody's competency into question, but it's better than attacking their character.
>
> Right now I prefer to believe that Doug and AF asked Danny about the allegations on the 'net, and were told they were all lies told by people trying to "destroy the ministry." And believed it.

SE h

Character? Competency? Pleeaazzzzz.....

I think that anyone making donations to AF that is aware of the 3abn situation should be melting the wires to DB's phones. Is the AF "leader" also without a competent board that functions as a board would in the real world? Or is it also a board that is nothing more than a giant affirmation stamp for someone's dreams and aspirations? Can someone help me on this one?

nw
C"i"

Posted by: runner4him May 5 2007, 01:05 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 5 2007, 12:05 PM)
>
> SE h
>
> Character? Competency? Pleeaazzzzz.....
>
> I think that anyone making donations to AF that is aware of the 3abn situation should be melting the wires to DB's phones. Is the AF "leader" also without a competent board that functions as a board would in the real world? Or is it also a board that is nothing more than a giant affirmation stamp for someone's dreams and aspirations? Can someone help me on this one?
>
> nw
> C"i"

I agree with you, Noahswife! If even a Peon (talking about me) can read what is on the internet here and at save3abn then someone like DB who has a "competent board" (to quote you) and who knows other solid SDA friends/ministers/evangelists/officials of the church in high places should be able to ask his own questions while sifting through all the "stuff". It is not that difficult to come to an intelligent conclusion. I do not want to judge him or his motives but it does look too cozy for me. My donations stopped going to AF when I first heard of the merger with no pronouncement of cleaning house. We must not hide behind the cloak of apparent christianity and remain silent about real issues...that leaves me with a bad taste in my mouth. Back to standing up for truth....and principles...and rights of victims...and the pure unadulterated Gospel. There is always a lesson in everything....pray that we might not be puffed up and forget our total need of Him for all things.

Posted by: Treniece May 5 2007, 01:55 PM

There doesn't seem to be any clear facts with the Danny and Linda situation, I believe that is why most of Danny's supporters would rather focus on the good of his ministry.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 5 2007, 03:00 PM

> QUOTE(Treniece @ May 5 2007, 12:55 PM)
>
> There doesn't seem to be any clear facts with the Danny and Linda situation, I believe that is why most of Danny's supporters would rather focus on the good of his ministry.

Well, if there aren't any clear facts, why have donations dropped in the first quarter--in the seven figures? Seems like something's clear to someone!

Original documents don't lie.

A lot of Danny's supporters were in denial until they read save3abn.com. I believe if more of them were to head on over and read without prejudice, there would be a house-cleaning.

NW and R4H are both right--AF donors ought to hold off awhile, and Doug really should know better. But the truth is, it's not the easiest thing if you've been friends with someone awhile to believe such bad things about them. Of course he should be investigating, but he's as busy as any of us and relies on people to tell him what to believe on this. I'm not commending him for it, but it's probably how it is.

Remember that we've got no evidence of egregiously bad behavior on Doug's part--unless you count ambition.

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 03:11 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 4 2007, 03:27 PM)
>
> http://www.3abn.org/pdf/world/3ABN-World-2007-06.pdf.
>
> The way this issue is put together you'd think Doug and Debbie are 100% behind Danny. Is that reality or is this just an illusion created by Danny?

well since ASI totally spun the reason for their withdrawal from "discussions",.... it is probably both reality and DS's deliberate and conscious illusion.
it's beginning to look like the new 3abn and the new 3abn board is going to be a union between ASI, Amazing Facts & GC (in the sense that ken denslow was on the 3abn board). we were talking about this scenario last night and although it's good that "one" person is not in full control, it most likely will also mean that "the undiluted message" will disappear. this is where the "veil" is hung up and DS, etal's sins shall be hidden and "be as if they never were" and life goes on.
this is the time for deepest prayer and strong actions. time for us to do our writing with pen and paper and when we do that, we must make sure we have our information and our attitude correct lest our words come back void.
i propose a vigorous, honest and sincere writing campaign among all of us.
i also, propose that we need to vigorously support in any way we can those who's heads are on the chopping block for simply standing up and speaking out against wrongding in our ministries, whomever they are.
we must speak out in the defense of "speaking out". we must speak in the defense of having the freedom within our denomination to always be able to do that without being sued. this is not a time to speak in any deceitful way. if we want to be effective, we have to speak the truth and speak we must; not just here, but much more importantly, to the powers that be. i believe this is our small window of opportunity before all we've discussed here gets swept permanently under the "red persian rug". let's get busy.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 06:16 AM)
>
> I hate to call somebody's competency into question, but it's better than attacking their character.
>
> Right now I prefer to believe that Doug and AF asked Danny about the allegations on the 'net, and were told they were all lies told by people trying to "destroy the ministry." And believed it.

unbelievably naive and foolish. but possible.

Posted by: Eirene May 5 2007, 03:16 PM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 5 2007, 01:05 PM)
>
> I agree with you, Noahswife! If even a Peon (talking about me) can read what is on the internet here and > at save3abn then someone like DB who has a "competent board" (to quote you) and who knows other solid SDA friends/ministers/evangelists/officials of the church in high places should be able to ask his own questions while sifting through all the "stuff". It is not that difficult to come to an intelligent conclusion. I do not want to judge him or his motives but it does look too cozy for me. My donations stopped going to AF when I first heard of the merger with no pronouncement of cleaning house. We must not hide behind the cloak of apparent christianity and remain silent about real issues...that leaves me with a bad taste in my mouth. Back to standing up for truth....and principles...and rights of victims...and the pure unadulterated Gospel. There is always a lesson in everything....pray that we might not be puffed up and forget our total need of Him for all things.

would like to ask you and many others on this forum some questions.
)o you know Danny or Linda personally?
lave you ever been to 3abn facilities?
lave you spent a lot of time with any of those talked about on this forum?

Vell, 1. Doug has
!. Doug did and does
}. Doug has many times
|. Doug has
;o the big question: Could it be remotely possible that Doug knows plenty that you people don't know and ias made the decision of the merge accordingly.
'o the lurkers here, this will make total sense.
'o the rest of you, you will twist and turn it and end up with something ridiculous that makes no sense vhatsoever.For instance, those of you that answered no to those questions, somehow, know more than Doug.
3ut that's ok, I had my say.

Posted by: Clay May 5 2007, 03:19 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 5 2007, 04:16 PM) ☐
>
> I would like to ask you and many others on this forum some questions.
> Do you know Danny or Linda personally?
> Have you ever been to 3abn facilities?
> Have you spent a lot of time with any of those talked about on this forum?
>
> Well, 1. Doug has
> 2. Doug did and does
> 3. Doug has many times
> 4. Doug has
> So the big question: Could it be remotely possible that Doug knows plenty that you people don't know and has made the decision of the merge accordingly.
> To the lurkers here, this will make total sense.
> To the rest of you, you will twist and turn it and end up with something ridiculous that makes no sense whatsoever.For instance, those of you that answered no to those questions, somehow, know more than Doug. But that's ok, I had my say.

'ou mean like you are twisting and turning and asking those who lurk to believe the ummm interesting
:xplanations you have put forth? Had you read some of the posts you would know that indeed there are 1ANY here who have been to 3abn, worked for 3abn, spent time at 3abn... they have 1st hand testimony....

'es you have had your say.... thank you for sharing your opinion....

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 03:23 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 5 2007, 11:05 AM) ☐
>
> SE ☒ h
>
> Character? Competency? Pleeaazzzzz.....
>
> I think that anyone making donations to AF that is aware of the 3abn situation should be melting the wires to DB's phones. Is the AF "leader" also without a competent board that functions as a board would in the real world? Or is it also a board that is nothing more than a giant affirmation stamp for someone's dreams and aspirations? Can someone help me on this one?
>
> nw
> C"i"

"I suggest you be more careful for what you say or you will find yourself looking down your nose at a Judge." quote from lee to mozart ☒ rofl

just to lighten things up a bit........now for seriousness. i don't think the AF board is a rubber stamp, but i also don't believe they have taken all these allegations against DS seriously. we all know what a spin doctor and what a manipulater some people can be. just like we ourselves learned we had been deceived, so shall others learn the hard way. all i can do is shake my head in sheer wonderment. seems getting the most powerful religious satellite network is much more important than taking certain folks, at that network, to task. taking the network and giving it a new image is the job at hand. business is business. it would be the same with any business merger or takeover, i'm thinking. the entity is what's important, not the individual. look at donald trump. moral? no. teaming with wealthy successes. yes. most of what we have here are moral issues and morality isn't tangible. any of that make sense or am i clueless?

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 5 2007, 12:05 PM) ☐
>
> My donations stopped going to AF when I first heard of the merger with no pronouncement of cleaning house. We must not hide behind the cloak of apparent christianity and remain silent about real issues...that leaves me with a bad taste in my mouth. Back to standing up for truth....and principles...and rights of victims...and the pure unadulterated Gospel. There is always a lesson in everything....pray that we might not be puffed up and forget our total need of Him for all things.

100% aggreement from me.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 5 2007, 03:26 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 5 2007, 02:11 PM) ☐
>
> we must speak out in the defense of "speaking out". we must speak in the defense of having the freedom within our denomination to always be able to do that without being sued. this is not a time to speak in any deceitful way. if we want to be effective, we have to speak the truth and speak we must; not just here, but much more importantly, to the powers that be. i believe this is our small window of opportunity before all we've discussed here gets swept permanently under the "red persian rug". let's get busy.

Great idea. Let's all of us, denizens and lurkers, write to:

Local Conference:

Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
Kenneth Denslow, President
619 Plainfield Rd
Willowbrook, IL 60527-8437

Union (one level up):

Lake Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
Walter L. Wright, President
PO Box C
Berrien Springs, MI 49103-0904

Division (two levels up):

North American Division of Seventh-day Adventists
Don Schneider, President
12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring, MD 20904-6600

General Conference:

General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
Jan Paulsen, President
12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring, Maryland 20904-6600

Elder Denslow is the local conference president; writing him is good if for no other reason than to encourage him to publicly remove himself from the board (and I don't care if his parents work for 3ABN). Danny outweighs him in power by many orders of magnitude, though, and one has to write at higher levels to encourage the church to distance themselves from him.

Here are a few more addresses:

Amazing Facts
Doug Batchelor, President
P.O. Box 1058
Roseville, CA 95678-8058

Weimar Institute
Don Christensen, President
PO Box 486
Weimar, CA 95736

ASI Ministries
12501 Old Columbia Pike,
Silver Spring, MD 20904

The following are ASI officers. I include all their names because as long as they affiliate themselves with 3ABN, they bring shame on themselves, their organization, and the church.

President - Debbie Young
Secretary/Treasurer - Ron Christman
General Vice President - Chester Clark III
Vice Presidents - Viorel Catarama, Chip Doss, Leasa Hodges, Doreen Schmidt, Barbara Taylor
NAD appointees - Juan Prestol, Don Schneider, Halvard Thomsen
Union ASI Secretary - Norm Clam
Conference ASI Secretary - Duane McKey
Union ASI Chapter Presidents - Lorayne Barton, Chester Clark Jr., Gayle Clark, Steve Dickman, Sharon

Erickson, Elizabeth Gonsalves-Remington, Sandy Miller, Dan Ross
Members at large - Ellsworth McKee, Tom Zapara
Immediate past president - Denzil McNeilus
President, Missions Inc. - Harold Lance

ASI Missions Inc.
President - Harold Lance
NAD appointees - Juan Prestol, Don Schneider, Halvard Thomsen
Members - Terry Anderson, Ron Christman, Dan Houghton, Andre Jubert, MD, Ellsworth McKee, Denzil McNeilus, Garwin McNeilus, Jane Sines, Stan Smith, Debbie Young

This is a lot of stamps, but if we can make some noise, maybe people will realize that the temple needs to be cleansed.

By the way, these are all publicly available addresses I got from the Internet, in case anyone wonders.

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 03:28 PM

--------I have a question for you Eirene--------
How many times have you heard a divorced spouse say, "I lived with them all those years, but I never knew them!!"?
Please Answer Your Own Questions.

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 5 2007, 02:16 PM) ☐
>
> I would like to ask you and many others on this forum some questions.
> Do you know Danny or Linda personally?
> Have you ever been to 3abn facilities?
> Have you spent a lot of time with any of those talked about on this forum?
>
> Well, 1. Doug has
> 2. Doug did and does
> 3. Doug has many times
> 4. Doug has
> So the big question: Could it be remotely possible that Doug knows plenty that you people don't know and has made the decision of the merge accordingly.
> To the lurkers here, this will make total sense.
> To the rest of you, you will twist and turn it and end up with something ridiculous that makes no sense whatsoever.For instance, those of you that answered no to those questions, somehow, know more than Doug. But that's ok, I had my say.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 5 2007, 03:36 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 5 2007, 02:16 PM) ☐
>
> I would like to ask you and many others on this forum some questions.
> Do you know Danny or Linda personally?
> Have you ever been to 3abn facilities?
> Have you spent a lot of time with any of those talked about on this forum?

> Well, 1. Doug has
> 2. Doug did and does
> 3. Doug has many times
> 4. Doug has
> So the big question: Could it be remotely possible that Doug knows plenty that you people don't know and has made the decision of the merge accordingly.
> To the lurkers here, this will make total sense.
> To the rest of you, you will twist and turn it and end up with something ridiculous that makes no sense whatsoever.For instance, those of you that answered no to those questions, somehow, know more than Doug. But that's ok, I had my say.

ou realize you're making Doug look as bad as Danny. If he's colluding somehow, he's not the man I thought e was.

erhaps if he'd spent some time on save3abn.com he wouldn't have gone through. He's a busy guy he as to rely on what other people tell him unless he decides it's important to find out for himself. That's why etter writing is so important.

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 03:40 PM

you are so awesome SE. i was going to ask for someone to post addresses just as you did here. thanks so much. ☒ than ☒ than ☒ than

btw, i wrote the illinois conf. Attn: Ken Denslow just to ask if he was on the 3abn board. he.... so ungraciously, did not write me back.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 02:26 PM)
>
> Great idea. Let's all of us, denizens and lurkers, write to:
>
> Local Conference:
>
> Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
> Kenneth Denslow, President
> 619 Plainfield Rd
> Willowbrook, IL 60527-8437
>
> Union (one level up):
>
> Lake Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
> Walter L. Wright, President
> PO Box C
> Berrien Springs, MI 49103-0904
>
> Division (two levels up):
>
> North American Division of Seventh-day Adventists
> Don Schneider, President
> 12501 Old Columbia Pike
> Silver Spring, MD 20904-6600
>
> General Conference:
>
> General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
> Jan Paulsen, President
> 12501 Old Columbia Pike

> Silver Spring, Maryland 20904-6600
>
> Elder Denslow is the local conference president; writing him is good if for no other reason than to encourage him to publicly remove himself from the board (and I don't care if his parents work for 3ABN). Danny outweighs him in power by many orders of magnitude, though, and one has to write at higher levels to encourage the church to distance themselves from him.
>
> Here are a few more addresses:
>
> Amazing Facts
> Doug Batchelor, President
> P.O. Box 1058
> Roseville, CA 95678-8058
>
> Weimar Institute
> Don Christensen, President
> PO Box 486
> Weimar, CA 95736
>
> ASI Ministries
> 12501 Old Columbia Pike,
> Silver Spring, MD 20904
>
> The following are ASI officers. I include all their names because as long as they affiliate themselves with 3ABN, they bring shame on themselves, their organization, and the church.
>
> President - Debbie Young
> Secretary/Treasurer - Ron Christman
> General Vice President - Chester Clark III
> Vice Presidents - Viorel Catarama, Chip Doss, Leasa Hodges, Doreen Schmidt, Barbara Taylor
> NAD appointees - Juan Prestol, Don Schneider, Halvard Thomsen
> Union ASI Secretary - Norm Clam
> Conference ASI Secretary - Duane McKey
> Union ASI Chapter Presidents - Lorayne Barton, Chester Clark Jr., Gayle Clark, Steve Dickman, Sharon Erickson, Elizabeth Gonsalves-Remington, Sandy Miller, Dan Ross
> Members at large - Ellsworth McKee, Tom Zapara
> Immediate past president - Denzil McNeilus
> President, Missions Inc. - Harold Lance
>
> ASI Missions Inc.
> President - Harold Lance
> NAD appointees - Juan Prestol, Don Schneider, Halvard Thomsen
> Members - Terry Anderson, Ron Christman, Dan Houghton, Andre Jubert, MD, Ellsworth McKee, Denzil McNeilus, Garwin McNeilus, Jane Sines, Stan Smith, Debbie Young
> This is a lot of stamps, but if we can make some noise, maybe people will realize that the temple needs to be cleansed.
>
> By the way, these are all publicly available addresses I got from the Internet, in case anyone wonders.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 5 2007, 04:25 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 5 2007, 02:40 PM)
>
> you are so awesome SE. i was going to ask for someone to post addresses just as you did here. thanks so > much. ☒ than ☒ than ☒ than ☐ > btw, i wrote the illinois conf. Attn: Ken Denslow just to ask if he was on the 3abn board. he.... so ungraciously, did not write me back.

'ou are too kind. ☒

n Ken's defense, I'm pretty close to someone who grew up with him. Word is, he'd give away his job right ıow if he could. I don't think anyone in the North American Division would even take it.

'hat isn't to say he shouldn't speak up--he should. But as a part of the institution myself I can see why he ıasn't. Perhaps in Ken's case we ought to send cards and letters of sympathy and encouragement.

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 04:33 PM

That might work. ☒

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 03:25 PM) ☐
>
> You are too kind. ☒
>
> In Ken's defense, I'm pretty close to someone who grew up with him. Word is, he'd give away his job right now if he could. I don't think anyone in the North American Division would even take it.
>
> That isn't to say he shouldn't speak up--he should. But as a part of the institution myself I can see why he hasn't. Perhaps in Ken's case we ought to send cards and letters of sympathy and encouragement.

Posted by: Noahswife May 5 2007, 06:33 PM

> QUOTE
>
> "I suggest you be more careful for what you say or you will find yourself looking down your nose at a Judge." quote from lee to Mozart

ıow Mo, i suppose we should be nicer to the newly departed by choice but it really is a funny statement and ıne some of us really like based on personal experience. Do you think Lee is missing us?

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 04:00 PM) ☐
>
> Well, if there aren't any clear facts, why have donations dropped in the first quarter--in the seven figures? Seems like something's clear to someone! ☐ ʒE.....I have been somewhat MIA for a couple weeks so do you know if Eirene has addressed the reason ıehind this anywhere?

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 04:00 PM) ☐

> A lot of Danny's supporters were in denial until they read save3abn.com. I believe if m > ore of them were to head on over and read without prejudice, there would be a house-cleaning.

'he difficult part for me is my mother still prefers to deny the authenticity of TS's letter and claim the ›regnancy test kit means something other than a joke gone bad. So for those who believe what they see on 'V is real the internet is nothing but fabrication and lies. DS & Co have people like my mother convinced hose who speak against DS and ask for transparency are the pawns of Satan. (yes that means me too)

> QUOTE
>
> Remember that we've got no evidence of egregiously bad behavior on Doug's part--unless you count ambition.

think I would find one possible exception to this SE. If what I have come to believe is true, DB should be ›ublicly forthright about what counselling was provided to the Sheltons by him. To not do so and be involved vith DS in this manner suggests traits I do not find commendable. However, where would this proposed nerger be if within the past 6 months DB had set the record straight which would be I believe a very different ;tory than the one DS and his scribes have been telling.

> QUOTE
>
> That isn't to say he shouldn't speak up--he should. But as a part of the institution myself I can see why he hasn't. Perhaps in Ken's case we ought to send cards and letters of sympathy and encouragement.

\ctually, SE I think this is also an excellent idea. I am much more comfortable giving encouragement then naking demands or challenging someone i do not know. Thanks for the suggestion.

.astly, my mother came home from church the sabbath after the announcement stating that due to the nerger with AF they were told in church that 3abn would be back on skyangel within 3 weeks. I have not ;een or heard this anywhere else unless I missed it here. Has anyone else heard anything about this?

ıw
:"i"

Posted by: Observer May 5 2007, 06:37 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 03:25 PM)
>
> You are too kind.
>
> In Ken's defense, I'm pretty close to someone who grew up with him. Word is, he'd give away his job right now if he could. I don't think anyone in the North American Division would even take it.
>
> That isn't to say he shouldn't speak up--he should. But as a part of the institution myself I can see why he hasn't. Perhaps in Ken's case we ought to send cards and letters of sympathy and encouragement.

agree. I have been much the same.

\t this point in time, he is not responding to anybody about 3-ABN.

'es, one potential action of honor that he might to would be to resign from the 3-ABN Board. But, that would aise a tactical question as to whether or not that would be wise.

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 06:51 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 5 2007, 06:33 PM)
>
> Lastly, my mother came home from church the sabbath after the announcement stating that due to the merger with AF they were told in church that 3abn would be back on skyangel within 3 weeks. I have not seen or heard this anywhere else unless I missed it here. Has anyone else heard anything about this?
>
> nw
> C"i"

unless i missed something, the merger had nothing to do with 3abn being back. it will be on dish, not skyangel. moses met with the dish network people in las vegas, during a convention, at the same time the "emergency meetings" were taking place so i don't see how it's possible that moses could have used that to persuade the dish ppl to put 3abn on dish using dish's echostar satellite. if i am not mistaken, the echostar satellite was damaged in an area that was leased by skyangel. when they couldn't restore all the damage had done, they (dish) made a deal with skyangel to restore, i think, 4 of the 6 stations that were lost. it was up to the powers that be at skyangel to decide who they would put back on the air and it was their choice. they chose not to put 3abn back on the air. [this is pure hearsay from a member at our church, but she said the woman who heads skyangel does not like danny and didn't want to do business with him anymore.] just hearsay, but makes one wonder considering how many viewers 3abn has.
so moses said that he met with the suits at dish during the convention and that they told him they had been inundated for so long to put 3abn on dish network that they finally decided to do it. so.........3abn will be on dish which can be acquired through the skyangel "dish" dish (lol) and receiver that we already have, but it will not actually be from or through skyangel. skyangel being the middleman per se. to sum it up: it will come through the same equipment but it will come directly from dish network, not skyangel network. it's so hard to explain conversations. hope that makes sense and is somewhat close to correct.

Posted by: sister May 5 2007, 09:22 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 5 2007, 04:16 PM)
>
> I would like to ask you and many others on this forum some questions.
> Do you know Danny or Linda personally?
> Have you ever been to 3abn facilities?
> Have you spent a lot of time with any of those talked about on this forum?
>
> Well, 1. Doug has
> 2. Doug did and does
> 3. Doug has many times
> 4. Doug has
> So the big question: Could it be remotely possible that Doug knows plenty that you people don't know and has made the decision of the merge accordingly.
> To the lurkers here, this will make total sense.
> To the rest of you, you will twist and turn it and end up with something ridiculous that makes no sense whatsoever.For instance, those of you that answered no to those questions, somehow, know more than Doug. But that's ok, I had my say.

Yes, I know Danny and Linda personally.
Yes, of course I have been to the 3ABN facilities and spent alot more time there than Doug.
Yes I have spent probably more time with those talked about on this forum than Doug has and know the truth that lays behind the public facade.

I truly doubt that it is even remotely possible that Doug knows plenty that I don't know and if he does know what I know and is still continuing on with the merger, than shame on him.

And shame on you, Eirene, for supporting Danny Shelton, if you really know the truth.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 5 2007, 09:34 PM

Umph!

☒ sn

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 09:42 PM

I just watched Wintley Phipps on the TCW. His sermon was Thou Shalt Not Steal.
It was pretty good. He talked of Judas taking money from the bag to pay himself as he saw fit. A few dollars for "holding the bag", a few more for "protecting the bag" and a few more for "counting the money in the bag". He also talked about how Lucifer stole the hearts of the angels by deceiving them and making them promises of enlightenment as he did with Eve. It was pretty interesting the way he elaborated on that.
I can understand that these ministers associated with 3abn are very busy men and they cannot investigate like we can. This is why we need to get that pen and paper out and write to them.
There were lots of vacant seats in the auditorium.

> QUOTE(sister @ May 5 2007, 09:22 PM) ☐
>

> Yes, I know Danny and Linda personally.
> Yes, of course I have been to the 3ABN facilities and spent alot more time there than Doug.
> Yes I have spent probably more time with those talked about on this forum than Doug has and know the truth that lays behind the public facade.
>
> I truly doubt that it is even remotely possible that Doug knows plenty that I don't know and if he does know what I know and is still continuing on with the merger, than shame on him.
>
> And shame on you, Eirene, for supporting Danny Shelton, if you really know the truth.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 5 2007, 09:53 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 5 2007, 05:33 PM) ☐
>
> Lastly, my mother came home from church the sabbath after the announcement stating that due to the merger with AF they were told in church that 3abn would be back on skyangel within 3 weeks. I have not seen or heard this anywhere else unless I missed it here. Has anyone else heard anything about this?
>
> nw
> C"i"

If you read the article in http://www.3abn.org/pdf/world/3ABN-World-2007-06.pdf, you will find that it is felt that the announcement of the merger and the nearly simultaneous announcement that 3abn will be carried on Dish Network are being interpreted as showing God's providences. I believe something may have been mentioned about Skyangel on the April 19 merge announce show but I don't know details. I will check the show when I get back home unless someone has the information sooner.

Posted by: Skyhook May 5 2007, 10:05 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 5 2007, 10:53 PM)
>
> I believe something may have been mentioned about Skyangel on the April 19 merge announce show but I don't know details. I will check the show when I get back home unless someone has the information sooner.

They did mention something about Skyangel. It sounded a little confusing to me, but I wasn't very interested in what they were talking about. It sounded like they were saying they would be on Skyangel and Dish, but at the time I was not clear about what they had said.

Posted by: Pickle May 5 2007, 10:05 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 5 2007, 03:11 PM)
>
> we must speak in the defense of having the freedom within our denomination to always be able to do that without being sued.

What an interesting thought. It conjures up images of the time, foretold under the third angel's message (undiluted), when we will not be able to speak and practice our faith. That's why Seventh-day Adventists have spent so much money over the years defending the rights of citizens to both practice and speak about their faith.

Posted by: Jnana15 May 5 2007, 10:15 PM

SE, thank you for ALL of the addresses! I'm about to get stupid busy writing letters and passing this information on to my friends. than

---

Posted by: runner4him May 5 2007, 11:20 PM

Lastly, my mother came home from church the sabbath after the announcement stating that due to the merger with AF they were told in church that 3abn would be back on skyangel within 3 weeks. I have not seen or heard this anywhere else unless I missed it here. Has anyone else heard anything about this?

PB asked the question above and here is what I heard....

Yes, I heard the very same thing this past week from a friend who works for someone who is very closely connected with ASI, DB, 3ABN. He/she said that they were very excited about the merger and that 3abn would be back on SkyAngel within 3 weeks - exact quote! They received an e-mail from DB with info about the merger and future plans. The rest of the word from my friend was just be quiet about all this...don't try to do the Lord's work....warning me.....I say.... where are the warriors who will serve in the Army of God and speak for Him? I was reminded today of the early Christians who were directed to deny their faith and burn that wee bit of incense before the idol or false god or be fed to the lions. It was such a little thing to go ahead and offer their allegiance to Rome and paganism....they could have reasoned..."You see I am only conforming outwardly....it is such a little thing....the good I can do later will make up for this act....if I die what good will I be able to do...I need to live to do great things - later."

Let us stand up today and not fear to do right no matter what the consequences might be. The Word is full of examples of men and women who made the choice to surrender all and stand for truth even if it meant they did it alone. We also have the examples of men and women who made the choice to bend the knee to Baal.

Posted by: calvin May 6 2007, 12:23 AM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 5 2007, 11:20 PM) ☐
>
> Let us stand up today and not fear to do right no matter what the consequences might be. The Word is full of examples of men and women who made the choice to surrender all and stand for truth even if it meant they did it alone. We also have the examples of men and women who made the choice to bend the knee to Baal.

...and just what is the right thing we are to be doing? I for one am praying that God's will be done.

Posted by: watchbird May 6 2007, 05:42 AM

This is a great idea, Soul. But it would be nice to have email addresses as well as snail mail ones. Most Conference websites have email addresses. General conference email addresses are not so easy to find, but I understand that the address format is lastname first initial... with no space between them, and the address itself is @gc.adventist.org ... (examples wilsont@gc.adventist.org, finleym etc.) except for the GC president. But Vice Presidents are sufficient anyhow, for part of their duties is to inform the GC president of email that is pertinent to him. Names of other VPs can be found at http://www.adventistyearbook.org/default.aspx?page=ViewAdmField&Year=9999&AdmFieldID=GC

NAD names with email addresses are at http://www.adventistyearbook.org/default.aspx?&page=ViewAdmField&Section=General&Search=Divisions&AdmFieldID=NAD

It would also be well to include the conference and union where Amazing Facts is located,

http://ncc.adventist.org,

http://www.puconline.org, where there is an email link on the president's page.

And also, of course, http://www.amazingfacts.org itself, where there is a "contact us" form where you can specify administration.

And also Jim Pederson, who is both president of NCC as well as chairman of the board of Amazing Facts, JPedersen@ncc.adventist.org .

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 05:26 PM) ☐
>
> Great idea. Let's all of us, denizens and lurkers, write to:
>
> Local Conference:
>
> Illinois Conference of Seventh-day Adventists

Kenneth Denslow, President
619 Plainfield Rd
Willowbrook, IL 60527-8437

Union (one level up):

Lake Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
Walter L. Wright, President
PO Box C
Berrien Springs, MI 49103-0904

Division (two levels up):

North American Division of Seventh-day Adventists
Don Schneider, President
12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring, MD 20904-6600

General Conference:

General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists
Jan Paulsen, President
12501 Old Columbia Pike
Silver Spring, Maryland 20904-6600

Elder Denslow is the local conference president; writing him is good if for no other reason than to encourage him to publicly remove himself from the board (and I don't care if his parents work for 3ABN). Danny outweighs him in power by many orders of magnitude, though, and one has to write at higher levels to encourage the church to distance themselves from him.

Here are a few more addresses:

Amazing Facts
Doug Batchelor, President
P.O. Box 1058
Roseville, CA 95678-8058

Weimar Institute
Don Christensen, President
PO Box 486
Weimar, CA 95736

ASI Ministries
12501 Old Columbia Pike,
Silver Spring, MD 20904

The following are ASI officers. I include all their names because as long as they affiliate themselves with 3ABN, they bring shame on themselves, their organization, and the church.

President - Debbie Young
Secretary/Treasurer - Ron Christman
General Vice President - Chester Clark III
Vice Presidents - Viorel Catarama, Chip Doss, Leasa Hodges, Doreen Schmidt, Barbara Taylor
NAD appointees - Juan Prestol, Don Schneider, Halvard Thomsen
Union ASI Secretary - Norm Clam
Conference ASI Secretary - Duane McKey
Union ASI Chapter Presidents - Lorayne Barton, Chester Clark Jr., Gayle Clark, Steve Dickman, Sharon Erickson, Elizabeth Gonsalves-Remington, Sandy Miller, Dan Ross
Members at large - Ellsworth McKee, Tom Zapara
Immediate past president - Denzil McNeilus
President, Missions Inc. - Harold Lance

> ASI Missions Inc.
> President - Harold Lance
> NAD appointees - Juan Prestol, Don Schneider, Halvard Thomsen
> Members - Terry Anderson, Ron Christman, Dan Houghton, Andre Jubert, MD, Ellsworth McKee, Denzil McNeilus, Garwin McNeilus, Jane Sines, Stan Smith, Debbie Young
> This is a lot of stamps, but if we can make some noise, maybe people will realize that the temple needs to be cleansed.
>
> By the way, these are all publicly available addresses I got from the Internet, in case anyone wonders.

Posted by: runner4him May 6 2007, 06:57 AM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 6 2007, 12:23 AM) ☐
>
> ...and just what is the right thing we are to be doing? I for one am praying that God's will be done.

agree prayer is the key...pray that God's will be done...pray that we reflect His character in all we do...search for the truth....pray for wisdom....be wise stewards of His monies.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 6 2007, 09:03 AM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 5 2007, 10:20 PM) ☐
>
> Lastly, my mother came home from church the sabbath after the announcement stating that due to the merger with AF they were told in church that 3abn would be back on skyangel within 3 weeks. I have not seen or heard this anywhere else unless I missed it here. Has anyone else heard anything about this?
>
> PB asked the question above and here is what I heard....

unner4him,
Actually, the question was asked by Noahswife and I responded to it.

> QUOTE
>
> Yes, I heard the very same thing this past week from a friend who works for someone who is very closely connected with ASI, DB, 3ABN. He/she said that they were very excited about the merger and that 3abn would be back on SkyAngel within 3 weeks - exact quote! They received an e-mail from DB with info about the merger and future plans. The rest of the word from my friend was just be quiet about all this...don't try to do the Lord's work....warning me.....I say.... where are the warriors who will serve in the Army of God and speak for Him? I was reminded today of the early Christians who were directed to deny their faith and burn that wee bit of incense before the idol or false god or be fed to the lions. It was such a little thing to go ahead and offer their allegiance to Rome and paganism....they could have reasoned..."You see I am only conforming outwardly....it is such a little thing....the good I can do later will make up for this act....if I die what good will I be able to do...I need to live to do great things - later."
>
> Let us stand up today and not fear to do right no matter what the consequences might be. The > Word is full of examples of men and women who made the choice to surrender all and stand for truth even if it meant they did it alone. We also have the examples of men and women who made the choice to bend the knee to Baal.

)on't try to do the Lord's work?!!!!! Your friend would prefer that we all hunker down into our Laodicean pews ınd stay uninvolved? Is this wise counsel?

f we don't get involved, if we don't stay aware of the decisions being made by our leaders and if we aren't villing to question those choices at times and take action, we will share in the responsibility for the :onsequences.

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 5 2007, 11:23 PM) ☐
>
> ...and just what is the right thing we are to be doing? I for one am praying that God's will be done.

:alvin,
'es, we must pray that God's will be done. We must also pray that if He puts a burden on our hearts to take ıction that we will heed His voice.

Posted by: Ralph May 6 2007, 09:31 AM

> QUOTE
>
> Lastly, my mother came home from church the sabbath after the announcement stating that due to the merger with AF they were told in church that 3abn would be back on skyangel within 3 weeks. I have not seen or heard this anywhere else unless I missed it here. Has anyone else heard anything about this? [/color]
>
> nw
> C"i"

'es, this is correct according to an announcement made in the second half of the program where they were alking about Doug as being the new presiident.

Posted by: from-the-pew May 6 2007, 09:42 AM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 05:26 PM) ☐
>
> Weimar Institute
> Don Christensen, President
> PO Box 486
> Weimar, CA 95736

'he current president of Weimar is Don Hanson.

agree with Ralph... I heard them say that 3abn would be back on Skyangel.

Posted by: mozart May 6 2007, 10:03 AM

thank you FTP. much appreciated. ☒ than

> QUOTE(from-the-pew @ May 6 2007, 08:42 AM) ☐
>
> The current president of Weimar is Don Hanson.
> I agree with Ralph... I heard them say that 3abn would be back on Skyangel.

Posted by: runner4him May 6 2007, 10:05 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 6 2007, 09:03 AM) ☐
>
> runner4him,
> Actually, the question was asked by Noahswife and I responded to it.
>
> Thank you for clearing that up...I appreciate the correction
>
> Don't try to do the Lord's work?!!!!! Your friend would prefer that we all hunker down into our Laodicean pews and stay uninvolved? Is this wise counsel?
>
> It made me sad to get this response from a friend and I would feel the same way if I would receive this kind of reaction from anyone who presents themselves as a staunch believer. I just cannot relate or understand these kind of remarks.
>
> If we don't get involved, if we don't stay aware of the decisions being made by our leaders and if we aren't willing to question those choices at times and take action, we will share in the responsibility for the consequences.
>
> Amen! Like I said earlier let's remember those early Christians... and what about Luther....We are thankful for his courage...his questions...his search for truth and what about those who died at the stake for His Word. We are not even facing that degree of persecution yet but let's ask ourselves ... are we like that frog sitting in the pot of water that is slowly being heated up....not knowing that it could easily jump to safety but instead sits in the pot of hot water until life is gone and it is too late.
>
> Calvin,
> Yes, we must pray that God's will be done. We must also pray that if He puts a burden on our hearts to take action that we will heed His voice.

Amen again!

Posted by: Snoopy May 6 2007, 01:33 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 5 2007, 06:33 PM) ☐
>
> [color=#993300]Now Mo, i suppose we should be nicer to the newly departed by choice but it really is a funny statement and one some of us really like based on personal experience. Do you think Lee is missing > us?

OK - I've been away... What happened to Lee?

Posted by: mozart May 6 2007, 02:42 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ May 6 2007, 12:33 PM)
>
> OK - I've been away... What happened to Lee?

hat might be a question better answered by calvin, but i think he/she got banned.

Posted by: Jnana15 May 6 2007, 04:22 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ May 6 2007, 02:33 PM)
>
> OK - I've been away... What happened to Lee?

Last post I read from Lee, she/he was saying "good bye" and glad to be out of here.

Posted by: Noahswife May 6 2007, 05:46 PM

> QUOTE(Jnana15 @ May 6 2007, 06:22 PM)
>
> Last post I read from Lee, she/he was saying "good bye" and glad to be out of here.

had noticed there had been no posts from Lee for quite some time. I looked at her profile and saw where she indicates she is "out of here". I know she was busy at CF after her last post here so have no idea where she has gone. However, I do not think she is among the banned (except as discussed in my post on that topic elsewhere).

Posted by: mozart May 6 2007, 06:25 PM

she must have morphed into Eirene.

hit me with your best shot eirenie.

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 6 2007, 04:46 PM)
>
> I had noticed there had been no posts from Lee for quite some time. I looked at her profile and saw where she indicates she is "out of here". I know she was busy at CF after her last post here so have no idea where she has gone. However, I do not think she is among the banned (except as discussed in my post on that topic elsewhere).

Posted by: sonshineonme May 6 2007, 09:58 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 6 2007, 05:25 PM)
>
> she must have morphed into Eirene.
> hit me with your best shot eirenie.

mo, i appreciate you. "eirenie"
i think there is more morphing around here then most might imagine....

Posted by: Snoopy May 6 2007, 11:55 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 6 2007, 07:25 PM)
>
> she must have morphed into Eirene.
> hit me with your best shot eirenie.

That was my thought, also!!

Posted by: Treniece May 7 2007, 02:20 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 5 2007, 03:00 PM)
>
> Well, if there aren't any clear facts, why have donations dropped in the first quarter--in the seven figures? Seems like something's clear to someone!
>
> Original documents don't lie.
>
> A lot of Danny's supporters were in denial until they read save3abn.com. I believe if more of them were to head on over and read without prejudice, there would be a house-cleaning.
>
> NW and R4H are both right--AF donors ought to hold off awhile, and Doug really should know better. But the truth is, it's not the easiest thing if you've been friends with someone awhile to believe such bad things about them. Of course he should be investigating, but he's as busy as any of us and relies on people to tell him what to believe on this. I'm not commending him for it, but it's probably how it is.
>
> Remember that we've got no evidence of egregiously bad behavior on Doug's part--unless you count > ambition.

Vow! the figures have actually dropped that much. Well DS should not be surprised, getting a quick divorce ınd not wasting any time in finding a new wife would raise question marks in the eyes of supporters.

have not checked out the website 'save3abn.com' so I can not make any comments on the statements nade there.

Aaybe this merger is DB's desire to save 3abn.

Ve must keep in mind that it is difficult to dethrone a layman who has started a ministry that has reached so nany souls for Christ.

'S: DS also seems to be accused for the misuse of 3abn's funds.

Posted by: runner4him May 7 2007, 09:13 PM

> QUOTE(Treniece @ May 7 2007, 02:20 PM) ☐
>
> Wow! the figures have actually dropped that much. Well DS should not be surprised, getting a quick divorce and not wasting any time in finding a new wife would raise question marks in the eyes of supporters.
>
> I have not checked out the website 'save3abn.com' so I can not make any comments on the statements made there.

would like to encourage you to go to the 'save3abn.com' website and read ALL the material. It will take ;ome time but you will have a clear picture of what has been going on. You will find the documentation ınadulterated. Bsda is a blessing and should take the the credit for stimulating the investigative process. Isn't t where the first questions about DS & 3abn were raised publicly? Correct me if I am wrong. This is a great orum to be able to ask questions, feel the support of others who want answers, and challenge ideas...not ›eople. I am hooked and will still be here when the 3abn crisis is resolved.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 13 2007, 07:37 PM

Well!

☒ sna

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 2 2007, 09:03 PM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 5 2007, 01:05 PM) ☐
>
> I agree with you, Noahswife! If even a Peon (talking about me) can read what is on the internet here and at save3abn then someone like DB who has a "competent board" (to quote you) and who knows other solid SDA friends/ministers/evangelists/officials of the church in high places should be able to ask his own questions while sifting through all the "stuff". It is not that difficult to come to an intelligent conclusion. I do not want to judge him or his motives but it does look too cozy for me. My donations stopped going to AF when I first heard of the merger with no pronouncement of cleaning house. We must not hide behind the cloak of apparent christianity and remain silent about real issues...that leaves me with a bad taste in my mouth. Back to standing up for truth....and principles...and rights of victims...and the pure unadulterated Gospel. There is always a lesson in everything....pray that we might not be puffed up and forget our total > need of Him for all things.

ey - I have an idea! I keep hearing of folks who have stopped their contributions to 3ABN and/or AF. Maybe ve should be sending our donations to Barbara Kerr for her new cooking show!! ☐

Posted by: mozart Jun 2 2007, 11:27 PM

awesome idea !!!!!!!!!!!!!!! i'm in. thanks snoopy ☒ than

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Jun 2 2007, 09:03 PM) ☐
>
> Hey - I have an idea! I keep hearing of folks who have stopped their contributions to 3ABN and/or AF. Maybe we should be sending our donations to Barbara Kerr for her new cooking show!! ☐

Posted by: Fran Jun 3 2007, 02:39 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Jun 2 2007, 11:27 PM) ☐
>
> awesome idea !!!!!!!!!!!!!!! i'm in. thanks snoopy ☒ than

K. Where do we send money to Linda and to Barbara?

inda needs money for her ministry also and has never asked for a dime.

othing like the 3ABN Begathons!

t would please me to no end to see the donations start pouring in for honestly accountable ninistries such as Polly's Place, Linda's Ministry, Barbara and Linda's cooking shows.

believe strongly that we should also support the legal fund for Joy and Pickle.

☐ ☒ ☒ ☐ ☒ ☒ ☐

Posted by: inga Jun 3 2007, 10:29 AM

> QUOTE(Fran @ Jun 3 2007, 03:39 AM) ☐
>
> OK. Where do we send money to Linda and to Barbara?
>
> Linda needs money for her ministry also and has never asked for a dime.

> Nothing like the 3ABN Begathons!
>
> It would please me to no end to see the donations start pouring in for honestly accountable ministries such as Polly's Place, Linda's Ministry, Barbara and Linda's cooking shows.
>
> I believe strongly that we should also support the legal fund for Joy and Pickle.

he legal defense fund is probably the most urgent right now, considering that Garwin McNeilus can squander whole lot more money on lawyers than Bob Pickle or Gailon Joy, even if there is no valid case. (It's a ommon technique to stall until the opposition runs out of money.) Whether you can contribute $5.00 or 5,000.00, every little bit helps.
ere's how to contribute: http://www.pickle-publishing.com/defensefund.htm

---

Posted by: Observer Jun 3 2007, 10:59 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jun 3 2007, 10:29 AM)
>
> The legal defense fund is probably the most urgent right now, considering that Gailon Joy can squander a whole lot more money on lawyers than Bob Pickle or Gailon Joy, even if there is no valid case. (It's a common technique to stall until the opposition runs out of money.) Whether you can contribute $5.00 or $5,000.00, every little bit helps.
> Here's how to contribute: http://www.pickle-publishing.com/defensefund.htm

e: " . . . considering that Gailon Joy can squander a whole lot more money on lawyers. . ."

do not think you meant to say Gailon Joy. Perhaps you meant Garwin McNeilus?

Posted by: Artiste Jun 3 2007, 11:25 AM

Donate for Bob Pickle and Gailon Joy's Defense Fund!

****

http://www.pickle-publishing.com/defensefund.htm

****

Posted by: mikell Jun 3 2007, 01:24 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 4 2007, 04:27 PM)
>
> http://www.3abn.org/pdf/world/3ABN-World-2007-06.pdf. The cover story is all about the merger, and the cover says that the magazine is "Published Monthly by 3ABN/Amazing Facts."

> I still haven't heard Doug come out and state how he feels about Danny covering up his brother's child molestation allegations, or Danny's divorcing Linda when he didn't know whether or not she had committed fornication. Anyone know where Doug stands on these questions?
>
> Notice how the ASI president who also sits on the ASI Mission, Inc. board, Debbie Young, has an article in the magazine too. Does that suggest that the ASI Missions, Inc. board will indeed be the new constituency?
>
> The way this issue is put together you'd think Doug and Debbie are 100% behind Danny. Is that reality or is this just an illusion created by Danny?

ickle, I sure HOPE not! Db is a very intelligent person, one would think he knows it all! Db ought to know is eing used by ds to cy(h)a for him to continue his abuse wthin 3abn, having db upfront. It is like spreading am on top of what you and I have stepped into a few times while walking across a lawn, for many gullible DA's supporters to swallow, but it is the same stuff!
ave3abn.com
escue3abn.com

Posted by: inga Jun 3 2007, 02:15 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Jun 3 2007, 11:59 AM)
>
> Re: " . . . considering that Gailon Joy can squander a whole lot more money on lawyers. . ."
>
> I do not think you meant to say Gailon Joy. Perhaps you meant Garwin McNeilus?

es, I meant Garwin McNeilus, and I've corrected the entry.

t's amazing what my fingers will type, without input from my brain.

Posted by: mikell Jun 3 2007, 02:44 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jun 3 2007, 10:29 AM)
>
> The legal defense fund is probably the most urgent right now, considering that Garwin McNeilus can squander a whole lot more money on lawyers than Bob Pickle or Gailon Joy, even if there is no valid case. (It's a common technique to stall until the opposition runs out of money.) Whether you can contribute $5.00 or $5,000.00, every little bit helps.
> Here's how to contribute: http://www.pickle-publishing.com/defensefund.htm

too support funds to help Gailon and Pickle for lawyers to defend themselves being today's Davids against he Goliath in 3ABN. Many see the Devil attacking 3ABN through Gailon and Pickle, but those who believe this re stoning the messenger for the message! Satan is attacking 3ABN, but it is from within, through Danny hat 3ABN is being attack! Gailon is just out to save 3ABN! For sure, the Lord is liken to a surgeon here aving Gailon and Pickle in His hands. They are the Lord's sharp edge scalpels cutting away to remove the ancer growth within 3ABN to SAVE 3ABN!
ave3abn.com
escue3abn.blog.com

Posted by: mozart Jun 3 2007, 04:25 PM

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ "the Evidence Will All Be Brought Out In A Court Of Law"

Posted by: Pickle May 31 2007, 03:43 PM

The following dawned on me:

- Danny has repeatedly spurned all requests for the release of evidence that allegedly vindicates himself, saying that it would all be brought out in a court of law.
- We saw very clearly that whatever evidence was going to be brought out in the ASI hearings was never going to see the light of day. It would be sealed forever.
- Could it be that Danny's repeated promise that it would all be brought out in a court of law was but a ruse, and that he always intended to impose the same kind of eternal secrecy he intended the ASI hearings to have?

I know, I know. Eternal is absolutely positively the wrong word.

"Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known" (Mt. 10:26).

"For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known" (Lk. 12:2).

Posted by: Artiste May 31 2007, 04:03 PM

Totally agree.

Posted by: Observer May 31 2007, 04:24 PM

> QUOTE(Artiste @ May 31 2007, 04:03 PM)
>
> Totally agree.

Was it a wise move to seal the documents, or was it not?

The answer to that depends upon what is in the docuemnts. It just could be that it was a wise move to protect 3-ABN from the damage that they woul follow if the public knew what was in them.

As I do not know what is in them I cannot say. But, I assume that 3-ABN was protecting its interests, and that it assumes that the damage from impounding them will be less than the damage that would follow if the public knew.

That is only an assuption of mine basd in part upon my view that 3-ABN is recieving excelleant legal advice, and that the people who know what is in those documents believe it best to keep that information from the public.

Posted by: Pickle May 31 2007, 05:11 PM

Good points, Gregory.

Because of my interest in apologetics, I tend to think in terms of how the public will react in this scenario or that scenario. Perhaps one of the earliest references I made to how I felt secrecy would impact public perceptions was the http://www.maritime-sda-online.org/forums/ubbthreads.php?ubb=showflat&Number=83373&page=0#Post83372 to Mollie Steenson written on October 17, perhaps 8 days before ASI voted to get involved:

> QUOTE
>
> 4) Will they be making public the evidence that supports their findings, or will they only make public their findings?
>
> I ask this last question because from a damage control and apologetic perspective, the only real way to put all the rumors to rest once and for all is to come across as if 3ABN has nothing to hide.
>
> Take for example these phone records, which Pastor Lomacang stated emphatically that he had personally seen. After he promised that we could see them if we stopped by, it has taken more than five weeks to discover that 3ABN will not allow this, and that gives the impression that they either do not exist or that they do not say what he claimed they say.
>
> This is even more so the case since I asked him on September 8 and October 2 and October 3 and October 10 and October 16 whether the hundreds of hours were actual minutes or billed minutes, and though I did get a short reply from him on October 2, he has yet to answer that simple question. The definite impression being given is that there never were hundreds of hours spent on the phone.
>
> I think a lot of these rumors could have been easily avoided or dispelled if 3ABN had handled these PR matters differently. Along these lines, I would suggest that great care be taken in the selection of which respected church leaders examine all the evidence. If it is perceived that the panel is stacked in favor of 3ABN from the very beginning, it will not settle the questions in people's minds, especially if none of the evidence is ever made public. Whether the panel is stacked or not is not as important at this point as how it is all perceived if the goal is to dispel all the rumors, in my opinion.
>
> God bless.
>
> Bob

I still think it is in their best interest from a PR perspective to fess up where necessary, say I'm sorry, and avoid coming across like they have something to hide.

Posted by: Artiste May 31 2007, 05:25 PM

And I still think that 3ABN will, sooner rather than later, lose enough donations to put them out of business.

Negative publicity coming from sources like Save3ABN.com and BlackSDA and also just people talking among themselves may easily bring about the above results without any further efforts needed.

Posted by: Pickle May 31 2007, 07:15 PM

I sure hope not, Artiste. But I guess it all depends on how they respond to constructive criticism.

Posted by: steffan May 31 2007, 07:32 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 31 2007, 04:43 PM) ☐
>
> The following dawned on me:
>
> - Danny has repeatedly spurned all requests for the release of evidence that allegedly vindicates himself, saying that it would all be brought out in a court of law.
> - We saw very clearly that whatever evidence was going to be brought out in the ASI hearings was never going to see the light of day. It would be sealed forever.
> - Could it be that Danny's repeated promise that it would all be brought out in a court of law was but a ruse, and that he always intended to impose the same kind of eternal secrecy he intended the ASI hearings to have?
>
> I know, I know. Eternal is absolutely positively the wrong word.

I can't help but laugh at how you consistently leave out any options that might be construed as 3abn doing the positive thing.
I will put another option here for you.
Could it be that Danny's repeated promise that it would all be brought out in a court is exactly what is going to happen?

Posted by: calvin May 31 2007, 07:38 PM

> QUOTE(Artiste @ May 31 2007, 05:25 PM) ☐
>
> And I still think that 3ABN will, sooner rather than later, lose enough donations to put them out of business.
>
> Negative publicity coming from sources like Save3ABN.com and BlackSDA and also just people talking among themselves may easily bring about the above results without any further efforts needed.

I don't think so. I think 3ABN has taken the best shots from its critics and survived. I think it's downturn in donation (if this is true) has more to do with them being off Sky Angel and probably to some extend the competition from Hope TV than anything here or at save3abn. Don't let the 100K views at save4abn or the tens of thousand views here fool you. These numbers do not represent unique hits on these websites. But most probably the same few hundred people returning time after time. Because a few outspoken people feel adamantly that there needs to be a change in leadership at 3abn, don't get caught up in drinking our own cool aid thinking that we represent the norm in Adventist. I believe we don't. Most Adventist don't care about what now is a 3 year old messy divorce and firing of Linda. Even here, there is not much new to talk about that has not already been discussed and discussed again. When I ask people about Linda the usually response is "I heard she was having an affair with a doctor in Europe". People are not going to take the time to come here and save3abn to educate themselves on the issues; they got other things going on in their lives. Most people in my area are just glad to see 3abn back on satellite again. This is not to say that we have not had any influence.

I know many of you think the smoking gun, knock out punch will come in these law suits, I don't remain optimistic.

Posted by: steffan May 31 2007, 07:38 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 31 2007, 06:11 PM)
>
> Good points, Gregory.
>
> I still think it is in their best interest from a PR perspective to fess up where necessary, say I'm sorry, and avoid coming across like they have something to hide.

Unless they have nothing to fess up and say I'm sorry for. A scenerio you haven't thought of?
Let me give you another one on your same old story of John L. saying you get see the bills and then later you couldn't ....yada yada....Did it ever occure to you that between the time you ask and he said yes and the weeks following when he said no, that those involved had heard the stirrings and rumors that you guys were trying to make trouble and they decided to sit it out and see where you were going? Seeing where you did go, it was a very intelligent move for them to make.

Posted by: Clay May 31 2007, 07:48 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 08:38 PM)
>
> I don't think so. I think 3ABN has taken the best shots from its critics and survived. I think it's downturn in donation (if this is true) has more to do with them being off Sky Angel and probably to some extend the competition from Hope TV than anything here or at save3abn. Don't let the 100K views at save4abn or the tens of thousand views here fool you. These numbers do not represent unique hits on these websites. But most probably the same few hundred people returning time after time. Because a few outspoken people feel adamantly that there needs to be a change in leadership at 3abn, don't get caught up in drinking our own cool aid thinking that we represent the norm in Adventist. I believe we don't. Most Adventist don't care about what now is a 3 year old messy divorce and firing of Linda. Even here, there is not much new to talk about that has not already been discussed and discussed again. When I ask people about Linda the usually response is "I heard she was having an affair with a doctor in Europe". People are not going to take the time to come here and save3abn to educate themselves on the issues; they got other things going on in their lives. Most people in my area are just glad to see 3abn back on satellite again. This is not to say that we have not had any influence.
>
> I know many of you think the smoking gun, knock out punch will come in these law suits, I don't remain optimistic.

yep... I am thinking the same thing....

Posted by: sonshineonme May 31 2007, 07:55 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 06:38 PM)
>
> I know many of you think the smoking gun, knock out punch will come in these law suits, I don't remain optimistic.

I do remain optimistic.

Posted by: Clay May 31 2007, 08:02 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 31 2007, 08:55 PM)
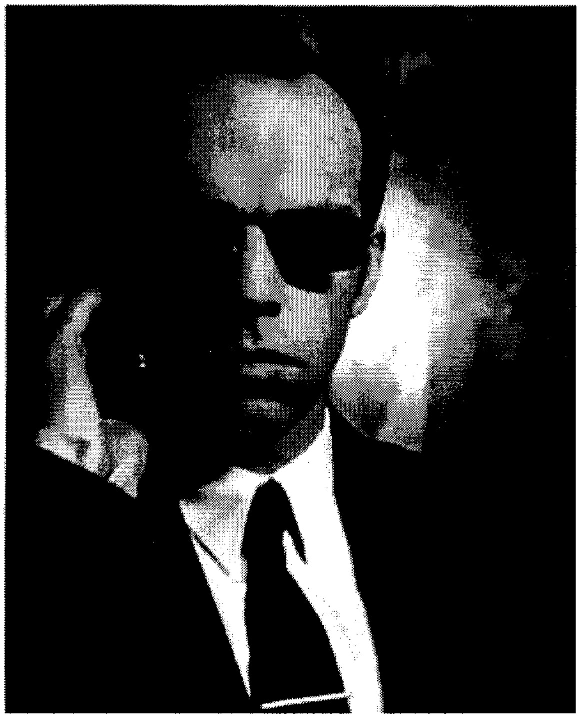
>
> I do remain optimistic.

"Do you hear that, Mr. Anderson? That is the sound of inevitability."



Posted by: Rosyroi May 31 2007, 08:26 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 31 2007, 05:38 PM)
>
> Unless they have nothing to fess up and say I'm sorry for. A scenerio you haven't thought of?
> Let me give you another one on your same old story of John L. saying you get see the bills and then later you couldn't ....yada yada....Did it ever occure to you that between the time you ask and he said yes and the weeks following when he said no, that those involved had heard the stirrings and rumors that you guys were trying to make trouble and they decided to sit it out and see where you were going? Seeing where you did go, it was a very intelligent move for them to make.

Just one more thing to hide. Too bad they chose to hide again.

Too bad they refuse to chose to break the cycle

Pickle, Thank you for the poll.

Rosyroi

Posted by: Artiste May 31 2007, 09:19 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 05:38 PM)
>
> I don't think so. I think 3ABN has taken the best shots from its critics and survived. I think it's downturn in donation (if this is true) has more to do with them being off Sky Angel and probably to some extend the competition from Hope TV than anything here or at save3abn. Don't let the 100K views at save4abn or the tens of thousand views here fool you. These numbers do not represent unique hits on these websites. But most probably the same few hundred people returning time after time. Because a few outspoken people feel adamantly that there needs to be a change in leadership at 3abn, don't get caught up in drinking our own cool aid thinking that we represent the norm in Adventist. I believe we don't. Most Adventist don't care about what now is a 3 year old messy divorce and firing of Linda. Even here, there is not much new to talk about that has not already been discussed and discussed again. When I ask people about Linda the usually response is "I heard she was having an affair with a doctor in Europe". People are not going to take the time to come here and save3abn to educate themselves on the issues; they got other things going on in their lives. Most people in my area are just glad to see 3abn back on satellite again. This is not to say that we have not had any influence.
>
> I know many of you think the smoking gun, knock out punch will come in these law suits, I don't remain optimistic.

Calvin, does "I don't remain optimistic" refer to optimisim regarding the demise of 3ABN? Or just present leadership? I'm guessing the latter.

I agree that many of the views at Save3ABN site may be repeats.

It's true that many SDAs have no idea of problems at 3ABN. I have reason to believe, however, that news is spreading even as we sit at our computers speculating about it online.

Posted by: Skyhook May 31 2007, 11:06 PM

This quote is speaking about the work of the church in spreading the gospel to the world. She makes some points that may apply here. Given some other statements that she made about the "surprisingly simple means" that God will use to finish the work of giving the gospel to the world, I'm not sure it will include sattelite TV.

"There is no need to doubt, to be fearful that the work will not succeed. God is at the head of the work, and He will set everything in order. If matters need adjusting at the head of the work, God will attend to that, and work to right every wrong.... " (R&H, Sept 20. 1892)

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 31 2007, 11:34 PM

Bob,

Is the counter at save3abn.com one that counts unique hits or just every visit?

Posted by: sonshineonme May 31 2007, 11:36 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 31 2007, 10:34 PM)
>
> Bob,
>
> Is the counter at save3abn.com one that counts unique hits or just every visit?

PB, my understanding is it counts each unique hit. But, I'm sure Bob will verify.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 1 2007, 12:03 AM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 31 2007, 09:36 PM)
>
> PB, my understanding is it counts each unique hit. But, I'm sure Bob will verify.

That is my understanding as well, but since Calvin stated that it wasn't I thought it best to get the record set straight.

BTW, the save3abn counter is at nearly 177K now.

Posted by: sonshineonme Jun 1 2007, 12:07 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 31 2007, 11:03 PM)
>
> That is my understanding as well, but since Calvin stated that it wasn't I thought it best to get the record set straight.
>
> BTW, the save3abn counter is at nearly 177K now.

Hmm, I hadn't seen that Calvin stated that.
Yes, I saw the counter up there tonight...grows every day.
We'll get the facts on the counter...I will do some checking too, but Bob may get back here with that sooner then I will...

Posted by: Whtz Happenin Jun 1 2007, 12:43 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 31 2007, 09:32 PM)
>
> I can't help but laugh at how you consistently leave out any options that might be construed as 3abn doing the positive thing.
> I will put another option here for you.
> Could it be that Danny's repeated promise that it would all be brought out in a court is exactly what is going to happen?

So what part of going to court to sue other Christians are you laughing at?

I would not be very proud of repeated promises to take others to court.

Going to court, in this situation, has nothing to do with "bringing out," but has everything to do with "covering up" the truth.

Oh BTW, what happened to "letting the Lord fight our battles for us."

Posted by: mozart Jun 1 2007, 01:48 AM i think we have all thought of that. a lie is still a lie steffan.

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 31 2007, 07:38 PM)
>
> Unless they have nothing to fess up and say I'm sorry for. A scenerio you haven't thought of?
> Let me give you another one on your same old story of John L. saying you get see the bills and then later you couldn't ....yada yada....Did it ever occure to you that between the time you ask and he said yes and the weeks following when he said no, that those involved had heard the stirrings and rumors that you guys were trying to make trouble and they decided to sit it out and see where you were going? Seeing where you did go, it was a very intelligent move for them to make.

Posted by: LaurenceD Jun 1 2007, 08:03 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 31 2007, 08:32 PM)
>
> I can't help but laugh at how you consistently leave out any options that might be construed as 3abn doing the positive thing.

Laugh all you can. People here acknowledge when 3abn is doing the right thing. Case in point--when Judge Rowe said, "the two pastor's offices, each measuring 14 feet by 18 feet, on the second floor of the administrative production center building," should be tax exempt, I think everyone here thought that was a positive thing.

Question is, do you understand what 3abn was doing wrong with the use of their property? If so, you might let us know. If not, don't bother wasting our time trying to educate us about other things.

Posted by: steffan Jun 1 2007, 11:35 AM

> QUOTE(Whtz Happenin @ Jun 1 2007, 01:43 AM)
>
> So what part of going to court to sue other Christians are you laughing at?
>
> I would not be very proud of repeated promises to take others to court.
>
> Going to court, in this situation, has nothing to do with "bringing out," but has everything to do with "covering up" the truth.

> Oh BTW, what happened to "letting the Lord fight our battles for us."

am glad you posted this. It is truth but goes directly against Pickles posts that no one ask them to stop what hey were doing.

Ve can choose to walk out in front of a train and say God will handle it if he wants us to live but the truth is, ve know That God gives us a brain and good common sense to use along with our prayers and faith in Him. or that reason, the church itself, has been involved in suits against those who they feared were hurting the hurch or it's work. The "team" that started this have left 3ABN no choice but to do what they are doing. You ıll like to do your "homework", why don't you go back and do some checking to see if those responsible for his, have done the same to any other ministries or organizations that were totally on the up and up. You night be surprised.

quote name='sonshineonme' date='Jun 1 2007, 01:07 AM' post='197710']
Hmm, I hadn't seen that Calvin stated that.
'es, I saw the counter up there tonight...grows every day.
Ve'll get the facts on the counter...I will do some checking too, but Bob may get back here with that sooner hen I will...
/quote

)f course the counter will climb when they have several site names so that people who like 3abn and are ooking for them on the net will be taken to the "save not" site. Those people are mad, upset and sickened by vhere they "accidentally" find themselves. So, before you get ready to celebrate high numbers think of how nany have been wracked up that didn't want to be there.

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 08:38 PM)
>
> I don't think so. I think 3ABN has taken the best shots from its critics and survived. I think it's downturn in donation (if this is true) has more to do with them being off Sky Angel and probably to some extend the competition from Hope TV than anything here or at save3abn. Don't let the 100K views at save4abn or the tens of thousand views here fool you. These numbers do not represent unique hits on these websites. But most probably the same few hundred people returning time after time. Because a few outspoken people feel adamantly that there needs to be a change in leadership at 3abn, don't get caught up in drinking our own cool aid thinking that we represent the norm in Adventist. I believe we don't. Most Adventist don't care about what now is a 3 year old messy divorce and firing of Linda. Even here, there is not much new to talk about that has not already been discussed and discussed again. When I ask people about Linda the usually response is "I heard she was having an affair with a doctor in Europe". People are not going to take the time to come here and save3abn to educate themselves on the issues; they got other things going on in their lives. Most people in my area are just glad to see 3abn back on satellite again. This is not to say that we have not had any influence.
>
> I know many of you think the smoking gun, knock out punch will come in these law suits, I don't remain optimistic.

Vell, finally. Some common sense shown.

Posted by: steffan Jun 1 2007, 11:52 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 31 2007, 05:24 PM)
>
> Was it a wise move to seal the documents, or was it not?

> The answer to that depends upon what is in the docuemnts. It just could be that it was a wise move to protect 3-ABN from the damage that they woul follow if the public knew what was in them.
>
> As I do not know what is in them I cannot say. But, I assume that 3-ABN was protecting its interests, and that it assumes that the damage from impounding them will be less than the damage that would follow if the public knew.
>
> That is only an assuption of mine basd in part upon my view that 3-ABN is recieving excelleant legal advice, and that the people who know what is in those documents believe it best to keep that information from the public.

Since you, at least appear, to use some reasoning here, I was surprised that you also left out several mportant options/scenerios.
n your humble opinion, could it be that 3abn had nothing to do with sealed or unsealed documents because hey have left those decisions to the experts to do what they think is best. Since most people know nothing about legal strategy isn't that what they hire lawyers for? If that is the case then 3abn would be "informed" of what the attorney's had decided to do. They would not be making those decisions.
The other option for impoundment that you have overlooked is this. Maybe sealing the documents has nothing to do with any "damaging" information coming out. It could be, and I would guess probably so, that it s simply to keep the men involved from spinning their own opinions, allegations and stories to the public while litigation is going on. If this group of attorney's have done their homework, they have studied the site, studied the people involved and I would imagine, have come to several conclusions. I would guess They will go forward and make decisions based on those conclusions and the behaviour of those that are doing this. In my opinion to unleash litigation proceedings to people of Joy and Pickles caliber would be a catastrophic mess or all involved.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 1 2007, 12:26 PM

This would all be fine, Fearless Leader, is it hadn't been stated by one of Danny's supporters here that Danny would sue, because the things said on the internet wee causing a drop in donations. So he believes this also. I believe at the time I posted that they could not have it both ways. Only the minions he had here who kept claiming there was no decline at all, even after Mollie said on TV there way.

I run across that same type of apathy, but we will pay the price for burying our heads in the sand. Yes, it is easier and more exciting to believe that Linda had an affair. Problem is Danny stated, "spritual" Adultery. The masses caught "adultery" and dismissed the "spiritual" because they didn't want to take the time to figure out what it meant, exactly........Sheep, I tell ya! I believe a desired result. Once again apathy for which we will pay highly. However, the divorce is only the straw that broke the camel's back.

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 05:38 PM) ☐
>
> I don't think so. I think 3ABN has taken the best shots from its critics and survived. I think it's downturn in donation (if this is true) has more to do with them being off Sky Angel and probably to some extend the competition from Hope TV than anything here or at save3abn. Don't let the 100K views at save4abn or the tens of thousand views here fool you. These numbers do not represent unique hits on these websites. But most probably the same few hundred people returning time after time. Because a few outspoken people feel adamantly that there needs to be a change in leadership at 3abn, don't get caught up in drinking our own cool aid thinking that we represent the norm in Adventist. I believe we don't. Most Adventist don't care about what now is a 3 year old messy divorce and firing of Linda. Even here, there is not much new to talk about that has not already been discussed and discussed again. When I ask people about Linda the usually response is "I heard she was having an affair with a doctor in Europe". People are not going to take the time to come here and save3abn to educate themselves on the issues; they got other things going on in their lives. Most people in my area are just glad to see 3abn back on satellite again. This is not to say that we have not had any influence.
>
> I know many of you think the smoking gun, knock out punch will come in these law suits, I don't remain > optimistic.

Posted by: Rosyroi Jun 1 2007, 12:45 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 1 2007, 10:52 AM)
>
> Since you, at least appear, to use some reasoning here, I was surprised that you also left out several important options/scenerios.
> In your humble opinion, could it be that 3abn had nothing to do with sealed or unsealed documents because they have left those decisions to the experts to do what they think is best. Since most people know nothing about legal strategy isn't that what they hire lawyers for? If that is the case then 3abn would be "informed" of what the attorney's had decided to do. They would not be making those decisions.
> The other option for impoundment that you have overlooked is this. Maybe sealing the documents has nothing to do with any "damaging" information coming out. It could be, and I would guess probably so, that it is simply to keep the men involved from spinning their own opinions, allegations and stories to the public while litigation is going on. If this group of attorney's have done their homework, they have studied the site, studied the people involved and I would imagine, have come to several conclusions. I would guess They will go forward and make decisions based on those conclusions and the behaviour of those that are doing this. In my opinion to unleash litigation proceedings to people of Joy and Pickles caliber would be a catastrophic mess for all involved.

would think that it would be 3ABN best interest to unseal the litigation and show the world without a doubt hat G and J are the liars that 3ABN state they are.

wish there was a tongue in cheek emoticon available)
osyroi

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 1 2007, 02:06 PM

> QUOTE(Whtz Happenin @ May 31 2007, 10:43 PM)
>
> So what part of going to court to sue other Christians are you laughing at?
>
> I would not be very proud of repeated promises to take others to court.
>
> Going to court, in this situation, has nothing to do with "bringing out," but has everything to do with "covering up" the truth.
>
> Oh BTW, what happened to "letting the Lord fight our battles for us."

erhaps they are letting their "lord" do just that.

Posted by: princessdi Jun 1 2007, 02:38 PM

Now, Rosy, I can see the Lawyers point in sealing the records, really. The thruth is that nothing happens that sometimes within the same day, it is posted on the internet somewhere. If they want to keep control of the information then they must seal the record and ti gag those involved, Now, at some point, they may want to release that info, since it has been their claim that recisely this info will clear Danny, implicate Linda, and prove to al that Dannyw as telling the truth all along.

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ Jun 1 2007, 11:45 AM)
>
> I would think that it would be 3ABN best interest to unseal the litigation and show the world without a doubt that G and J are the liars that 3ABN state they are.
>
> Rosyroi

Posted by: mikell Jun 1 2007, 02:58 PM

> QUOTE(Artiste @ May 31 2007, 05:25 PM)
>
> And I still think that 3ABN will, sooner rather than later, lose enough donations to put them out of business.
>
> Negative publicity coming from sources like Save3ABN.com and BlackSDA and also just people talking among themselves may easily bring about the above results without any further efforts needed.

Artiste, plus have you seen the one on rescue3abn.blog.com? Let us hope that it will be SOONER, for Danny to go rather then 3abn to go

---

Posted by: Artiste Jun 1 2007, 10:38 PM

> QUOTE(mikell @ Jun 1 2007, 12:58 PM)
>
> Artiste, plus have you seen the one on rescue3abn.blog.com? Let us hope that it will be SOONER, for Danny to go rather then 3abn to go

Yes, I saw that other site, but after I had made the above comments. I got the impression that the "rescue3abn.blog.com" site was sincere in its intent.

And of course I do not wish to see the whole 3ABN structure go down!

Posted by: Observer Jun 2 2007, 05:23 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Jun 1 2007, 10:52 AM)
>
> Since you, at least appear, to use some reasoning here, I was surprised that you also left out several important options/scenerios.
> In your humble opinion, could it be that 3abn had nothing to do with sealed or unsealed documents because they have left those decisions to the experts to do what they think is best. Since most people > know nothing about legal strategy isn't that what they hire lawyers for? If that is the case then 3abn would be "informed" of what the attorney's had decided to do. They would not be making those decisions.

> The other option for impoundment that you have overlooked is this. Maybe sealing the documents has nothing to do with any "damaging" information coming out. It could be, and I would guess probably so, that it is simply to keep the men involved from spinning their own opinions, allegations and stories to the public while litigation is going on. If this group of attorney's have done their homework, they have studied the site, studied the people involved and I would imagine, have come to several conclusions. I would guess They will go forward and make decisions based on those conclusions and the behaviour of those that are doing this. In my opinion to unleash litigation proceedings to people of Joy and Pickles caliber would be a catastrophic mess for all involved.

Re: "In your humble opinion, could it be that 3abn had nothing to do with sealed or unsealed documents ecause they have left those decisions to the experts to do what they think is best. Since most people know othing about legal strategy isn't that what they hire lawyers for? If that is the case then 3abn would be informed" of what the attorney's had decided to do. They would not be making those decisions."

expect that Steffan is quite right. I suspect that the decision was made by the lawyers invovled, and not by 3-ABN. After all, that is why people retain lawyers. To, be blunt, I do not expect that Danny Shelton is listed s co-council in the lawsuit. I do not know of any qualifications that he might have to act in such a role.

But, I will remind you that lawyers act as repreentatives in a court of law. That is to say that the lawyers who iled the lawsuit are acting as representatives of 3-ABN. They are NOT acting in their own behalf. That is a rinciple well established in case law. It is probably one of the best established principles that exists in our egal system. The courts have many times ruled that the clients were responsible for the consiquences of the ctions of their lawyers. Are there exceptiosn to this general principle? Yes, there are. But, they are few and ar between.

Re: "The other option for impoundment that you have overlooked is this. Maybe sealing the documents has othing to do with any "damaging" information coming out. It could be, and I would guess probably so, that it s simply to keep the men involved from spinning their own opinions, allegations and stories to the public vhile litigation is going on. . . . In my opinion to unleash litigation proceedings to people of Joy and Pickles aliber would be a catastrophic mess for all involved."

ou have certainly raised some interesting questions or issues!

So, you suggest that it might be a catastrophic mess for the public to know what is going on in the trial! stounding!

By the way, you seeming have not considered the body of U.S. law (bose case and statute) that tells us that ivil litigation is public. Yes, there are clearly defined exceptions. As you likely know, the court has not ruled hat any of these exceptions apply. So, it remains to be seen if this impoundment will remain in effect.

es, it may be that you are correct that the lawyers involved wanted to attempt to keep Joy and Pickle from pinning thier own opinions. But, if so, that again is an astounding admission. Under the so-called "freedom of he press" provisions of the Bill of Rights, that is exactly what is a fundamental right given to us in our Constitution. It is a right likely possessed by Mr. Joy, even if not Pickle. [NOTE: I am not stating whether Pickle has that right. I am simply stating that Joy has it.]

will suggest that unless there are exceptions that I am not aware of, the documents will be unsealed on the asis of the freedom of the press. I say this becaue I believe that Mr. Joy will be able to establish that he is n investagative reporter.

will point out to you that the primary role of litigation lawyers is not to manage public opinon, in a court of aw. That is the role of PR firms. It is a role that they do in the media. You appear to not understand the role of litgatiors.

Posted by: Seraphim7 Jun 2 2007, 07:42 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 31 2007, 06:43 PM)
>
> The following dawned on me:
>
> - Danny has repeatedly spurned all requests for the release of evidence that allegedly vindicates himself, saying that it would all be brought out in a court of law.
> - We saw very clearly that whatever evidence was going to be brought out in the ASI hearings was never going to see the light of day. It would be sealed forever.
> - Could it be that Danny's repeated promise that it would all be brought out in a court of law was but a ruse, and that he always intended to impose the same kind of eternal secrecy he intended the ASI hearings to have?
>
> I know, I know. Eternal is absolutely positively the wrong word.
>
> "Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known" (Mt. 10:26).
>
> "For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known" (Lk. 12:2).

For very small values of ALL... IMO

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 31 2007, 07:24 PM)
>
> Was it a wise move to seal the documents, or was it not?
>
> The answer to that depends upon what is in the docuemnts. It just could be that it was a wise move to protect 3-ABN from the damage that they woul follow if the public knew what was in them.
>
> As I do not know what is in them I cannot say. But, I assume that 3-ABN was protecting its interests, and that it assumes that the damage from impounding them will be less than the damage that would follow if the public knew.
>
> That is only an assuption of mine basd in part upon my view that 3-ABN is recieving excelleant legal advice, and that the people who know what is in those documents believe it best to keep that information from the public.

"Wise" no. Cowardly, yes... I don't see where he really cares about "damage to 3abn".BTJM

Posted by: runner4him Jun 2 2007, 10:59 AM

There is another site to check out......rescue3abn site is mentioned in another thread.

Just thought of something. With the court documents sealed...it looks like DS is trying to put a muzzle on the facts......Pickle and Joy since they are the ones who are being sued to begin with. It is obvious or we can assume that DS and whomever do not want all the viewers and supporters to really know what is going on....we are ignorant as to what the lawsuit is about, when the hearings will be, what is being said by DS. Darkness seems critical to DS.

This is my thought..............How about some of us downloading all the info on the save3abn website before the site is gone...(if that happens). We can be prepared. Then we who are convicted to climb out on that limb and join the front line men could create many websites to continue the battle to save 3abn. We could be in the hundreds and they cannot sue everyone! If they hush one then another can pick up the torch and go forward to save the ministry.

What about the brothers and sisters out of the country? They could never be sued even if their identity is known. How about it?? Spread the word on the net or by e-mail and gather the army. Call sin by its right name and stand together.

I heard the blogs are not traceable like the web site is.

Posted by: inga Jun 3 2007, 01:07 PM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ Jun 2 2007, 11:59 AM)
>
> How about some of us downloading all the info on the save3abn website before the site is gone...(if that happens). We can be prepared. Then we who are convicted to climb out on that limb and join the front line men could create many websites to continue the battle to save 3abn. We could be in the hundreds and they cannot sue everyone! If they hush one then another can pick up the torch and go forward to save the ministry.
>
> What about the brothers and sisters out of the country? They could never be sued even if their identity is known. How about it?? Spread the word on the net or by e-mail and gather the army. Call sin by its right name and stand together.
>
> I heard the blogs are not traceable like the web site is.

A beekeeper recommended HTTRACK to me for downloading his web site, because he planned to take it down. I used it for that and a number of times since. It works quite well. It's a free program and here's where you get it:
http://www.httrack.com/ You can also get it from http://www.download.com/3000-2377-10039773.html where you can see the rating, in case you're interested.

Posted by: mozart Jun 3 2007, 01:45 PM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ Jun 2 2007, 10:59 AM)
>
> There is another site to check out......rescue3abn site is mentioned in another thread.
>
> I heard the blogs are not traceable like the web site is.

even if the websites are traceable, what would they do about hundreds of them? i'd just say i have a very smart german shepherd. (dat's private joke fur me frend) hehe

---

Posted by: Skyhook Jun 3 2007, 03:14 PM

This possibility may have been mentioned in the past, but if the lawsuit is only about copyright infringment, and Danny wins, he will likely try to make it appear to the viewers that the court has ruled in his favor and it proves that all the stories are lies.

I wonder if there is a possibility that someone could come on this forum and make some very serious accusations against Danny and/or others at 3abn that are not true, with the intention of getting folks here to accept it as true and run with it, and possibly setting up a situation where Calvin could be sued. I was thinking of such stories as violence, or threats of harming people for revealing what they know.

Posted by: mozart Jun 3 2007, 07:21 PM

oh i think he'd be treading on some really, i mean really dangerous ground if he tried that. we are mighty warriors.

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Jun 3 2007, 03:14 PM)
>
> This possibility may have been mentioned in the past, but if the lawsuit is only about copyright infringment, and Danny wins, he will likely try to make it appear to the viewers that the court has ruled in his favor and it proves that all the stories are lies.
>
> I wonder if there is a possibility that someone could come on this forum and make some very serious accusations against Danny and/or others at 3abn that are not true, with the intention of getting folks here to accept it as true and run with it, and possibly setting up a situation where Calvin could be sued. I was thinking of such stories as violence, or threats of harming people for revealing what they know.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 3 2007, 10:40 PM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Jun 3 2007, 01:14 PM)
>
> This possibility may have been mentioned in the past, but if the lawsuit is only about copyright infringment, and Danny wins, he will likely try to make it appear to the viewers that the court has ruled in his favor and it proves that all the stories are lies.
>
> I wonder if there is a possibility that someone could come on this forum and make some very serious accusations against Danny and/or others at 3abn that are not true, with the intention of getting folks here to accept it as true and run with it, and possibly setting up a situation where Calvin could be sued. I was thinking of such stories as violence, or threats of harming people for revealing what they know.

You make an important point, Skyhook. I'm sure that many of us already look for verification before we run with any info, contrary to what some of those from the "other side" might charge. I think we all certainly need to keep this in mind as we are weighing information.

Posted by: ex3ABNemployee Jun 4 2007, 03:17 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jun 3 2007, 02:07 PM)

> A beekeeper recommended HTTRACK to me for downloading his web site, because he planned to take it down. I used it for that and a number of times since. It works quite well. It's a free program and here's where you get it:
> http://www.httrack.com/ You can also get it from http://www.download.com/3000-2377-10039773.html where you can see the rating, in case you're interested.

Thank you! Very good program. Works nicely.

Maybe we shouldn't even wait to see what happens with the lawsuit. Websites and blogs seem to really get under Danny's skin, so.......

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Free Enterprise

Posted by: lurker May 29 2007, 10:33 PM

Looks like Bruce and Tammy Chance sell dogs. http://tinyurl.com/2zoe8w http://tinyurl.com/2yk3fp http://tinyurl.com/2srxjm http://tinyurl.com/2qsymj http://tinyurl.com/33bnl5 http://tinyurl.com/32btd8

They seem to be very enterprising.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 29 2007, 11:00 PM

I have seen Bruce's ads before but not the one that Tammy has listed. I wonder if the ones that Bruce sells with the 3abn email address are being sold for 3abn? I heard recently that he used to have a gun range and a sport hunting facility. Seems he's into that kind of thing so perhaps this is just another of his own personal business ventures. The dogs sell for a pretty penny, especially the trained ones, so it looks like a lucrative enterprise.

Posted by: Fran May 30 2007, 01:56 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 30 2007, 12:00 AM)
>
> I have seen Bruce's ads before but not the one that Tammy has listed. I wonder if the ones that Bruce sells with the 3abn email address are being sold for 3abn? I heard recently that he used to have a gun range and a sport hunting facility. Seems he's into that kind of thing so perhaps this is just another of his own personal business ventures. The dogs sell for a pretty penny, especially the trained ones, so it looks like a lucrative enterprise.

I noticed that phone number too! I'll bet no one told Barbara Rowe! It also has a 3ABN email. Hum... I thought they learned their lesson back then, in loosing the lawsuit, not to use 3ABN phone numbers to sell private stuff. If those ads are current, shame, shame!

The Chance family it into a lot of things. Tammy loves her grandchildren and gets them books to read, costumes, and clothes. She used to sell quite a bit, but now only sells an occasional book, purse or so on eBay.

She offered a beautiful ceramic flower arrangement that I wanted, but it ended before I could get it. It was gorgeous!

It did not sell and I thought it would be re-run, but I was wrong. I keep looking for it. She is a very nice lady and she can sing too.

I wish them well with their dogs. I guess the dogs are worth the money! People are buying them! I need to ask for lessons from them.

Posted by: lurker May 30 2007, 04:42 AM

Yes, that is 3ABN's phone number in the first two ads. Who knows how old the ads are. Stuff seems to last forever on the internet. I'd be very surprised if they are not still in business though so the ads may help give the business publicity even after those dogs are sold.

She has just finished a new musical project also. I think it will be out shortly. Danny has mentioned it (advertised for it) at least a couple of times.

Posted by: Observer May 30 2007, 06:14 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 30 2007, 04:42 AM)
>
> Yes, that is 3ABN's phone number in the first two ads. Who knows how old the ads are. Stuff seems to last forever on the internet. I'd be very surprised if they are not still in business though so the ads may help give the business publicity even after those dogs are sold.
>
> She has just finished a new musical project also. I think it will be out shortly. Danny has mentioned it (advertised for it) at least a couple of times.

Who knows how old the ads are?

There is a simple answer to that question:

"Copyright © 2007 GundogsOnline.com - All Rights Reserved
Thursday, April 26, 2007"

That copyright notice was found at the bottom of one of the URLs listed in the first post in the thread.

NOTE: I have not checked all of the URLs so I do not know if there are such notices in the other ones.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 30 2007, 06:15 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 30 2007, 02:42 AM)
>
> Yes, that is 3ABN's phone number in the first two ads. Who knows how old the ads are. Stuff seems to last forever on the internet. I'd be very surprised if they are not still in business though so the ads may help give the business publicity even after those dogs are sold.
>
> She has just finished a new musical project also. I think it will be out shortly. Danny has mentioned it (advertised for it) at least a couple of times.

Here is a chronological listing of the dogs for sale on the site.

http://www.gundogsonline.com/hunting-dogs-for-sale/started-dogs/

Posted by: Clay May 30 2007, 07:04 AM

who cares?

Posted by: Observer May 30 2007, 07:15 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 30 2007, 06:04 AM)
>
> who cares?

If, and I do not know if this is true, a 3-ABN telephone number is being used, or in any way, 3-ABN is associated with such sales, Judge Rowe cares. This was an issue in her decision.

If there is no assoication, and it is not a telephone number related to 3-ABN, like you say: Who cares?

Posted by: Clay May 30 2007, 07:19 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 30 2007, 08:15 AM)
>
> If, and I do not know if this is true, a 3-ABN telephone number is being used, or in any way, 3-ABN is associated with such sales, Judge Rowe cares. This was an issue in her decision.
>
> If there is no assoication, and it is not a telephone number related to 3-ABN, like you say: Who cares?

why would the judge continue to care after she made her ruling? Is she currently monitoring 3abn for infractions?

Posted by: Observer May 30 2007, 07:23 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 30 2007, 06:19 AM)
>
> why would the judge continue to care after she made her ruling? Is she currently monitoring 3abn for infractions?

Clay, your point is well taken. I stated my point poorly.

Posted by: Clay May 30 2007, 07:34 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 30 2007, 08:23 AM)
>
> Clay, your point is well taken. I stated my point poorly.

maybe not... maybe I am not understanding how interested the court might be about 3abn's business activity? That's why I asked...

Posted by: LaurenceD May 30 2007, 07:51 AM

All the state Dept. of Rev. would care about is whether "the two pastor's offices, each measuring 14 feet by 18 feet, on the second floor of the administrative production center building, and a corresponding amount of land" were being used for profiteering, including receiving phone calls. The rest of the 3abn property can be used for all kinds of commercial activity...as it has in the past. They can sell, and resell, hunt'n dogs, or run charter flights out to NBA games across the states. It doesn't matter anymore. And of course no one would be surprised if that was happening.

==========

Nice find, lurker. In the ads, I noticed a Texas connection again...as in an earlier ebay account. Also a Oklahoma connection. Isn't Tommy in Oklahoma now?

BTW, speaking of hunting dogs, aren't we told that Esau was a hunter?

Posted by: lurker May 30 2007, 10:35 AM

Actually, as it has been noted before, there is the property tax issue, but there are also separate State and IRS issues. There are questions about non profit status.

Because his siblings, children and grandchildren are related to Danny who is the founder and president, they are considered to be disqualified persons as is he. Danny can offer the use of the sound center and other facilities at 3ABN to others free of charge and they can sell and advertise their product such as books or cd's or whatever and make a profit. They are responsible for reporting and paying income tax on the profit. He can do this for anyone, that is except himself, his siblings, children, grandchildren, spouse and other disqualified persons.

There is a whoppin big fine for any of them doing this and this fine can also apply to the board members, managers and so on who allow it.

Posted by: Fran May 30 2007, 10:47 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 30 2007, 08:04 AM)
>
> who cares?

Well, I was interested in those Dogs. My Chihuahua is worth Millions of Dollars! I did not find ONE Chihuahua listed!

My little 4-5 pound-er is a good hunter! She can find food every time, but she usually turns her nose up when she finds it!

She can find me 100% of the time. In fact, she sits in her bed everywhere I go. She has lots of small dog beds in the house. Even one on top of my desk. She can tell me when she needs food, a drink and when she needs to...Uh, you know.

How can they not list the smartest Dog in the world!

It goes to show, value is in the eye of the beholder!

Seriously, it matters because the results found in the Property Tax Lawsuit were not taken seriously by 3ABN Management. They still continue to do what they did back then. This should have an impact on their appeal.

It is also an indicator that maybe more items that needed to change, did not change at 3ABN

since 2000-2001

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 30 2007, 08:51 AM)
>
> All the state Dept. of Rev. would care about is whether "the two pastor's offices, each measuring 14 feet by 18 feet, on the second floor of the administrative production center building, and a corresponding amount of land" were being used for profiteering, including receiving phone calls. The rest of the 3abn property can be used for all kinds of commercial activity...as it has in the past. They can sell, and resell, hunt'n dogs, or run charter flights out to NBA games across the states. It doesn't matter anymore. And of course no one would be surprised if that was happening.
>
> ==========
>
> Nice find, lurker. In the ads, I noticed a Texas connection again...as in an earlier eBay account. Also a Oklahoma connection. Isn't Tommy in Oklahoma now?
>
> BTW, speaking of hunting dogs, aren't we told that Esau was a hunter?

Texas, Oregon, California, Missouri, Tennessee, Florida, Kentucky ... The beat goes on.

Posted by: mozart May 30 2007, 12:55 PM

aw heck fran...................., that aint nuthin'

i had a cat that could do all that and more. he walked on a leash, stayed on a chain when we camped and jumped in the van when we started packing up. he even flew on an airplane, sitting up in the seat with his arm on the armrest. ....*ppfffftt ! *

Attached Image

This is kimosobbie... better known as "The Sob-Meister" rofl rofl rofl just funnin' ya gurly. he-he but it is true.

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 30 2007, 10:47 AM)
>
> [b]Well, I was interested in those Dogs. My Chihuahua is worth Millions of Dollars! I did not find ONE Chihuahua listed!
>
> My little 4-5 pound-er is a good hunter! She can find food every time, but she usually turns her nose up when she finds it!
>
> She can find me 100% of the time. In fact, she sits in her bed everywhere I go. She has lots of small dog beds in the house. Even one on top of my desk. She can tell me when she needs food, a drink and when she needs to...Uh, you know.
>
> How can they not list the smartest Dog in the world!
>
> It goes to show, value is in the eye of the beholder!

Posted by: Skyhook May 30 2007, 01:17 PM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 30 2007, 11:35 AM)
>
> Actually, as it has been noted before, there is the property tax issue, but there are also separate State and IRS issues. There are questions about non profit status.
>
> He can do this for anyone, that is except himself, his siblings, children, grandchildren, spouse and other disqualified persons.
>
> There is a whoppin big fine for any of them doing this and this fine can also apply to the board members, managers and so on who allow it.

I haven't turned the TV on much lately, but 2 or 3 weeks ago they were running an ad for Tommy' and Donna Klein's CD. I saw it several times.

Posted by: mozart May 30 2007, 01:32 PM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 30 2007, 01:17 PM)
>
> I haven't turned the TV on much lately, but 2 or 3 weeks ago they were running an ad for Tommy' and Donna Klein's CD. I saw it several times.

who was it that said on here that that CD was like being at a Roller-Rink??? [x] rofl oh, we are heathens aren't we!

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 30 2007, 04:59 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 30 2007, 08:47 AM)
>
> [b]Well, I was interested in those Dogs. My Chihuahua is worth Millions of Dollars! I did not find ONE Chihuahua listed!
>
> My little 4-5 pound-er is a good hunter! She can find food every time, but she usually turns her nose up when she finds it!
>
> She can find me 100% of the time. In fact, she sits in her bed everywhere I go. She has lots of small dog beds in the house. Even one on top of my desk. She can tell me when she needs food, a drink and when she needs to...Uh, you know.
>
> How can they not list the smartest Dog in the world!
>
> It goes to show, value is in the eye of the beholder!

Fran,

When the hunters have tired of bagging geese, ducks and pheasants and start putting hummingbirds into their crosshairs, your chihuahua will be the most saleable dog on that site. In fact, it just might be a good idea to start her training soon. Ya just never know.

PB

Posted by: Fran May 30 2007, 05:08 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 30 2007, 05:59 PM) ☐
>
> Fran,
>
> When the hunters have tired of bagging geese, ducks and pheasants and start putting hummingbirds into their crosshairs, your chihuahua will be the most saleable dog on that site. In fact, it just might be a good idea to start her training soon. Ya just never know.
>
> PB

$$$$$$$$$$$$$ ☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ rofl

Posted by: Skyhook May 30 2007, 10:36 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 30 2007, 11:47 AM) ☐
>
> [b]Well, I was interested in those Dogs. My Chihuahua is worth Millions of Dollars! I did not find ONE Chihuahua listed!
>
> My little 4-5 pound-er is a good hunter! She can find food every time, but she usually turns her nose up when she finds it!
>
> She can find me 100% of the time. In fact, she sits in her bed everywhere I go. She has lots of small dog beds in the house. Even one on top of my desk. She can tell me when she needs food, a drink and when she needs to...Uh, you know.
>
> How can they not list the smartest Dog in the world!
>
> I

Fran, this is off topic, I guess, but I took care of a friend's chihuahua for a few days last week. I live in the mountains. The first time the dog spotted deer in the yard he charged at them as if he would tear them up. It was hilarious to see two full grown deer running in a panic being chased by this tiny dog.
A day or two later I had my front door open and the porch steps blocked so the dog couldn't get off the porch. Its too high for him to jump. A doe that is one of my regulars always comes up to the porch and looks in the door when it is open and I give her an apple. This time the dog saw her walking across the yard. He ran to the edge of the porch and went into a stance with his head down and an alert intimidating stare at the deer. The deer just walked right up and put her nose up to his. The poor dog was confused, I think, but started wagging his tail furiously, thinking its play time. He ran back and forth, but couldn't bring himself to jump off the porch. The deer was startled a little but she didn't run. It was really funny.
Sorry for the digression, but I had to tell my chihuahua story. They are great little dogs. I had heard they are fearless, and I think its true.

Posted by: mozart May 30 2007, 11:27 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 30 2007, 04:59 PM) ☐
>
> Fran,
>
> When the hunters have tired of bagging geese, ducks and pheasants and start putting hummingbirds into their crosshairs, your chihuahua will be the most saleable dog on that site. In fact, it just might be a good idea to start her training soon. Ya just never know.
>
> PB

☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl

wow skyhook, sounds like you have a great yard. mind invitin' some of us to come stay for a spell???? ☒ ☒

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 30 2007, 10:36 PM) ☐
>
> Fran, this is off topic, I guess, but I took care of a friend's chihuahua for a few days last week. I live in the mountains. The first time the dog spotted deer in the yard he charged at them as if he would tear them up. It was hilarious to see two full grown deer running in a panic being chased by this tiny dog.
> A day or two later I had my front door open and the porch steps blocked so the dog couldn't get off the porch. Its too high for him to jump. A doe that is one of my regulars always comes up to the porch and looks in the door when it is open and I give her an apple. This time the dog saw her walking across the yard. He ran to the edge of the porch and went into a stance with his head down and an alert intimidating stare at the deer. The deer just walked right up and put her nose up to his. The poor dog was confused, I think, but started wagging his tail furiously, thinking its play time. He ran back and forth, but couldn't bring himself to jump off the porch. The deer was startled a little but she didn't run. It was really funny.
> Sorry for the digression, but I had to tell my chihuahua story. They are great little dogs. I had heard they are fearless, and I think its true.

Posted by: Skyhook May 31 2007, 01:56 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 31 2007, 12:27 AM) ☐
>
> ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl
>
> wow skyhook, sounds like you have a great yard. mind invitin' some of us to come stay for a spell????
> ☒ ☒

That would be great!! I hardly ever have company. Most of my friends live in the SF bay area which is about a 7-8 hour drive.

Posted by: Fran May 31 2007, 10:13 AM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 30 2007, 11:36 PM)
>
> Fran, this is off topic, I guess, but I took care of a friend's chihuahua for a few days last week. I live in the mountains. The first time the dog spotted deer in the yard he charged at them as if he would tear them up. It was hilarious to see two full grown deer running in a panic being chased by this tiny dog.
> A day or two later I had my front door open and the porch steps blocked so the dog couldn't get off the porch. Its too high for him to jump. A doe that is one of my regulars always comes up to the porch and looks in the door when it is open and I give her an apple. This time the dog saw her walking across the yard. He ran to the edge of the porch and went into a stance with his head down and an alert intimidating stare at the deer. The deer just walked right up and put her nose up to his. The poor dog was confused, I think, but started wagging his tail furiously, thinking its play time. He ran back and forth, but couldn't bring himself to jump off the porch. The deer was startled a little but she didn't run. It was really funny.
> Sorry for the digression, but I had to tell my chihuahua story. They are great little dogs. I had heard they are fearless, and I think its true.

My Mandy Louise thinks she is a really big thing too! She loves to chase the peacocks out of our back yard! The big dogs hear the ruckus and come running to the fence to see her act. They all want to play!

It is so funny!

Posted by: lurker Jun 1 2007, 11:41 AM

"I haven't turned the TV on much lately, but 2 or 3 weeks ago they were running an ad for Tommy' and Donna Klein's CD. I saw it several times. " Skyhook

Folks, I love your cute doggie stories but this was my point exactly. Tommy, Danny, Melody and Tammy+Bruce. It seems to be run like a family business, not like a non profit corporation.

Posted by: Johann Jun 4 2007, 03:53 AM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 30 2007, 09:17 PM)
>
> I haven't turned the TV on much lately, but 2 or 3 weeks ago they were running an ad for Tommy' and Donna Klein's CD. I saw it several times.

I saw it yesterday. Also Danny telling about the AF-3ABN merger. Were these re-runs?

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Legal Posturing

Posted by: Observer May 5 2007, 06:05 PM

NOTE: I want to be quite clear here. The documents related to the lawusit by 3-ABN against Gailon Joy and Bob Pickle haev been impounded. They are not open to the public. Those who have access to them are under judicial order not to share the information that they know about them. I do not have access to those documents. Those who have access to them have not discussed their content with me. I do not know that charges that are alleged against Mr. Joy and Mr. Pickle. (I wish that I did. .) Therefore comments that I make about this case are either speculative, or intended to be general in nature, and they are will not be based upon any of the sealed documents. As people are asking questions, I will at times make some general comments in regard to common lawsuits.

As I have publicly stated, we can expect the lawyers for both sides to spend some time in technical and proceedural matters. I have suggested that two early issues will be to challeng the impoundment order, and to request a change of venue, if that is desisred.

People have asked me why 3-ABN chose to file the lawsuit in Massasschutes, rather than in say Illionis.

My speculative response is as follows:

1) 3-ABN expects to obtain a judgement against Mr. Joy.

2) They expect to demand some sort of financial damages as a result of the judgement that they expect to obtain against Mr. Joy.

3) They believe that Mr. Joy has assets, located in Massasschutes, that may be used to satisfy any financial damages that he may be ordered to pay them.

4) If this is true, it will be fairly easy for 3-ABN to ask a court in Massasschutes to order Mr. Joy's assets to be surrended to pay that judgement.

5) If 3-ABN had filed in Illinois, it would have required more litigation, and more billable attorney hours to then go to Massassachuts to obtain access to Mr. Joy's assets.

6) 3-ABN has potentially simplified the satification of any judgement that they obtain against Mr. Joy by filing in Massasachutes.

How does Mr. Pickle fit into all of this? Again, my response is speculaltive. He does not live in Massasschutes:

1) 3-ABN believes that it is much less likely that Mr. Pickle has assets that may be used to satisfy any judgment against him.

2) 3-ABN may seek an order to cease and desist against him, and be satisfied with that.

NOTE: I will post more comments here as I have them. If the time comes when the documents are unsealed, I will review them, and post my understanding of them.

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 07:38 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 5 2007, 06:05 PM) ☐
>
> 3) They believe that Mr. Joy has assets, located in Massasschutes, that may be used to satisfy any financial damages that he may be ordered to pay them.
>
> 4) If this is true, it will be fairly easy for 3-ABN to ask a court in Massasschutes to order Mr. Joy's assets to be surrended to pay that judgement.
>
> 5) If 3-ABN had filed in Illinois, it would have required more litigation, and more billable attorney hours to then go to Massassachuts to obtain access to Mr. Joy's assets.
>
> 6) 3-ABN has potentially simplified the satification of any judgement that they obtain against Mr. Joy by filing in Massasachutes.
>
> It appears that Danny learned a lot from that Guam divorce.
>
> How does Mr. Pickle fit into all of this? Again, my response is speculaltive. He does not live in Massasschutes:
>
> 1) 3-ABN believes that it is much less likely that Mr. Pickle has assets that may be used to satisfy any judgment against him.
>
> 2) 3-ABN may seek an order to cease and desist against him, and be satisfied with that.
>
> if that happens, Pickle should beg the mercy of the court that he be jailed with his notebook computer instead.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 5 2007, 08:50 PM

Personally - IMUP (in my unprofessional opinion)

Whomever Danny has as lawyers are not advising him well.....

Why?

Because when you sue someone you are then allowed to EVERYTHING THEY POSSESS in regards to records.

IOW....

Financial documents, accounting records, divorce decrees, prior lawsuit information that is "concerned" with the case (or not - could be deemed relevent or not), bank records, phone records, deeds, tax information, security files, employee records.....

Evidence discovery goes both ways......

☒ sn

Posted by: mozart May 5 2007, 10:01 PM

If the suit is just about copyright infringment then why would anything else be relevant? so not sure what on Danny's part will be exposed. seems this suit is just to intimidate joy and pickle and to keep them distracted and preoccupied on their defense and to cost them money.
We should keep them in prayer.

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ May 5 2007, 08:50 PM) ☐
>
> Personally - IMUP (in my unprofessional opinion)
>
> Whomever Danny has as lawyers are not advising him well.....
>
> Why?
>
> Because when you sue someone you are then allowed to EVERYTHING THEY POSSESS in regards to records.
>
> IOW....
>
> Financial documents, accounting records, divorce decrees, prior lawsuit information that is "concerned" with the case (or not - could be deemed relevent or not), bank records, phone records, deeds, tax information, security files, employee records.....
>
> Evidence discovery goes both ways......
>
> ☒ sn

Posted by: runner4him May 5 2007, 11:54 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 5 2007, 10:01 PM) ☐
>
> If the suit is just about copyright infringment then why would anything else be relevant? so not sure what on Danny's part will be exposed. seems this suit is just to intimidate joy and pickle and to keep them distracted and preoccupied on their defense and to cost them money.
> We should keep them in prayer.

I agree...prayer is much needed...the financial burden alone will be tremendous. But I am thankful that both Joy and Pickle do not seem to be the type of men who will be intimidated. They would never have gotten into this "pickle" if they were easily intimidated. I chuckled over the comment about Pickle taking his laptop to jail. It is not a funny matter but I can almost see him keeping up from the cell. Pray that God works to bring out all the truth if this goes forward. It looks to me like DS is making an even bigger mistake by seeking the worldly court system to air the dirty linen....he seems to have baskets full of it.

Posted by: betrayed May 6 2007, 05:49 PM

Pray that God works to bring out all the truth if this goes forward. It looks to me like DS is making an even bigger mistake by seeking the worldly court system to air the dirty linen....he seems to have baskets full of it.
[/quote]

Well, I ain't been to a "regular" SDA church in awhile, but a different Sabbath keeping church cuz of 3ABN.

I's a wonderin about the ole SDA church manual, theys used to have.

Don't it says somethings about suing your brethen? Not submitteing to the church authority? My takes on this is that if this church manual waz followed, that this Danny guy should be disfellowshipped just on this issue alone. I ain't talking about the other alleged issues raised on these forum/threads...

Also, don't 3ABN claim, to be non demonational, not associated with any church, then howz come them SDa churchs goes against the church manual withs regards to the section on solicitation of funds from the pulpit or distributing their materials.

This Danny guy or any 3abn persons ain't supposed to be asking for monies from the pulpit per the church manual!

So whatz that church a gonna do about it? Keep on sweeping it the ole carpet?

Posted by: Observer May 6 2007, 06:10 PM

> QUOTE(betrayed @ May 6 2007, 05:49 PM)
>
> Pray that God works to bring out all the truth if this goes forward. It looks to me like DS is making an even bigger mistake by seeking the worldly court system to air the dirty linen....he seems to have baskets full of it.
> Well, I ain't been to a "regular" SDA church in awhile, but a different Sabbath keeping church cuz of 3ABN.
>
> I's a wonderin about the ole SDA church manual, theys used to have.
>
> Don't it says somethings about suing your brethen? Not submitteing to the church authority? My takes on this is that if this church manual waz followed, that this Danny guy should be disfellowshipped just on this issue alone. I ain't talking about the other alleged issues raised on these forum/threads...
>
> Also, don't 3ABN claim, to be non demonational, not associated with any church, then howz come them SDa churchs goes against the church manual withs regards to the section on solicitation of funds from the pulpit or distributing their materials.
>
> This Danny guy or any 3abn persons ain't supposed to be asking for monies from the pulpit per the church manual!
>
> So whatz that church a gonna do about it? Keep on sweeping it the ole carpet?

AS has been posted many times. The current CHRUCH MANUAL clearly states that there are situations where the church has neither the authority nor the ability to resolve disputes, and in such cases recourse is only to the civil authorities.

The CHRUCH MANUAL also states that the church should not be diverted from its mission to preach the gospel to become a civil magistrate.

In my opinion, There are a number of the issues associated with 3-ABN that fit this category.

It may be sad that things have come to the place where civil litigation may be initiated by people on both sides. If that happens it will be in a context where those who file are not in opposition to the CHRUCH MANUAL.

While I am a critic, clearly on a certain side. I do not criticize any of the parties who either have already filed, or may file in the future. To be clear: I do not criticize them for filing civil litigation.

The bottom line is: There is no other recourse for some of the issues.

Posted by: mozart May 6 2007, 06:23 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 6 2007, 05:10 PM) ☐
>
> While I am a critic, clearly on a certain side. I do not criticize any of the parties who either have already filed, or may file in the future. To be clear: I do not criticize them for filing civil litigation.
>
> The bottom line is: There is no other recourse for some of the issues.

I agree, when the church, the conference and ASI refuse to address any of these issues then what choice is there. Seems many of these issues are civil anyway.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 6 2007, 06:28 PM

Well, when the church authorities are too cowardly to deal ...

Posted by: Fran May 6 2007, 08:49 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 6 2007, 07:10 PM) ☐
>
> AS has been posted many times. The current CHRUCH MANUAL clearly states that there are situations where the church has neither the authority nor the ability to resolve disputes, and in such cases recourse is only to the civil authorities.
>
> The CHRUCH MANUAL also states that the church should not be diverted from its mission to preach the gospel to become a civil magistrate.
>
> In my opinion, There are a number of the issues associated with 3-ABN that fit this category.
>
> It may be sad that things have come to the place where civil litigation may be initiated by people on both sides. If that happens it will be in a context where those who file are not in opposition to the CHRUCH MANUAL.
>
> While I am a critic, clearly on a certain side. I do not criticize any of the parties who either have already filed, or may file in the future. To be clear: I do not criticize them for filing civil litigation.
>
> The bottom line is: There is no other recourse for some of the issues.

Observer;

I am in a quandary.

What does "Impound" means vs. "sealed".

When the police impound my car, it physically goes to lock up. If something is sealed, what does that mean?

Does it mean something is "impounded" by taking it away and then sealing?

Was any thing taken away from Joy and Pickle besides there freedom to speak about what ever it is they are being charges with?

Posted by: Observer May 7 2007, 03:46 AM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 6 2007, 07:49 PM) ☐
>
> Observer;
>
> I am in a quandary.
>
> What does "Impound" means vs. "sealed".
>
> When the police impound my car, it physically goes to lock up. If something is sealed, what does that mean?
>
> Does it mean something is "impounded" by taking it away and then sealing?
>
> Was any thing taken away from Joy and Pickle besides there freedom to speak about what ever it is they are being charges with?

I once made a point of that. I have been informed that in the State of MA, the preferred legal term is "impound." I am more familiar with the term "seal."

I guess that the bottom line is that the court has ordered that the documents related to the case cannot be disclosed to people outside of the litigants--those named as plaintiffs and defendants and their legal advisers.

Typically, that judicial order would be a temp. one until a hearing would be held for the other side to challenge, and/or for the court to rule as to whether or not the judicial order would be permanent, or time limited. While that would what would typically happen, there are those who believe that the judicial order prevents them from stating whether or not such a hearing has been scheduled, and if it has what that date is for that hearing.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 6 2007, 05:28 PM) ☐
>
> Well, when the church authorities are too cowardly to deal ...

Soul:

Perhaps, on an individual basis, there might be someone who may fit you comment. But, as a general rule, I woule suggest that the denominaiton simply does not have the authority to deal with the issues.

It might be argued that the denominaiton could issue a statement of some sort. O.K. That raises the issue of tactics. Would such be effective? That is a tactical question.

In addition, there is much to these issues on which final conclusions can only be reached if, and after, the civil authorities act. As this is true, how could the denomination issue a statement dealing with such issus prior to a final action by the civil authorities?

Perhaps some watered down statement could be made? If so, whom would it satisfy? Again this is an issue of tactics.

Posted by: daylily May 7 2007, 04:27 AM

> QUOTE
>
> Well, I ain't been to a "regular" SDA church in awhile, but a different Sabbath keeping church cuz of 3ABN.

Betrayed, I'm just curious. why in the world would 3ABN keep you from attending a regular SDA church???

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 10:42 PM

my question exactly. would you please explain this betrayed?

> QUOTE(daylily @ May 7 2007, 03:27 AM)
>
> Betrayed, I'm just curious. why in the world would 3ABN keep you from attending a regular SDA church???

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 8 2007, 09:15 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 7 2007, 03:46 AM)
>
> Soul:
>
> Perhaps, on an individual basis, there might be someone who may fit you comment. But, as a general rule, I woule suggest that the denominaiton simply does not have the authority to deal with the issues.
>
> It might be argued that the denominaiton could issue a statement of some sort. O.K. That raises the issue of tactics. Would such be effective? That is a tactical question.
>
> In addition, there is much to these issues on which final conclusions can only be reached if, and after, the civil authorities act. As this is true, how could the denomination issue a statement dealing with such issus prior to a final action by the civil authorities?
>
> Perhaps some watered down statement could be made? If so, whom would it satisfy? Again this is an issue of tactics.

I can appreciate the question, don't get me wrong. I've always appreciated your posts even on the rare occasion I don't agree 100%. I think we're on the same side.

Of course not all in church leadership are cowardly (shoot, I have family members working throughout the denomination at different levels), and in my geographic area we were privately advised by our conference to steer people away from 3ABN toward Hope. But that isn't enough. When the saints see people on TV and support them with their money, they become old friends in a way and going to another channel seems like disloyalty.

Last year the Washington Post accidentally (on purpose?) described 3ABN as a "growing offshoot" of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. If they don't distance themselves publicly before all this hits the media fan it will soon be too late.

I would like to see a public statement by the denomination, calling for Danny Shelton and the 3ABN board to resign. They don't have the authority to tell Danny what to do--but it would make the statement that the Adventist Church disapproves of this kind of public sin.

Originally, ASI was asked to provide a group of qualified people to hold hearings about the allegations that have been made. Why can't the church call for a different independent body, an ad hoc group, to do the same thing? I know it would offend a lot of people, not least of all the people who are paying for Danny's lawsuits, but last I knew, the favor of God wasn't for sale.

Maybe only the courts can determine some of this stuff. But the church has a responsibility to distance itself from sin. Yes, it will cause short-term pain for a lot of long-time 3ABN supporters who believed they were spreading the gospel by writing checks. But after a certain point, silence becomes complicity in evil. The church's public silence is allowing Danny to continue sinning publicly.

Posted by: Observer May 8 2007, 09:49 AM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 8 2007, 09:15 AM)
>
> Originally, ASI was asked to provide a group of qualified people to hold hearings about the allegations that have been made. Why can't the church call for a different independent body, an ad hoc group, to do the same thing? I know it would offend a lot of people, not least of all the people who are paying for Danny's lawsuits, but last I knew, the favor of God wasn't for sale.

To hold such hearings, they must be credible. To be credible, 3-ABN must cooperate. The denominaiton does not have the power to force the needed cooperation. It is believed that such cooperation will not happen.

Yes, I would wish for some kind of a statement, but that is not going to happen.

I, as a person directly involved in the attempt by ASI to find a resolution, had felt that there was a very limited area in which ASI could be helpful to all. But, that could not be effected.

IOW there is very little that the Church can do. The only recourse left is to the civil authorities.

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 10:31 AM

Pastor G, I really understand that GC has really no jurisdition over 3ABN. However, if we go back to the divorce/remarriage question, this should have been handled at the church level, but it wasn't. We all know why. Since the church, and the Danny clones just said the other week that it is an Adventist church. The pastor, JL, the electronics man, did not perform due process, because of his personal bias and involvement in the dismissal of Linda. And at the time they were only claiming "spiritual adultery". So there was no basis for her attempted censure, neither Danny's remarriage. Cannot the Union, because we already know about the conference Pres., intervene?

At least do a formal investigation and publish some results. At least act as if they are aware that something is wrong. IMO, one should have been held and Danny and both Linda sat down while it was sorted out. I just see that the church has put itself, it's member, and it's intergrity in jeopardy and ad a disadvantage with it's contract and dealings with 3ABN. What exactly is the church's position in such a situation? An independent ministry who attaches itself to the church, but then that ministry and it's leader come under fire.

Posted by: Observer May 8 2007, 11:00 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 8 2007, 09:31 AM)
>
> Pastor G, I really understand that GC has really no jurisdition over 3ABN. However, if we go back to the divorce/remarriage question, this should have been handled at the church level, but it wasn't. We all know why. Since the church, and the Danny clones just said the other week that it is an Adventist church. The pastor, JL, the electronics man, did not perform due process, because of his personal bias and involvement in the dismissal of Linda. And at the time they were only claiming "spiritual adultery". So there was no basis for her attempted censure, neither Danny's remarriage. Cannot the Union, because we already know about the conference Pres., intervene?
>
> At least do a formal investigation and publish some results. At least act as if they are aware that something is wrong. IMO, one should have been held and Danny and both Linda sat down while it was sorted out. I just see that the church has put itself, it's member, and it's intergrity in jeopardy and ad a disadvantage with it's contract and dealings with 3ABN. What exactly is the church's position in such a situation? An independent ministry who attaches itself to the church, but then that ministry and it's leader come under fire.

You have clearly illustrated that the denominaiton does not have a process to deal with this situation.

For matters of this nature, it is the local congregation that has the authority to deal with the issue. Right or wrong, the authority rests with them.

Frankly, we we deal with this issue in non-specific terms (not related to Danny & Linda) our conservatives and liberals agree. That authority should rest with the local congregation, and no one else. When we deal in general terms, no conservatives or liberals would want to change that.

The denomination has a de-facto policy that when a marital issue involved a SDA clelrlgyperson, that person may be transfered to the so-called "conference-chruch" and the issue dwelt with by the Conference Executive Committee. Danny was no SDA clelrgy. So, the de-facto policy does not apply. Even in this exception, there are many spread across the spectrum who beleive it should not be done.

We just do not have a polciy that fits the need here.

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 11:25 AM

Understood and agreed that we dont' need to change or establish policy for one situation that might doom us in many more. The problem is that at church level so many do not see the problem, and often don't until itis too late.

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2007, 09:00 AM)
>
> You have clearly illustrated that the denominaiton does not have a process to deal with this situation.
>
> For matters of this nature, it is the local congregation that has the authority to deal with the issue. Right or wrong, the authority rests with them.

> Frankly, we we deal with this issue in non-specific terms (not related to Danny & Linda) our conservatives and liberals agree. That authority should rest with the local congregation, and no one else. When we deal in general terms, no conservatives or liberals would want to change that.
>
> The denomination has a de-facto policy that when a marital issue involved a SDA clelrlgyperson, that person may be transfered to the so-called "conference-chruch" and the issue dwelt with by the Conference Executive Committee. Danny was no SDA clelrgy. So, the de-facto policy does not apply. Even in this exception, there are many spread across the spectrum who beleive it should not be done.
>
> We just do not have a polciy that fits the need here.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 8 2007, 01:29 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2007, 11:00 AM)
>
> We just do not have a policy that fits the need here.

sn't there a legal proverb that goes something like, "Difficult cases make for bad law"?

laving thought about it some more, I'm more inclined to agree with you that this is out of the church's urisdiction--on a governance level.

3ut not on a moral level. I don't think the church actually can resolve this--but doesn't the body of Christ lave a moral imperative to call her members on it when they sin before the whole world? Cannot they at least iay, "Based on the available evidence surrounding these allegations, we no longer wish to have a relationship)n any level with 3ABN until the president and his board resign. While we have been grateful for their many 'ears of service, we as a church do not approve of the behavior exhibited by Danny & Co over the last three 'ears"?

f it does nothing else, it may embarass Danny into backing off on his slander, if not his lawsuits.

\nd correct me if I'm wrong, but entire congregations can be placed on church discipline. I don't have my nanual at the moment but I do believe that repeated "willful and malicious falsehood" is grounds for lisfellowship.

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 01:43 PM

That would be ideal, SE, or at least call for an exhastive, independent investigation. However, as we see the representatives here, there are many who just go along with the program, what ever Danny says. They believe him to be the belagered and embattled head of God's chosen ministry to finish this work. In fact too many are sheep minded, just following somebody, because they "believe "them to be following Jesus. Then there is the group who believe this has absolutely nothing to do with them, but don't talk about it, becuase it brings a negative light to the church. So we waiting and let it fester until 60 Mins. gets a hold of it. Then they will say, this is a plot by the beast RCC and prophecy is being fulfilled and we are in the first phase of persecution.

We may or may not learn the hard to way expose and solve these issues inhouse, as a way of preventing the oozing infection we see now.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 8 2007, 11:29 AM)

> Isn't there a legal proverb that goes something like, "Difficult cases make for bad law"?
>
> Having thought about it some more, I'm more inclined to agree with you that this is out of the church's jurisdiction--on a governance level.
>
> But not on a moral level. I don't think the church actually can resolve this--but doesn't the body of Christ have a moral impoerative to call her members on it when they sin before the whole world? Cannot they at least say, "Based on the available evidence surrounding these allegations, we no longer wish to have a relationship on any level with 3ABN until the president and his board resign. While we have been grateful for their many years of service, we as a church do not approve of the behavior exhibited by Danny & Co over the last three years"?
> If it does nothing else, it may embarass Danny into backing off on his slander, if not his lawsuits.
>
> And correct me if I'm wrong, but entire congregations can be placed on church discipline. I don't have my manual at the moment but I do believe that repeated "willful and malicious falsehood" is grounds for disfellowship.

Posted by: awesumtenor May 8 2007, 01:43 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 8 2007, 03:29 PM)
>
> I don't have my manual at the moment but I do believe that repeated "willful and malicious falsehood" is grounds for disfellowship.

Current manual lists it as "willful and habitual falsehood"... it also lists improper remarriage of divorced persons, fornication, promiscuity, incest, homosexual practice, sexual abuse of children and vulnerable adults, and other sexual perversions, fraud and willful misrepresentation in business and persistent refusal to recognize properly constituted church authority or to submit to the order and discipline of the church... in addition to the obvious sins like stealing and murder.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 8 2007, 04:29 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 8 2007, 01:43 PM)
>
> Current manual lists it as "willful and habitual falsehood"... it also lists improper remarriage of divorced persons, fornication, promiscuity, incest, homosexual practice, sexual abuse of children and vulnerable adults, and other sexual perversions, fraud and willful misrepresentation in business and persistent refusal to recognize properly constituted church authority or to submit to the order and discipline of the church... in addition to the obvious sins like stealing and murder.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Bottom line is, if Danny Shelton weren't the most familiar face in Adventism, and if he weren't backed by the wealthiest financier in the church, not only would he no longer be a member (for, as far as we can tell, all those reasons Mr. J has listed), but neither would Walter Thompsen, Shelley Quinn, Mollie and Hal Steenson, or John Lomocang--for the reason I mentioned (again, because no contrary evidence has been forthcoming).

The local church couldn't deal with it because the local church is in fact 3ABN. So the church itself ought to be subject to discipline in this case--even if there is no policy to that degree. Perhaps we should find a Thompsonville church directory and post it here ... can anyone get their hands on it?

Posted by: Snoopy May 10 2007, 01:52 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2007, 12:00 PM)
>
> You have clearly illustrated that the denominaiton does not have a process to deal with this situation.
>
> For matters of this nature, it is the local congregation that has the authority to deal with the issue. Right or wrong, the authority rests with them.
>
> Frankly, we we deal with this issue in non-specific terms (not related to Danny & Linda) our conservatives and liberals agree. That authority should rest with the local congregation, and no one else. When we deal in general terms, no conservatives or liberals would want to change that.
>
> The denomination has a de-facto policy that when a marital issue involved a SDA clelrlgyperson, that person may be transfered to the so-called "conference-chruch" and the issue dwelt with by the Conference Executive Committee. Danny was no SDA clelrgy. So, the de-facto policy does not apply. Even in this exception, there are many spread across the spectrum who beleive it should not be done.
>
> We just do not have a polciy that fits the need here.

I understand what you are saying here, Observer. But I must say that while I understand the church not having a policy that fits this ugliness, I would hope that one byproduct of this mess would be the creation of such. In today's environment of electronic media, television personalities are bound to proliferate into more and more homes - and the names of more individuals become SDA household buzz words. While the 3ABN saga may currently be the most notorious, I'd be willing to bet that other such situations are out there, or will develop, unless the Lord comes really quick (PLEASE!!). As long as "we" are willing to put individuals on a pedestal, ie, in front of a camera, and send their faces into millions of living rooms, "we" might do well to have a plan in place to deal with behaviors of such who might fall below the line... BTJM...

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 8 2007, 05:29 PM)
>
> The local church couldn't deal with it because the local church is in fact 3ABN. So the church itself ought to be subject to discipline in this case--even if there is no policy to that degree. Perhaps we should find a Thompsonville church directory and post it here ... can anyone get their hands on it?

hhhmmm...

c-o-n-f-l-c-t..... o-f.....i-n-t-e-r-e-s-t . . . . . ? ? ? ? ?

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 10 2007, 03:56 PM

Some time ago a reference was made to the document "ISSUES: The Seventh-day Adventist Church and Certain Private Ministries." published by the North American Division back in the early 1990's. This was a formal statement published by the denomination about prominent independent ministries. These organizations, "Hope International, Hartland Institute, Prophecy Countdown, and Steps to Life," showed themselves to be peculiarly dissaffected from the church, impacting the church on a number of negative levels. Some of the major issues were - diversion of tithe, opposition to church authority, and divisive doctrinal beliefs. Though the denomination could take no disciplinary action on these groups, and never initiated any broad-based formal investigation into their activities (that I am aware of), organizations like O.C.I. and A.S.I. did write letters of admonition followed by board actions removing from membership in their groups.
Moreover the N.A.D. published the book (ISSUES) containing copious documentation. Some of these documents outlined the financial, ethical, and political improprieties of these independent ministries.
Now for the application. The independent ministry of 3ABN has a more positive stance toward the denomination doctrinally than do these previously mentioned groups. 3ABN does not promote the diversion of tithe. 3ABN does not publically attack the church or its authority. Many denominational and supportive ministries are dependent on 3ABN for the promotion of their work (a big part of the problem perhaps).
All of this aside - 3ABN does have multiple financial, moral, ethical, Biblical and administrative problems which threaten to bring disgrace upon the church.
In light of this, A.S.I. should have been the first one to admonish and discipline 3ABN. It has not.
The North American Division has ample evidence to formally distance itself from 3ABN and even publish a document similar to "ISSUES:.." It has not.
For now "save3abn.com" functions as our "ISSUES" document until such time as the current lawsuit puts a muzzle on this site (one of its major goals I am assuming).
Let us petition A.S.I. and the denominational authorities to step up and do their job. Let us pray that God will likewise impress them to do so.

Posted by: Skyhook May 10 2007, 04:19 PM

VofZ, those are good points. I recall that there was a committee that was set up by the GC to meet with the independent organizations and discuss the problems that existed between them and the church. I believe the outcome was a statement from the committee, speaking officially for the church. The statement said, in so many words, that those organizations must tone down the negative rhetoric about the church or it would result in severe disciplinary action. Meaning disfellowship, I assume. I do not hear much about the problems anymore. I know one of those organizations tells people that "they do not solicit tithe, but they are a tithe-worthy organization." 3abn also accepts tithe, but I have never heard them openly solicit it. Apparantly the GC does not now consider it wrong to divert tithe away from the church to an independent organization.

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 10 2007, 06:27 PM

You can find the meetings and documents you mention referred to at the Biblical Research Institute website under "independent ministries." The General Conference Administrative Committee (ADCOM) appointed an ad hoc committee to sit down and ask questions of these ministries. Here's the url for the ad hoc commitees findings related to Hope International, Hartland, and Remnant ministries that were published in April 2000.

http://www.adventistbiblicalresearch.org/Independent%20Ministries/HopeInternationalRpt.htm

This introductory paragraph is explanatory:
"The committee, comprised of General Conference Biblical Research Institute scholars, General Conference administrators, and Andrews University Seminary instructors, developed a 20-question instrument that was the basis of their inquiry and appraisal. The leaders of Hope International and its associated groups accepted the committee's invitation to answer the questions. They met with the General Conference appointed group on two occasions for a total of three and one-half days. The following report constitutes the committee's assessment of their responses, both written and verbal, and its evaluation of results of research done by individuals contracted specifically to study the theology and methodology of Hope International and associates."

Another relevant document is entitled, "Primacy of the Gospel Committee Report" This report chronicles another ad hoc committee's appraisal of the "1888 Message Study Committee".
Neither of these reports are favorable.

http://www.adventistbiblicalresearch.org/Independent%20Ministries/PrimacyoftheGospel.htm

Certainly the appointment of an ad hoc committee to inquire into and appraise 3ABN's activities would seem to be in order at this point. Would 3ABN be any less willing to sit down with such a committee to answer their questions than these other organizations?

Posted by: LaurenceD May 10 2007, 07:24 PM

In light of a few comments above, I'm curious what kind of value others place on church membership. I'm in good standing, and have never been otherwise, but I wouldn't think about it twice if some church authority came along and told me I had been dismembered by the authorities (I know--wrong word, but humorous nonetheless, and of course I probably wouldn't even be able to think if I was dismembered, lol!). But why wouldn't it bother me? I've come to realize that "belonging" to organizations of the heart is fairly meaningless, and probably one of the greatest of human weaknesses. I draw zero security from belonging to clubs, organizations, etc. The only thing I value is my family...which I could never disown, and which I can't help but belong to.

Posted by: shinejoy May 10 2007, 07:32 PM

good for you

Posted by: Pickle May 10 2007, 08:34 PM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 10 2007, 06:27 PM)
>
> Would 3ABN be any less willing to sit down with such a committee to answer their questions than these other organizations?

I posted elsewhere the following: A few months ago or so I received a letter from an ally of Danny that indicated that he would sue a/the church, and even sue those outside of the U.S. That might help illuminate his comment on ClubAdventist.com that they had filed suit against two people to begin with.

Dangerous guy, that Danny is.

I wonder, would the anonymous donor bankroll a suit by Danny against a/the church? Hopefully not. That seems like it would be going way too far. As if it hasn't gone way too far already, like back on Dec. 31, 2006.

Posted by: Pickle May 10 2007, 08:54 PM

I just looked the letter over again, and it was pretty clear that a conference could end up getting sued.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 10 2007, 08:57 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 10 2007, 06:24 PM)
>
> In light of a few comments above, I'm curious what kind of value others place on church membership. I'm > in good standing, and have never been otherwise, but I wouldn't think about it twice if some church authority came along and told me I had been dismembered by the authorities (I know--wrong word, but humorous nonetheless, and of course I probably wouldn't even be able to think if I was dismembered, lol!). But why wouldn't it bother me? I've come to realize that "belonging" to organizations of the heart is fairly meaningless, and probably one of the greatest of human weaknesses. I draw zero security from belonging to clubs, organizations, etc. The only thing I value is my family...which I could never disown, and which I can't help but belong to.

think "dismembered" is exactly the appropriate word to use when talking about severing church nembership. I am not taking you to task for your comments by any means for it is our relationship to the ord that is the key to our salvation. However, my personal opinion is that the "church" is to be far more than club or an organization (of the heart or otherwise). If membership were viewed more regularly as being a art of the Body of Christ perhaps our connection would be far more vital. Perhaps we would view our fellow ody members more like the brothers and sisters in Christ, the close family that God wants us to be. Perhaps ome wouldn't view those on the church rosters so much as potential donors and see, instead, the need to be ccountable and respectful to those who are moved to support. And maybe, there would be more of a spirit of inship that would allow some to put aside image and accept responsibility for sin instead of suing their rothers in a selfish attempt to keep that false image intact.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 10 2007, 10:03 PM

Good post PB, I agree with your sentiments. I think there's far too much legal posturing going on with membership security. The name should be on that other book, and we should never give cause to wonder who else is on it.

Posted by: Aletheia May 12 2007, 07:02 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 10 2007, 09:34 PM)
>
> I posted elsewhere the following: A few months ago or so I received a letter from an ally of Danny that indicated that he would sue a/the church, and even sue those outside of the U.S. That might help illuminate his comment on ClubAdventist.com that they had filed suit against two people to begin with.
>
> Dangerous guy, that Danny is.
>
> I wonder, would the anonymous donor bankroll a suit by Danny against a/the church? Hopefully not. That seems like it would be going way too far. As if it hasn't gone way too far already, like back on Dec. 31, 2006.

s you are repeating the same exact thing in multiple places, and threads...

gain:

ore false accusations and libel... and just look at all those coming behind you to repeat this as if it's fact and ondemn and find fault with D.S. based on a lie.

hy would an "ally of Danny" write something so absurd?

hat possible reason would he have to sue either the Church or the conference?

ive it up, Bob! And look in your mirror, you are the dangerous one here.

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 10 2007, 09:54 PM)

> I just looked the letter over again, and it was pretty clear that a conference could end up getting sued.

Posted by: seraph|m May 12 2007, 07:08 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 10 2007, 11:34 PM) ☐
>
> I posted elsewhere the following: A few months ago or so I received a letter from an ally of Danny that indicated that he would sue a/the church, and even sue those outside of the U.S. That might help illuminate his comment on ClubAdventist.com that they had filed suit against two people to begin with.
>
> Dangerous guy, that Danny is.
>
> I wonder, would the anonymous donor bankroll a suit by Danny against a/the church? Hopefully not. That seems like it would be going way too far. As if it hasn't gone way too far already, like back on Dec. 31, 2006.

The " brother", and those who support such mess, sound like they could really benefit from some SERIOUS phsychological help.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 12 2007, 07:09 AM

Libel?

Great!

Thanks for posting that. You continually demonstrate a shallowness in understanding the difference between street language and legal terminology.

Posted by: Pickle May 12 2007, 09:17 PM

LaurenceD, in your opinion, is Cindy's essentially calling me a liar by denying what the letter I have clearly says, is that libel? Do Cindy's statements demonstrate recklessness or malice? Are they false and defamatory?

Posted by: mozart May 12 2007, 09:47 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 10 2007, 07:24 PM) ☐
>
> "belonging" to organizations of the heart is fairly meaningless, and probably one of the greatest of human weaknesses. I draw zero security from belonging to clubs, organizations, etc. The only thing I value is my family...which I could never disown, and which I can't help but belong to.

Amen here.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 12 2007, 11:38 PM

Pickle: I posted elsewhere the following: A few months ago or so I received a letter from an ally of Danny that indicated that he would sue a/the church, and even sue those outside of the U.S. That might help illuminate his comment on ClubAdventist.com that they had filed suit against two people to begin with.

Dangerous guy, that Danny is.

I wonder, would the anonymous donor bankroll a suit by Danny against a/the church? Hopefully not. That seems like it would be going way too far. As if it hasn't gone way too far already, like back on Dec. 31, 2006.

Aletheia: As you are repeating the same exact thing in multiple places, and threads...

again:

More false accusations and libel... and just look at all those coming behind you to repeat this as if it's fact and condemn and find fault with D.S. based on a lie.

Why would an "ally of Danny" write something so absurd?

What possible reason would he have to sue either the Church or the conference?

Give it up, Bob! And look in your mirror, you are the dangerous one here.

Pickle: LaurenceD, in your opinion, is Cindy's essentially calling me a liar by denying what the letter I have clearly says, is that libel? Do Cindy's statements demonstrate recklessness or malice? Are they false and defamatory?

If indeed it is true you received such a letter, or even if you believe it's true, and if by "he" you are referring to Danny when you say he indicated he would sue so and so, and if you feel you have made a fair comment on a matter of public interest, and if you feel, by doing so, that you have been personally harmed (emotional or otherwise) by Aletheia's use of the terms, "false accusations and libel" and "based on a lie," and you believe the statement was made with actual malice, then the correct answer to all your questions is yes, this would be "per se" defamation of your character, ie, if we can confirm all the elements of the cause, and the court agrees.

Why Commencing A Defamation Action Is Not Aways A Good Idea

While people who are targeted by lies may well be angry enough to file a lawsuit, there are some very good reasons why actions for defamation may not be a good idea.

The publicity that results from a defamation lawsuit can create a greater audience for the false statements than they previously enjoyed. For example, if a newspaper or news show picks up the story of the lawsuit, false accusations that were previously known to only a small number of people may suddenly become known to the entire community, nation, or even to the world. As the media is much more apt to cover a lawsuit than to cover its ultimate resolution, the net effect may be that large numbers of people hear the false allegations, but never learn how the litigation was resolved.

Another big issue is that defamation cases tend to be difficult to win, and damage awards tend to be small. As a result, it is unusual for attorneys to be willing to take defamation cases on a contingent fee basis, and the fees expended in litigating even a successful defamation action can exceed the total recovery.

Another significant concern is that, even where the statements made by the defendant are entirely false, it may not be possible for a plaintiff to prove all of the elements of defamation. Most people will respond to news that a plaintiff lost a defamation lawsuit by concluding that the allegations were true.

In other words, the plaintiff in a defamation action may be required to expend a considerable > amount of money to bring the action, may experience significant negative publicity which repeats the false accusations, and if unsuccessful in the litigation may cement into the public consciousness the belief that the defamatory accusations were true. While many plaintiffs will be able to successfully prosecute defamation actions, the possible downside should be considered when deciding whether or not such litigation should be attempted. -expertlaw

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 13 2007, 09:52 AM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 12 2007, 11:38 PM)
>
> Why Commencing A Defamation Action Is Not Aways A Good Idea
>
> Another big issue is that defamation cases tend to be difficult to win, and damage awards tend to be small.

Yes, defending against a defamation suit can sometimes be difficult. This is especially true if the source of the information is a news organization. The courts in Minnesota, for instance, seem to grant news organizations the right to maintain the anonymity of sources as noted in the following cases:

Courts have applied the privilege to news organizations in Bauer v. Gannett Co., Inc. (KARE 11), 557 N.W.2d 608 (Minn. Ap. 1997) (television station); McNeilus v. Corporate Report, Inc., 21 Media L. Rep. 2171, 2174-75 (Minn. Dist. Ct., Dodge County, 1993) (magazine publisher); Aerial Burials, Inc. v. Minneapolis Star and Tribune Co., 8 Media L. Rep. 1653 (Minn. Dist. Ct. 1982) (newspaper). Cases involving news organizations, but denying protection for other reasons, include Heaslip v. Freeman, 511 N.WY.2d 21 (Minn. App. 1994) (photographs), rev. denied (Minn. 1994).

The McNeilus notation listed above seems to have concerned an article in Corporate Report Minnesota:

http://www.transparency.cz/vivaetika/infocentrum/prameny/t.htm This is the bibliography listing for the article that seems to be the news article referred to in McNeilus v. Corporate Report, Inc.:

"The hardest man in the cement mixer business: Garwin McNeilus does more than compete ferociously. His detractors say he will stop at nothing. (Cover Story) by Denise A. Kotula il v22 Corporate Report- Minnesota March '91 p28(8)"

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 13 2007, 10:28 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 5 2007, 11:01 PM)
>
> If the suit is just about copyright infringment then why would anything else be relevant? so not sure what on Danny's part will be exposed. seems this suit is just to intimidate joy and pickle and to keep them distracted and preoccupied on their defense and to cost them money.
> We should keep them in prayer.

That's the point. No one actually "knows" what is "out there" and when it comes to a lawsuit - discovery is about asking for EVERYTHING...even if it ain't relevant (at that time) to aggravate, bother, and thus lengthen the process. E'ry now and den - a judge will slip up and allow something that really isn't of relevance...and once they do....it's all out and open.....

KWIM?

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 12 2007, 10:17 PM)
>
> LaurenceD, in your opinion, is Cindy's essentially calling me a liar by denying what the letter I have clearly says, is that libel? Do Cindy's statements demonstrate recklessness or malice? Are they false and defamatory?

All that and some other werds we can't say on the berd....

Posted by: Noahswife May 13 2007, 11:42 AM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 13 2007, 10:52 AM)
>
> Yes, defending against a defamation suit can sometimes be difficult. This is especially true if the source of the information is a news organization. The courts in Minnesota, for instance, seem to grant news organizations the right to maintain the anonymity of sources as noted in the following cases:
>
> Courts have applied the privilege to news organizations in Bauer v. Gannett Co., Inc. (KARE 11), 557 N.W.2d 608 (Minn. Ap. 1997) (television station); McNeilus v. Corporate Report, Inc., 21 Media L. Rep. 2171, 2174-75 (Minn. Dist. Ct., Dodge County, 1993) (magazine publisher); Aerial Burials, Inc. v. Minneapolis Star and Tribune Co., 8 Media L. Rep. 1653 (Minn. Dist. Ct. 1982) (newspaper). Cases involving news organizations, but denying protection for other reasons, include Heaslip v. Freeman, 511 N.WY.2d 21 (Minn. App. 1994) (photographs), rev. denied (Minn. 1994).
>
> The McNeilus notation listed above seems to have concerned an article in Corporate Report Minnesota:
>
> http://www.transparency.cz/vivaetika/infocentrum/prameny/t.htm This is the bibliography listing for the article that seems to be the news article referred to in McNeilus v. Corporate Report, Inc.:
>
> "The hardest man in the cement mixer business: Garwin McNeilus does more than compete ferociously. His detractors say he will stop at nothing. (Cover Story) by Denise A. Kotula il v22 Corporate Report- Minnesota March '91 p28(8)"

Any comments on this Eirene?

nw
C"i"

PS....thanks PP for someone else's opinion in writing confirming what my instincts/gut tell me about this mess.

Posted by: Eirene May 13 2007, 01:12 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 13 2007, 12:42 PM)

> Any comments on this Eirene?
>
> nw
> C"i"
>
> PS....thanks PP for someone else's opinion in writing confirming what my instincts/gut tell me about this mess.

f this is supposed to be an indication that our self declared AU reporter will be exempt from certain discovery" issues, Don't make me laugh.
f, instead, you are asking for my comments on what was said about McNeilus, I fail to see the relevence. Big)usiness is a dog eat dog world. Seems he has the umm"guts" to handle it.

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 13 2007, 01:48 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 01:12 PM) ☐
>
> Big business is a dog eat dog world. Seems he has the umm"guts" to handle it.

\re you saying there is no Mending Broken People theme playing in the background amongst those 14 awyers in Minneapolis allegedly being subsidized by the mysterious, unknown benefactor?

Vhen all is said and done it's really a theme called Dog Eat Dog?

Ecclesiastes 1:9-14 NIV) What has been will be again, what has been done will be done again ; :here is nothing new under the sun.

'ete

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 13 2007, 01:56 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 11:12 AM) ☐
>
> If this is supposed to be an indication that our self declared AU reporter will be exempt from certain "discovery" issues, Don't make me laugh.
> If, instead, you are asking for my comments on what was said about McNeilus, I fail to see the relevence.
> Big business is a dog eat dog world. Seems he has the umm"guts" to handle it.

Immm,

\re big businessmen who are disciples of Christ really supposed to be "dog eat dog"? Are we counseled to :onduct our businesses in such a manner? If Jesus was the CEO of a company would He have the "guts" to)perate in a "dod eat dog" manner? Where is justice, love and mercy in this scenerio? Can a man serve both 3od and Mammon?

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 13 2007, 02:03 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 13 2007, 01:56 PM)
>
> Hmmm,
>
> Are big businessmen who are disciples of Christ really supposed to be "dog eat dog"? Are we counseled to conduct our businesses in such a manner? If Jesus was the CEO of a company would He have the "guts" to operate in a "dod eat dog" manner? Where is justice, love and mercy in this scenerio? Can a man serve both God and Mammon?

I agree, PB:

(Ecclesiastes 12:13-14 NKJV) Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep His commandments, For this is man's all. {14} For God will bring every work into judgment, Including every secret thing, Whether good or evil.

Pete

Posted by: Skyhook May 13 2007, 06:07 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 02:12 PM)
>
> If, instead, you are asking for my comments on what was said about McNeilus, I fail to see the relevence. Big business is a dog eat dog world. Seems he has the umm"guts" to handle it.

Eirene, I'm sure Danny and Garwin will really appreciate your brilliant remarks in thier defense.

Posted by: princessdi May 13 2007, 07:04 PM

3ABN is big business? Aren't they supposed to be a ministry....and if they are both, is it Christlike that they are "dog eat dog". then this is alright with you? This maybe the problem behind the problems with the population in T'ville........

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 12:12 PM)
>
> If this is supposed to be an indication that our self declared AU reporter will be exempt from certain "discovery" issues, Don't make me laugh.
> If, instead, you are asking for my comments on what was said about McNeilus, I fail to see the relevence.
> Big business is a dog eat dog world. Seems he has the umm"guts" to handle it.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 13 2007, 07:33 PM

"Dog eat dog..." in a ministry huh?

Wow - Thanks for clearing that mess of mess up....

☒ sn

Posted by: Grith May 13 2007, 07:36 PM

I thought it might be interesting to see what can be found on the net about Garwin McNeilus. I found some interesting information, such as---
About the family business and its sale in 1998 including the price http://concreteproducts.com/mag/concrete_oshkosh_maps_mcneilus/http://www.wecnmagazine.com/2006issues/oct/oct06.html (family business, SDA, charities)
These two are the legal eagles and the counting accountants. The legal documents (SEC, I think) pertaining to the sale of the family business including the purchase price:
http://www.secinfo.com/dsvR3.717c.d.htm and http://www.secinfo.com/dsvR3.718y.6.htm

Mr McNeilus invested his money in a wind farm. Information can be found here:
http://www.wanzek.com/wind/2.htm; http://news.minnesota http://news.minnesota.publicradio.org/features/2003/09/29_galballye_windthree/http://www.austindailyherald.com/articles/2004/01/03/news/news1.txt

An address and phone # here:
http://local.rochestermn.com/Garwin+McNeilus.393206.12166569.home.html (I am not suggesting anyone contact him, just that it popped up in Google)

A picture of GM here:
http://www.asianaid.org.au/images/project_14.jpg

Built school for the blind in India:
http://www.asianaid.org.au/projects.asp

This was just a quick look-see.

Posted by: Eirene May 13 2007, 08:32 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 13 2007, 08:04 PM) ☐
>
> 3ABN is big business? Aren't they supposed to be a ministry....and if they are both, is it Christlike that they are "dog eat dog". then this is alright with you? This maybe the problem behind the problems with the population in T'ville........

Di, your misunderstanding my posts, accidentally, on purpose, is really getting old. Nowhere in that statement did I refer to 3abn. I said Big Business. The kind that McNeilus has worked in for years. The kind that made him his fortune. You have to be strong and have guts to survive that world.
For the rest of you who hopped on Di's statement referring to 3abn as big business then going on to speculate on something that wasn't even said.....same old pattern....somebody misquotes a post or gives an opinion and it carries on as fact. Not smart but, who cares, as long as you can have so much fun slinging mud, spouting opinions and speculating on lies and unverified information. After all who really cares about the truth if it differs from the general consensus on bsda?

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ May 13 2007, 08:33 PM) ☐
>
> "Dog eat dog..." in a ministry huh?

> Wow - Thanks for clearing that mess of mess up....
>
> ☒ sn

ou go to college and you can't read?

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 13 2007, 02:48 PM)
>
> Are you saying there is no Mending Broken People theme playing in the background amongst those 14 lawyers in Minneapolis allegedly being subsidized by the mysterious, unknown benefactor?
>
> When all is said and done it's really a theme called Dog Eat Dog?
>
> (Ecclesiastes 1:9-14 NIV) What has been will be again, what has been done will be done again ; there is nothing new under the sun.
>
> Pete

ete, it seems you are one of the many here without comprehension. As far as your mending broken people heme, as usual that is off the wall and doesn't make a lot of sense.
s for the Dog eat dog, I referred to Garwin and his big business enterprises through the years. Nothing to do vith 3abn and nothing to do with Danny. Try to get your head in the game.

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 13 2007, 02:56 PM)
>
> Hmmm,
>
> Are big businessmen who are disciples of Christ really supposed to be "dog eat dog"? Are we counseled to conduct our businesses in such a manner? If Jesus was the CEO of a company would He have the "guts" to operate in a "dod eat dog" manner? Where is justice, love and mercy in this scenerio? Can a man serve both God and Mammon?

B, you too? Unbelievable.
could offer a reading comprehension course or a "reality course" for those of you that seem to have raduated from the Pickle School of Spin.

Posted by: Hawk May 13 2007, 08:55 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 09:32 PM)
>
> I said Big Business. The kind that McNeilus has worked in for years. The kind that made him his fortune. You have to be strong and have guts to survive that world.

rom what I have seen on the internet about him McNeilus has conducted his business at the tip of the sword f litigation. Now "dog eat dog" McNeilus and Danny are doing the same in the name of ministry, God and ABN. It seems that the blood thirsty form of business practice that you appear to admire in MacNeilus has ome to 3ABN, Eirene. It appears that 3ABN is following suit. But this is JMHO.

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 13 2007, 09:15 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 08:32 PM)
> Pete, it seems you are one of the many here without comprehension.

Thanks, anyway, but I'm not going to give you that.

The problem is that too many people are comprehending far too much.

Pete

Posted by: starbright May 13 2007, 09:20 PM

Well, from what I am reading, it looks like to me that Danny is having to sue the makers of the 3abnsave.com site for a very good reason. It has nothing to do with business as usual and everything to do with ministry. People are trying to tear down this ministry of 3abn.

And it looks like everyone is trying to pick on Eirene too! Now why would a bunch of SDA Christians do this? Why do you pick on her every word? And then you try to turn it into something evil and wicked. I don't think Eirene is evil at all and I believe what she says.

You remind me of a bunch of chickens who like to pick pick pick on just one until it is picked to death. I guess if you can't do it to 3ABN itself, you will do it to someone who loves the 3abn ministry.

I've read about FHB and glenetta, Lee and Joe Smith, and many others who seem to stop posting - why?

Are there no moderators on this site? Where are the people in charge here? Why would you allow everyone to pick on one person? Is this a Christian thing to do? Is this how Jesus would act?

You ARE SDA Christians right? Or are some of you not?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 13 2007, 09:34 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 06:32 PM)
>
> PB, you too? Unbelievable.
> I could offer a reading comprehension course or a "reality course" for those of you that seem to have graduated from the Pickle School of Spin.

Eirene,
Please go back and read my response again. I was replying to your statement about Garwin McNeilus when you said "Big business is a dog eat dog world. Seems he has the umm"guts" to handle it." No spin, just pointing out how unChristian that type of doing business is in my opinion. We are to do all to the glory of God, right? Is having the guts to be out there scrapping in a dog eat dog world the way for a Christian to build a business?

I know GMc gives much financial support to mission projects and that is wonderful. But if he got that wealth over the carcasses of other "dogs", that is not so great. No matter how benevolent GMc might now be with his funds, no matter how many mission projects or legal suits he supports with his gains, if he earned his financial empire at the expense of even one other person in the "dog eat dog" business world, he best take a look at Jesus' words to the Pharisees in Matthew 23:23, 24:

23 "Woe to you, teachers of the law and Pharisees, you hypocrites! You give a tenth of your spices—mint, dill and cummin. But you have neglected the more important matters of the law—justice, mercy and faithfulness. You should have practiced the latter, without neglecting the former. 24 You blind guides! You strain out a gnat but swallow a camel.

Eirene, I really hope your characterization of GMc was not truly how he got his wealth.

Posted by: Noahswife May 13 2007, 09:34 PM

> QUOTE(starbright @ May 13 2007, 11:20 PM) ☐
>
> Well, from what I am reading, it looks like to me that Danny is having to sue the makers of the 3abnsave.com site for a very good reason. It has nothing to do with business as usual and everything to do with ministry. People are trying to tear down this ministry of 3abn.
>
> And it looks like everyone is trying to pick on Eirene too! Now why would a bunch of SDA Christians do this? Why do you pick on her every word? And then you try to turn it into something evil and wicked. I don't think Eirene is evil at all and I believe what she says.
>
> You remind me of a bunch of chickens who like to pick pick pick on just one until it is picked to death. I guess if you can't do it to 3ABN itself, you will do it to someone who loves the 3abn ministry.
>
> I've read about FHB and glenetta, Lee and Joe Smith, and many others who seem to stop posting - why?
>
> Are there no moderators on this site? Where are the people in charge here? Why would you allow everyone to pick on one person? Is this a Christian thing to do? Is this how Jesus would act?
>
> You ARE SDA Christians right? Or are some of you not?

Hey Starbright ☒ h

Did you make the phone call we discussed? What did you find out? Can you post it here please. Remember you asked me for the information so you could check it out. Please let us know what you found out in that phone call. I am sure Aletheia would also like to know.

Also, if you do not want to post it on this thread. Post it on the thread where you asked me about it before you then contacted me when I did not respond to you right away. You were quite insistent I respond then so I can only imagine you followed up for yourself.

Appreciate your interest in verifying the truth.

nw
C"i"

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 13 2007, 09:49 PM

> QUOTE(starbright @ May 13 2007, 07:20 PM)
>
> Well, from what I am reading, it looks like to me that Danny is having to sue the makers of the 3abnsave.com site for a very good reason. It has nothing to do with business as usual and everything to do with ministry. People are trying to tear down this ministry of 3abn.
>
> And it looks like everyone is trying to pick on Eirene too! Now why would a bunch of SDA Christians do this? Why do you pick on her every word? And then you try to turn it into something evil and wicked. I don't think Eirene is evil at all and I believe what she says.
>
> You remind me of a bunch of chickens who like to pick pick pick on just one until it is picked to death. I guess if you can't do it to 3ABN itself, you will do it to someone who loves the 3abn ministry.
>
> I've read about FHB and glenetta, Lee and Joe Smith, and many others who seem to stop posting - why?
>
> Are there no moderators on this site? Where are the people in charge here? Why would you allow everyone to pick on one person? Is this a Christian thing to do? Is this how Jesus would act?
>
> You ARE SDA Christians right? Or are some of you not?

Starbright,

Welcome to BSDA! Is this your first time being a member? Have you read the rules of conduct?

Very few of the members here want to bring 3abn down. Most love and support the ministry and want to see any problems cleaned up so it can be a healthy branch with a strong connection to the Vine.

FHB and Lee both seem to have chosen to stop posting. As far as the others you listed and even more of their kindred spirits, they were banned due to breaking Calvin's (BSDA owner), rules of conduct. I would advise you to be extremely careful about casting aspersions on the owner and the administrators. It could get you disciplined post haste. Just ask Joe Smith, Bystander, wwjd, Cindy and so on.

Posted by: princessdi May 13 2007, 09:51 PM

Here's the problem, Eirene. Well, the very first problem is that you would want to take you tone down a notch or two. You jsut got back, please dont' make the next time permanent. YOu and your group have protsted and worried everyone to death about the lack of respect for you. Now everybody else has backed down and tried to mind their manners you need to do the same. All you said could have without insulting anyone's intelligence. Remember we all promised not to do that anymore.

Now to your post. We are not wrong, you are. It is only common sense. You are so happy to brag over GM's illustrious big business career, which is fine. however, what you are missing is that he is now helping and or guiding 3ABN according to big business, which works for some areas, but doesnt' for others. However, big cusiness urles are being applied to all. problematicin the ministry end of things. So, if GM has his money poured into 3ABN, and he IS big business then 3ABN is now big business. Only thing is that they forget to be ministry, except in front of the camera and an dpesonal appearances, asking for funds, etc.

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 06:32 PM)

> Di, your misunderstanding my posts, accidentally, on purpose, is really getting old. Nowhere in that statement did I refer to 3abn. I said Big Business. The kind that McNeilus has worked in for years. The kind that made him his fortune. You have to be strong and have guts to survive that world.
> For the rest of you who hopped on Di's statement referring to 3abn as big business then going on to speculate on something that wasn't even said.....same old pattern....somebody misquotes a post or gives an opinion and it carries on as fact. Not smart but, who cares, as long as you can have so much fun slinging mud, spouting opinions and speculating on lies and unverified information. After all who really cares about the truth if it differs from the general consensus on bsda?
> You go to college and you can't read?
> Pete, it seems you are one of the many here without comprehension. As far as your mending broken people theme, as usual that is off the wall and doesn't make a lot of sense.
> As for the Dog eat dog, I referred to Garwin and his big business enterprises through the years. Nothing to do with 3abn and nothing to do with Danny. Try to get your head in the game.
> PB, you too? Unbelievable.
> I could offer a reading comprehension course or a "reality course" for those of you that seem to have graduated from the Pickle School of Spin.

Posted by: calvin May 13 2007, 09:59 PM

Starbright/Lee we have rules prohibiting having multiple accounts. Now Lee you and your other personality "Starbright" can join the other BSDA rejects at CF forums or wherever you choose to go. The tactics these folks use really amazes me.

> QUOTE(starbright @ May 13 2007, 09:20 PM)
>
> Well, from what I am reading, it looks like to me that Danny is having to sue the makers of the 3abnsave.com site for a very good reason. It has nothing to do with business as usual and everything to do with ministry. People are trying to tear down this ministry of 3abn.
>
> And it looks like everyone is trying to pick on Eirene too! Now why would a bunch of SDA Christians do this? Why do you pick on her every word? And then you try to turn it into something evil and wicked. I don't think Eirene is evil at all and I believe what she says.
>
> You remind me of a bunch of chickens who like to pick pick pick on just one until it is picked to death. I guess if you can't do it to 3ABN itself, you will do it to someone who loves the 3abn ministry.
>
> I've read about FHB and glenetta, Lee and Joe Smith, and many others who seem to stop posting - why?
>
> Are there no moderators on this site? Where are the people in charge here? Why would you allow everyone to pick on one person? Is this a Christian thing to do? Is this how Jesus would act?
>
> You ARE SDA Christians right? Or are some of you not?

Posted by: inga May 13 2007, 10:02 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 13 2007, 10:52 AM)
>
> This is the bibliography listing for the article that seems to be the news article referred to in McNeilus v. Corporate Report, Inc.:
>
> "The hardest man in the cement mixer business: Garwin McNeilus does more than compete > ferociously. His detractors say he will stop at nothing. (Cover Story) by Denise A. Kotula il v22 Corporate Report- Minnesota March '91 p28(8)" nteresting ...

Posted by: inga May 13 2007, 10:12 PM

> QUOTE(Hawk @ May 13 2007, 09:55 PM)
>
> From what I have seen on the internet about him McNeilus has conducted his business at the tip of the sword of litigation. Now "dog eat dog" McNeilus and Danny are doing the same in the name of ministry, God and 3ABN. It seems that the blood thirsty form of business practice that you appear to admire in MacNeilus has come to 3ABN, Eirene. It appears that 3ABN is following suit. But this is JMHO.

Posted by: roxe May 13 2007, 10:28 PM

whew, will this saga - soap opera - x files - ever stop?????

jes when i think it can't get any worser... it does...

Posted by: calvin May 13 2007, 10:29 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 13 2007, 09:51 PM)
>
> Here's the problem, Eirene. Well, the very first problem is that you would want to take you tone down a notch or two. You jsut got back, please dont' make the next time permanent. YOu and your group have protsted and worried everyone to death about the lack of respect for you. Now everybody else has backed down and tried to mind their manners you need to do the same. All you said could have without insulting anyone's intelligence. Remember we all promised not to do that anymore.
> Now to your post. We are not wrong, you are. It is only common sense. You are so happy to brag over GM's illustrious big business career, which is fine. however, what you are missing is that he is now helping and or guiding 3ABN according to big business, which works for some areas, but doesnt' for others. However, big cusiness urles are being applied to all. problematicin the ministry end of things. So, if GM has his money poured into 3ABN, and he IS big business then 3ABN is now big business. Only thing is that they forget to be ministry, except in front of the camera and an dpesonal appearances, asking for funds, etc.

ley Di, Eirene is gone. I have had enough. I gave her a warning with others a few weeks ago and you uspended her for a week. She comes right back with no change. I think maybe they are darning me to throw hem out. Besides Eirene and Atetheia are using the same IP address half the time, something is going there. o bad we can't have this discussion without the belittling and insults.

Posted by: princessdi May 13 2007, 10:39 PM

Thank you!! Thank you!!!!

Posted by: sonshineonme May 13 2007, 10:50 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 13 2007, 09:39 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ ☒ Thank you!! Thank you!!!! ☒

Thanks Calvin. ☒

Posted by: Jnana15 May 13 2007, 10:58 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 13 2007, 11:29 PM) ☐
>
> Hey Di, Eirene is gone. I have had enough. I gave her a warning with others a few weeks ago and you suspended her for a week. She comes right back with no change. I think maybe they are darning me to throw them out. Besides Eirene and Atetheia are using the same IP address half the time, something is going there. To bad we can't have this discussion without the belittling and insults.

Thank you Calvin! I was about ready to borrow somebody's jet to T'ville and have a face to face with that Sista. ☐ She was crossin' all kinds of lines.

Posted by: roxe May 13 2007, 11:25 PM

thank you thank you thank you thank you, calvin!!!

Posted by: LaurenceD May 13 2007, 11:34 PM

I wonder what the new monikers will be. I'm guessing "Melantheia" and "Mr. Cartwheel."

Posted by: beartrap May 13 2007, 11:53 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 13 2007, 09:34 PM) ☐
>
> I wonder what the new monikers will be. I'm guessing "Melantheia" and "Mr. Cartwheel."

LOL!!! Are we making suggestions? How about something from classical literature like "Medusa" or "Janus". If we are talking about reincarnations happening here then maybe "Hare Krishna", or "Baghwan Shree Rahjneesh" would work.

Posted by: Johann May 14 2007, 08:22 AM

I think Eirene means something like peacemaker, and Aletheia means truth. They will probably think of some greater mis-nomens in the future.

Posted by: lurker May 14 2007, 09:33 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 14 2007, 08:22 AM)
>
> I think Eirene means something like peacemaker, and Aletheia means truth. They will probably think of some greater mis-nomens in the future.

When Aletheia forst came on, I kept getting her name mixed up with Athaliah. I could just imagine the picture from the Bible Story books and see her yelling "Treason! Treason!" and I thought the avatar/picture-whatever - that she used looked witchy. I had to get past that and tell myself that she had probably been through a lot and was probably very nice in person. She later told us some of what she had been through and I could see where it could make you cynical and bitter.

I just wish we could connect because I feel sure she thinks her sources are telling her the truth though I feel she has "been sold a bill of goods". Boy is that an old expression. Do you know what I mean though? I really think I could like her.

Posted by: caribbean sda May 14 2007, 11:29 AM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 14 2007, 12:29 AM)
>
> Hey Di, Eirene is gone. I have had enough. I gave her a warning with others a few weeks ago and you suspended her for a week. She comes right back with no change. I think maybe they are darning me to throw them out. Besides Eirene and Atetheia are using the same IP address half the time, something is going there. To bad we can't have this discussion without the belittling and insults.

I don't think I will miss her... but if history repeats itself, and it does, another will soon take her place...oh well...c'est la vie!

Posted by: princessdi May 14 2007, 11:40 AM

When she first came I kept getting her mixed up with the demon from Peretti's "This Present Darkness". It would appear as a beautiful woman with long flowing hair...until.............Her first avatar alwasy spooked me, too.

Well, anyway,Allelujah we are free!!! We so free Calvin didn't even let the new one get started.

Remember th mottow people!

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 14 2007, 08:33 AM)
>
> When Aletheia forst came on, I kept getting her name mixed up with Athaliah. I could just imagine the picture from the Bible Story books and see her yelling "Treason! Treason!" and I thought the avatar/picture- whatever - that she used looked witchy. I had to get past that and tell myself that she had probably been through a lot and was probably very nice in person. She later told us some of what she had been through and I could see where it could make you cynical and bitter.

> I just wish we could connect because I feel sure she thinks her sources are telling her the truth though I feel she has "been sold a bill of goods". Boy is that an old expression. Do you know what I mean though? I really think I could like her.

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 14 2007, 12:34 PM

> QUOTE(caribbean sda @ May 14 2007, 01:29 PM)
>
> I don't think I will miss her... but if history repeats itself, and it does, another will soon take her place...oh well...c'est la vie!

Does anyone know if the "new ones" are the same ones with different screen names? There is certainly a similarity of sentence structure, the consistent grammatical errors and overall attitude.

Shepherdswife

Posted by: awesumtenor May 14 2007, 12:40 PM

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 14 2007, 02:34 PM)
>
> Does anyone know if the "new ones" are the same ones with different screen names? There is certainly a similarity of sentence structure, the consistent grammatical errors and overall attitude.
>
> shepherdswife

Essentially yes... sometimes it would be a new person cutting and pasting things told to them by another; sometimes that other would log on as the "new" person and respond... but inevitably they can't maintain the ruse for long.

n His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Jnana15 May 14 2007, 02:15 PM

Aletheia is gone too!! I just noticed. Thank you CALVIN!!

Posted by: Rosyroi May 14 2007, 03:24 PM

rofl
thank you calvin very very much.

A rose for you
@}---;---;-----

Rosyroi

Posted by: runner4him May 14 2007, 07:32 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 13 2007, 10:39 PM)
>
> Thank you!! Thank you!!!!

Thanks from me too...she/he did call me a liar.... I guess being new around here and somewhat of a polyanna I was thinking there might be a wee bit of a chance for a breakthrough with their attitudes. I think I am catching on...my radar went off right away with the last clone who appeared.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 14 2007, 07:50 PM

If you're bored, or maybe secretly missing some of the banned members, consider this: on Dec 7, 2006, Clay welcomed Aletheia and she responded...

> QUOTE(Clay)
>
> Welcome Aletheia, hope your stay here is enjoyable and feel free to explore other areas of the forum besides the 3ABN section.... you will have fun we promise.

> QUOTE(Aletheia)
>
> I would like to explore more here and hope to do so. I'm a little busy moderating and hosting on Beliefnet and Yahoo, so times a little short. Basically that's how I got here, following the trail...
>
> So far I like the set up you have here.
>
> It's always good to find more of the brethren.
>
> Blessings,
> Cindy

If you go to that site, you'll find them, or someone anyway..."Danya1844" is the host of the Adventist section, and there's someone you might feel a little familiar with--"Discerner"--even though he says he's 76 yrs. old.

http://www.beliefnet.com/boards/message_list.asp?boardID=90041&discussionID=490385

"God bless!"

Posted by: sonshineonme May 14 2007, 08:11 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 14 2007, 06:50 PM)
>
> If you're bored, or maybe secretly missing some of the banned members, consider this: on Dec 7, 2006, Clay welcomed Aletheia and she responded...
> If you go to that site, you'll find them, or someone anyway..."Danya1844" is the host of the Adventist > section, and there's someone you might feel a little familiar with--"Discerner"--even though he says he's 76 yrs. old.

>
> http://www.beliefnet.com/boards/message_list.asp?boardID=90041&discussionID=490385
>
> "God bless!"

bet most people that have come and will come to bsda, looking for information, fellowship and what not, ever realized that their "research" skills would improve in ways they never expected - bsda is good for the oul and the brain/thinking/discernment skills ood work LaurenceD! Never ends, does it? Nothing like team work.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 14 2007, 08:13 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 14 2007, 05:50 PM)
>
> If you're bored, or maybe secretly missing some of the banned members, consider this: on Dec 7, 2006, Clay welcomed Aletheia and she responded...
> If you go to that site, you'll find them, or someone anyway..."Danya1844" is the host of the Adventist section, and there's someone you might feel a little familiar with--"Discerner"--even though he says he's 76 yrs. old.
>
> http://www.beliefnet.com/boards/message_list.asp?boardID=90041&discussionID=490385
>
> "God bless!"

hank you.

appreciate the fact that at least one post was kind with nice words in it. So refreshing to view.

nd unfortunately so rare.... sigh...

osyroi

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 14 2007, 08:18 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 14 2007, 07:13 PM)
>
> Thank you.
>
> I appreciate the fact that at least one post was kind with nice words in it. So refreshing to view.
>
> And unfortunately so rare.... sigh...
>
> Rosyroi

If those defending Danny could have done any of it with a good spirit, how different these boards might have been.

If you could get Cindy talking about anything other than 3ABN she was alright.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 14 2007, 08:42 PM

Calvin,

I know you had to do what you did. The attacks by these folk were not productive in any way and they broke the rules. While I commend you for taking the necessary actions against the members that you did, I am not rejoicing. There were some moments when attacks were put aside and I think some genuine perspectives were shared. Sometimes the dialogue got us somewhere.

I know that at least one of these banned members has a heart that hurts when she isn't truthful. When you banned her for the dual identities and I reviewed some of her posts, I realized that she was probably hurting for what she had done. I pray that she will find peace and healing and forgiveness for the less than truthful things she has said and done here.

If you are out there lurking, Lee and Cindy, and also Eirene/Bystander or whoever you really are, I will miss you all, sisters and brothers. I pray that eyes will be opened and the truth will be exposed and then we can get back to the business of spreading the Good News 100% of the time.

PB

Posted by: Noahswife May 14 2007, 08:51 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 14 2007, 10:18 PM) ☐
>
> If those defending Danny could have done any of it with a good spirit, how different these boards might have been.
>
> If you could get Cindy talking about anything other than 3ABN she was alright.

And I think those that talked to Lee/Starbright/Rosie55 felt she too was alright when her real life persona showed through the lines she was given to deliver.......

Posted by: Rosyroi May 14 2007, 08:53 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 14 2007, 06:42 PM) ☐
>
> Calvin,
>
> I know you had to do what you did. The attacks by these folk were not productive in any way and they broke the rules. While I commend you for taking the necessary actions against the members that you did, I am not rejoicing. There were some moments when attacks were put aside and I think some genuine perspectives were shared. Sometimes the dialogue got us somewhere.
>
> I know that at least one of these banned members has a heart that hurts when she isn't truthful. When you banned her for the dual identities and I reviewed some of her posts, I realized that she was probably hurting for what she had done. I pray that she will find peace and healing and forgiveness for the less than truthful things she has said and done here.

> If you are out there lurking, Lee and Cindy, and also Eirene/Bystander or whoever you really are, I will miss you all, sisters and brothers. I pray that eyes will be opened and the truth will be exposed and then we can get back to the business of spreading the Good News 100% of the time.
>
> PB

B

agree with you do remember that many times we learned about new thoughts to pursue in many different avenues with nany twists and turns because each of the Dannyscribes made comments I don't think were going to give us ut for their stress and anger or whatever was going on with each of them. My hats off to them all.

hese banned folk did help us in many ways that put many layers in the 3ABN saga that we were able to peel way and find new nuggets. I appreciate that.

o I suppose a great big thank you to our banned folks for giving us all these new insights. It was too bad ome of the words they used were so anti-christ-like. We could have had some wonderful dialogue.

osyroi

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 14 2007, 09:24 PM

"In the end - when you wash the funky clothes - eventually they come clean & funk free...unless of course they are stained. Then sometimes you jes have to throw them away and start over. Shout don't get it "all" out!
PDR, 07

Merinate on dat....

sn

Posted by: Skyhook May 14 2007, 10:29 PM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ May 14 2007, 10:24 PM) ☐
>
> "In the end - when you wash the funky clothes - eventually they come clean & funk free...unless of course they are stained. Then sometimes you jes have to throw them away and start over. Shout don't get it "all" out!
> PDR, 07
>
> Merinate on dat....
>
> sn rincessDrRE did you get that right out of the '07 Physicians Desk Reference ? I'm gonna get me one of them. hear they are pretty pricey though.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 14 2007, 11:00 PM

It's probably not unheard of for independent religious groups to train, perhaps even hire--or have volunteers--people to do internet evangelism, or the spreading of personal influence or advertiement in one way or another. Here, maybe even damage control.

I know on another non-religious forum I've belonged to for years, there were Mormon missionaries that would come and go. They'd start off real nice and then go to the cafe forum and and enter a discussion about religon, and set everyone straight. I got tolked down to and targeted quite often because I did't really respond right, I guess, to people who are trained in intimidation tactics and know everything.

Did anyone happen to see that series on Public Television, a week or two ago, about the Mormons? Very interesting how they train people to respond to hard questions from potential converts. Anyway, on this forum I belong to, these Mormons were so oversure of themselves, and over self-confident that they were right, almost to the point of bigotry, they'd come undone at times and call people idiots, stupid, etc. One really nice lady got booted off for that very thing...she'd just snap if the elements of an issue seemed to be stacking up against her.

With Aletheia, if she was indeed a moderator (or host) at beliefnet, it's no wonder she came across as wanting to call the shots wherever and whatever. I once tried to get her and Lee to rethink the approach of becoming so wise at detecting what was wrong with everyone esle, to the point of not seeing yourself. Like Isaiah calling out woe to everyone, then looking in the mirror and saying woe is me.

The training was appartently too deep though. I detected a lot of avoidance of issues and people with whom tactics didn't seem to be working. I've been around extreme conservative SDAs quite a bit and know their ways. There's a rigidity that sets in that is almost beyond description. Combine that with familiarity with the writings, and a closed approach where there's almost nothing new to learn--you've got quite a recipe for arrogance. They talk down to everyone...as if playing the part of the recent prophet herself, and writing a new chapter in the testemonies, volume 11.

Posted by: Pickle May 15 2007, 05:32 AM

Several people have pointed out that Aletheia sounded different sometimes. If I had to guess, I'd say that Eirene was using Aletheia's account at times. That would explain the sounding different as well as sometimes using the same IP.

Posted by: betrayed May 15 2007, 06:09 AM

> QUOTE(daylily @ May 7 2007, 05:27 AM)
>
> Betrayed, I'm just curious. why in the world would 3ABN keep you from attending a regular SDA church???

Let's me see, nows how many others I have heardz doesn't go to sda churches anymores cuz of 3abn tatics, treatments of others...

Don't get me wrong heres, I do go to a church and still believes in God and the all important Sabbath day.

If I says much more, I'd probably ended up in a JOYless Pickle of a mess!

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett May 15 2007, 06:51 AM

When a person is banned, either temporarily or permanently, is it proper to gloat over it?

Doesn't that place us on the same level as those who were banned?

Shouldn't we have simply and privately acknowledged the ban notice/s and moved on?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 15 2007, 07:13 AM

LD,

Your words reminded me of the great divide we find within the practice of Christianity. Most of us know the beautiful parable of the Prodigal Son, how he carelessly squandered his half of his father's wealth and then realized how hopelessly lost he was without his father. And then, there is the other brother:

Luke 15:25-32

25 "Meanwhile, the older son was in the field. When he came near the house, he heard music and dancing. 26 So he called one of the servants and asked him what was going on. 27 'Your brother has come,' he replied, 'and your father has killed the fattened calf because he has him back safe and sound.'

28 "The older brother became angry and refused to go in. So his father went out and pleaded with him. 29 But he answered his father, 'Look! All these years I've been slaving for you and never disobeyed your orders. Yet you never gave me even a young goat so I could celebrate with my friends. 30 But when this son of yours who has squandered your property with prostitutes comes home, you kill the fattened calf for him!'

31 " 'My son,' the father said, 'you are always with me, and everything I have is yours. 32 But we had to celebrate and be glad, because this brother of yours was dead and is alive again; he was lost and is found.' "

Ricardo B Graham's revealing Perspective article, http://www.oakwood.edu/ocgoldmine/ldoc/perspectives/perspective15.pdfthat studies the color divide and racism within our denomination, has some insightful offerings as to how the parable of the Prodigal Son demonstrates the divide between contractual and prodigal forms of religious expression. I am quoting his article from page 130 but the section starts in the last paragraph of page 129:

"In explaining the phenomenon, Dittes explores the parable of the prodigal son, found in Luke 15:11-32, where he finds two forms of religious expression presented - the contractual and the prodigal. Practitioners of contractual religion tend to limit their experience to the terms of a contract: service and obedience. In other words, if a person serves and obeys hes/her parents, then he or she can expect to be rewarded, as the older son in the parable expected. If Christians serve and obey God, they expect God's reward. If not, they fully expect God's punishment, which they believe they deserve.

Those who practice a contractual form of religion can be referred to as 'legalists,' which in this context means to be dependent upon the fulfillment of the claims of the law, or in the words of Dittes, meeting the obligation of a contract. The father in the parable is 'impulsive and extravagant in his outpouring of love and forgiveness'. The father is accepting and affirming rather than judgmental and censorious. This is a demonstration of prodigal religion, in which the elements of compassion and forgiveness, acceptance and love, are emphaxized over condemnation and faultfinding."

Granted, Graham here, was applying the parable as it relates to the "persistant exclusion" by white Christian of black, but it can be applied more widely as well, to all aspects of religious practice and expression. The entire article is eye-opening and something every SDA Christian would do well to study to help to chip away at the color boundaries in our denomination.

When I think of our recently banned Dannyfingers brothers and sisters, so trapped in their rigid and legalistic point of view, yet blind to the elephants crowding in around them, I think of this parable.

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 15 2007, 07:21 AM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 15 2007, 01:00 AM)
>
> The training was appartently too deep though. . . . I've been around extreme conservative SDAs quite a bit and know their ways. There's a rigidity that sets in that is almost beyond description. Combine that with familiarity with the writings, and a closed approach where there's almost nothing new to learn--you've got quite a recipe for arrogance. They talk down to everyone...as if playing the part of the recent prophet herself, and writing a new chapter in the testemonies, volume 11.

Having been there myself (extreme conservative SDA) for most of my formative years, I can corroborate your observations.

1. I had to be right, or I would be lost. "The Truth" was all important, whether it was dress length or level of education.
2. To be right, I had to know what EGW said on every topic, and do it. (I had read everything published by her at the time, by the time I was 17)
3. Once you have read it all, know it all, and do it all (well, most of the time), you are better than everyone else, who hasn't bothered to do what you have done.
4. If they haven't read it, know it, and aren't doing it, what could they possible say that you would have any interest in hearing?
5. If anyone disagrees with me, one of us is WRONG, and that one is lost. Since I can't go there, and since I have read it all, know it all, and do it all, that one cannot be me. I refuse to even consider the possibility.
6. Once I have caught a person in even one nuance of a thought or action or opinion that is "wrong" according to my reading, knowing, and doing, I discount everything they ever say again--after all, "there is no light in them."
7. This template locks you into your "truth" forever, because no one can influence you. Until, that is, you get so burned out from reading, knowing and doing that you have a breakdown, physically, mentally, and spiritually, and you then throw it all out and start over at the beginning with a much more real and honest version of truth, reading, knowing and doing--praise God!

(Believe me, that is not the end of it. I will struggle with the legalistic voices to my dying day...but I am not ruled by them anymore) shepherdswife--who just told her spiritual development story in 7 simple statements.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 15 2007, 07:32 AM

Shepherdswife,

Praise God for your spiritual victory and AMEN!

Posted by: Clay May 15 2007, 07:53 AM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ May 15 2007, 07:51 AM)
>
> When a person is banned, either temporarily or permanently, is it proper to gloat over it?
>
> Doesn't that place us on the same level as those who were banned?
>
> Shouldn't we have simply and privately acknowledged the ban notice/s and moved on?

I don't see it as gloating and no it does not place us on the same level.... to talk about the fact that there were those among us who were a pain to deal with at times is a reality and should not be brushed aside. I see the comments as a collective "exhale" and not gloating....

Likewise, I have a real problem with your idea that the banning should have been privately acknowledged and then people move on..... that is what Danny and Co. hoped would happen with his mess.....and I am glad that we did not privately acknowledge it and move on... but that's just me....

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 15 2007, 08:28 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 15 2007, 05:53 AM)
>
> I don't see it as gloating and no it does not place us on the same level.... to talk about the fact that there were those among us who were a pain to deal with at times is a reality and should not be brushed aside. I see the comments as a collective "exhale" and not gloating....
>
> Likewise, I have a real problem with your idea that the banning should have been privately acknowledged and then people move on..... that is what Danny and Co. hoped would happen with his mess.....and I am glad that we did not privately acknowledge it and move on... but that's just me....

Clay,

I agree and I love your "collective exhale" take. I'm sure each one of us who is not an only child can look back to when a sibling got their just reward for being mean. I know the sense of relief I would get, even the smug satisfaction, that the offender was not getting away with the unkind word or deed.

This is a forum. We must express. However, if we had simultaneously broken into a giddy chorus of "Ding Dong The Witch Is Dead..." along with our happy dances, that would have qualified as gloating, IMO.

PB

Posted by: watchbird May 15 2007, 08:33 AM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ May 15 2007, 08:51 AM)
>
> When a person is banned, either temporarily or permanently, is it proper to gloat over it?
>
> Doesn't that place us on the same level as those who were banned?
>
> Shouldn't we have simply and privately acknowledged the ban notice/s and moved on?

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 15 2007, 09:53 AM)

> I don't see it as gloating and no it does not place us on the same level.... to talk about the fact that there were those among us who were a pain to deal with at times is a reality and should not be brushed aside. I see the comments as a collective "exhale" and not gloating....
>
> Likewise, I have a real problem with your idea that the banning should have been privately acknowledged and then people move on..... that is what Danny and Co. hoped would happen with his mess.....and I am glad that we did not privately acknowledge it and move on... but that's just me....

I agree with Clay. When someone is banned and the board is not told about it, most of us don't have a clue as to whether they are just absent for a while or are truly gone.

When someone is banned, I think it is appropriate that the grounds for that decision is made known to us. Otherwise, we do not learn where the boundaries are and in what way the banned person stepped over them.

When someone has been personally abusive to others as the Dannyfingers have been... calling everyone liars at best... it is, I think, appropriate for the abused to express their thanks for their deliverance from their abusers. It is not NECESSARY for everyone to express that.... as with other things, once a few have expressed it, others can give silent assent if they choose.

These persons have been valuable to us in their own way. Most of us have not suffered nor witnessed personal abuse from Dan Shelton. But we have all suffered and witnessed the abuse that his supporters have given. We are all first hand witnesses to this.

Posted by: Pickle May 15 2007, 09:04 AM

> QUOTE(betrayed @ May 15 2007, 06:09 AM)
>
> If I says much more, I'd probably ended up in a JOYless Pickle of a mess!

Actually, I think we may have more Joy, despite the Pickle we're in, than the other side, don't you think? It's actually not that bad.

Posted by: YogusBearus May 15 2007, 09:14 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 15 2007, 09:28 AM)
>
> Clay,
>
> I agree and I love your "collective exhale" take. I'm sure each one of us who is not an only child can look back to when a sibling got their just reward for being mean. I know the sense of relief I would get, even the smug satisfaction, that the offender was not getting away with the unkind word or deed.
>
> This is a forum. We must express. However, if we had simultaneously broken into a giddy chorus of "Ding Dong The Witch Is Dead..." along with our happy dances, that would have qualified as gloating, IMO.
>
> PB

While I don't necessarily disagree with these points, I'm left wondering if the DS supporters aren't a necessary element in this discussion. I'm going to predict that things will get pretty tame on this section for a few days until we get delivery on the new/recyled crop. I don't mean to be cynical but have felt for some time that if we didn't have an adequate number of foils, we would have to go out and recruit them. Just some bear ruminations...

Posted by: YogusBearus May 15 2007, 09:39 AM

Wow! Really good stuff Shepherdswife. I don't know that I've seen a better descriptor of the legalism trap.

I'm particularly struck by your item 7. I think you are describing a best case scenario/resolution there. I've witnessed to many, who upon reaching that stage, have thrown up their hands and said "it's no use." I am so happy you were able to discover the real "truth" in your life.

-bear

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 15 2007, 08:21 AM) ☐
>
> Having been there myself (extreme conservative SDA) for most of my formative years, I can corroborate your observations.
>
> 1. I had to be right, or I would be lost. "The Truth" was all important, whether it was dress length or level of education.
> 2. To be right, I had to know what EGW said on every topic, and do it. (I had read everything published by her at the time, by the time I was 17)
> 3. Once you have read it all, know it all, and do it all (well, most of the time), you are better than everyone else, who hasn't bothered to do what you have done.
> 4. If they haven't read it, know it, and aren't doing it, what could they possible say that you would have any interest in hearing?
> 5. If anyone disagrees with me, one of us is WRONG, and that one is lost. Since I can't go there, and since I have read it all, know it all, and do it all, that one cannot be me. I refuse to even consider the possibility.
> 6. Once I have caught a person in even one nuance of a thought or action or opinion that is "wrong" according to my reading, knowing, and doing, I discount everything they ever say again--after all, "there is no light in them."
> 7. This template locks you into your "truth" forever, because no one can influence you. Until, that is, you get so burned out from reading, knowing and doing that you have a breakdown, physically, mentally, and spiritually, and you then throw it all out and start over at the beginning with a much more real and honest version of truth, reading, knowing and doing--praise God!
>
> (Believe me, that is not the end of it. I will struggle with the legalistic voices to my dying day...but I am not ruled by them anymore)
>
> shepherdswife--who just told her spiritual development story in 7 simple statements.

Posted by: princessdi May 15 2007, 09:46 AM

Wow!! If that isn't it in a nutshell!! You go Gurl!! Praise God for accepting the Freedom through Jesus Christ!

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 15 2007, 05:21 AM) ☐

> Having been there myself (extreme conservative SDA) for most of my formative years, I can corroborate your observations.
>
> 1. I had to be right, or I would be lost. "The Truth" was all important, whether it was dress length or level of education.
> 2. To be right, I had to know what EGW said on every topic, and do it. (I had read everything published by her at the time, by the time I was 17)
> 3. Once you have read it all, know it all, and do it all (well, most of the time), you are better than everyone else, who hasn't bothered to do what you have done.
> 4. If they haven't read it, know it, and aren't doing it, what could they possible say that you would have any interest in hearing?
> 5. If anyone disagrees with me, one of us is WRONG, and that one is lost. Since I can't go there, and since I have read it all, know it all, and do it all, that one cannot be me. I refuse to even consider the possibility.
> 6. Once I have caught a person in even one nuance of a thought or action or opinion that is "wrong" according to my reading, knowing, and doing, I discount everything they ever say again--after all, "there is no light in them."
> 7. This template locks you into your "truth" forever, because no one can influence you. Until, that is, you get so burned out from reading, knowing and doing that you have a breakdown, physically, mentally, and spiritually, and you then throw it all out and start over at the beginning with a much more real and honest version of truth, reading, knowing and doing--praise God!
>
> (Believe me, that is not the end of it. I will struggle with the legalistic voices to my dying day...but I am not ruled by them anymore)
> shepherdswife--who just told her spiritual development story in 7 simple statements.

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett May 15 2007, 09:48 AM

I guess it isn't as much as what we acknowledge as much as how we acknowledge it.

I am also not against notifying others here when a person is banned, whether it be a temporary ban or a permanent ban.

Some of the reaction posts here, however, sounded like gloating to me.

Posted by: Clay May 15 2007, 09:49 AM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ May 15 2007, 10:48 AM) ☐
>
> I guess it isn't as much as what we acknowledge as much as how we acknowledge it.
>
> I am also not against notifying others here when a person is banned, whether it be a temporary ban or a permanent ban.
>
> Some of the reaction posts here, however, sounded like gloating to me.

understood.... I think it is a case of we all read something and perceive it differently...

Posted by: princessdi May 15 2007, 09:59 AM

I will admit hat my reaction is that o f an Admin who is weary of walking the line with these ppeople, and trying to find reasons to keep them members. I, personally, have tried to make them feel apart of BSDA is posts, in private. That is not what they want. They want and live for the kaos(Ok so I liked "Get Smart" ☐) they created here each and everyday. I really do love serving the members of BSDA, and helping where ever I can(and still look forward to seeing as many as possible at our 2010 GC Reunion ☐). God is not through with me yet, so a great source of my frustration was not to act as a member who could careless about being banned myself, and typing something that most defintely have to be deleted by Calvin or Clay after my ow departure. My repsonse is clearly a sigh of relief. They had wore out the patience of the saints and every rule int he book. It was time for them to go. Simple.

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ May 15 2007, 07:48 AM) ☐
>
> I guess it isn't as much as what we acknowledge as much as how we acknowledge it.
>
> I am also not against notifying others here when a person is banned, whether it be a temporary ban or a permanent ban.
>
> Some of the reaction posts here, however, sounded like gloating to me.

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett May 15 2007, 10:10 AM

Yes, I understand all of that as I, as the Administrator of MSDAOL, also had to ban people there, which I do not enjoy doing, but nevertheless need do so for the sake of the others posting or even lurking there.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 15 2007, 10:17 AM

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife)
>
> Having been there myself (extreme conservative SDA) for most of my formative years, I can corroborate your observations.
>
> (snip)
>
> shepherdswife--who just told her spiritual development story in 7 simple statements.

Wow! Thanks. I'll be rereading your story from time to time. You sound like someone else I know. And I think this is the essense of true conversion. I use the term self-righteous, indirectly, with a couple of the banned members...which clearly bothered at least one.

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered)
>
> When I think of our recently banned Dannyfingers brothers and sisters, so trapped in their rigid and legalistic point of view, yet blind to the elephants crowding in around them, I think of this parable.

Your parallel is powerful here...something to think about. Thanks for that.

Don't know if anyone caught it or not, but the "God bless" in my post above was a code expression probably known only to a couple people around here. This beliefnet member "Discerner" who I mentioned in the previous post, signs off just like two or three others I'm familiar with...one member here, and someone who wrote a letter to AToday...

http://www.atoday.com/6.0.html?&tx_ttnews%5Btt_news%5D=321&tx_ttnews%5BbackPid%5D=1&cHash=b7534bfb09

And so, I never use the term, but I could sign off with...

gob less!

PS: thanks sonshineoneme for your post. I'm now tuned in with the tools on this forum!

Posted by: sonshineonme May 15 2007, 10:18 AM

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 15 2007, 06:21 AM) ☐
>
> Having been there myself (extreme conservative SDA) for most of my formative years, I can corroborate your observations.
>
> 1. I had to be right, or I would be lost. "The Truth" was all important, whether it was dress length or level of education.
> 2. To be right, I had to know what EGW said on every topic, and do it. (I had read everything published by her at the time, by the time I was 17)
> 3. Once you have read it all, know it all, and do it all (well, most of the time), you are better than everyone else, who hasn't bothered to do what you have done.
> 4. If they haven't read it, know it, and aren't doing it, what could they possible say that you would have any interest in hearing?
> 5. If anyone disagrees with me, one of us is WRONG, and that one is lost. Since I can't go there, and since I have read it all, know it all, and do it all, that one cannot be me. I refuse to even consider the possibility.
> 6. Once I have caught a person in even one nuance of a thought or action or opinion that is "wrong" according to my reading, knowing, and doing, I discount everything they ever say again--after all, "there is no light in them."
> 7. This template locks you into your "truth" forever, because no one can influence you. Until, that is, you get so burned out from reading, knowing and doing that you have a breakdown, physically, mentally, and spiritually, and you then throw it all out and start over at the beginning with a much more real and honest version of truth, reading, knowing and doing--praise God!
>
> (Believe me, that is not the end of it. I will struggle with the legalistic voices to my dying day...but I am not ruled by them anymore)
> shepherdswife--who just told her spiritual development story in 7 simple statements.

So well said!! You have described it so well that I fell back in time for a few (scary) minutes there!!

No matter how it's sliced, it's a trap for "well meaning" folks. I see it as a nice little set-up the devil likes to get people into...you need out, but you won't open your eyes so you can see the door and get out! I'm still encouraged, because I see that people do find their way out, and it's a miracle in itself.

Leaving that type of "thinking" takes you one of two ways - makes cynical and bitter (baby out with the bath water), or a much happier and real christian, that is a real witness to relationship with Jesus. (naturally, JMO).

There are some threads/forums/topics/posts floating around bsda where this has been discussed.....as painful as it is, there has been humor in telling our stories about some things....the best part is knowing there are (have been) so many of us that have walked that same path, and recovered, praise God!

Posted by: Clay May 15 2007, 10:31 AM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ May 15 2007, 10:14 AM)
>
> While I don't necessarily disagree with these points, I'm left wondering if the DS supporters aren't a necessary element in this discussion. I'm going to predict that things will get pretty tame on this section for a few days until we get delivery on the new/recyled crop. I don't mean to be cynical but have felt for some time that if we didn't have an adequate number of foils, we would have to go out and recruit them. Just some bear ruminations...

let's see, necessary.... they are necessary if the discussion is really an argument in disguise... the question is are the danny supporters really willing to tell his side of the story, or are they simply going to attempt to justify his actions, some of which have been quite questionable...

To me their position is one of justifying everything he did, and pretend like he did nothing wrong.... if that is all they are going to do, then there can be no discussion..... reread my comments to the various players that have come through there, I tell them each the same thing i.e. even IF Linda had done all she was accused of doing, should she have been treated that way, and their response has been the same..... silence.... And they have been silent because you cannot justify how she was treated...

Now if they want to come clean and share with us (if they know that is) why he has done some of the things he has done, that might be interesting, of course since many who have supported him claim never to have met him, it would be difficult for them to tell us why, because they don't know why.....

So I hear what you are saying, but I suspect because of the mindset, all we will ever have is controlled chaos until everything (whatever that might be) comes out....

Posted by: YogusBearus May 15 2007, 11:18 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 15 2007, 11:31 AM)
>
> let's see, necessary.... they are necessary if the discussion is really an argument in disguise... the question is are the danny supporters really willing to tell his side of the story, or are they simply going to attempt to justify his actions, some of which have been quite questionable...
>
> To me their position is one of justifying everything he did, and pretend like he did nothing wrong.... if that is all they are going to do, then there can be no discussion..... reread my comments to the various players that have come through there, I tell them each the same thing i.e. even IF Linda had done all she was accused of doing, should she have been treated that way, and their response has been the same..... silence.... And they have been silent because you cannot justify how she was treated...
>
> Now if they want to come clean and share with us (if they know that is) why he has done some of the things he has done, that might be interesting, of course since many who have supported him claim never to have met him, it would be difficult for them to tell us why, because they don't know why.....
>
> So I hear what you are saying, but I suspect because of the mindset, all we will ever have is controlled chaos until everything (whatever that might be) comes out....

Well I'm not sure where the line is between discussion and argument. My sense is that we truly do enjoy the argument side as there is only so many ways the same facts/stories can be told and retold.

Maybe the majority really do see the inappropriate removal of Linda Shelton as the primary concern. I, for one, do not. We can all come up with a list of people we know who have been treated as shabbily as she was. Linda needs to move on, get a job, and do her ministry whether full time, or part time like the rest of us should be doing.

I think the real struggle here involves money and power and is not limited to the current players at 3abn. I firmly believe that this mess could turn out to be a watershed point for the Adventist church at large. The stakes are high. Will the church really allow their future to be controlled by a closely held shadow government that is not responsible to anyone?

But what do I know, I'm only a bear....

Posted by: Clay May 15 2007, 11:32 AM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ May 15 2007, 12:18 PM)
>
> Well I'm not sure where the line is between discussion and argument. My sense is that we truly do enjoy the argument side as there is only so many ways the same facts/stories can be told and retold.
>
> Maybe the majority really do see the inappropriate removal of Linda Shelton as the primary concern. I, for one, do not. We can all come up with a list of people we know who have been treated as shabbily as she was. Linda needs to move on, get a job, and do her ministry whether full time, or part time like the rest of us should be doing.
>
> I think the real struggle here involves money and power and is not limited to the current players at 3abn. I firmly believe that this mess could turn out to be a watershed point for the Adventist church at large. The stakes are high. Will the church really allow their future to be controlled by a closely held shadow government that is not responsible to anyone?
>
> But what do I know, I'm only a bear....

If that is the case, then the church simply reflects the U.S. government and the players it it i.e. white men who politic and manipulate for power, money or both... I suspect if you are correct then we are looking at a systemic problem which I don't see being solved....

Posted by: sonshineonme May 15 2007, 11:40 AM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ May 15 2007, 10:18 AM)
>
> Well I'm not sure where the line is between discussion and argument. My sense is that we truly do enjoy the argument side as there is only so many ways the same facts/stories can be told and retold.
>
> Maybe the majority really do see the inappropriate removal of Linda Shelton as the primary concern. I, for one, do not. We can all come up with a list of people we know who have been treated as shabbily as she was. Linda needs to move on, get a job, and do her ministry whether full time, or part time like the rest of us should be doing.
>
> I think the real struggle here involves money and power and is not limited to the current players at 3abn. I firmly believe that this mess could turn out to be a watershed point for the Adventist church at large. The stakes are high. Will the church really allow their future to be controlled by a closely held shadow government that is not responsible to anyone?

> But what do I know, I'm only a bear....

Good points Yogi, the only thing I would add or disagree with is that the majority may have started out with seeing the inappropriate removal of Linda as a primary concern, but that was really a tool in the opening of a pandora's box of everything else to come....no one (publicly) saw anything on the inside, but this is what they saw, and I think God has used it....I have never thought this was all about Linda (only), but a much bigger picture. And it will be a watershed time - that is very clear to me.

Some things are easier said then done, and when it's your life, your pain, your journey, no one can really tell you how to do it, but help you do it, and God is very good at taking us at our own speed, healing us, leading us and giving us things when we are ready for them. He even manages to do this while others are dong their best to obstruct our growth and "moving on".

think this is one of the biggest reasons God tells us to pray for each other, come together and encourage each other.

One thing I can say for Linda, and it's evident on her website with regard to the many other "squished" people, one never realizes how many people are mistreated until you find yourself on that side of the fence, and you get a new perspective of what happens, and how cruel "christians" can be. I can say this from my own experience as well. And, again, you grow because of it, because God won't waste anything. Many have written to Linda their own stories, and now there are more and new things that we (Linda as well)can all relate to that we really could not have before our own. Through pain, we grow, no matter how the pain got here.

Posted by: YogusBearus May 15 2007, 11:44 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 15 2007, 11:32 AM)
>
> If that is the case, then the church simply reflects the U.S. government and the players it it i.e. white men who politic and manipulate for power, money or both... I suspect if you are correct then we are looking at a systemic problem which I don't see being solved....

You may be right. I do recall that the only thing that galvanizes the silent supporters of the church into action always involves money. We don't get overly upset by the blatant corruption and dishonesty at high levels unless it involves money. In the past we have been quite comfortable with moving pedophiles in ministry rom one church to another as long as the money flow wasn't impacted.

So, since money (that giant sucking sound at 3abn and AF is not a fleet of carpet cleaners) is definitely a part of his equation, maybe there is hope.

bear

Posted by: Jnana15 May 15 2007, 01:42 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 15 2007, 08:53 AM)
>
> I don't see it as gloating and no it does not place us on the same level.... to talk about the fact that there > were those among us who were a pain to deal with at times is a reality and should not be brushed aside. I see the comments as a collective "exhale" and not gloating....

>
> Likewise, I have a real problem with your idea that the banning should have been privately acknowledged and then people move on..... that is what Danny and Co. hoped would happen with his mess.....and I am glad that we did not privately acknowledge it and move on... but that's just me....

hank you Clay, ecause I HAVE been waiting to "exhale" , praying and crying over this 3ABN mess. I allowed gossip from thers before finding BSDA, lead me to think non christian thoughts towards Linda. If it appears that I am loating because they are gone, then so be it. I know one thing for sure, my heart is not beating fast nymore, not loosing sleep staying up late at night on BSDA, and there is peace on this board without reading icious attacks on others comments, but yet we are the body of Christ? I know that I have been naughty too, ut I am ready to apologzie when I'm called on it.

Posted by: princessdi May 15 2007, 02:11 PM

Yes, we can YB. However, the problem here is that she was treated that way by people who, to this day, call themselves "leaders in Christian living". Also, who continue to drop a word here and there, or dropped enough words initially, to hinder her "moving on". My own conference being an example. I think it was PB who posted that they said they wre going to stay "neutral" when it came to an invitation for Linda to speak at one of our churches here and did not allow her to come. However, Danny was allowed to come, to the conference church no less. Now, how is that being neutral? It seems she is trying, like tht rest of us, but there are stumbling blocks in her way. Put there by the man who claims to be Mending Broken People. Danny can't have it both ways.

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ May 15 2007, 09:18 AM)
>
> Maybe the majority really do see the inappropriate removal of Linda Shelton as the primary concern. I, for one, do not. We can all come up with a list of people we know who have been treated as shabbily as she was. Linda needs to move on, get a job, and do her ministry whether full time, or part time like the rest of us should be doing.

ere we agree.

> QUOTE
>
> I think the real struggle here involves money and power and is not limited to the current players at 3abn. I firmly believe that this mess could turn out to be a watershed point for the Adventist church at large. The stakes are high. Will the church really allow their future to be controlled by a closely held shadow government that is not responsible to anyone?

Posted by: mozart May 15 2007, 02:11 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 15 2007, 07:28 AM)

> However, if we had simultaneously broken into a giddy chorus of "Ding Dong The Witch Is Dead..." along with our happy dances, that would have qualified as gloating, IMO.
>
> PB

☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ ☐ ☒ than i needed that.

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 3 2007, 02:13 PM

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 15 2007, 07:21 AM) ☐
>
> (Believe me, that is not the end of it. I will struggle with the legalistic voices to my dying day...but I am not ruled by them anymore)
> shepherdswife--who just told her spiritual development story in 7 simple statements.

How wonderfully refreshing!! I know about those voices... ☒ b

---

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ What Is Happening With Linda?

Posted by: Observer May 8 2006, 08:18 AM

About two hours ago, Mr. Matthews posted the following in another adventist forum.

"1) I still have people coming to me and telling me that the satellite problems that 3-ABN has had are related to Linda.

Let me say again, Linda is not powerful enough to take 3-ABN off of the satellite. I accept as truth what 3-ABN, and others have said that the problems are problems with the satellite.

2) This week-end the story went out that Linda had married the Doctor. At one point it was published on the Internet. That story is 100% false. Linda has not remarried. She does not have any plans to remarry. She is not planning to marry that Doctor.

3) At the present, Linda is actively engaged in ministry. This last week, she was in Kansas, and she is available for booking in SDA Congregations throughout North America. If you would like to discuss the possibility of her presenting a program in your area, you may contact her at her website. www.lindashelton.org/

4) Linda is also developing in connection with others, a ministry to abused women. As I write this, plans are being made, in connection with an official organization of the SDA Church for Linda to produce a series of television programs on this subject. You will hear more about this as these plans develop.

5) While things seemingly are going well for Linda, I encourage you to remember her in your prayers. In the past public announcements of concerts that had been arranged with Linda has resulted in some attempting to have them cancelled. It is for that reason that I have not be specific in statement # 4.

6) Let me share something quite personal with you-all. At an earlier time in this sad sage, at a time when Linda was quite down on what was happening to her, she felt that the Lord was very close to her, and impressed her with a message. That message was the she had more to endure, but that the time would come when the Lord would restore her to her place in ministry. She has not understood this to mean that she would be restored to ministry at 3-ABN, a ministry that she, with Danny co-founded. But, she has understood this to mean that she would be restored to ministry, as God felt best. She believes that she is seeing this take place.

7) Remember her in prayer, as there are probably those who will attempt to prevent her from doing ministry.

8) God is in charge, and His purpose will be accomplished.

Gregory "

I have posted it here as it may be of interest to you.

Posted by: simplysaved May 8 2006, 09:32 AM

Of course that has NOTHING to do with it! This same thing happen with 10 of SkyAngels contracted satelites...10 ...7 were restored on their same frequency, and three had not--HOWEVER 3ABN was given an alternate Satelite frqeuncy so that the 10 Commandments Weekend Program would be aired....Please ask whoever it is to relax and let go of the "conspiracy theory"--it is not Christ-like at all...

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2006, 08:18 AM)
>
> About two hours ago, Mr. Matthews posted the following in another adventist forum.
>
> "1) I still have people coming to me and telling me that the satellite problems that 3-ABN has had are related to Linda.
>
> Let me say again, Linda is not powerful enough to take 3-ABN off of the satellite. I accept as truth what 3-ABN, and others have said that the problems are problems with the satellite.
>
> 2) This week-end the story went out that Linda had married the Doctor. At one point it was published on the Internet. That story is 100% false. Linda has not remarried. She does not have any plans to remarry. She is not planning to marry that Doctor.
>
> 3) At the present, Linda is actively engaged in ministry. This last week, she was in Kansas, and she is available for booking in SDA Congregations throughout North America. If you would like to discuss the possibility of her presenting a program in your area, you may contact her at her website. www.lindashelton.org/
>
> 4) Linda is also developing in connection with others, a ministry to abused women. As I write this, plans are being made, in connection with an official organization of the SDA Church for Linda to produce a series of television programs on this subject. You will hear more about this as these plans develop.
>
> 5) While things seemingly are going well for Linda, I encourage you to remember her in your prayers. In the past public announcements of concerts that had been arranged with Linda has resulted in some attempting to have them cancelled. It is for that reason that I have not be specific in statement # 4.
>
> 6) Let me share something quite personal with you-all. At an earlier time in this sad sage, at a time when Linda was quite down on what was happening to her, she felt that the Lord was very close to her, and impressed her with a message. That message was the she had more to endure, but that the time would come when the Lord would restore her to her place in ministry. She has not understood this to mean that she would be restored to ministry at 3-ABN, a ministry that she, with Danny co-founded. But, she has understood this to mean that she would be restored to ministry, as God felt best. She believes that she is seeing this take place.
>
> 7) Remember her in prayer, as there are probably those who will attempt to prevent her from doing ministry.
>
> 8) God is in charge, and His purpose will be accomplished.
>
> --------------------
>
> Gregory "
> I have posted it here as it may be of interest to you.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 8 2006, 11:16 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2006, 07:18 AM)
>
> About two hours ago, Mr. Matthews posted the following in another adventist forum.
>
> "1) I still have people coming to me and telling me that the satellite problems that 3-ABN has had are related to Linda.

> Let me say again, Linda is not powerful enough to take 3-ABN off of the satellite. I accept as truth what 3-ABN, and others have said that the problems are problems with the satellite.
>
> 2) This week-end the story went out that Linda had married the Doctor. At one point it was published on the Internet. That story is 100% false. Linda has not remarried. She does not have any plans to remarry. She is not planning to marry that Doctor.
>
> 3) At the present, Linda is actively engaged in ministry. This last week, she was in Kansas, and she is available for booking in SDA Congregations throughout North America. If you would like to discuss the possibility of her presenting a program in your area, you may contact her at her website. www.lindashelton.org/
>
> 4) Linda is also developing in connection with others, a ministry to abused women. As I write this, plans are being made, in connection with an official organization of the SDA Church for Linda to produce a series of television programs on this subject. You will hear more about this as these plans develop.
>
> 5) While things seemingly are going well for Linda, I encourage you to remember her in your prayers. In the past public announcements of concerts that had been arranged with Linda has resulted in some attempting to have them cancelled. It is for that reason that I have not be specific in statement # 4.
>
> 6) Let me share something quite personal with you-all. At an earlier time in this sad sage, at a time when Linda was quite down on what was happening to her, she felt that the Lord was very close to her, and impressed her with a message. That message was the she had more to endure, but that the time would come when the Lord would restore her to her place in ministry. She has not understood this to mean that she would be restored to ministry at 3-ABN, a ministry that she, with Danny co-founded. But, she has understood this to mean that she would be restored to ministry, as God felt best. She believes that she is seeing this take place.
>
> 7) Remember her in prayer, as there are probably those who will attempt to prevent her from doing ministry.
>
> 8) God is in charge, and His purpose will be accomplished.
>
> --------------------
>
> Gregory "
>
> I have posted it here as it may be of interest to you.

've spent hours talking to Linda - what continues to amaze me is her stillness, quietness, patient spirit. She :ould be saying and doing things to deliberately hurt or bash many who have betrayed and her her(and not ust Danny) but she doesn't. She knows this isn't her battle. This is God's battle. She has a confidence and 'EACE that can ONLY be a gift of the Spirit of God. I would only hope to be in this kind of christian spirit if I vere in her shoes. God is working in her, and He will have His will done concerning her because she has :tayed close to him, and is so committed to His will that she is not shaken. People could learn so much by her :xample if they could see. Their mouths would be shut like the lions mouths were. She has been a blessing to ne, her witness of Jesus is nothing short of a miracle.

Posted by: watchbird May 9 2006, 03:54 AM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 8 2006, 11:16 AM) ☐
>
> I've spent hours talking to Linda - what continues to amaze me is her stillness, quietness, patient spirit. She could be saying and doing things to deliberately hurt or bash many who have betrayed and her her (and not just Danny) but she doesn't. She knows this isn't her battle. This is God's battle. She has a confidence and PEACE that can ONLY be a gift of the Spirit of God. I would only hope to be in this kind of christian spirit if I were in her shoes. God is working in her, and He will have His will done concerning her because she has stayed close to him, and is so committed to His will that she is not shaken. People could > learn so much by her example if they could see. Their mouths would be shut like the lions mouths were.

> She has been a blessing to me, her witness of Jesus is nothing short of a miracle.

'es, indeed. My first contacts with her were within only a few months of the divorce, and even then I was mpressed by her attitude of confidence in the Lord and her forgiving spirit to all who had wronged her.

Vhat most don't know is the burden she carried for Nathan during the last 5 or more years of her TV ministry vhen his drug addiction was so out of control it was endangering his very life. 3ABN watchers only saw a :alm, serene Linda, holding her Bible, reading promises, and giving her little comments about them. Who :ould have guessed that she was reading those and clinging to them as a very literal life-line for herself while he concern for her son and the turmoil of her seemingly complete inability to do anything to help him raged vithin her, totally hidden from viewers.

mall wonder then, when she heard of a doctor who was having success in working with young people, ncluding those with problems like her son's, that she grasped at the opportunity to get the two of them ogether.

Posted by: Zephyr May 9 2006, 08:14 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2006, 08:18 AM) ☐
>
> About two hours ago, Mr. Matthews posted the following in another adventist forum.
>
> 2) This week-end the story went out that Linda had married the Doctor. At one point it was published on the Internet. That story is 100% false. Linda has not remarried. She does not have any plans to remarry. She is not planning to marry that Doctor.
> --------------------
> Gregory "
> I have posted it here as it may be of interest to you.

hame on those who are bearing false witness if that's what it is. You sound as if you are an official, iei pproved spokesperson for Linda. If so, please just state for the record so I can take a closer interest in what ou write.

pokesperson or not I think it is a bit careless make definitive statements as to Linda's marital future. If inda's turns around and marries the doctor that would not necessarily shed light on the problems she and anny were having.

anny divorced Linda and he bears full responsibility if she ends up in an adulterous marriage.
f you want to be the head you have to bear the headaches.

Posted by: watchbird May 9 2006, 10:54 AM

> QUOTE(Zephyr @ May 9 2006, 08:14 AM) ☐
>
> Shame on those who are bearing false witness if that's what it is. You sound as if you are an official, iei approved spokesperson for Linda. If so, please just state for the record so I can take a closer interest in what you write.
>
> Spokesperson or not I think it is a bit careless make definitive statements as to Linda's marital future. If Linda's turns around and marries the doctor that would not necessarily shed light on the problems she and Danny were having.

> Danny divorced Linda and he bears full responsibility if she ends up in an adulterous marriage.
> If you want to be the head you have to bear the headaches.

he person who made the statement (not Observer who merely copied it to BSDA) is in a sense, somewhat of n "approved spokesperson for Linda" since he is the moderator of the 3ABN forum on CA and checks things ut with Linda as to their accuracy before saying them.

ut I think the point is that, as Johann stated, both Linda and the doctor have plainly stated that they do not ave intentions of marrying each other.

ne thing confuses me in your statement above. about Danny bearing full responsibility "if she ends up in an dulterous marriage". Did you mean to say if she had --past tense-- married the doctor before Danny emarried? Since Danny has remarried now, how could Linda, who is still single, "end up" --future tense-- "in n adulterous marriage"?

hanks in advance for clarifying your thought on this.

Posted by: statrei May 9 2006, 11:21 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ May 9 2006, 11:54 AM) ☐
>
> One thing confuses me in your statement above. about Danny bearing full responsibility "if she ends up in an adulterous marriage". Did you mean to say if she had --past tense-- married the doctor before Danny remarried? Since Danny has remarried now, how could Linda, who is still single, "end up" --future tense-- "in an adulterous marriage"?
>
> Thanks in advance for clarifying your thought on this.

he is absolutely right according to what Jesus taught but most people overlook this. Divorce is NEVER ecognized before the Creator because it is the death of a union. Even though you are divorced you are still narried before the Creator. Jesus plainly said that if a man puts his wife away he causes her to commit dultery, unless he had divorced her because she had committed adultery. This passage has been erroneously nterpreted to teach that the Creator approves of divorce if adultery occurred. All Christ was doing was larifying who would be held responsible for the adultery. There is no such thing as acceptable divorce for iblical grounds. In other words, Danny bears responsibility for his adultery and for Linda's, should she emarry.

Posted by: Johann May 9 2006, 10:37 PM

> QUOTE(statrei @ May 9 2006, 06:21 PM) ☐
>
> . . . There is no such thing as acceptable divorce for biblical grounds. In other words, Danny bears responsibility for his adultery and for Linda's, should she remarry.

o you believe that if Linda should remarry it would add to Danny's sins?

Posted by: statrei May 10 2006, 05:36 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 10 2006, 12:37 AM)
>
> Do you believe that if Linda should remarry it would add to Danny's sins?

I can only expand on what Jesus is reported as saying. Since Danny put Linda away and it was not for marital infidelity her adultery will be his reponsibility. This is as plain as day.

Posted by: Clay May 11 2006, 09:48 AM this thread was split because of the tangent on forgiveness, which is now a separate thread......

Posted by: Clay May 18 2006, 10:48 AM closed for the moment....

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Dec 28 2006, 04:42 PM

I guess this one was re-opened without anybody noticing?

Posted by: LadyTenor Dec 30 2006, 04:01 PM

I guess, but this divorce has been hashed and rehashed and it is a dead horse, IMHO....

Posted by: Johann Dec 30 2006, 05:38 PM

> QUOTE(LadyTenor @ Dec 31 2006, 12:01 AM)
>
> I guess, but this divorce has been hashed and rehashed and it is a dead horse, IMHO....

What do you do if the cadaver has not been removed, and nobody wants to take the responsibility for doing the job?

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Dec 30 2006, 06:18 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2006, 10:18 AM)
>
> About two hours ago, Mr. Matthews posted the following in another adventist forum.
>
> "1) I still have people coming to me and telling me that the satellite problems that 3-ABN has had are related to Linda.
>
> Let me say again, Linda is not powerful enough to take 3-ABN off of the satellite. I accept as truth what 3-ABN, and others have said that the problems are problems with the satellite.

This is true, as far as I am aware. The real issue is dollars and cents where the satellite provider was concerned. More money to be made with other programmers, not that 3ABN viewership had dropped - just more money elsewhere.

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 8 2006, 10:18 AM)
>
> 2) This week-end the story went out that Linda had married the Doctor. At one point it was published on the Internet. That story is 100% false. Linda has not remarried. She does not have any plans to remarry. She is not planning to marry that Doctor.

Knowing you are careful with your posts I would expect that the bolded part above is just an error of diction - but I wouldn't want you to get yourself into any hot water or have to endure a deluge of email and calls because of it.

- fhb

Posted by: Clay Dec 30 2006, 09:16 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Dec 30 2006, 06:18 PM)
>
> This is true, as far as I am aware. The real issue is dollars and cents where the satellite provider was concerned. More money to be made with other programmers, not that 3ABN viewership had dropped - just more money elsewhere.
> Knowing you are careful with your posts I would expect that the bolded part above is just an error of diction - but I wouldn't want you to get yourself into any hot water or have to endure a deluge of email and calls because of it.
>
> - fhb

oh how kind you are.....

Posted by: LadyTenor Jan 4 2007, 03:36 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Dec 30 2006, 06:38 PM)
>
> What do you do if the cadaver has not been removed, and nobody wants to take the responsibility for doing the job?

Truthfully, Johann, I don't know....move it yourself? Hire someone else to do so? Ignore it? Don't travel in that area to avoid the stink?

Posted by: Johann Jan 4 2007, 04:13 PM

> QUOTE(LadyTenor @ Jan 4 2007, 11:36 PM)

> Truthfully, Johann, I don't know....move it yourself? Hire someone else to do so? Ignore it? Don't travel in that area to avoid the stink?

akes patience? BSDA has been great.

Posted by: Teresa Reiman Jan 17 2007, 08:00 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 8 2006, 11:16 AM)
>
> I've spent hours talking to Linda - what continues to amaze me is her stillness, quietness, patient spirit. She could be saying and doing things to deliberately hurt or bash many who have betrayed and her her(and not just Danny) but she doesn't. [b]She knows this isn't her battle. This is God's battle. [b] She has a confidence and PEACE that can ONLY be a gift of the Spirit of God. I would only hope to be in this kind of christian spirit if I were in her shoes. God is working in her, and He will have His will done concerning her because she has stayed close to him, and is so committed to His will that she is not shaken. People could learn so much by her example if they could see. Their mouths would be shut like the lions mouths were. She has been a blessing to me, her witness of Jesus is nothing short of a miracle.

Vell sonshineonme I guess that you have been snowed. Beware! Eye Witness has proved that Linda is nvolved directly with what is going on in this site. Maybe you just haven't gotten your turn yet! Deliberately, he did what she did to Eye Witness friend. Linda must have another definition of deliberately.
eresa Reiman

Posted by: Johann Jan 17 2007, 08:30 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 18 2007, 04:00 AM)
>
> Well sonshineonme I guess that you have been snowed. Beware! Eye Witness has proved that Linda is involved directly with what is going on in this site. Maybe you just haven't gotten your turn yet! Deliberately, she did what she did to Eye Witness friend. Linda must have another definition of deliberately.
> Teresa Reiman

ou are getting more and more interesting, Teresa - or amusing. Yes, someone saw that e-mail you are eferring to and made the mistake, as you see it, of taking the wording at face value. That person had no idea he e-mail meant something else than what it said. Who could know that? As far as I know Linda had nothing o do with bringing this to BSDA, because she is never here! So you are making an argument that you know othing about.

n passing I heard a spiritualistic medium speaking on the radio just as I am writing this. Demonic? Reminds ne it was, according to Pastor John Lomacang, a demon that appeared at night to Brenda that started this vhole thing back in 2004. It is amazing how many of you have followed the leading of that demon until this lay! Back in 2004 I warned the leaders of 3ABN not to follow the leading of a demon, but I was told that the lemon could be of a great benefit to 3ABN!

nd it now even looks like we need a demon to interpret that e-mail you are referring to in order to nderstand the whole matter your way!

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 17 2007, 08:34 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 06:00 PM)
>
> Well sonshineonme I guess that you have been snowed. Beware! Eye Witness has proved that Linda is involved directly with what is going on in this site. Maybe you just haven't gotten your turn yet! Deliberately, she did what she did to Eye Witness friend. Linda must have another definition of deliberately.
> Teresa Reiman

You couldn't be more wrong - but I think you know this deep down.

Posted by: Teresa Reiman Jan 17 2007, 08:40 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jan 17 2007, 08:34 PM)
>
> You couldn't be more wrong - but I think you know this deep down.

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 17 2007, 08:45 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 06:40 PM)

ahhh, c'mon, you can admit it - we will love you still.

Posted by: Teresa Reiman Jan 17 2007, 09:12 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jan 17 2007, 08:45 PM)
>
> ahhh, c'mon, you can admit it - we will love you still.

sonshineoneme beware!

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Jan 17 2007, 09:18 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 10:12 PM)
>
> sonshineoneme beware!

That sounds like a threat...and Christian people shouldn't threaten! Maybe you should spend some time with your nose stuck in the Bible.

Posted by: Snoopy Jan 17 2007, 09:27 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 08:00 PM)
>
> Well sonshineonme I guess that you have been snowed. Beware! Eye Witness has proved that Linda is involved directly with what is going on in this site. Maybe you just haven't gotten your turn yet! Deliberately, she did what she did to Eye Witness friend. Linda must have another definition of deliberately.
> Teresa Reiman

Hi Teresa,

I am truly just trying to keep up here in a sincere search for the truth, and I think I have missed something somewhere. How has Eye Witness proven that Linda is involved here? This is an honest question.

Posted by: Teresa Reiman Jan 17 2007, 09:29 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 17 2007, 08:30 PM)
>
> You are getting more and more interesting, Teresa - or amusing. Yes, someone saw that e-mail you are referring to and made the mistake, as you see it, of taking the wording at face value. That person had no idea the e-mail meant something else than what it said. Who could know that? As far as I know Linda had nothing to do with bringing this to BSDA, because she is never here! So you are making an argument that you know nothing about.
>
> In passing I heard a spiritualistic medium speaking on the radio just as I am writing this. Demonic? Reminds me it was, according to Pastor John Lomacang, a demon that appeared at night to Brenda that started this whole thing back in 2004. It is amazing how many of you have followed the leading of that demon until this day! Back in 2004 I warned the leaders of 3ABN not to follow the leading of a demon, but I was told that the demon could be of a great benefit to 3ABN!
>
> And it now even looks like we need a demon to interpret that e-mail you are referring to in order to understand the whole matter your way!

Johann I have no idea what you are trying to say, other than, I guess you are hearing voices. If you need the voice to interpret the email then well I can't help you in that area either. The best way for you to read the email that Eye Witness has produced is maybe the same way I read it. Open minded. As far as Linda not being connected with all this, who are you trying to kid. There was a personal email sent to Linda that has been posted here. Now if she is never here, then there must be someone working very close to her, Gailon, Pickles and maybe even you, that she can use, to do her bashing. I could be mistaken but what other conclusion can be drawn? Got any ideas? Johann, Do you think Linda has been under any stress?

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 17 2007, 09:43 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 07:29 PM)
>
> Johann I have no idea what you are trying to say, other than, I guess you are hearing voices. If you need the voice to interpret the email then well I can't help you in that area either. The best way for you to read the email that Eye Witness has produced is maybe the same way I read it. Open minded. As far as Linda not being connected with all this, who are you trying to kid. There was a personal email sent to Linda that has been posted here. Now if she is never here, then there must be someone working very close to her, Gailon, Pickles and maybe even you, that she can use, to do her bashing. I could be mistaken but what other conclusion can be drawn? Got any ideas? Johann, Do you think Linda has been under any stress?

"Teresa",

Where is the email that proves Linda is bashing someone? Post it (again). Thanks.

One other thing "Teresa", why don't you ask Linda about it, instead of spreading "conclusions" about the how and why here at BSDA?

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jan 17 2007, 09:47 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 09:29 PM)
>
> Johann I have no idea what you are trying to say, other than, I guess you are hearing voices. If you need the voice to interpret the email then well I can't help you in that area either. The best way for you to read the email that Eye Witness has produced is maybe the same way I read it. Open minded. As far as Linda not being connected with all this, who are you trying to kid. There was a personal email sent to Linda that has been posted here. Now if she is never here, then there must be someone working very close to her, Gailon, Pickles and maybe even you, that she can use, to do her bashing. I could be mistaken but what other conclusion can be drawn? Got any ideas? Johann, Do you think Linda has been under any stress?

Any email can have blind copies. Therefore, copies of a "personal email" could end up far from the stated recipient, without the named recipient even knowing about it. So, you don't have an air-tight case that someone "must" be working close to her.

Posted by: Teresa Reiman Jan 17 2007, 09:50 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Jan 17 2007, 09:27 PM)

> Hi Teresa,
>
> I am truly just trying to keep up here in a sincere search for the truth, and I think I have missed something somewhere. How has Eye Witness proven that Linda is involved here? This is an honest question.

Snoopy please bear with my english. I am not good and many have let me know, so please just be kind. In he Save 3abn page/thread you will find where Gailon Joy posted a comment from Eye Witness' friends email. There are several posting from Eye Witness there. Eye Witness has stated that it was a personal email sent to Linda Shelton and it ended up on this forum. Sooo if the email ended up here, then either Linda is working closely with Gailon, Pickles and who knows who, or she is part of all this herself. Either way she is contributing to the Bashing. What is really sad is that I guess that she felt this personal email, which really wasn't anything, would be so proving to her/the case. Anyway that is where I am, but you will certainly want o read the documents and posts and see if you see it like I do.
Danke Schon

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 17 2007, 09:55 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 07:29 PM)
>
> I could be mistaken but what other conclusion can be drawn? Got any ideas? Johann, Do you think Linda has been under any stress?

You know, sitting here thinking about the stress that you and the "family" have put Linda under the past almost 3 years, I've thought of something - IF she were going to do something because of it, it would not be so subtle as posting some email....and I think you said something about "I could be mistaken". REALLY? Did you really say that???? There are plenty of other "conclusions", but I think you have no real interest in the ruth.I would rethink your assessment.

Posted by: princessdi Jan 17 2007, 09:57 PM

Uh Teresa, earlier today you were in LC talking about the people who were really trying to find out who you are. Well, I didn't have much time to read too many posts at work today, but since I have been home, I have read several posts where youare trying to that Sister is Linda, or somebody(not that it hasn't been said before). So now I think it is you(the latest team 3ABN) who has come to at least figure out if one of the pepole posting information is Linda, or acting as her agent. I don't think anyone would try to find who you are if you had not been trying to identify members here first.

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 07:29 PM)
>
> Johann I have no idea what you are trying to say, other than, I guess you are hearing voices. If you need the voice to interpret the email then well I can't help you in that area either. The best way for you to read the email that Eye Witness has produced is maybe the same way I read it. Open minded. As far as Linda not being connected with all this, who are you trying to kid. There was a personal email sent to Linda that has been posted here. Now if she is never here, then there must be someone working very close to her, Gailon, Pickles and maybe even you, that she can use, to do her bashing. I could be mistaken but what other conclusion can be drawn? Got any ideas? Johann, Do you think Linda has been under any stress?

Posted by: Snoopy Jan 17 2007, 10:02 PM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 09:50 PM)
>
> Snoopy please bear with my english. I am not good and many have let me know, so please just be kind. In the Save 3abn page/thread you will find where Gailon Joy posted a comment from Eye Witness' friends email. There are several posting from Eye Witness there. Eye Witness has stated that it was a personal email sent to Linda Shelton and it ended up on this forum. Sooo if the email ended up here, then either Linda is working closely with Gailon, Pickles and who knows who, or she is part of all this herself. Either way she is contributing to the Bashing. What is really sad is that I guess that she felt this personal email, which really wasn't anything, would be so proving to her/the case. Anyway that is where I am, but you will certainly want to read the documents and posts and see if you see it like I do.
> Danke Schon

Thank you for your sincere response. And, I have no problem with your English - just respect for your efforts to get your point across. God bless...

Posted by: awesumtenor Jan 17 2007, 10:23 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Jan 17 2007, 11:02 PM)
>
> Thank you for your sincere response. And, I have no problem with your English - just respect for your efforts to get your point across. God bless...

And what would that point be, exactly? To take aim with the latest weapon of mass distraction from her camp? To hijack discussion?

Expliquez, s'il-vous plait...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: roxe Jan 18 2007, 01:00 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jan 17 2007, 08:57 PM)
>
> (the latest team 3ABN)

just wondering... is this the "Q" team? or are we beyond that?
its confusing trying to keep up with these teams

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 17 2007, 07:30 PM)
>
> Reminds me it was, according to Pastor John Lomacang, a demon that appeared at night to Brenda that started this whole thing back in 2004. It is amazing how many of you have followed the leading of that demon until this day! Back in 2004 I warned the leaders of 3ABN not to follow the leading of a demon, but I was told that the demon could be of a great benefit to 3ABN!

oh dear... sounds to me like an open invite for control - leading to disaster...

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 06:52 AM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 10:50 PM)
>
> Snoopy please bear with my english. I am not good and many have let me know, so please just be kind. In the Save 3abn page/thread you will find where Gailon Joy posted a comment from Eye Witness' friends email. There are several posting from Eye Witness there. Eye Witness has stated that it was a personal email sent to Linda Shelton and it ended up on this forum. Sooo if the email ended up here, then either Linda is working closely with Gailon, Pickles and who knows who, or she is part of all this herself. Either way she is contributing to the Bashing. What is really sad is that I guess that she felt this personal email, which really wasn't anything, would be so proving to her/the case. Anyway that is where I am, but you will certainly want to read the documents and posts and see if you see it like I do.
> Danke Schon

Teresa, personally I believe you are Teresa Shelton, the writer of the email in question and as such know where all the bcc's went to with the obvious inclusion of "Eye Witness", but that is just my opinion. If you are trying to veil your identity with the inclusion of "Danke Schon" at the end of your post, suggesting that you are German, it doesn't fly for a number of reasons. One reason is that the word order mistakes or grammatical mistakes that would be typical in the posts of a native German speaking person are not there. In addition to that a German speaking person would not have written "Danke Schon" in the same manner that you have written it. The errors you have made in your posts are more indicative of a poorly educated American, rather than a foreigner whose mother tongue is not English.

Also, Teresa you keep ignoring my questions in another thread in regard to what you think I was implying Rick Shelton could write about his "father" if he choose to do so. Only someone in the Shelton family would have made the assumptions that you made in regard to what I had written, a friend of the Shelton family would have remained silent. That is a secret that you never should have so publicly alluded to in an open forum, if you were trying to keep your Shelton family identity a secret.

It appears that the Shelton family are closing ranks and trying to do all the damage control they can by attempting to draw our attention away from the main issues of what is being revealed about the Shelton brothers and like a magician trying to redirect our attention somewhere else, place the "blame" for the revelation on Linda. It appears that the Shelton's are trying to convince us that child molestation is not the crime, but that blowing the whistle on the alleged victimizer is the crime. Sorry, Danny, but I find such an attitude perverse coming from the midst of a self-professed Christian organization.

Sister

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 07:53 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 17 2007, 07:30 PM)
>
> You are getting more and more interesting, Teresa - or amusing. Yes, someone saw that e-mail you are referring to and made the mistake, as you see it, of taking the wording at face value. That person had no idea the e-mail meant something else than what it said. Who could know that? As far as I know Linda had nothing to do with bringing this to BSDA, because she is never here! So you are making an argument that you know nothing about.
>
> In passing I heard a spiritualistic medium speaking on the radio just as I am writing this. Demonic? Reminds me it was, according to Pastor John Lomacang, a demon that appeared at night to Brenda that started this whole thing back in 2004. It is amazing how many of you have followed the leading of that demon until this day! Back in 2004 I warned the leaders of 3ABN not to follow the leading > of a demon, but I was told that the demon could be of a great benefit to 3ABN!

>
> And it now even looks like we need a demon to interpret that e-mail you are referring to in order to understand the whole matter your way!

ohann, I have heard references to this incident but have never heard the full story. Can you recount this lemon story for me and others who do not know it?

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 07:00 PM) ☐
>
> Well sonshineonme I guess that you have been *snowed. Beware! Eye Witness has proved that Linda is involved directly with what is going on in this site. Maybe you just haven't gotten your turn yet! Deliberately, she did what she did to Eye Witness friend. Linda must have another definition of deliberately.
> Teresa Reiman

Vell, Teresa, let's take a look at the definition of this condition that you have invoked:

;now (sn) ı.
.. Frozen precipitation in the form of white or translucent hexagonal ice crystals that fall in soft, white flakes.
!. A falling of snow; a snowstorm.
}. Something resembling snow, as:
ı. The white specks on a television screen resulting from weak reception.
). Slang Cocaine.
:. Slang Heroin.
'. snowed, snow·ing, snows
'.intr.
'o fall as or in snow.
'.tr.
.. To cover, shut off, or close off with snow: We were snowed in.
!. Slang To overwhelm with insincere talk, especially with flattery.

ımmmm....

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 08:21 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 05:52 AM) ☐
>
> Teresa, personally I believe you are Teresa Shelton, the writer of the email in question and as such know where all the bcc's went to with the obvious inclusion of "Eye Witness", but that is just my opinion. If you are trying to veil your identity with the inclusion of "Danke Schon" at the end of your post, suggesting that you are German, it doesn't fly for a number of reasons. One reason is that the word order mistakes or grammatical mistakes that would be typical in the posts of a native German speaking person are not there. In addition to that a German speaking person would not have written "Danke Schon" in the same manner that you have written it. The errors you have made in your posts are more indicative of a poorly educated American, rather than a foreigner whose mother tongue is not English.
>
> Also, Teresa you keep ignoring my questions in another thread in regard to what you think I was implying Rick Shelton could write about his "father" if he choose to do so. Only someone in the Shelton family would have made the assumptions that you made in regard to what I had written, a friend of the Shelton family would have remained silent. That is a secret that you never should have so publicly alluded to in an open forum, if you were trying to keep your Shelton family identity a secret.
>
> It appears that the Shelton family are closing ranks and trying to do all the damage control they can by attempting to draw our attention away from the main issues of what is being revealed about the Shelton brothers and like a magician trying to redirect our attention somewhere else, place the "blame" for the > revelation on Linda. It appears that the Shelton's are trying to convince us that child molestation is not the crime, but that blowing the whistle on the alleged victimizer is the crime. Sorry, Danny, but I find such an attitude perverse coming from the midst of a self-professed Christian organization.

>
> Sister

eresa, who is attempting to snow who?

can understand how hard it must be to see a beloved family member in danger of being brought to justice or allegations that expose actions that are contrary to God's law. I can also understand how that beloved amily member's accountability for the alleged indecent, abusive actions against children and young men vould be minimized by his family due to the abuse that the beloved family member had suffered as a child.

know that blood is thicker than water. But why make it thicker than the Living Water? By minimizing this rother's actions against his alleged victims, by attempting to cover up those alleged crimes by denial and ntimidation, you are all in danger of experiencing a most deadly Drought! IMO

Posted by: Green Cochoa Jan 18 2007, 08:47 AM

> QUOTE(Teresa Reiman @ Jan 17 2007, 09:50 PM) ☐
>
> Snoopy please bear with my english. I am not good and many have let me know, so please just be kind. In the Save 3abn page/thread you will find where Gailon Joy posted a comment from Eye Witness' friends email. There are several posting from Eye Witness there. Eye Witness has stated that it was a personal email sent to Linda Shelton and it ended up on this forum. Sooo if the email ended up here, then either Linda is working closely with Gailon, Pickles and who knows who, or she is part of all this herself. Either way she is contributing to the Bashing. What is really sad is that I guess that she felt this personal email, which really wasn't anything, would be so proving to her/the case. Anyway that is where I am, but you will certainly want to read the documents and posts and see if you see it like I do.
> Danke Schon

eresa, Sprechen Sie Deutsch?

ntschuldigen Sie uns bitte für das Kommentieren Ihre englische Fähigkeit. Sie können auf Deutsch chreiben, wenn Sie wünschen. Mai Gott segnen Sie!

Unless the rules are changed, I just double-checked them and found no ban on the use of foreign languages ere, and since Teresa seems to speak German, she is welcome to respond to me in kind.)

Posted by: Snoopy Jan 18 2007, 09:22 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Jan 17 2007, 10:23 PM) ☐
>
> And what would that point be, exactly? To take aim with the latest weapon of mass distraction from her camp? To hijack discussion?
>
> Expliquez, s'il-vous plait...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Sorry, Mr. J. I haven't been around long enough to know one "camp" from another yet. I am still searching and reading and trying to catch up. I have some experience with 3ABN, and I truly believe in its ministry. However, my own time there raised some questions in my mind which is why I am here.

All I was trying to say to "Ms. Reiman" was that I empathize with "her" ability to express herself, especially if English is not her first language. Who knows - the English thing might just be a ploy. I believe that I am far behind on this unfolding story, so if my comments aren't appropriate, please accept my humble apologies. I am just snooping for the truth...

Posted by: awesumtenor Jan 18 2007, 09:28 AM

> QUOTE(Green Cochoa @ Jan 18 2007, 09:47 AM) ☐
>
> Teresa, Sprechen Sie Deutsch?
>
> Entschuldigen Sie uns bitte für das Kommentieren Ihre englische Fähigkeit. Sie können auf Deutsch schreiben, wenn Sie wünschen. Mai Gott segnen Sie!
>
> (Unless the rules are changed, I just double-checked them and found no ban on the use of foreign languages here, and since Teresa seems to speak German, she is welcome to respond to me in kind.)

Ich denke nicht, daß sie spricht deutsch... Ich könnte verwechselt werden, jedoch...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jan 18 2007, 09:37 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Jan 18 2007, 09:28 AM) ☐
>
> Ich denke nicht, daß sie spricht deutsch... Ich könnte verwechselt werden, jedoch...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Ich stimme zu. ☒ rofl

Posted by: Green Cochoa Jan 18 2007, 09:45 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Jan 18 2007, 09:28 AM) ☐
>
> Ich denke nicht, daß sie spricht deutsch... Ich könnte verwechselt werden, jedoch...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

I think we're on the same page... ☐

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 09:52 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Jan 18 2007, 10:28 AM) ☐
>
> Ich denke nicht, daß sie spricht deutsch... Ich könnte verwechselt werden, jedoch...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Since there are so many German speaking people on BSDA, perhaps you would all like to invite Teresa to the LC so she can write in her "Mother Tongue" with all of you. ☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ rofl Teresa, we are all waiting to hear from you... ☒ Oh, I forgot, the Shelton Clan is from southern Illinois, not southern Germany! ☒

Sister

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jan 18 2007, 10:03 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 09:52 AM) ☐
>
> Since there are so many German speaking people on BSDA, perhaps you would all like to invite Teresa to the LC so she can write in her "Mother Tongue" with all of you. ☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ rofl Teresa, we are all waiting to hear from you... ☒ Oh, I forgot, the Shelton Clan is from southern Illinois, not southern Germany! ☒
>
> Sister

Oh, no.

West Frankfort, not West Frankfurt?

Now you tell me. ☒ rofl

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 10:08 AM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jan 18 2007, 11:03 AM) ☐
>
> Oh, no.

> West Frankfort, not West Frankfurt?
>
> Now you tell me. ☒ rofl

ou got it right, Pete. The place with the only Hamburger comes between a bun, with pickles and mustard, nd not from a city in northern Germany. ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl Sorry, I am just a bit silly today with all he recent nonsense from the Shelton Clan. ☐

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 10:13 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Jan 18 2007, 08:28 AM) ☐
>
> Ich denke nicht, daß sie spricht deutsch... Ich könnte verwechselt werden, jedoch...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

igh... many of my ancestors were German- speaking German/Prussian folk and I always got a kick over how hey restructured their English sentences - "Up on the car you must get" for example, but I never picked up he language myself. My pitiful attempt at a translation of your statement comes up with "I think not that she peaks German...I understand this because of her faulty wording..." Am I even close?

Posted by: awesumtenor Jan 18 2007, 10:25 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jan 18 2007, 11:13 AM) ☐
>
> Sigh... many of my ancestors were German- speaking German/Prussian folk and I always got a kick over how they restructured their English sentences - "Up on the car you must get" for example, but I never picked up the language myself. My pitiful attempt at a translation of your statement comes up with "I think not that she speaks German...I understand this because of her faulty wording..." Am I even close?

ou are in the ballpark ☐

n His service,
r. J

Posted by: Johann Jan 18 2007, 10:25 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jan 18 2007, 06:13 PM) ☐
>
> Sigh... many of my ancestors were German- speaking German/Prussian folk and I always got a kick over how they restructured their English sentences - "Up on the car you must get" for example, but I never picked up the language myself. My pitiful attempt at a translation of your statement comes up with "I think not that she speaks German...I understand this because of her faulty wording..." Am I even close?

Very good! Almost 50% right

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jan 18 2007, 10:32 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 10:08 AM)
>
> You got it right, Pete. The place with the only Hamburger comes between a bun, with pickles and mustard, and not from a city in northern Germany. rofl rofl Sorry, I am just a bit silly today with all the recent nonsense from the Shelton Clan.

Hamburgers but no Hamburgians. Isn't that always the case? rofl

---

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 11:03 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 09:25 AM)
>
> Very good! Almost 50% right

rofl

I guess the 6 years I spent studying French may have helped some.

Posted by: västergötland Jan 18 2007, 11:11 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jan 18 2007, 06:03 PM)
>
> rofl
>
> I guess the 6 years I spent studying French may have helped some.

That would be highly supprising.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 11:31 AM

> QUOTE(västergötland @ Jan 18 2007, 10:11 AM)
>
> That would be highly supprising.

Okay, you caught me! ☒

I've always enjoyed languages and have watched many subtitled German documentaries, so I guess I picked up a few words that way. What I think I do know is:

Ich = I
nicht = not sie spricht deutsch = she speaks German werden = wording, I think

The rest I just guessed at. Guess you all could tell. ☒ rofl

Posted by: Johann Jan 18 2007, 11:33 AM

> QUOTE(västergötland @ Jan 18 2007, 07:11 PM) ☐
>
> That would be highly supprising.

We're highly ☒ ofl aren't we? How do we get back?

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 18 2007, 11:35 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jan 18 2007, 09:31 AM) ☐
>
> Okay, you caught me! ☒
>
> I've always enjoyed languages and have watched many subtitled German documentaries, so I guess I picked up a few words that way. What I think I do know is:
>
> Ich = I
> nicht = not > sie spricht deutsch = she speaks German > werden = wording, I think
>
> The rest I just guessed at. Guess you all could tell. ☒ rofl

Hey PB, I think you did pretty good!! My background is german, and you picked up more than I did - of course, I think I was not trying too hard either as the converstation was more fun in itself. But let this be a lesson to you all here, the people at BSDA are of the INTELLIGENT kind!! ☒

Posted by: västergötland Jan 18 2007, 11:35 AM

I think "werden" is a gramatically bent form of "to be". I couldnt tell you the correct grammar term for it though.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 11:38 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 10:33 AM) ☐
>
> We're highly ofl aren't we? How do we get back?

Johann, do you have any updates on how Linda is doing? Is she pleased with how the investigation is proceeding? How about the website?

Posted by: västergötland Jan 18 2007, 11:39 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 06:33 PM) ☐
>
> We're highly ofl aren't we? How do we get back?

Take to the right in the turnabout just after passing through the hamlet known as Common Sence..

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 11:47 AM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jan 18 2007, 10:35 AM) ☐
>
> Hey PB, I think you did pretty good!! My background is german, and you picked up more than I did - of course, I think I was not trying too hard either as the converstation was more fun in itself. But let this be a lesson to you all here, the people at BSDA are of the INTELLIGENT kind!!

Aw, thanks. I did hear German from time to time as a child but it didn't stick too well. One of my favorite stories about by great grandfather happened shortly after he moved his family out to California from North Dakota in the early part of the 20th century. He was driving his car into the garage when everyone inside the house heard him yelling (in German, of course) "Whoa! Whoa! Whoa!" followed by a huge crash as he drove through the back wall. He had only had the car for a little over a month and was still used to the team of horses that pulled the wagon on their farm, not the horses under the hood!

But now I have strayed ofl again.

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 18 2007, 11:56 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jan 18 2007, 09:38 AM) ☐

> Johann, do you have any updates on how Linda is doing? Is she pleased with how the investigation is proceeding? How about the website?

'm sure Johann can tell you some things with regard to Linda, but I can also tell you that she is doing very vell! She is busy and doing things she has wanted to do for some time. She knows that life is not easy, but hat God is good, and she trusts Him completely. Her faith has grown and it's a blessing to me. As for her ersonal website, she plans to update it soon.

Posted by: västergötland Jan 18 2007, 12:08 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jan 18 2007, 06:56 PM)
>
> I'm sure Johann can tell you some things with regard to Linda, but I can also tell you that she is doing very well! She is busy and doing things she has wanted to do for some time. She knows that life is not easy, but that God is good, and she trusts Him completely. Her faith has grown and it's a blessing to me. As for her personal website, she plans to update it soon.

'ou ever thought about becoming a politican? Or the spokeswoman for one?

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 18 2007, 12:13 PM

> QUOTE(västergötland @ Jan 18 2007, 10:08 AM)
>
> You ever thought about becoming a politican? Or the spokeswoman for one?

o. Is this a compliment? (I don't feel complimented)

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 12:21 PM

> QUOTE(västergötland @ Jan 18 2007, 10:35 AM)
>
> I think "werden" is a gramatically bent form of "to be". I couldnt tell you the correct grammar term for it though.

ak. I know that's Danish, but how for do? It's the only Scandanavian word for Thank You that I know. The nly others are "fer mad" which was always attached after the "Tak" and which I always said after being fed a ice Danish meal, even when I was served fiske bollen which I detested. Shudder.

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jan 18 2007, 10:56 AM)
>
> I'm sure Johann can tell you some things with regard to Linda, but I can also tell you that she is doing very well! She is busy and doing things she has wanted to do for some time. She knows that life is not easy, but > that God is good, and she trusts Him completely. Her faith has grown and it's a blessing to me. As for her personal website, she plans to update it soon.

Glad to hear it sonshineonme. Regarding the website, I was speaking of the save3abn.com website.

Posted by: västergötland Jan 18 2007, 12:22 PM

Guess it depends on ones perspecitve. Not intended to hurt though...

Posted by: Johann Jan 18 2007, 12:58 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jan 18 2007, 07:38 PM)
>
> Johann, do you have any updates on how Linda is doing? Is she pleased with how the investigation is proceeding? How about the website?

Linda is still the remarkable woman she was for thousands of viewers around the world. She is more confident today that the time is approaching when not only her closest friends will believe she was wrongfully ired and dismissed as a wife and as a producer.

You will notice that even those of Danny's friends who appear here on the net are no longer attacking Linda he way they used to do, but they are merely trying to confuse things by stating that Danny and the Sheltons are not being treated as they "deserve"!

Posted by: inga Jan 18 2007, 01:07 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 10:52 AM)
>
> Since there are so many German speaking people on BSDA, perhaps you would all like to invite Teresa to the LC so she can write in her "Mother Tongue" with all of you. rofl rofl rofl Teresa, we are all waiting to hear from you... Oh, I forgot, the Shelton Clan is from southern Illinois, not southern Germany!
>
> Sister

Hey, Sister, what's "the LC" where all of us German speakers can meet?

do find it a little strange that a German speaker who has trouble with English would write "You've been snowed."

t took me a long time to understand English slang. I remmber being puzzled by "hot dogs" -- heisse Huende?? But maybe Teresa is much brighter than I.

Also, Teresa, wenn Du wuenscht, kannst Du gerne auf Deutsch schreiben. Einige von uns werden Dich gut verstehen, und wir koennen dann ueberzetzen.

Posted by: västergötland Jan 18 2007, 01:23 PM

LC = Live Chat

Posted by: Johann Jan 18 2007, 03:41 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Jan 18 2007, 03:53 PM)
>
> Johann, I have heard references to this incident but have never heard the full story. Can you recount this demon story for me and others who do not know it?
> Well, Teresa, let's take a look at the definition of this condition that you have invoked:
>
> ---

People at 3ABN were wondering why Danny and Breda were spending so much time together... after she and Linda returned from Norway. So this had to be cleared.

Then one night at two in the mornig Brenda called Pastor John Lomacang, told him there was a demon in her house who had thrown down a basked. This made her so uncomfortable that she had to call the pastor to confess her sins.

She did not confess her own sins, but made, what I regard as false accusations against Linda, and these fictitious accusations started the whole affair. After John Lomacang had told me on the phone of this happenig, I called Dr. Walt Thompson and indicated that it would not be safe to let a demon direct such accusations against Linda, since I knew from my own experience that some of these accusations were utterly false.

But Walt insisted that the demon was to be trusted and that he could help 3ABN.

Posted by: Aletheia Jan 18 2007, 04:36 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jan 17 2007, 09:34 PM)
>
> You couldn't be more wrong - but I think you know this deep down.

A private e-mail to Linda get's published and Linda had nothing to do with it? Bob e-mails questions to her and posts her replies, and she had nothing to do with it?

I guess we're all stupid again?!?

Somehow, www.lindashelton.org continually get's updated in sync with what is posted both here and on MSDAOL, and that has nothing to do with her either, and she knows nothing and contributes nothing, even though D. Mundall is a member here and on MSDAOl, and her website was registered by him, and he is the technical contact?!? rofl

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 01:58 PM) ☐
>
> Liinda is still the remarkable woman she was for thousands of viewers around the world. She is more confident today that the time is approaching when not only her closest friends will believe she was wrongfully fired and dismissed as a wife and as a producer.
>
> You will notice that even those of Danny's friends who appear here on the net are no longer attacking Linda the way they used to do, but they are merely trying to confuse things by stating that Danny and the Sheltons are not being treated as they "deserve"!

I haven't noticed that. Who are you talking about when you say "Danny's friends"?

Just curious, for I was accused of that and have never even met him...

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 04:41 PM) ☐
>
> People at 3ABN were wondering why Danny and Breda were spending so much time together... after she and Linda returned from Norway. So this had to be cleared.
>
> Then one night at two in the mornig Brenda called Pastor John Lomacang, told him there was a demon in her house who had thrown down a basked. This made her so uncomfortable that she had to call the pastor to confess her sins.
>
> She did not confess her own sins, but made, what I regard as false accusations against Linda, and these fictitious accusations started the whole affair. After John Lomacang had told me on the phone of this happenig, I called Dr. Walt Thompson and indicated that it would not be safe to let a demon direct such accusations against Linda, since I knew from my own experience that some of these accusations were utterly false.
>
> But Walt insisted that the demon was to be trusted and that he could help 3ABN.

Is it just me. or does this story grows each time it's repeated, and get more outlandish and have added details everytime???

Does anybody have a link to the original tale?

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Jan 18 2007, 04:42 PM

Teresa?

You there?

Come back...we won't make you speak German. You can speak your good ol' suthen ilinoy talk. Yu know, miyuns and miyuns of viewers and such...

Posted by: inga Jan 18 2007, 04:58 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Jan 18 2007, 05:36 PM) ☐

> Somehow, www.lindashelton.org continually get's updated in sync with what is posted both here and on MSDAOL, and that has nothing to do with her either,

Vhat on earth are you talking about? I just went to Linda's site, and it looks like it hasn't been updated since Spring 2006"

> QUOTE
>
> Just curious, for I was accused of that and have never even met him...
> Is it just me. or does this story grows each time it's repeated, and get more outlandish and have added details everytime???

:or what it's worth, the account of Brenda traveling with Linda and of Brenda having a frightening night :ncounter which caused her to call John Lomacang and "confess" Linda's "sins" sounds the same as when I irst heard it more than two years ago. And that Brenda spent an uncommon amount of time with Dan ippears to be common knowledge, seeing so many mentioned it. (Brenda seems hardly shy, having the gall o invite Dan to her birthday party without Linda, while Dan & Linda were still together.)

;o what did youhear/read before this?

Ah, I get it! From my experience with you on the Maritime forum, I suppose you are right. Johann didn't ıse precisely the same words. And that apparently makes a very big difference to you.

3ut then, this isn't about being letter-perfect. We're more interested in accountability and transparency, even f that requires us to do think about what is said, rather than do a word-for-word comparison.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jan 18 2007, 05:08 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Jan 18 2007, 04:36 PM)
>
> Is it just me. or does this story grows each time it's repeated, and get more outlandish and have added details everytime???

t's just you.

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 05:21 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jan 18 2007, 05:58 PM)
>
> What on earth are you talking about? I just went to Linda's site, and it looks like it hasn't been updated since "Spring 2006"
> For what it's worth, the account of Brenda traveling with Linda and of Brenda having a frightening night encounter which caused her to call John Lomacang and "confess" Linda's "sins" sounds the same as when I first heard it more than two years ago. And that Brenda spent an uncommon amount of time with Dan appears to be common knowledge, seeing so many mentioned it. (Brenda seems hardly shy, having the gall to invite Dan to her birthday party without Linda, while Dan & Linda were still together.)
>
> So what did youhear/read before this?
>
> Ah, I get it! From my experience with you on the Maritime forum, I suppose you are right. Johann didn't use precisely the same words. And that apparently makes a very big difference to you.

> But then, this isn't about being letter-perfect. We're more interested in accountability and transparency, even if that requires us to do think about what is said, rather than do a word-for-word comparison.

i Inga, LC is Live Chat. Sorry but I have to correct on something above. The birthday party was for Dan's irthday in May 2004, given by Brenda, but you were correct that Linda was not invited. But I guess since she vas spending all that time alone, at night, in her apartment with Dan she was brazen enough to throw a irthday party for her "special friend" and not invite his wife. You would think that that would qualify as PIRITUAL ADULTERY in Dan's book. Oh, sorry, I forgot that he writes the rules, he doesn't live by them.

ister

Posted by: Johann Jan 18 2007, 05:30 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Jan 19 2007, 12:36 AM)
>
> ---
>
> Is it just me. or does this story grows each time it's repeated, and get more outlandish and have added details everytime???
>
> Does anybody have a link to the original tale?

indy, you told me you live with your mother. Does that mean that should you tell me more details of that ater on, then you are merely spinning on to your original tale?

may not have told in details of my phone conversations earlier. Am I therefore forbidden to give more etails at a later date? Or is that merely just you, as you say? Does it chock you too much to learn how all of his happened?

Posted by: Aletheia Jan 18 2007, 05:36 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Jan 17 2007, 10:57 PM)
>
> Uh Teresa, earlier today you were in LC talking about the people who were really trying to find out who you are. Well, I didn't have much time to read too many posts at work today, but since I have been home, I have read several posts where youare trying to that Sister is Linda, or somebody(not that it hasn't been said before). So now I think it is you(the latest team 3ABN) who has come to at least figure out if one of the pepole posting information is Linda, or acting as her agent. I don't think anyone would try to find who you are if you had not been trying to identify members here first.

have to say this is wrong.

s a member you can have whatever opinion your want, but as moderator,should it matter who did it first or vho you agree with when it comes to correcting someone?

know you are quick to say "bring in the next team", but unfortunately you only say that to those who ask questions and don't agree with all the Linda supporters. "Don't even try to figure out who Sister is, or you deserve to have people try to expose and identify you"? Why is it you can continually accuse others of who you think they are, and don't accept others doing this, unless they have your opinions, while finding fault with ONLY those who question who those you agree and sympathize with are?

Is saying this gonna get me in trouble?

Only if the rules are biased and don't belong equally to all, and you are above them.

> QUOTE
>
> Posted on: Dec 22 2006, 09:59 PM
> site admin Group: Owner
>
> > QUOTE
> >
> > (sister @ Dec 22 2006, 07:43 PM)
> >
> > Let's be adults and continue on with the topic at hand. It is much more interesting than discussing me, which has become quite tiresome.
>
> I agree this whole identity game is tiresome and gone on far enough. I found it amusing at first but not anymore. So everybody STOP the accusing and implying the identity of someone no matter how subtle or boldly done. I am beginning to think that some of you have an agenda to seek the identity of other, I will ban you from BSDA if I continue to suspect you of this.
>
> Everyone here can be as private or open with their identify as they want to be. My only requirement upon registration is that you identify your gender, THAT IS ALL and it will have to be good enough for everyone else too.
>
> Now back to the topic at hand, what ever it was, but I know it was not this.
>
> Clay and Di, please take notice

Bold text- mine

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 18 2007, 05:46 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 02:41 PM)
>
> People at 3ABN were wondering why Danny and Breda were spending so much time together... after she and Linda returned from Norway. So this had to be cleared.
>
> Then one night at two in the mornig Brenda called Pastor John Lomacang, told him there was a demon in her house who had thrown down a basked. This made her so uncomfortable that she had to call the pastor to confess her sins.
>
> She did not confess her own sins, but made, what I regard as false accusations against Linda, and these fictitious accusations started the whole affair. After John Lomacang had told me on the phone of this happenig, I called Dr. Walt Thompson and indicated that it would not be safe to let a demon direct such accusations against Linda, since I knew from my own experience that some of these accusations were utterly false.
>
> But Walt insisted that the demon was to be trusted and that he could help 3ABN.

Wow! I knew about the courteous demon who called several times and said "Please stop" showing your programs, but I didn't know of the one that threw down a basket at Brenda's apartment.

If Walt believes that this demon is to be trusted, I guess we'd better let him know that a demon over in Oregon told a former SDA pastor that "The Bottomless Pit" is in The Bermuda Triangle!

You can read the account by Ed Smith in post #61 and 68 in the following link:

http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=11952&st=60

Seems to me that we have volumes of counsel in the Scriptures and SOP against trusting what demons say....

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 05:49 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Jan 18 2007, 06:36 PM)
>
> I have to say this is wrong.
>
> As a member you can have whatever opinion your want, but as moderator,should it matter who did it first or who you agree with when it comes to correcting someone?
>
> I know you are quick to say "bring in the next team", but unfortunately you only say that to those who ask questions and don't agree with all the Linda supporters. "Don't even try to figure out who Sister is, or you deserve to have people try to expose and identify you"? Why is it you can continually accuse others of who you think they are, and don't accept others doing this, unless they have your opinions, while finding fault with ONLY those who question who those people are?
>
> Is saying this gonna get me in trouble?
>
> Only if the rules are biased and don't belong equally to all, and you are above them.
> I agree this whole identity game is tiresome and gone on far enough. I found it amusing at first but not anymore. So everybody STOP the accusing and implying the identity of someone no matter how subtle or boldly done. I am beginning to think that some of you have an agenda to seek the identity of other, I will ban you from BSDA if I continue to suspect you of this.
>
> Everyone here can be as private or open with their identify as they want to be. My only requirement upon registration is that you identify your gender, THAT IS ALL and it will have to be good enough for everyone else too.
>
> Now back to the topic at hand, what ever it was, but I know it was not this.
>
> Clay and Di please take notice

Interesting, in another thread Joe Smith and Eye Witness tell Calvin how he should run his forum and now you are telling Di how she should perform her duties as a moderator. Perhaps the three of you should get together and start your own online forum? Your rules, your way...

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jan 18 2007, 05:50 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 05:21 PM)
>
> The birthday party was for Dan's birthday in May 2004, given by Brenda, but you were correct that Linda was not invited. But I guess since she was spending all that time alone, at night, in her apartment with Dan she was brazen enough to throw a birthday party for her "special friend" and not invite his wife. You would think that that would qualify as SPIRITUAL ADULTERY in Dan's book. Oh, sorry, I forgot that he writes the rules, he doesn't live by them.
>
> Sister

Some people believe this: "All is fair in love and war." And so it goes with Brenda's birthday party.

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 05:55 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jan 18 2007, 06:50 PM)
>
> Some people believe this: "All is fair in love and war." And so it goes with Brenda's birthday party.

Pete, did you say L and *W? WHERE ARE THOSE GLASSES WHEN I NEED THEM...

edited for content. tsk tsk..... let's be adults please......

Posted by: princessdi Jan 18 2007, 06:28 PM

Uh No, Cindy saying this is not going to get you in "trouble". I really don't try too hard to figure out who anyone is. Fact is, as Admin, I don't have to, so much of what you addressed to Clay is pointless. The only thing I was saying to Teresa is that she was complaining about folks trying to find out who she was when she, like you, came on doing that same exact thing. Cindy you came asking for first hand evidence, when given it, you retreated into, "I don't know who you are because you use a screen name" Like they were just going to tell you who they are just to get your approval. Not!

But you are right, for the most part everybody' been tryin gto "guess who". I really don't care who everyone is individually. I just know when someone has been "sent" byt the "other side"(for lack of a better phrase). You all have the same agenda, come in, deny everything and then discredit the posters without responding to the posts. All you all have to do is answer with opposing evidence that discredits information already posted here. None of you have done that. Only tried to find our who everyone was, and discredit them, questioning folks christianity and Adventism(which isn't worth a hill of beans any), but it means a lot who put their trust in the church which claims to represent the same God. it is your lack of evidence which gives you away.

I have said before that I don't really care about vindicating Linda, but I really don't like the fact that th elikes of Danny is representing our church world wide. My first encounter with him was him sending a emial here filled with lies aobut how much he loved Linda and how much time they were spending together, etc. When his tired self was on his way to Guam for a quickie divorce. I really, really, hate being lied to especially when I haven't even asked you a question. So, I am holding Danny repsonsible for his actions, they really have nothing to do with Linda. So you can get off that kick, too.

Now, now youa re not in trouble, but at this point, you either need to post something to refute what you read here, because they are posting hard evidence, or just leave it alone.

Send in the next team, JK BTW, I only say the becuae Danny or a representative(with a screen name, but just be upfront) could just come here themselves, but they don't want to take the direct route. Thus, the line of supporter, many of who, oddly enough claiming to have no association with Danny other than a fan of 3ABN. However, as time goes on they seem to have information that "a faithful viewer" would not have. Plus, Danny started off lying to me, he has no trust here, I put nothing past him.
I have to say this is wrong.

As a member you can have whatever opinion your want, but as moderator,should it matter who did it first or who you agree with when it comes to correcting someone?

I know you are quick to say "bring in the next team", but unfortunately you only say that to those who ask questions and don't agree with all the Linda supporters. "Don't even try to figure out who Sister is, or you deserve to have people try to expose and identify you"? Why is it you can continually accuse others of who you think they are, and don't accept others doing this, unless they have your opinions, while finding fault with ONLY those who question who those people are?

Is saying this gonna get me in trouble?

Only if the rules are biased and don't belong equally to all, and you are above them.
I agree this whole identity game is tiresome and gone on far enough. I found it amusing at first but not anymore. So everybody STOP the accusing and implying the identity of someone no matter how subtle or boldly done. I am beginning to think that some of you have an agenda to seek the identity of other, I will ban you from BSDA if I continue to suspect you of this.

Everyone here can be as private or open with their identify as they want to be. My only requirement upon registration is that you identify your gender, THAT IS ALL and it will have to be good enough for everyone else too.

Now back to the topic at hand, what ever it was, but I know it was not this.

Clay and {B]Di please take notice[/b]
[/quote]

Posted by: Johann Jan 18 2007, 08:19 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jan 18 2007, 09:07 PM)
>
> Hey, Sister, what's "the LC" where all of us German speakers can meet?
>
> I do find it a little strange that a German speaker who has trouble with English would write "You've been snowed."
>
> It took me a long time to understand English slang. I remmber being puzzled by "hot dogs" -- heisse Huende?? But maybe Teresa is much brighter than I.
>
> Also, Teresa, wenn Du wuenscht, kannst Du gerne auf Deutsch schreiben. Einige von uns werden Dich gut verstehen, und wir koennen dann ueberzetzen.

With my German limited to 50 years with a German, I'd say this German is the only one that is 100% German. Most of the rest are very cute versions of Americanized German - acceptable and very sweet! - if you know what I mean!

Posted by: Rosyroi Jan 18 2007, 08:42 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 10:58 AM) ☐
>
> Liinda is still the remarkable woman she was for thousands of viewers around the world. She is more confident today that the time is approaching when not only her closest friends will believe she was wrongfully fired and dismissed as a wife and as a producer.
>
> You will notice that even those of Danny's friends who appear here on the net are no longer attacking Linda the way they used to do, but they are merely trying to confuse things by stating that Danny and the Sheltons are not being treated as they "deserve"!

"Deserve"? ☒ rofl Deserve would NOT be the word I would have used ... but then I should act like a lady and be nice... ☒ rofl

---

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Jan 18 2007, 09:53 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 06:55 PM) ☐
>
> Pete, did you say L and *W? ☒ WHERE ARE THOSE GLASSES WHEN I NEED THEM... ☐

OH MY WORD! You rock, Sister! Took the words right out of my mouth!

Posted by: inga Jan 18 2007, 10:00 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 06:21 PM) ☐
>
> Hi Inga, LC is Live Chat. Sorry but I have to correct on something above. The birthday party was for Dan's birthday in May 2004, given by Brenda, but you were correct that Linda was not invited. But I guess since she was spending all that time alone, at night, in her apartment with Dan she was brazen enough to throw a birthday party for her "special friend" and not invite his wife. You would think that that would qualify as SPIRITUAL ADULTERY in Dan's book. ☒ Oh, sorry, I forgot that he writes the rules, he doesn't live by them.
>
> Sister

OOPs! ☒ That was a "senior moment" I'm afraid. Instead of "her birthday party" I should have written "her birthday party for Dan." In my book, the critical detail was that she invited Dan without Linda -- which was pretty brazen by any standards.

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 09:19 PM) ☐

> With my German limited to 50 years with a German, I'd say this German is the only one that is 100% German. Most of the rest are very cute versions of Americanized German - acceptable and very sweet! - if you know what I mean!

hanks, Johann. You mean I get an 'A' for that? (I didn't check for the correct Umlaute, so had to ise extra e's to help me out.) So Teresa can be assured that if she writes in her native German, at least a ouple of us can translate, right?

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 10:07 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jan 18 2007, 11:00 PM)
>
> So Teresa can be assured that if she writes in her native German, at least a couple of us can translate, right?

y the way, where is Teresa? She has been awful quiet since so many kind members have offered to speak vith her in her "Mother Tongue" or translate for her... Teresa, wo sind Sie?

Posted by: Johann Jan 18 2007, 11:22 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 19 2007, 06:07 AM)
>
> By the way, where is Teresa? She has been awful quiet since so many kind members have offered to speak with her in her "Mother Tongue" or translate for her... Teresa, wo sind Sie?

'll avoid giving you a grade. . .

Posted by: sister Jan 18 2007, 11:33 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 19 2007, 12:22 AM)
>
> I'll avoid giving you a grade. . .

hanks! Or perhaps Merci!

Posted by: västergötland Jan 19 2007, 01:38 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 19 2007, 06:33 AM)

> Thanks! Or perhaps Merci!

Danke?

Posted by: eye witness Jan 21 2007, 08:28 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 18 2007, 12:58 PM)
>
> Liinda is still the remarkable woman she was for thousands of viewers around the world. She is more confident today that the time is approaching when not only her closest friends will believe she was wrongfully fired and dismissed as a wife and as a producer.
>
> You will notice that even those of Danny's friends who appear here on the net are no longer attacking Linda the way they used to do, but they are merely trying to confuse things by stating that Danny and the Sheltons are not being treated as they "deserve"!

Johann might be helpful for you to read:

What constitutes the sin against the Holy Spirit???? It is willfully attributing to Satan the work of the Holy Spirit. For example, suppose that one is a witness of the special work of the Spirit of God. He has convincing evidence that the work is in harmony with the Scriptures, and the Spirit witnesses with his spirit that it is of God. Afterward, however, he falls under temptations; pride, self-sufficiency, or some other evil trait, controls him; and rejecting all the evidence of its divine character, he declares that that which he had before acknowledged to be the power of the Holy Spirit was the power of Satan. It is through the medium of His Spirit that God works upon the human heart; and when men willfully reject the Spirit and declare it to be from Satan, they cut off the channel by which God can communicate with them. . . .For a time, persons who have committed this sin may appear to be children of God; but when circumstances arise to develop character and show what manner of standing they are of, it will be found that they are on the enemy's ground standing under his black banner.5T634

Posted by: inga Jan 21 2007, 11:08 AM

Eye Witness,

I find it interesting that you assume that Johann, a pastor of 50 years' or so experience and a true eye witness of the events that precipitated Dan's reprehensible course, would not know what constitutes the sin against the Holy Spirit.

But I ask you to consider this:
What would you call the practice wilfully attributing to God the work of Satan or even one's own manipulations?

What do manufactured 'miracles' to support one's own agenda have to do with the subject?

Does the Holy Spirit convict persons who commit adultery?

If one commits adultery and shows no signs of remorse but parades his new relationship as a blessing from God, what evidence does that give in light of your quote?

Can one so blatantly trifle with God, His work and His law and still expect to maintain His blessings without repentance?

Is financial prosperity ultimate proof of God's blessings?

Can people be converted in spite of the messenger's apostasy? Or are conversions ultimate proof of the messenger's special standing with God?

Does the end justify the means?

Please answer these questiosn before launching any more missives/missiles agains posters here.

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 21 2007, 09:28 AM)
>
> Johann might be helpful for you to read:
>
> What constitutes the sin against the Holy Spirit???? It is willfully attributing to Satan the work of the Holy Spirit. For example, suppose that one is a witness of the special work of the Spirit of God. He has convincing evidence that the work is in harmony with the Scriptures, and the Spirit witnesses with his spirit that it is of God. Afterward, however, he falls under temptations; pride, self-sufficiency, or some other evil trait, controls him; and rejecting all the evidence of its divine character, he declares that that which he had before acknowledged to be the power of the Holy Spirit was the power of Satan. It is through the medium of His Spirit that God works upon the human heart; and when men willfully reject the Spirit and declare it to be from Satan, they cut off the channel by which God can communicate with them. . . .For a time, persons who have committed this sin may appear to be children of God; but when circumstances arise to develop character and show what manner of standing they are of, it will be found that they are on the enemy's ground standing under his black banner.5T634

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Jan 21 2007, 11:24 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Jan 21 2007, 12:08 PM)
>
> Eye Witness,
>
> I find it interesting that you assume that Johann, a pastor of 50 years' or so experience and a true eye witness of the events that precipitated Dan's reprehensible course, would not know what constitutes the sin against the Holy Spirit.
>
> But I ask you to consider this:
> What would you call the practice wilfully attributing to God the work of Satan or even one's own manipulations?
>
> What do manufactured 'miracles' to support one's own agenda have to do with the subject?
>
> Does the Holy Spirit convict persons who commit adultery?
>
> If one commits adultery and shows no signs of remorse but parades his new relationship as a blessing from God, what evidence does that give in light of your quote?
>
> Can one so blatantly trifle with God, His work and His law and still expect to maintain His blessings without repentance?
>
> Is financial prosperity ultimate proof of God's blessings?
>
> Can people be converted in spite of the messenger's apostasy? Or are conversions ultimate proof of the messenger's special standing with God?

> Does the end justify the means?
>
> Please answer these questiosn before launching any more missives/missiles agains posters here.

suppose the answers to some of these depend upon those of whom you speak. We know that there are ome people that don't abide by the same rules as others. I would like to hear his answers to these...

Posted by: Johann Jan 21 2007, 11:53 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 19 2007, 07:33 AM)
>
> Thanks! Or perhaps Merci!

r should we just spell it Mercy sans gratitude?

Posted by: Johann Jan 21 2007, 12:37 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Jan 19 2007, 12:36 AM)
>
> ---
> I haven't noticed that. Who are you talking about when you say "Danny's friends"?
> -----
> ----once again, please read what I wrote, and there you will find an answer to your question!

wrote "those of Danny's friends who ..." and after that I gave an answer to your question. There you will lse see for yourelf if it applies to you or not. Perhaps not?

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 21 2007, 04:28 PM)
>
> Johann might be helpful for you to read:
>
> What constitutes the sin against the Holy Spirit???? It is willfully attributing to Satan the work of the Holy Spirit. For example, suppose that one is a witness of the special work of the Spirit of God. He has convincing evidence that the work is in harmony with the Scriptures, and the Spirit witnesses with his spirit that it is of God. Afterward, however, he falls under temptations; pride, self-sufficiency, or some other evil trait, controls him; and rejecting all the evidence of its divine character, he declares that that which he had before acknowledged to be the power of the Holy Spirit was the power of Satan. It is through the medium of His Spirit that God works upon the human heart; and when men willfully reject the Spirit and declare it to be from Satan, they cut off the channel by which God can communicate with them. . . .For a time, persons who have committed this sin may appear to be children of God; but when circumstances arise to develop character and show what manner of standing they are of, it will be found that they are on the enemy's ground standing under his black banner.5T634

It would be a great help if you wold point out to me in which way you think this applies to what I was saying? What work of the Holy Spirit to you claim that I attributed to Satan?

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Jan 21 2007, 05:22 PM

Maybe she is busy reading, surreptitiously of course, all that has been written here so that she might form her own opinion. Would it not be great if a Shelton were to see and acknowledge the truth and work from within the clan to cause a change to happen?

Richard

> QUOTE(sister @ Jan 18 2007, 11:07 PM)
>
> By the way, where is Teresa? She has been awful quiet since so many kind members have offered to speak with her in her "Mother Tongue" or translate for her... Teresa, wo sind Sie?

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Jan 21 2007, 08:32 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Jan 21 2007, 06:22 PM)
>
> Would it not be great if a Shelton were to see and acknowledge the truth and work from within the clan to cause a change to happen?
>
> Richard

If a Shelton family member were to believe that many of these allegations are true (as there are), they either shut their mouth, eyes, or both, or live in fear of being branded an outsider. Period. They would never be allowed to talk enough to convince anyone else.

Posted by: Hersheys99 Jan 21 2007, 09:28 PM

Unfortunately that won't happen anytime soon. I know I have personally brought something to the attention of a Shelton & I had proof of it but was told because I personally didn't see it (my girls were both witnesses to it though) that it was just heresay & nothing was ever done about it. This person still was allowed to be up front in church, tell the childrens story, etc. & patted on the back so to speak. So as far as they are concerned they are above God's laws & it don't apply to them. The Shelton Gang just make me sick in what they do to others & are allowed to get by with it. It is high time they have to pay the price for what they do to others.

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 21 2007, 09:43 PM

> QUOTE(Hersheys99 @ Jan 21 2007, 07:28 PM)

> Unfortunately that won't happen anytime soon. I know I have personally brought something to the attention of a Shelton & I had proof of it but was told because I personally didn't see it (my girls were both witnesses to it though) that it was just heresay & nothing was ever done about it. This person still was allowed to be up front in church, tell the childrens story, etc. & patted on the back so to speak. So as far as they are concerned they are above God's laws & it don't apply to them. The Shelton Gang just make me sick in what they do to others & are allowed to get by with it. It is high time they have to pay the price for what they do to others.

nd it's absolutely NO different if you are married to one either(vrs an employee, etc.)...just ask Bear or inda (among many others).

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jan 21 2007, 09:45 PM

> QUOTE(Hersheys99 @ Jan 21 2007, 08:28 PM) ☐
>
> Unfortunately that won't happen anytime soon. I know I have personally brought something to the attention of a Shelton & I had proof of it but was told because I personally didn't see it (my girls were both witnesses to it though) that it was just heresay & nothing was ever done about it. This person still was allowed to be up front in church, tell the childrens story, etc. & patted on the back so to speak. So as far as they are concerned they are above God's laws & it don't apply to them. The Shelton Gang just make me sick in what they do to others & are allowed to get by with it. It is high time they have to pay the price for what they do to others.

hope that not being believed didn't cause your girls too much pain. That can be a hard thing to get over. ust keep reminding them that God knows the truth and that you are proud that they told you.

Posted by: Hersheys99 Jan 21 2007, 11:41 PM

Both of my girls are older now but at that time they were like 15 & 17. They knew that it would likely be swept under the carpet when they told me all the things that went on. What a witness to our young people huh. Papertigers is one of my older daughters but she hasn't posted on here in a while & she used to work at 3ABN as well. My oldest worked there too & lets just say she came away with a very bitter taste in her mouth from it all. So they have had their share of being around both Kenny & Danny Shelton. As long as you are on "their side" & go along with what they are doing or what they want you to do all is well but heaven forbid you go against them in the slightest way you don't stand a chance at all.

Posted by: Johann Jan 22 2007, 06:37 AM

> QUOTE(Hersheys99 @ Jan 22 2007, 05:28 AM) ☐
>
> Unfortunately that won't happen anytime soon. I know I have personally brought something to the attention of a Shelton & I had proof of it but was told because I personally didn't see it (my girls were both witnesses to it though) that it was just heresay & nothing was ever done about it. This person still was allowed to be up front in church, tell the childrens story, etc. & patted on the back so to speak. So as far as they are concerned they are above God's laws & it don't apply to them. The Shelton Gang just make me sick in what they do to others & are allowed to get by with it. It is high time they have to pay the price for what they do to others.

I have experienced the same attitude towards sin at high level at 3ABN. There is reluctance to expel sin from the camp unless it is of a personal benefit to the leadership.

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Jan 22 2007, 07:39 AM

How sad.

My brother in law was a big fan of DS, and had once been his academy dean. I guess in some ways I'm glad he passed away before all these events took place. I'm sure it would have saddened his heart to hear of the misdeeds at 3abn. But at the same time my BIL was a very wise person when it came to dealing with personal issues, I wonder what advice he might have given Danny.

Thinking our loud on a snowy frosty Michigan morning,

Richard

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 22 2007, 07:37 AM)
>
> I have experienced the same attitude towards sin at high level at 3ABN. There is reluctance to expel sin from the camp unless it is of a personal benefit to the leadership.

Posted by: Ozzie Jan 22 2007, 11:43 PM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 22 2007, 12:28 AM)
>
> What constitutes the sin against the Holy Spirit???? It is willfully attributing to Satan the work of the Holy Spirit. For example, suppose that one is a witness of the special work of the Spirit of God. He has convincing evidence that the work is in harmony with the Scriptures, and the Spirit witnesses with his spirit that it is of God. Afterward, however, he falls under temptations; pride, self-sufficiency, or some other evil trait, controls him; and rejecting all the evidence of its divine character, he declares that that which he had before acknowledged to be the power of the Holy Spirit was the power of Satan. It is through the medium of His Spirit that God works upon the human heart; and when men willfully reject the Spirit and declare it to be from Satan, they cut off the channel by which God can communicate with them. . . .For a time, persons who have committed this sin may appear to be children of God; but when circumstances arise to develop character and show what manner of standing they are of, it will be found that they are on the enemy's ground standing under his black banner.5T634

How right you are eye witness. Now, apply that to 3ABN and the working there, and you have summarised it beautifully. Spot on.

Posted by: eye witness Jan 23 2007, 08:52 AM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Jan 21 2007, 11:24 AM)
>
> I suppose the answers to some of these depend upon those of whom you speak. We know that there are > some people that don't abide by the same rules as others. I would like to hear his answers to these...

OTY you must of very narrowly looked at the post to Johann about the sin against the Holy Spirit! Those vere not my words, those words were pinned from the hand of SOP. Now the application may very well fit our 0 year pastor and if so then it would prove that we are not, "once saved always saved" my friend.
o you, I and Johann must always remember that we can be controlled by the adversary to bid his doing.

Posted by: awesumtenor Jan 23 2007, 09:10 AM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 09:52 AM) ☐
>
> HOTY you must of very narrowly looked at the post to Johann about the sin against the Holy Spirit! Those were not my words, those words were pinned from the hand of SOP. Now the application may very well fit our 50 year pastor and if so then it would prove that we are not, "once saved always saved" my friend.
> So you, I and Johann must always remember that we can be controlled by the adversary to bid his doing.

was wondering how long it would take before the "if you disagree with our opinion, you're not going against s; you are going against EGW/SOP and, by extension, against God himself" card would be played...

n His service,
r. J

Posted by: eye witness Jan 23 2007, 09:24 AM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Jan 22 2007, 07:39 AM) ☐
>
> How sad.
>
> My brother in law was a big fan of DS, and had once been his academy dean. I guess in some ways I'm glad he passed away before all these events took place. I'm sure it would have saddened his heart to hear of the misdeeds at 3abn. But at the same time my BIL was a very wise person when it came to dealing with personal issues, I wonder what advice he might have given Danny.
>
> Thinking our loud on a snowy frosty Michigan morning,
>
> Richard

ichard I am sure your brother in law would of encouraged DS and all the other workers at 3ABN to keep on eeping on with the work of spreading the Gospel. As we know a VERY WISE person would never come to this ite and believe all this trash and move on, like its truth. Obviously this site has proven itself and its leaders o be FAKE when they don't meet deadlines, such as January exposure, Pickle's big statement and there is no ag order and the gagged is quiet. The documents you find could have been put together by, well lets face it, ow days a 10 year old. There are no records with any OFFICAL AUTHORITIES, only documents from a one, elf made reporter, called Gailon Joy. Who is apparently a FELON! One post its Mollie, then Tommy, then anny, then Shelly, then the pastoral staff, in their eyes every person at 3ABN is bad, and should be emoved. Jellousy is what I call it. You know tearing others down so they can feel good about themselves.

The screen on their computer may just one day become a mirror of themselves.

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jan 21 2007, 12:37 PM)
>
> Once again, please read what I wrote, and there you will find an answer to your question!
>
> I wrote "those of Danny's friends who ..." and after that I gave an answer to your question. There you will alse see for yourelf if it applies to you or not. Perhaps not?
> It would be a great help if you wold point out to me in which way you think this applies to what I was saying? What work of the Holy Spirit to you claim that I attributed to Satan?

post edited for content.....

Posted by: Clay Jan 23 2007, 09:31 AM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 09:24 AM)
>
> Richard I am sure your brother in law would of encouraged DS and all the other workers at 3ABN to keep on keeping on with the work of spreading the Gospel. As we know a VERY WISE person would never come to this site and believe all this trash and move on, like its truth. Obviously this site has proven itself and its leaders to be FAKE when they don't meet deadlines, such as January exposure, Pickle's big statement and there is no Gag order and the gagged is quiet. The documents you find could have been put together by, well lets face it, now days a 10 year old...... snip.....

distraction by minutiae...... tiresome...

Posted by: Johann Jan 23 2007, 11:26 AM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 04:52 PM)
>
> HOTY you must of very narrowly looked at the post to Johann about the sin against the Holy Spirit! Those were not my words, those words were pinned from the hand of SOP. Now the application may very well fit our 50 year pastor and if so then it would prove that we are not, "once saved always saved" my friend.
> So you, I and Johann must always remember that we can be controlled by the adversary to bid his doing.

Why do you avoid the question I asked you in this connection?

I do not see the connection that you seem to imply. Can't you just tell me?

Posted by: Snoopy Jan 23 2007, 11:39 AM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 09:24 AM) ☐
>
> Richard I am sure your brother in law would of encouraged DS and all the other workers at 3ABN to keep on keeping on with the work of spreading the Gospel. As we know a VERY WISE person would never come to this site and believe all this trash and move on, like its truth. Obviously this site has proven itself and its leaders to be FAKE when they don't meet deadlines, such as January exposure, Pickle's big statement and there is no Gag order and the gagged is quiet. The documents you find could have been put together by, well lets face it, now days a 10 year old. There are no records with any OFFICAL AUTHORITIES, only documents from a one, self made reporter, called Gailon Joy. Who is apparently a FELON! One post its Mollie, then Tommy, then Danny, then Shelly, then the pastoral staff, in their eyes every person at 3ABN is bad, and should be removed. Jellousy is what I call it. You know tearing others down so they can feel good about themselves. The screen on their computer may just one day become a mirror of themselves.

You know what, Ms. Eyewitness? I am fairly new to this board and have stopped myself from posting several times because I really had nothing substantive to say since I don't know enough about the situation, but this time you have hit a nerve!! First of all, I don't recall anyone setting any "deadlines" as you say. Perhaps a "plan", but as we all know, plans can change by the hour. If yours don't, then you must be a robot.

Second, I consider myself a fairly wise person. I only started reading BSDA a couple of weeks ago BECAUSE OF THINGS I WAS HEARING FROM 3ABN!! And I don't take everything written here as truth. But from what I have read thus far, there are some serious allegations coming to light here that involve 3ABN. And as a 3ABN supporter, I have a right to search out all I can with a fervent prayer for discernment. To me, documents and letters provide a great deal of evidence. They could be forged, as you say, but that would be fairly easy to dispute by simply asking the writers for another, notarized copy.

And I had to chuckle at your slam on Mr. Pickle. I don't know him at all, but your statement that "Pickle is in disguise, for the most part he is a cucumber" reminded me of grade school days. Thanks for the chuckle!

I understand the frustrations in both "camps" and I admire the fervor with which each defends their version of the truth. But let's take a step back here from the name calling and cheap shots at each other and focus on finding the real truth. Remember that there are three sides to every story - his, hers and the truth. Thus far I am fairly convinced that there is probably some aspect of truth to both sides of the Danny/Linda saga, but that is none of my business. I care about 3ABN and the damage these new allegations could do to the ministry. Let's remember that Dan Shelton and 3ABN are two completely separate entities. While there is no doubt in my mind that God used Dan Shelton to build 3ABN, that does not make them one and the same.

OK - I guess I'll get off my soapbox now. Thanks for listening, and may the Lord's will be done.

Posted by: watchbird Jan 23 2007, 12:30 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Jan 23 2007, 12:39 PM) ☐
>
> Let's remember that Dan Shelton and 3ABN are two completely separate entities.

I doubt very much that you could convince DS of that.

> QUOTE
>
> While there is no doubt in my mind that God used Dan Shelton to build 3ABN, that does not make them one and the same.

Or was it maybe that Dan Shelton "used God" to build his empire?

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Jan 23 2007, 07:31 PM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 10:24 AM)
>
> Richard I am sure your brother in law would of encouraged DS and all the other workers at 3ABN to keep on keeping on with the work of spreading the Gospel.
>
> post edited for content.....

I'm convinced you're from nowhere other than Southern Illinois as I have never seen anyone write "would of" instead of "would have." Perhaps you are even from 3ABN?

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 23 2007, 07:34 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Jan 23 2007, 05:31 PM)
>
> I'm convinced you're from nowhere other than Southern Illinois as I have never seen anyone write "would of" instead of "would have." Perhaps you are even from 3ABN?

Now hoty...don't give it away that we already know this!! We want them to keep at it!

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Jan 23 2007, 07:36 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Jan 23 2007, 08:34 PM)
>
> Now hoty...don't give it away that we already know this!! We want them to keep at it!

Did you think they would do anything but...you know...idling around?

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Jan 23 2007, 07:50 PM

Actually my BIL was involved with teens his entire adult life, primarily in disciplining them. I think he would have been one to send DS a letter pointing out his sins, and ask him to repent.

So you are pointing out the perceived faults of those on here while overlooking the child molestations, the adultery, the non-Biblical divorce etc of those at 3abn. Talk about blinders.

It would seem that if you can prove any of the allegations presented here as false you would. Instead you play the diversion game by going after the messenger instead of addressing the message. Typical of those that that can't disprove something.

Richard

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 10:24 AM)
>
> Richard I am sure your brother in law would of encouraged DS and all the other workers at 3ABN to keep on keeping on with the work of spreading the Gospel. As we know a VERY WISE person would never come to this site and believe all this trash and move on, like its truth. Obviously this site has proven itself and its leaders to be FAKE when they don't meet deadlines, such as January exposure, Pickle's big statement and there is no Gag order and the gagged is quiet. The documents you find could have been put together by, well lets face it, now days a 10 year old. There are no records with any OFFICAL AUTHORITIES, only documents from a one, self made reporter, called Gailon Joy. Who is apparently a FELON! One post its Mollie, then Tommy, then Danny, then Shelly, then the pastoral staff, in their eyes every person at 3ABN is bad, and should be removed. Jellousy is what I call it. You know tearing others down so they can feel good about themselves. The screen on their computer may just one day become a mirror of themselves.
>
> post edited for content.....

Posted by: eye witness Jan 23 2007, 07:57 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Jan 23 2007, 07:50 PM)
>
> Actually my BIL was involved with teens his entire adult life, primarily in disciplining them. I think he would have been one to send DS a letter pointing out his sins, and ask him to repent.
>
> So you are pointing out the perceived faults of those on here while overlooking the child molestations, the adultery, the non-Biblical divorce etc of those at 3abn. Talk about blinders.
>
> It would seem that if you can prove any of the allegations presented here as false you would. Instead you play the diversion game by going after the messenger instead of addressing the message. Typical of those that that can't disprove something.
>
> Richard

Excuse me Richard you may want to understand they are not guilt. Until a person is found guilty in a court of law they are persumed innocent. Thank you and court is dismissed. Take your seat.

Posted by: watchbird Jan 23 2007, 08:16 PM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 08:57 PM)
>
> Excuse me Richard you may want to understand they are not guilt. Until a person is found guilty in a court of law they are persumed innocent. Thank you and court is dismissed. Take your seat.

Sorry... this is not court... and you are not the judge. And not very many sins of this world are taken to court to be proven. Scripture says... in the mouth of two or three witnesses... and it also says that God is the judge. And it also holds those who know of wrongdoing to report it. That is all that is happening here.... those who know are reporting. So don't go throwing this "presumed innocent" garbage around here.... we know too many who are reporting to buy that particular piece of smoked dead fish.

Posted by: inga Jan 23 2007, 08:38 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Jan 23 2007, 08:50 PM)
>
> So you are pointing out the perceived faults of those on here while overlooking the child molestations, the adultery, the non-Biblical divorce etc of those at 3abn. Talk about blinders.
>
> It would seem that if you can prove any of the allegations presented here as false you would. Instead you play the diversion game by going after the messenger instead of addressing the message. Typical of those that that can't disprove something.
>
> Richard

Yes, Richard, it's typical, indeed.

Eye witness, how about it?

There are several eye witnesses -- victims, that is -- who have told their experience, at tremendous cost to themselves.

You just want to dismiss these until they have gone through a court process. This is not how the court of heaven works!

Do you ever think of that?

Posted by: Clay Jan 23 2007, 08:59 PM

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 07:57 PM)
>
> Excuse me Richard you may want to understand they are not guilt. Until a person is found guilty in a court of law they are persumed innocent. Thank you and court is dismissed. Take your seat.

delusions of grandeur...

Posted by: HUGGINS130 Jan 23 2007, 09:16 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jan 23 2007, 09:59 PM)
>
> delusions of grandeur...

a lot of delusion right now....

Posted by: inga Jan 23 2007, 09:20 PM

We've been off-topic for a while. ofl

Let's get back to the topic of the http://www.save3abn.com. I think we can do something positive to help Gailon Joy out. And I think that's worthwhile, because that site is a good site to send someone who would be turned off by all the talk here but could draw his/her own conclusions, given documented facts.

Something missing so far on Gailon's site is a timeline of events that would be telling, without any other details given. There's a http://www.maritime-sda-online.org/forums/ubbthreads.php?ubb=showflat&Number=84420&page=0#Post84420 where questions are asked and submissions taken to establish a timeline of events associated with 3ABN over the last several years and even earlier, if relevant to current events.

I thought someone here mentioned something regarding the following:
Date Brandy Elswick arrived at 3ABN.
Dates Brandy Elswick actually worked at 3ABN & where she worked.
Date Brandy Elswick moved into the house opposite Danny's house.
Even approximate dates would be helpful.

In juxtaposition with other dates, these dates might just tell their own story.

Also helpful would be just when Linda moved away from 3ABN, i.e. out of the trailer Danny "fixed" for her (bugged with electronic listening devices).

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Jan 23 2007, 10:29 PM

You make my point about attacking the messenger so well, it is much appreciated sig

> QUOTE(eye witness @ Jan 23 2007, 08:57 PM)
>
> Excuse me Richard you may want to understand they are not guilt. Until a person is found guilty in a court of law they are persumed innocent. Thank you and court is dismissed. Take your seat. b

---

Posted by: sonshineonme Jan 24 2007, 09:17 PM

[quote name='Johann' date='Jan 18 2007, 10:58 AM' post='170953']
Liinda is still the remarkable woman she was for thousands of viewers around the world. She is more confident today that the time is approaching when not only her closest friends will believe she was wrongfully fired and dismissed as a wife and as a producer.

You will notice that even those of Danny's friends who appear here on the net are no longer attacking Linda the way they used to do, but they are merely trying to confuse things by stating that Danny and the Sheltons are not being treated as they "deserve"![/quote]

Well Johann, that ended all to quickly, didn't it? For that past few posts by eyewitness and bystander have done just that, "their" old tactics...only I think they truely do underestimate the people that read here - those people won't be TOLD what to believe any longer, as if they are watching a TV screen and believing every word they are fed without questioning and thinking for themselves (very dangerous to put your mind in someones "hands" like that!). All have to make up their own minds with the information they can collect from those that have been there, and done that. Since they can't seem to SHOW US THE PROOF, they use their words of hate and jealousy instead. Talk about "uplifting" and "encouraging"??? What do they have in their hands now?

Posted by: lurker Feb 12 2007, 11:00 AM

Wwjd, I appreciate your answer to my question about 3ABN housing. I even apprecieate your defense of Brandy. Now I have another question. What do you know about the 3ABN demon? Can you tell us the date the incident with Brenda and the basket or luggage took place and why Brenda didn't think it just accidently fell off the shelf because it wasn't put away carefully? I also wondered why she didn't think a cut or tear could have been there when she put it up and she just hadn't noticed it.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 12 2007, 01:01 PM

> QUOTE(lurker @ Feb 12 2007, 10:00 AM)
>
> Wwjd, I appreciate your answer to my question about 3ABN housing. I even apprecieate your defense of Brandy. Now I have another question. What do you know about the 3ABN demon? Can you tell us the date the incident with Brenda and the basket or luggage took place and why Brenda didn't think it just accidently fell off the shelf because it wasn't put away carefully? I also wondered why she didn't think a cut or tear could have been there when she put it up and she just hadn't noticed it.

Lurker, I am very interested in answers to this, as well. Hope we will get some.

Posted by: Aletheia Feb 12 2007, 05:41 PM

I say let's get back to the topic of "What is happening with Linda?"

Some may remember what was published on the http://www.lindashelton.org website for the first 15 mos about her calling.

L.S. wrote "the Holy Spirit drew so near to my heart and said, "I'm not finished with you yet, you will work for Me." and "The Lord has laid on my heart to begin a production studio which will produce Christ-centered programs on a full-time basis. These programs can be shown on other networks and local Christian stations."

Those who remember this, may have questions like me.

I am wondering what happened to any donations? and how the production studio is coming along?

From September 17, 2004 - December 01, 2005 this is what was published on her website:

Q: What are your plans for the future?

A:... I really felt that my ministry was over. But one evening the Lord brought a song to my remembrance that I had not sung in at least 15 years. The song says, "Lord, please move me with compassion for the lost I pray; for the millions who are lost and cannot find their way. Melt my calloused heart with love no matter what the cost. Lord, please move me with compassion for the lost." As I softly sang the verses and choruses of this song, the Holy Spirit drew so near to my heart and said, "I'm not finished with you yet, you will work for Me." The Lord has confirmed this with other incidents as well. I told the Lord that especially under the circumstances, He would have to open the doors and "clean up the mess." He said he would do this.

As well as writing the newsletters and magazines at 3ABN, I was also in charge of the TV production studios since the very beginning of 3ABN. I formatted new programs and chose hosts and guests for the programs seen on 3ABN. Additionally, I was directly involved in the management of the 3 production studios and the Production Truck, which obtained programming on the road. Especially considering my experience is unique in the SDA Church, I feel that I need to use this experience for the Lord. The Lord has laid on my heart to begin a production studio which will produce Christ-centered programs on a full-time basis. These programs can be shown on other networks and local Christian stations. One thing I learned at 3ABN is that there is never too many Christian programs. There is a huge demand for high quality Christ-centered programs that bring God's message to the hearts of searching people

.

Already I have been approached by some who are willing to support this production studio. Although their funding is not available right now, their desire to help has encouraged me so much...and I'm ready to get started. It is estimated that the legal work to obtain a non-profit status in Illinois will cost approximately 5-6 thousand dollars. This is the first step. If the Lord is laying a burden on your heart to help with this stepping stone of faith, please send your donations to P.O. Box 2202, Carbondale, IL 62902. THANK YOU so much!!------------ end quote

On December 01, 2005 the webpage was changed with no explanation (that I am aware of). It now reads:

Q: What are you doing now and what are your plans for the future?

A: Ministry is what my life is about. I go where the Lord opens the doors in a speaking, singing and ministering.ministry.

It sounds like she's rather busy.

Considering all that I have read here from the 3ABN accusers about how she has been persecuted and blocked from engagements,and also considering those who may have sent donations to Linda, I would like to hear what those who know her and are in contact with her know about all this.

What is happening with Linda?

~ Aletheia

Posted by: gardener Feb 12 2007, 05:49 PM

It would be nice if HOPE would used some of her talents.

Posted by: Rosyroi Feb 12 2007, 05:51 PM

QUOTE(Aletheia @ Feb 12 2007, 03:41 PM)

I say let's get back to the topic of "What is happening with Linda?"

Some may remember what was published on the http://www.lindashelton.org website for the first 15 mos about her calling.

L.S. wrote "the Holy Spirit drew so near to my heart and said, "I'm not finished with you yet, you will work for Me." and "The Lord has laid on my heart to begin a production studio which will produce Christ-centered programs on a full-time basis. These programs can be shown on other networks and local Christian stations."

Those who remember this, may have questions like me.

I am wondering what happened to any donations? and how the production studio is coming along?
From September 17, 2004 - December 01, 2005 this is what was published on her website:

Q: What are your plans for the future?

A:... I really felt that my ministry was over. But one evening the Lord brought a song to my remembrance that I had not sung in at least 15 years. The song says, "Lord, please move me with compassion for the lost I pray; for the millions who are lost and cannot find their way. Melt my calloused heart with love no matter what the cost. Lord, please move me with compassion for the lost." As I softly sang the verses and choruses of this song, the Holy Spirit drew so near to my heart and said, "I'm not finished with you yet, you will work for Me." The Lord has confirmed this with other incidents as well. I told the Lord that especially under the circumstances, He would have to open the doors and "clean up the mess." He said he would do this.

As well as writing the newsletters and magazines at 3ABN, I was also in charge of the TV production studios since the very beginning of 3ABN. I formatted new programs and chose hosts and guests for the programs seen on 3ABN. Additionally, I was directly involved in the management of the 3 production studios and the Production Truck, which obtained programming on the road. Especially considering my experience is unique in the SDA Church, I feel that I need to use this experience for the Lord. The Lord has laid on my heart to begin a production studio which will produce Christ-centered programs on a full-time basis. These programs can be shown on other networks and local Christian stations. One thing I learned at 3ABN is that there is never too many Christian programs. There is a huge demand for high quality Christ-centered programs that bring God's message to the hearts of searching people
.
Already I have been approached by some who are willing to support this production studio. Although their funding is not available right now, their desire to help has encouraged me so much...and I'm ready to get started. It is estimated that the legal work to obtain a non-profit status in Illinois will cost approximately 5-6 thousand dollars. This is the first step. If the Lord is laying a burden on your heart to help with this stepping stone of faith, please send your donations to P.O. Box 2202, Carbondale, IL 62902. THANK YOU so much!!------------- end quote
On December 01, 2005 the webpage was changed with no explanation (that I am aware of). It now reads:

Q: What are you doing now and what are your plans for the future?

A: Ministry is what my life is about. I go where the Lord opens the doors in a speaking, singing and ministering.ministry.

It sounds like she's rather busy.

Considering all that I have read here from the 3ABN accusers about how she has been persecuted and blocked from engagements,and also considering those who may have sent donations to Linda, I would like to hear what those who know her and are in contact with her know about all this.

What is happening with Linda?
~ Aletheia

I suppose asking her yourself would be a good start. Her e-mail address should still be on her website.

Posted by: Fran Feb 12 2007, 06:55 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Feb 12 2007, 05:41 PM)
>
> What is happening with Linda?
> ~ Aletheia

Why don't you ask her?

Posted by: Ex3ABNViewer Feb 12 2007, 06:57 PM

I did email Linda just a couple of weeks ago, I never heard from her:(

Posted by: wwjd Feb 12 2007, 11:15 PM

> QUOTE(lurker @ Feb 12 2007, 11:00 AM)
>
> Wwjd, I appreciate your answer to my question about 3ABN housing. I even apprecieate your defense of Brandy. Now I have another question. What do you know about the 3ABN demon? Can you tell us the date the incident with Brenda and the basket or luggage took place and why Brenda didn't think it just accidently fell off the shelf because it wasn't put away carefully? I also wondered why she didn't think a cut or tear could have been there when she put it up and she just hadn't noticed it.

I'm sorry I have no idea. I had never even heard that until I read it here.

Posted by: Johann Feb 13 2007, 01:12 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 13 2007, 07:15 AM)
>
> I'm sorry I have no idea. I had never even heard that until I read it here.

Then I guess you are quite innocent!!! According to Pastor John Lomacang Brenda called him at 2 AM one morning to confess her sins because she got scared when the demon appeared to her. But in stead of confesing her own sins she made up stories about Linda so that Danny could get his divorce.

> QUOTE(Ex3ABNViewer @ Feb 13 2007, 02:57 AM)
>
> I did email Linda just a couple of weeks ago, I never heard from her:(

I think Linda is exceedingly busy these days. You might find out why within a week or two.

Posted by: Observer Feb 13 2007, 05:15 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Feb 13 2007, 12:12 AM)
>
> Then I guess you are quite innocent!!! According to Pastor John Lomacang Brenda called him at 2 AM one morning to confess her sins because she got scared when the demon appeared to her. But in stead of confesing her own sins she made up stories about Linda so that Danny could get his divorce.
>
> I think Linda is exceedingly busy these days. You might find out why within a week or two.

I agree. Seh is busy. She is getting on with her life. She maly surprise some of you yet, or perhaps not, as some of you think you know what is going on with her.

Posted by: seraph|m Mar 16 2007, 03:42 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 13 2007, 06:15 AM)
>
> I agree. Seh is busy. She is getting on with her life. She maly surprise some of you yet, or perhaps not, as some of you think you know what is going on with her.

Posted by: sonshineonme Mar 27 2007, 07:28 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 13 2007, 04:15 AM)
>
> I agree. Seh is busy. She is getting on with her life. She maly surprise some of you yet, or perhaps not, as some of you think you know what is going on with her.

I agree! She is busy, and I think it's a great thing for her! I like seeing her excited about possibilities and the invitations she has received! I'm personally excited about some things coming up for her! There is nothing like God's timing!

Posted by: mozart Mar 27 2007, 10:44 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Mar 27 2007, 07:28 PM)

> I agree! She is busy, and I think it's a great thing for her! I like seeing her excited about possibilities and the invitations she has received! I'm personally excited about some things coming up for her! There is nothing like God's timing!

does anyone know truthfully why brenda would turn on linda like this and want danny to get a divorce? i don' get it. just the facts please, if anyone actually knows. thanks

---

Posted by: roxe Mar 27 2007, 11:29 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 27 2007, 10:44 PM) ☐
>
> does anyone know truthfully why brenda would turn on linda like this and want danny to get a divorce? i don' get it. just the facts please, if anyone actually knows. thanks

i've been wondering if perhaps brenda wanted danny for herself... but i don't know truthfully... i'm glad you asked... i'd like to know also...

Posted by: Johann Mar 28 2007, 06:14 AM

> QUOTE(roxe @ Mar 28 2007, 07:29 AM) ☐
>
> i've been wondering if perhaps brenda wanted danny for herself... but i don't know truthfully... i'm glad you asked... i'd like to know also...

As you can see it was Danny Shelton who sent me this letter from Brenda. I was wondering why? Was there a special reason why Danny needed this verification?

-----Original Message-----
From: Danny Shelton [mailto:danshelton@]
Sent: 9. febrúar 2005 19:10
To: Johann Thorvaldsson
Subject: FW: Letter from BRENDA WALSH

Danny Shelton
danshelton@**
Why Wait? Move to EarthLink.

\> [Original Message]
\> From: Brenda Walsh <brendawalsh@**>
\> To: Linda Shelton <***>
\> Cc: Nick Miller <nmiller@>; Walt Thompson
<walttmd@>; Danny Shelton <danshelton@***>
\> Date: 2/9/2005 11:57:28 AM
\> Subject: Letter from BRENDA WALSH
\>
February 9, 2005

Dear Linda,

I am writing to you because I would like you to hear the truth about some misconceptions you may have regarding my marriage to Tim. I received a call from someone who spoke with you personally, and they said that you specifically told them that Tim and I are divorced and that Danny and I were having an affair.

Here is the truth:

1. Tim and I are happily married and we are definitely NOT divorced nor are we planning a divorce. We have a loving Christ centered home and we love each other very much. We believe that God brought us together and we plan to be together till death do us part or until Jesus comes....whichever come first.

2. Your ex-husband, Danny Shelton and I have never had an affair nor are we thinking about having an affair, not in the past, present or future! I would be willing to swear in a court of law, that I have NOT had an affair with Danny or anyone else. The only person Danny has ever talked about loving was you, and I don't believe that he has had an affair with anyone! I believe he was faithful to you the entire time you were married, both in a physical and spiritual sense.

3. As you know, Danny and I have known each other all our lives and he is like a brother to me. My mom and dad think of him as one of their sons. The ONLY man that I have romantic feelings for is my husband Tim.

I hope this sets the record straight. Now that you know the truth, I would appreciate it if you would refrain from spreading lies and rumors. Linda I love you very much and I cherish many warm and happy memories of our times spent together. We once shared a special friendship and it hurts me to think that you could even possibly think that I would be involved with your husband! Nothing could be farther from the truth! Someday I hope you will realize that I am not your enemy. I wish you only the best and I pray that someday soon when Jesus comes in the clouds of glory, that we will be neighbors together in heaven.

May God bless you,

Your sister in Christ,

Brenda

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Mar 28 2007, 06:41 AM

Johann,

Thank you for sharing this.

How do you feel about Brenda's statement? Is she telling the truth?

PB

Posted by: Rosyroi Mar 28 2007, 09:58 AM

-

-Edited for content--

Have a great day everyone.

@{---;---;-----

Posted by: Johann Mar 28 2007, 10:13 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Mar 28 2007, 02:41 PM)
>
> Johann,
>
> Thank you for sharing this.
>
> How do you feel about Brenda's statement? Is she telling the truth?
>
> PB

Truth has been a scarce commodity in most of all that has come from that camp, even from their pastor, who should be a boulder of truth to his flock. This is why I plead with them to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all the other things shall be added in the wake of these troubles.

Posted by: roxe Mar 28 2007, 01:04 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Mar 28 2007, 09:13 AM)
>
> Truth has been a scarce commodity in most of all that has come from that camp, even from their pastor, who should be a boulder of truth to his flock. This is why I plead with them to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all the other things shall be added in the wake of these troubles.

it has been stated in here that Danny's truck was seen parked many times in front of Brenda's place??

was her husband Tim there with Brenda at the same time??

Posted by: Rosyroi Mar 28 2007, 01:29 PM

> QUOTE(roxe @ Mar 28 2007, 12:04 PM)
>
> it has been stated in here that Danny's truck was seen parked many times in front of Brenda's place??
>
> was her husband Tim there with Brenda at the same time??

and her child(ren)?

Posted by: Noahswife Mar 28 2007, 01:47 PM

> QUOTE(roxe @ Mar 28 2007, 03:04 PM)

> it has been stated in here that Danny's truck was seen parked many times in front of Brenda's place??
>
> was her husband Tim there with Brenda at the same time??

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ Mar 28 2007, 03:29 PM)
>
> and her child(ren)?

TVsnack.

Posted by: watchbird Mar 28 2007, 04:29 PM

> QUOTE(roxe @ Mar 28 2007, 02:04 PM)
>
> it has been stated in here that Danny's truck was seen parked many times in front of Brenda's place??
>
> was her husband Tim there with Brenda at the same time??

believe if you will search BSDA pages you will find the answer to the question of where Brenda lived (and ives) with her husband, and where he was in relation to where she was when she was at 3abn. (And you'll lso probably find a few other interesting story pieces here and there.)

Posted by: Jnana15 Mar 28 2007, 04:30 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Mar 28 2007, 02:47 PM)
>
> TVsnack.

ny veggie skimp or wings left DrRe? TVsnack.

Posted by: mozart Mar 29 2007, 08:04 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Mar 28 2007, 06:14 AM)
>
> As you can see it was Danny Shelton who sent me this letter from Brenda. I was wondering why? Was there a special reason why Danny needed this verification?
>
> -----Original Message-----
> From: Danny Shelton [mailto:danshelton@]
> Sent: 9. febrúar 2005 19:10
> To: Johann Thorvaldsson
> Subject: FW: Letter from BRENDA WALSH
> Danny Shelton
> danshelton@**
> Why Wait? Move to EarthLink.
> > [Original Message]
> > From: Brenda Walsh <brendawalsh@**>
> > To: Linda Shelton <***>
> > Cc: Nick Miller <nmiller@>; Walt Thompson
> <walttmd@>; Danny Shelton <danshelton@***>
> > Date: 2/9/2005 11:57:28 AM
> > Subject: Letter from BRENDA WALSH
> >
> February 9, 2005
> Dear Linda,
>
> I am writing to you because I would like you to hear the truth about some misconceptions you may have regarding my marriage to Tim. I received a call from someone who spoke with you personally, and they said that you specifically told them that Tim and I are divorced and that Danny and I were having an affair.
>
> Here is the truth:
>
> 1. Tim and I are happily married and we are definitely NOT divorced nor are we planning a divorce. We have a loving Christ centered home and we love each other very much. We believe that God brought us together and we plan to be together till death do us part or until Jesus comes....whichever come first.
>
> 2. Your ex-husband, Danny Shelton and I have never had an affair nor are we thinking about having an affair, not in the past, present or future! I would be willing to swear in a court of law, that I have NOT had an affair with Danny or anyone else. The only person Danny has ever talked about loving was you, and I don't believe that he has had an affair with anyone! I believe he was faithful to you the entire time you were married, both in a physical and spiritual sense.
>
> 3. As you know, Danny and I have known each other all our lives and he is like a brother to me. My mom and dad think of him as one of their sons. The ONLY man that I have romantic feelings for is my husband Tim.
> I hope this sets the record straight. Now that you know the truth, I would appreciate it if you would refrain from spreading lies and rumors. Linda I love you very much and I cherish many warm and happy memories of our times spent together. We once shared a special friendship and it hurts me to think that you could even possibly think that I would be involved with your husband! Nothing could be farther from the truth! Someday I hope you will realize that I am not your enemy. I wish you only the best and I pray that someday soon when Jesus comes in the clouds of glory, that we will be neighbors together in heaven.
>
> May God bless you,
>
> Your sister in Christ,

> Brenda

ohann, Isn't it possible that DS fabricated this letter? or possibly instructed brenda to write it? somehow it ust does't sound like the way brenda would phrase things.

Posted by: Rosyroi Mar 29 2007, 08:21 PM

Was wondering if Danny had a hand in it also... (history of Danny tactics)

Posted by: lurker Mar 29 2007, 08:29 PM

Never mind the hours Danny spent with Brenda, the main thing is did Brenda talk to Danny for more than 10 minutes. How many minutes did Brenda talk to Danny? And since it bothered Danny's spouse that Brenda was talking to Danny just as Nathan's doctor talking to Linda bothered Linda's spouse, was Danny willing to stop talking to Brenda? Why should we believe Brenda's claim that she had no romantic feelings for Danny and that he was like a brother to her but we are not supposed to believe Linda's claim that she had no romantic feelings for the doctor and that he was a friend? And doesn't that kind of thing, talking, inevitably turn into a physical relationship as the counellors were supposed to have said?

Did they commit spiritual adultry? We all know that TALKING is a bad thing. Was their talking brought up at a board meeting? Did Walt write a letter to them about their talking?

Posted by: Noahswife Mar 29 2007, 11:43 PM

> QUOTE(lurker @ Mar 29 2007, 10:29 PM) ☐
>
> Never mind the hours Danny spent with Brenda, the main thing is did Brenda talk to Danny for more than 10 minutes. How many minutes did Brenda talk to Danny? And since it bothered Danny's spouse that Brenda was talking to Danny just as Nathan's doctor talking to Linda bothered Linda's spouse, was Danny willing to stop talking to Brenda? Why should we believe Brenda's claim that she had no romantic feelings for Danny and that he was like a brother to her but we are not supposed to believe Linda's claim that she had no romantic feelings for the doctor and that he was a friend? And doesn't that kind of thing, talking, inevitably turn into a physical relationship as the counellors were supposed to have said?
>
> Did they commit spiritual adultry? We all know that TALKING is a bad thing. Was their talking brought up at a board meeting? Did Walt write a letter to them about their talking?

Posted by: Johann Mar 30 2007, 03:57 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 30 2007, 04:04 AM) ☐
>
> Johann, Isn't it possible that DS fabricated this letter? or possibly instructed brenda to write it? somehow it just does't sound like the way brenda would phrase things.

It appeared to me that Brenda was fabricating quite a few things for Danny in connection with this whole affair. I know that Danny made Linda sign some documents that he had dictated and were sent to me to give a false impression of what was going on. One of these documents had to do with Spiritual Adultery.

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ Mar 30 2007, 04:21 AM)
>
> Was wondering if Danny had a hand in it also... (history of Danny tactics)

Posted by: Clay Mar 30 2007, 09:22 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ Mar 29 2007, 09:29 PM)
>
> Never mind the hours Danny spent with Brenda, the main thing is did Brenda talk to Danny for more than 10 minutes. How many minutes did Brenda talk to Danny? And since it bothered Danny's spouse that Brenda was talking to Danny just as Nathan's doctor talking to Linda bothered Linda's spouse, was Danny willing to stop talking to Brenda? Why should we believe Brenda's claim that she had no romantic feelings for Danny and that he was like a brother to her but we are not supposed to believe Linda's claim that she had no romantic feelings for the doctor and that he was a friend? And doesn't that kind of thing, talking, inevitably turn into a physical relationship as the counellors were supposed to have said?
>
> Did they commit spiritual adultry? We all know that TALKING is a bad thing. Was their talking brought up at a board meeting? Did Walt write a letter to them about their talking?

say that again.....

Posted by: lurker Mar 30 2007, 09:52 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Mar 30 2007, 09:22 AM)
>
> say that again.....

I don't think I can do it again. But Yanno..... To sum it up, what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

Posted by: Aletheia Mar 30 2007, 10:35 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Mar 28 2007, 12:13 PM)
>
> Truth has been a scarce commodity in most of all that has come from that camp, even from their pastor, who should be a boulder of truth to his flock. This is why I plead with them to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all the other things shall be added in the wake of these troubles.

She asked you: " How do you feel about Brenda's statement? Is she telling the truth?"

IOW: Are you trying to present to this forum that Danny Shelton and Brenda Walsh had an affair?

You constantly insinuate things and then when asked about it, you can't just come right out and answer the question, but always end up insinuating something else, or accusing someone else , or even the one who asked you the question, instead. (in this case it's the Pastor)What is up with you? "cogito eggo sum" I think therfore I am a waffle?

May I suggest to you that the reason the e-mail you quoted was sent to you was so that you could do the decent thing and talk to Linda and stop helping her to spread rumors and false accusations?

Obviously it did no good, here you still are doing the same.

Didn't the rumor that Brandi moved to Thompsonville immediatly following the divorce originate with you also?

Posted by: awesumtenor Mar 30 2007, 10:58 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Mar 30 2007, 12:35 PM) ☐
>
> She asked you: " How do you feel about Brenda's statement? Is she telling the truth?"
>
> IOW: Are you trying to present to this forum that Danny Shelton and Brenda Walsh had an affair?
>
> You constantly insinuate things and then when asked about it, you can't just come right out and answer the question, but always end up insinuating something else, or accusing someone else , or even the one who asked you the question, instead. (in this case it's the Pastor)What is up with you? "cogito eggo sum" I think therfore I am a waffle?
>
> May I suggest to you that the reason the e-mail you quoted was sent to you was so that you could do the decent thing and talk to Linda and stop helping her to spread rumors and false accusations?
>
> Obviously it did no good, here you still are doing the same.
>
> Didn't the rumor that Brandi moved to Thompsonville immediatly following the divorce originate with you also?

And when, exactly, is your camp going to play by those very same rules? insinuation and innuendo are often all you present; when asked for proof you say "Oh, we have proof..." but it never seems to actually come out and at the end of the day, all that is holding up the claims made is along the lines of "Brutus said Caesar was ambitious and Brutus is an honorable man..." Mebbe you should have paid more attention in English Lit class when Antony's oration at Caesar's funeral was discussed; there be a lesson in it for you... if you have ears to hear...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: simplysaved Mar 30 2007, 11:06 AM

> QUOTE(roxe @ Mar 28 2007, 12:29 AM) ☐
>
> i've been wondering if perhaps brenda wanted danny for herself... but i don't know truthfully... i'm glad > you asked... i'd like to know also...

Posted by: Johann Mar 30 2007, 12:03 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Mar 30 2007, 06:35 PM)
>
> She asked you: " How do you feel about Brenda's statement? Is she telling the truth?"

No!

> QUOTE
>
> Didn't the rumor that Brandi moved to Thompsonville immediatly following the divorce originate with you also?

No!

Posted by: Lee Mar 30 2007, 01:42 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Mar 30 2007, 11:58 AM)
>
> And when, exactly, is your camp going to play by those very same rules? insinuation and innuendo are often all you present; when asked for proof you say "Oh, we have proof..." but it never seems to actually come out and at the end of the day, all that is holding up the claims made is along the lines of "Brutus said Caesar was ambitious and Brutus is an honorable man..." Mebbe you should have paid more attention in English Lit class when Antony's oration at Caesar's funeral was discussed; there be a lesson in it for you... if you have ears to hear...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Mr. Josey. Please be patient. All the documentation will come out in Court. There is proof. You will just have to take my word for it. Why would Bystander make something like this up anyway...actually why would I even be on this forum except to present the truth. I have no agenda like so many others here.

Let this be a lesson for yourself. But you are deaf so I guess you can take your own advice.

Posted by: mozart Mar 30 2007, 02:09 PM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 30 2007, 01:42 PM)
>
> Mr. Josey. Please be patient. All the documentation will come out in Court. There is proof. You will just have to take my word for it. Why would Bystander make something like this up anyway...actually why would I even be on this forum except to present the truth. I have no agenda like so many others here.

> Let this be a lesson for yourself. But you are deaf so I guess you can take your own advice.

mm..........truth as in..........O.J. told the truth?
lo you really think the courts are going to cover "he said, she said" truth about how long someone talked on he phone to someone else?
nd do you think the courts are going to hear any info obtained through ILLEGAL wiretaps?
f there were this alleged "proof", don't you think the parties holding this "truth" would have shared it before ow so as to clear themselves from all these accusations and in so doing protect the 3abn ministry they claim o love and be completely devoted to?
lo you really think they are going through all this "persecution" because they care for other peoples feelings o much?
nd, just curious because i'm rather new here, why would we take your word for it?
ave you seen this alleged "proof" with your own eyes?
f so, why are you privileged to do so?
'd appreciate it if you would give simple, short, honest answers to each question. as i am sincere in asking hem, i pray you will be sincere in answering them. ty in advance for your time in doing this.

Posted by: sister Mar 30 2007, 02:17 PM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 30 2007, 02:42 PM) ☐
>
> Mr. Josey. Please be patient. All the documentation will come out in Court. There is proof. You will just have to take my word for it. Why would Bystander make something like this up anyway...actually why would I even be on this forum except to present the truth. I have no agenda like so many others here.
>
> Let this be a lesson for yourself. But you are deaf so I guess you can take your own advice.

.ee have you ever considered a career as a standup comedian? Why would anyone consider your or ystanders word as having any validity? Why would Bystander make something like this up? You are here to resent the truth? You have no agenda? ☒ ☒ ☒ Now that was a good joke! ☒ ☒

☒ rofl

Posted by: Johann Mar 30 2007, 02:42 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Mar 30 2007, 06:35 PM) ☐
>
> (in this case it's the Pastor)

ou got this mixed up too, but I'm used to that. Soon after Danny and Brenda mixed up this poisonous ocktail, pastor John Lomacang called Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. I did not hear that conversation, but when the hree of us, Lomacang, Abrahamen, and I, were standing outside the 3ABN church after the Thursday night neeting, that phone conversation was brought up. I discovered Dr. AA was upset with Lomacang. I heard him all the pastor a liar. Why? Because in that phone conversation JL had asked AA if he thought Linda was in ove with him. AA said no, because there never was any such relationship between them, he added.

n spite of this the spiritual leader of the 3ABN church made statements that the Norwegian doctor had dmitted to him, that even though he knew that Linda was in love with him, he had talked to her. And this ecame then one of the main accusations against AA.

Just before I went to the meeting at West Frankfort on Friday, AA asked me to remind John Lomacang of what he had told him the evening before. I did, but in spite of that John Lomacang later on in that meeting repeated that Dr. Arild Abrahamsen had admitted that he was aware of that Linda was in love with him, and in spite of that he had talked to her. It seemed like his conscience was bothering him for a while, making such a false statement, yet he did it.

And when the spiritual leader of that church can make such spins and utter such falsehoods, that seems to give the rest of you license to do exactly the same.

> QUOTE
>
> May I suggest to you that the reason the e-mail you quoted was sent to you was so that you could do the decent thing and talk to Linda and stop helping her to spread rumors and false accusations?

No, you have absolutely no permission to come with such a suggestion, because I have never spread any false rumors not false accusations. I was telling the truth, and nothing but the truth. The only reason that e-mail was sent is because someone was scared his falsehood would be revealed. If he had been telling the truth he had never needed to take such measurements.

> QUOTE
>
> Obviously it did no good, here you still are doing the same.

I challenge you to tell me one thing I have said that is not true. It is not my fault you are trying to make spins of every thing I say.

Posted by: Pickle Mar 30 2007, 04:00 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 30 2007, 02:09 PM)
>
> if there were this alleged "proof", don't you think the parties holding this "truth" would have shared it before now so as to clear themselves from all these accusations and in so doing protect the 3abn ministry they claim to love and be completely devoted to?

In my opinion, people that claim that they have nothing to hide and that then refuse to reveal the "proof" and choose to instead watch the ministry that they are supposed to be running go down into the flames of scandal, those kind of people shouldn't be running such important ministries.

And if I were a board member, I think I'd have a Christian duty to try to facilitate some changes.

Posted by: Clay Mar 30 2007, 05:49 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 30 2007, 05:00 PM)
>
> In my opinion, people that claim that they have nothing to hide and that then refuse to reveal the "proof" and choose to instead watch the ministry that they are supposed to be running go down into the flames of scandal, those kind of people shouldn't be running such important ministries.
>
> And if I were a board member, I think I'd have a Christian duty to try to facilitate some changes.

the board at 3abn doesn't function like that....and realistic is it for part-time people to really be interested in what Danny Shelton is doing.... its his show, he is running it so I don't expect the board to do anything......

Posted by: Snoopy Mar 31 2007, 08:09 PM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 30 2007, 02:42 PM)
>
> Mr. Josey. Please be patient. All the documentation will come out in Court. There is proof. You will just have to take my word for it. Why would Bystander make something like this up anyway...actually why would I even be on this forum except to present the truth. I have no agenda like so many others here.
>
> Let this be a lesson for yourself. But you are deaf so I guess you can take your own advice.

☒ kidd

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 30 2007, 05:00 PM)
>
> In my opinion, people that claim that they have nothing to hide and that then refuse to reveal the "proof" and choose to instead watch the ministry that they are supposed to be running go down into the flames of scandal, those kind of people shouldn't be running such important ministries.
>
> And if I were a board member, I think I'd have a Christian duty to try to facilitate some changes.

....and then there is the legal duty....

Is it just me, or does anyone else see the potential for some serious 3ABN board member individual liability here???

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Mar 31 2007, 08:20 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Mar 31 2007, 07:09 PM)
>
> ☒ kidd
>
> ....and then there is the legal duty....
> Is it just me, or does anyone else see the potential for some serious 3ABN board member individual liability here???

It is a good thing that the person who is footing the bill for these legal proceedings has deep pockets for he/she may be shelling out quite a bit more in fees, fines and judgements resulting from these very things.

Posted by: Snoopy Mar 31 2007, 08:56 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Mar 31 2007, 09:20 PM) ☐
>
> It is a good thing that the person who is footing the bill for these legal proceedings has deep pockets for he/she may be shelling out quite a bit more in fees, fines and judgements resulting from these very things.

I wonder if Mr. Deep Pockets plans to take on the defense of each individual board member if they are found to have breached their fiduciary duties? I'm sure Lee or Bystander or WWJD knows...

Posted by: sonshineonme Mar 31 2007, 08:59 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Mar 31 2007, 07:56 PM) ☐
>
> I wonder if Mr. Deep Pockets plans to take on the defense of each individual board member if they are found to have breached their fiduciary duties? I'm sure Lee or Bystander or WWJD knows...

Oh, don't forget "aletheia" either...she/he knows a lot!

Posted by: Noahswife Mar 31 2007, 09:51 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ Mar 31 2007, 09:56 PM) ☐
>
> I wonder if Mr. Deep Pockets plans to take on the defense of each individual board member if they are found to have breached their fiduciary duties? I'm sure Lee or Bystander or WWJD knows...

Snoopy, my first question would be "do they have liability insurance?" I know of few people who are willing to sit on a Board of Directors without having that type of insurance provided for them. If that has not been done it would only support the impression I have of how this board was set up and how it functions contrary to how many boards are run.

Posted by: Snoopy Mar 31 2007, 10:23 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Mar 31 2007, 09:59 PM) ☐
>
> Oh, don't forget "aletheia" either...she/he knows a lot!

Good point!!! VERY good point!!!

Although, tonight I might do better to forget her/him.........

Posted by: princessdi Mar 31 2007, 10:27 PM

Ok Snoopy, we know Aletheia claims to be female. We have to take her word for it an address her according to her preference..........

Posted by: Snoopy Mar 31 2007, 10:29 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Mar 31 2007, 10:51 PM)
>
> Snoopy, my first question would be "do they have liability insurance?" I know of few people who are willing to sit on a Board of Directors without having that type of insurance provided for them. If that has not been done it would only support the impression I have of how this board was set up and how it functions contrary to how many boards are run.

Yes, I agree. That is a very good question. And, I hope for their sakes they do have D&O insurance, because it may be tough to get now...

And from what I've read I also have an opinion on the establishment and functionality of the 3ABN board, but that may be irrelevant when it comes to the question of breach of fiduciary responsibilities...

Posted by: awesumtenor Mar 31 2007, 11:00 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Mar 31 2007, 10:59 PM)
>
> Oh, don't forget "aletheia" either...she/he knows a lot!

only what she's been told by others... she, by her own admission, is "not a witness"...so at best one could say she's heard alot.

In His service,
Mr. J

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 30 2007, 03:42 PM)
>
> Mr. Josey. Please be patient. All the documentation will come out in Court.

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 14 2007, 01:49 PM)

> 3ABN has no desire to take this to court.

hich is the truth and which is the lie, Lee?

n His service,
r. J

Posted by: mozart Mar 31 2007, 11:04 PM

Lee? still patiently waiting for your answers. ty

Posted by: LadyTenor Mar 31 2007, 11:06 PM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 30 2007, 02:42 PM) ☐
>
> Mr. Josey. Please be patient. All the documentation will come out in Court. There is proof. You will just have to take my word for it. Why would Bystander make something like this up anyway...actually why would I even be on this forum except to present the truth. I have no agenda like so many others here.
>
> Let this be a lesson for yourself. But you are deaf so I guess you can take your own advice.

☒ ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl ☒

Posted by: Johann Mar 31 2007, 11:22 PM

> QUOTE(LadyTenor @ Apr 1 2007, 07:06 AM) ☐
>
> ☒ ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl ☒

hat a relief. ☐

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Apr 1 2007, 12:20 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Apr 1 2007, 01:00 AM) ☐
>
> only what she's been told by others... she, by her own admission, is "not a witness"...so at best one could say she's heard alot.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J
> Which is the truth and which is the lie, Lee?

> In His service,
> Mr. J

Such a simple question MrJ! The answer is both. The truth, as Linda has demanded, will be revealed in court. This is the way she has wanted it because she believed that 3ABN would always do her bidding and hide the ruth of the situation. But, she played that hand too long and it will come back to haunt her - and you because you have chosen to support her in this effort to destroy 3ABN. You may have your personal reasons, but she has used you as she has many others to do her bidding and attempt to disparage Danny and 3ABN beyond repair.

Linda had the opportunity to move forward and develop a ministry that would bring others to Christ. She, on he other hand, decided to focus her energies on destroying 3ABN and using as many people as she could in he process in an effort to protect herself from having to bear any burden in this situation what so ever. She wants to be seen as the victim, responsibility free, she wants to "win" and that is all she is interested in.

You can hide behind Linda's lies and toss your poison arrows or you can dig into the facts (make your own calls) and discover for yourself where the truth exists. In the end, you are going to find that you owe ndividuals an apology and others you will demand an explanation from . . . at that point I will ask you which s which!

FHB

Posted by: Observer Apr 1 2007, 04:23 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Mar 31 2007, 08:51 PM)
>
> Snoopy, my first question would be "do they have liability insurance?" I know of few people who are willing to sit on a Board of Directors without having that type of insurance provided for them. If that has not been done it would only support the impression I have of how this board was set up and how it functions contrary to how many boards are run.

Re: D & O insurance:

cannot imagine them not haveing such insurance. However, any modern policy will contain a list of exceptions. That is to say, it will contain a list of situations in which they will not defend the ones who hold he pollicies. One common exception today might be that they will not defend against charges of discrimination. Another exception might be that they would not defend against a charge of sexual assualt. It may be assumed that there would also be a list of more exceptions.

t may very well be that when 3-ABN first purchased the policy, it contained no exceptions. If that is true, it is ikely that over the years, as the policy has been renewed, the insurance company has added the exceptions.

How do I know: I am a corporate officer of a non-profit corporation, and a member of its Board. I know. Someone has threatened to sue us. When we notified our insurance carrier, it promptly sent us a letter notifying us of its list of situations in which it would not defend. Well, we believe that any lawsuit would be groundless. As it has not been filed, we cannot say that our insurance company would not defend us. But, all of us now have a very clear picture of the limitations of D & O insurance. Previously, we did not have that clairty.

Posted by: Fran Apr 1 2007, 05:25 AM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Apr 1 2007, 01:20 AM)
>
> Such a simple question MrJ! The answer is both. The truth, as Linda has demanded, will be revealed in court. This is the way she has wanted it because she believed that 3ABN would always do her bidding and hide the truth of the situation. But, she played that hand too long and it will come back to haunt her - and you because you have chosen to support her in this effort to destroy 3ABN. You may have your personal reasons, but she has used you as she has many others to do her bidding and attempt to disparage Danny and 3ABN beyond repair.
>
> Linda had the opportunity to move forward and develop a ministry that would bring others to Christ. She, on the other hand, decided to focus her energies on destroying 3ABN and using as many people as she could in the process in an effort to protect herself from having to bear any burden in this situation what so ever. She wants to be seen as the victim, responsibility free, she wants to "win" and that is all she is interested in.
>
> You can hide behind Linda's lies and toss your poison arrows or you can dig into the facts (make your own calls) and discover for yourself where the truth exists. In the end, you are going to find that you owe individuals an apology and others you will demand an explanation from . . . at that point I will ask you which is which!
>
> - FHB

FHB

I cannot believe that Linda has so much POWER over Danny and 3ABN!

If she orchestrated this mess, I have entirely underestimated her power! She is tiny and I have never heard her yell. I am sure she has. We all yell occasionally. However, I am a little confused!

If she is more powerful than Danny, why did she leave 3ABN instead of Danny? Why didn't she stay at 3ABN and marry her son's doctor? She could have arranged it so she was in charge of all those millions of dollars!

I guess she has just recently gained all this power. She has become so powerful that Danny is going to sue everyone he can that he believes is in cahoots with Linda!

If Linda can single handedly over throw 3ABN, maybe we have been right and 3ABN is the weak one in more areas than many have thought.

It seems that Danny cannot overpower Linda, so he has hired people to protect him from Linda. Fourteen lawyers no less!

Now, let me see;

1. Danny;
2. Brandy;
3. Melody;
4. Greg;
5. Kenneth Shelton;
6. Mrs Kenneth Shelton;
7. Ronnie Shelton; (sp)
8. Mrs. Ronnie Shelton;
9. Mollie;
10. Hal;
11. John Lomacang;
12. Mrs Lomacang;
13. Shelley;
14. DJ (or is it JD);
15. Walt Thompson;

16. The remaining Board Members; (# of loyals, unknown)
18. 17. The BIG DONOR that foots the bill;
19. Maybe the Conference President;
20. Lawyer #1;
21. Lawyer #2;
22. Lawyer #3;
23. Lawyer #4;
24. Lawyer #5;
25. Lawyer #6;
26. Lawyer #7;
27. Lawyer #8;
28. Lawyer #9;
29. Lawyer #10
30. Lawyer #11;
31. Lawyer #12;
32. Lawyer #13;
33. Lawyer #14;
34. Mr Riva (sp?);
35. Larry Ewing (sp?);
36. Tommy Shelton;
37. Carol Shelton;
38. Tammy Shelton-Chance;
39. Carol Shelton;

I am sure I have not listed every one. I am sure Tommy's kids could be added to that list. Now who does Linda have?

1. Mr. Joy; (Not a first hand witness)
2. Mr. Pickle; (Not a first hand witness)
3. Mr. Matthews; (Not a first hand witness)
4. Johann Thorvaldson (sp?);
5. Nathan Moore;
6. Linda's daughter;
7. Nathan Doctor;
8. Barbara Kerr
9. Sister;
10. Sonshineonme;
11. Beartrap;
12. Hoty;
13. Derrell Mundall;
14. Panama Pete;
15. and a few others

I never expected this for sure! Surely God is on her side. Why would it take so many to back Danny when he has all the evidence and backers. He has no want for money.

Linda has no ubiquitous money; no law firm with 14 lawyers; she only has Danny's words to defend herself. If 3ABN is that scared of Linda, I guess I do not have the information she has.

I have really underestimated her power. This is one battle that will be very lopsided. Jesus and Linda against the Great Army of men! This will be written in history pages since this evidence will be revealed to the world.

I hope this happens soon so everyone will know for sure what is truth and what is a lie!

Maybe you are right FHB, it looks like the balance of the scales of justice are heavy on Danny's side with all that bought power. Linda has her testimony and the power of God. If Danny is so afraid of her, maybe he knows something we don't.

Whew! It is good we don't judge books by their covers. Right? Are you one of Danny's independent lawyers?

Posted by: Pickle Apr 1 2007, 10:12 AM

Lee and FHB,

To the average reader it simply sounds completely idiotic and the height of stupidity to refuse to answer simple questions and provide proof as requested until doing so in court after suing the ones answering questions.

I can think of only one motive for such unreasonable, unchristian, and irresponsible stubbornness, other than deceptive bluffing: Get the judge to seal all records permanently, and/or get the parties to agree to settle with a stipulation that all details of the settlement and the evidence/proof be forever buried in silence.

Now if perchance that is part of the strategy, it would probably be better not to sue me.

But then again, I haven't even gotten a cease and desist letter yet. Not one. And I have yet to be threatened at all by anyone. While Danny told a good friend of mine I was going to be sued, he's never told me that, and neither has any named, official representative of 3ABN.

Posted by: LadyTenor Apr 1 2007, 11:49 AM

Exactly why I find all this talk of court..... ☒ ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl ☒

Posted by: mozart Apr 1 2007, 12:26 PM

OR MAYBE.....

Such a simple question FHB! The answer is both. The truth, as Danny has demanded, will be revealed in court. This is the way he has wanted it because he believed that 3ABN would always do his bidding and hide the truth of the situation. But, he has played that hand too long and it will come back to haunt him - and you because you have chosen to support him in his effort to destroy 3ABN instead of step aside. You may have your personal reasons, but he has used you as he has many others to do his bidding and attempt to disparage Linda and her friends & supporters.

Danny had the opportunity to move forward and develop a ministry that would bring others to Christ. He, on the other hand, decided to focus his energies on destroying Linda and using as many people as he could in the process in an effort to protect himself from having to bear any burden in this situation what-so-ever. He wants to be seen as the victim, responsibility free, he wants to "win" and not suffer any of the consequences of his actions and that is all he is interested in. Absolutely all.

You can hide behind Danny's lies and toss your poison arrows or you can dig into the facts (make your own calls) and discover for yourself where the truth exists. In the end, you are going to find that you owe individuals an apology and others you will demand an explanation from . . . at that point I will ask you which is which!

Posted by: Panama_Pete Apr 1 2007, 01:11 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Apr 1 2007, 01:20 AM)
>
> Linda had the opportunity to move forward and develop a ministry that would bring others to Christ.
> - FHB

Linda Shelton still does have the opportunity to move forward with a ministry. And when she does, Mr. Danny and Ms. Brandy Shelton won't be part of it.

I may be wrong, but as one of her first subjects, Linda Shelton may choose to speak of end-time events, such as earthquakes in diverse places.

For instance, Fallible, did you know there was an earthquake in Fayetteville, Arkansas? Now isn't that an unusual place for an earthquake: Fayetteville? http://quake.ualr.edu/public/feb1962.htm Earthquakes are happening more and more all over the place.

Where were you on February 3, 1962 - the date of the Fayetteville earthquake - Fallible? Were you able to feel that earthquake at all?

Eastern earthquakes, like the ones originating along the New Madrid fault line cover more territory than western earthquakes, such as the one that destroyed San Francisco, California. Isn't that just amazing, Fallible? Linda Shelton may have an entire sermon on this fascinating subject, Fallible. My guess it that Walt Thompson in Wisconsin -- and any other Thompsons in Wisconsin -- will really enjoy it.

Pete

Posted by: awesumtenor Apr 2 2007, 07:01 AM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Apr 1 2007, 02:20 AM) ☐
>
> Such a simple question MrJ!

Then let Lee address her own statements... or have you hired on to be her shill as well?

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: seraph|m Apr 2 2007, 05:23 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ Apr 1 2007, 06:25 AM) ☐
>
> FHB
>
> I cannot believe that Linda has so much POWER over Danny and 3ABN!
>
> If she orchestrated this mess, I have entirely underestimated her power! She is tiny and I have never heard her yell. I am sure she has. We all yell occasionally. However, I am a little confused!
>
> If she is more powerful than Danny, why did she leave 3ABN instead of Danny? Why didn't she stay at 3ABN and marry her son's doctor? She could have arranged it so she was in charge of all those millions of dollars!
>
> I guess she has just recently gained all this power. She has become so powerful that Danny is going to sue everyone he can that he believes is in cahoots with Linda!
>
> If Linda can single handedly over throw 3ABN, maybe we have been right and 3ABN is the weak one in more areas than many have thought.

It seems that Danny cannot overpower Linda, so he has hired people to protect him from Linda. Fourteen lawyers no less!

Now, let me see;

1. Danny;
2. Brandy;
3. Melody;
4. Greg;
5. Kenneth Shelton;
6. Mrs Kenneth Shelton;
7. Ronnie Shelton; (sp)
8. Mrs. Ronnie Shelton;
9. Mollie;
10. Hal;
11. John Lomacang;
12. Mrs Lomacang;
13. Shelley;
14. DJ (or is it JD);
15. Walt Thompson;
16. The remaining Board Members; (# of loyals, unknown)
18. 17. The BIG DONOR that foots the bill;
19. Maybe the Conference President;
20. Lawyer #1;
21. Lawyer #2;
22. Lawyer #3;
23. Lawyer #4;
24. Lawyer #5;
25. Lawyer #6;
26. Lawyer #7;
27. Lawyer #8;
28. Lawyer #9;
29. Lawyer #10
30. Lawyer #11;
31. Lawyer #12;
32. Lawyer #13;
33. Lawyer #14;
34. Mr Riva (sp?);
35. Larry Ewing (sp?);
36. Tommy Shelton;
37. Carol Shelton;
38. Tammy Shelton-Chance;
39. Carol Shelton;

I am sure I have not listed every one. I am sure Tommy's kids could be added to that list. Now who does Linda have?

1. Mr. Joy; (Not a first hand witness)
2. Mr. Pickle; (Not a first hand witness)
3. Mr. Matthews; (Not a first hand witness)
4. Johann Thorvaldson (sp?);
5. Nathan Moore;
6. Linda's daughter;
7. Nathan Doctor;
8. Barbara Kerr
9. Sister;
10. Sonshineonme;
11. Beartrap;
12. Hoty;
13. Derrell Mundall;
14. Panama Pete;
15. and a few others

> I never expected this for sure! Surely God is on her side. Why would it take so many to back Danny when he has all the evidence and backers. He has no want for money.
>
> Linda has no ubiquitous money; no law firm with 14 lawyers; she only has Danny's words to defend herself. If 3ABN is that scared of Linda, I guess I do not have the information she has.
>
> I have really underestimated her power. This is one battle that will be very lopsided. Jesus and Linda against the Great Army of men! This will be written in history pages since this evidence will be revealed to the world.
>
> I hope this happens soon so everyone will know for sure what is truth and what is a lie!
>
> Maybe you are right FHB, it looks like the balance of the scales of justice are heavy on Danny's side with all that bought power. Linda has her testimony and the power of God. If Danny is so afraid of her, maybe he knows something we don't.
>
> Whew! It is good we don't judge books by their covers. Right? Are you one of Danny's independent lawyers?

Oh my!!!

rofl

Oook the tears, just won't stop flowing

Posted by: princessdi Apr 2 2007, 05:46 PM

She just straight broke it down, didn't she? But it does bring up a good question. If Dannys has all these people around him to protect him and his interests, why is he worried about Linda and anything she might have to say?

Posted by: seraph|m Apr 2 2007, 06:09 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Apr 2 2007, 06:46 PM)
>
> She just straight broke it down, didn't she? But it does bring up a good question. If Dannys has all these people around him to protect him and his interests, why is he worried about Linda and anything she might have to say?

Di, do you recall the theme song for the "Ever Increasing Faith" ministries of Frederick K. Prise? That them ong is the first thing that came to mind after reading your post... Evidence, evidence...

Posted by: Johann Apr 3 2007, 01:48 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Apr 3 2007, 01:46 AM)
>
> She just straight broke it down, didn't she? But it does bring up a good question. If Dannys has all these people around him to protect him and his interests, why is he worried about Linda and anything she might > have to say?

Reminds you of the final battle at the end of the Millennium. Then Satan still thinks he may be able to defy God with all the multitudes behind him. We are still in this sinful world where people generally think money and human support is mightier than God Himself.

Posted by: Noahswife Apr 3 2007, 07:42 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Apr 3 2007, 03:48 AM)
>
> Reminds you of the final battle at the end of the Millennium. Then Satan still thinks he may be able to defy God with all the multitudes behind him. We are still in this sinful world where people generally think money and human support is mightier than God Himself.

Posted by: Pickle Apr 8 2007, 08:59 AM

Since anyone out there in the world could access it until Thursday or so, I guess it's fine to talk about it here.

Posted by: calvin Apr 8 2007, 10:42 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Apr 8 2007, 08:59 AM)
>
> Since anyone out there in the world could access it until Thursday or so, I guess it's fine to talk about it here.

NO IT IS NOT ALRIGHT. Just because you can find information on the net or have knowledge by any other means of a BSDA member's identity or information that could lead to their identity does not make it right to post it here. It is still in violation of my privacy policy....and you knew that because I have warned you. You have been the most blatant violator of the policy than any member here with your constant attempt to expose FHB. You have been suspended for 14 days. If you come back and do it again, the suspension will be permanent.

Posted by: Johann Apr 17 2007, 04:08 AM

Back to the topic: What Is Happening With Linda?

Is there again stillness before a new storm? Many are holding their breath as they have discovered Linda has a new lawyer who shows much more interest and concern than the previous one she had. I have a good notion he is also considering all that Bystander, WWJD, Lee, and not the least Aletheia and some others have exposed on this board. I wonder if this realization is keeping them very quiet these days?

So many futile attempt at hiding the truth brings fear and trembling. Let's keep them in our prayers.

Posted by: calvin Apr 17 2007, 03:29 PM

Bystander and WWJD are no longer here.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Apr 17 2007, 06:36 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Apr 17 2007, 02:29 PM)
>
> Bystander and WWJD are no longer here.

Some of us noticed a while back. Sure has been quiet without them.

Is the reason for their disappearance a secret, Boss?

Posted by: calvin Apr 17 2007, 08:06 PM

No I don't care to discuss it. You folks are not privilege to the emails and PMs that I receive and exchange that lead to some of the decisions I make, often along with the help of Clay and Di but not always.

If some gets banned the issue almost always has to do with (1) spamming; (2) serious and repeated breaches of forum rules; or (3) a major personality clash with a detrimental effect on other forum members.

Posted by: Rosyroi Apr 17 2007, 09:37 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Apr 17 2007, 02:29 PM)
>
> Bystander and WWJD are no longer here.

Thank you Thank you Thank you edited for content...lots to say but not necessary.

Rosyroi
@}---;---;-----

Posted by: mozart Apr 17 2007, 09:54 PM

I appreciate you taking dicipline calvin, sometimes it's nessessary and has nothing to do with what side you are on. I appreciate your effort to always be unbiased. I don't think I could do that day after day. My hat is off to you even when I disagree with you.
I think we do need to have healthy debate even when it is strong and everyone, whatever their view should have a right to speak, but when they just spew venom and want to fight instead of debate, then they prevent the rest of us from making any progress in trying to find answers and resolutions or just to talk to one another about things that are heavy on our hearts. I hope that's why we are all here; to find resolution. I hope no one is here to hurt or destroy or cause another to stumble. If I ever cause anyone to stumble, I give you permission to "snatch me baldheaded" (as Morgan Freeman said in Driving Miss Daisy). Thanks for this forum Calvin and to all those who volunteer their time to keep it upright.

than

> QUOTE(calvin @ Apr 17 2007, 08:06 PM)
>
> No I don't care to discuss it. You folks are not privilege to the emails and PMs that I receive and exchange that lead to some of the decisions I make, often along with the help of Clay and Di but not always.
>
> If some gets banned the issue almost always has to do with (1) spamming; (2) serious and repeated breaches of forum rules; or (3) a major personality clash with a detrimental effect on other forum members.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Apr 18 2007, 12:58 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Apr 17 2007, 06:06 PM)
>
> No I don't care to discuss it. You folks are not privilege to the emails and PMs that I receive and exchange that lead to some of the decisions I make, often along with the help of Clay and Di but not always.
>
> If some gets banned the issue almost always has to do with (1) spamming; (2) serious and repeated breaches of forum rules; or (3) a major personality clash with a detrimental effect on other forum members.

Calvin,
Thanks. Nuff said.

Posted by: Brenda Apr 18 2007, 02:19 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Apr 19 2007, 04:58 AM)
>
> Calvin,
> Thanks. Nuff said.

As a general comment, Calvin, I appreciate your fairness and your standards on this board.

Posted by: Johann Apr 30 2007, 04:56 PM

What is happening with Linda?

On top of everything else she has not heard from her son, Nathan, since March 17,and she has been told that he has disappeared. This worried mother solicits our prayers. She is also wondering if there are any people of BSDA who are good at finding missing people?

Nathan Moore was last at Pass Christian, Mississippi, working for Pink Marine Construction.

Posted by: Fran Apr 30 2007, 08:41 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Apr 30 2007, 05:56 PM)
>
> What is happening with Linda?
>
> On top of everything else she has not heard from her son, Nathan, since March 17,and she has been told that he has disappeared. This worried mother solicits our prayers. She is also wondering if there are any people of BSDA who are good at finding missing people?
>
> Nathan Moore was last at Pass Christian, Mississippi, working for Pink Marine Construction.

My, My, isn't this strange! right before court with Linda! This looks bad doesn't it?

Is there such a thing as coincidence?

Posted by: Aunt B Apr 30 2007, 08:54 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Apr 30 2007, 05:56 PM)
>
> What is happening with Linda?
>
> On top of everything else she has not heard from her son, Nathan, since March 17,and she has been told that he has disappeared. This worried mother solicits our prayers. She is also wondering if there are any people of BSDA who are good at finding missing people?
>
> Nathan Moore was last at Pass Christian, Mississippi, working for Pink Marine Construction.

Thanks for letting us know this Johann. I will be praying for Linda. I know how it feels to worry about a son. I don't know how to find "missing people" but I know God does. Praying for Nathan too.

Aunt B

Posted by: Eirene Apr 30 2007, 10:11 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ Apr 30 2007, 08:41 PM)
>
> My, My, isn't this strange! right before court with Linda! This looks bad doesn't it?
>
> Is there such a thing as coincidence?

Right before court with Linda? How so? The court date was last week, more than a month past Nathan's alleged disapearance. Yet another insinuation Fran?

Also Di ask Nathan's age. He is 26 or soon will be....

Posted by: Rosyroi Apr 30 2007, 10:23 PM

When is Nathan's birthday?

Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi Apr 30 2007, 10:39 PM

Thanks Eirene for the info. I will be keeping him in my prayers.

Eirene, I am gong to assume you are not a mother, please correct me if I am worng, but if my child was missing for a monthe before going to court, I might be more than a bit distracted, and a lot worried. if someone wanted to keep Linda of"off balance" that would be a good way.

> QUOTE(Eirene @ Apr 30 2007, 09:11 PM)
>
> Right before court with Linda? How so? The court date was last week, more than a month past Nathan's alleged disapearance. Yet another insinuation Fran?
> Also Di ask Nathan's age. He is 26 or soon will be....

Posted by: Rosyroi Apr 30 2007, 10:47 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Apr 30 2007, 08:39 PM)
>
> Thanks Eirene for the info. I will be keeping him in my prayers.
>
> Eirene, I am gong to assume you are not a mother, please correct me if I am worng, but if my child was missing for a monthe before going to court, I might be more than a bit distracted, and a lot worried. if someone wanted to keep Linda of"off balance" that would be a good way.

How about climbing the walls? Pacing the floor? Making frantic phone calls?

Yep Yep that would be me alright!

Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi Apr 30 2007, 10:50 PM

Ok?!! Now if he had been missing for a da y or a week, that might have been one thing, but a whole month?

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ Apr 30 2007, 09:47 PM)
>
> How about climbing the walls? Pacing the floor? Making frantic phone calls?
>
> Yep Yep that would be me alright!

> Rosyroi

Posted by: beartrap Apr 30 2007, 11:09 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ Apr 30 2007, 09:47 PM)
>
> How about climbing the walls? Pacing the floor? Making frantic phone calls?
>
> Yep Yep that would be me alright!
>
> Rosyroi

es, Linda is pacing the floor and making frantic phone calls. She has been for weeks.

Vhether a person's child is 6 or 26, they are still a person's child and will be worried about by a parent or any erson who cares about and loves that person, or any human soul. Do you, Eirene? Are you concerned about athan? The disappearance of a person is nothing to be made light of due to age or anything else. This is a uman being created by God. A soul who God loves as much as he loves any other soul on this planet. Vhether he is 26 or 55, doing drugs or performing televangelism, he is equally important in God's eyes. If ark Finley, Danny Shelton, or Doug Bachelor disappeared for a month and no person could account for their vhereabouts, would that be reason for anyone to be worried? Even though they are over the age of 26? Of ourse it would! Is Nathan any less of a child of God than them?

Posted by: Fran Apr 30 2007, 11:22 PM

> QUOTE(beartrap @ May 1 2007, 12:09 AM)
>
> Yes, Linda is pacing the floor and making frantic phone calls. She has been for weeks.
>
> Whether a person's child is 6 or 26, they are still a person's child and will be worried about by a parent. The disappearance of a person is nothing to be made light of due to age or anything else. This is a human being created by God. A soul who God loves as much as he loves any other soul on this planet. Whether he is 26 or 55, doing drugs or performing televangelism, he is equally important in God's eyes. If Mark Finley, Danny Shelton, or Doug Bachelor disappeared for a month and no person could account for their whereabouts, would that be reason for anyone to be worried? Even though they are over the age of 26? Of course it would! Is Nathan any less of a child of God than them?

o he is not! Nathan is the apple of God's eye. There is no parent alive (I hope) that does not understand the ove for a child.

Ve are all God's children. Lord, please keep Nathan safe and bring him home safe to his mother. Soon Lord! lease do not let evil near him.

Posted by: mozart Apr 30 2007, 11:40 PM

a cold bitter heart is a wasteland. may God have mercy on you.

> QUOTE(Eirene @ Apr 30 2007, 10:11 PM)
>
> Right before court with Linda? How so? The court date was last week, more than a month past Nathan's alleged disapearance. Yet another insinuation Fran?
> Also Di ask Nathan's age. He is 26 or soon will be....

Posted by: Johann May 1 2007, 05:00 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 1 2007, 07:40 AM)
>
> a cold bitter heart is a wasteland. may God have mercy on you.

The most cruel thing is that this seems to be the real heart of people claiming to be mending broken hearts.

Posted by: Observer May 1 2007, 06:22 AM

> QUOTE(Fran @ Apr 30 2007, 08:41 PM)
>
> My, My, isn't this strange! right before court with Linda! This looks bad doesn't it?
>
> Is there such a thing as coincidence?

Nathan was a troubled person, due to addiction to drugs, as I understand it. I have relatives, some close, and others not so close, who have been troubled by their use of alcohol and/or illegal drugs. Their threatment has been mixed. Some have kicked their habbit, and some still struggle with it.

Speaking from that personal background, I can say that it would be quite reasonable to treat Nathan's disappearance as coincidence. Frankly, I doubt that there is any evidence to support any other conclusion. People dealing with such problems often simply disappear for a while.

Yes, such disapparances cause a lot of pain for those who love them, and worry about them. But, as a relative said to me the other day, in regard to a family member: Greg, I cannot live his life, I have got to let go. I am not responsible for the choices that he makes. Yes, that mother will worry. She does care.

So, also, Linda will care, and be concerned.

However, there is a factor in this that may be of interest: Let us wait and see how Danny Shelton and those who defend him respond to this. Will they either ignore, or respond with indifference? Or, will they respond in a manner that conveys genuine care for Nathan and concern for him and Linda?

They may see Linda and the rest of us an enemy. If so, the Bible says to love those you consider to be an enemy. Who anmong them will come public with a message of concern and caring for Nathan and Linda?

Posted by: caribbean sda May 1 2007, 06:58 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 1 2007, 07:00 AM)
>
> The most cruel thing is that this seems to be the real heart of people claiming to be mending broken hearts.

like the old caribbean folks say, "rest dem at de foot ah deh cross..."

"just leave them at the foot of the cross."

I pray for the young man's safety and I pray for Linda who undoubtedly is in anguish right now. I hope all will be well with the family. It is certainly a trying time.

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 1 2007, 08:24 AM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ Apr 30 2007, 11:11 PM)
>
> Right before court with Linda? How so? The court date was last week, more than a month past Nathan's alleged disapearance. Yet another insinuation Fran?
> Also Di ask Nathan's age. He is 26 or soon will be....

I'll give you some insinuations, Eirene.

I think it would have been wise for people to leave Nathan and his Norwegian doctor alone. This is true whether the patient is 24 or 94. And people should have been careful not to interfere with the patient's mother, either.

When a group of certified yahoos decided to interfere with that doctor-patient relationship -- as they seem to have done in this case regarding the Norwegian doctor -- the yahoos must ultimately take full responsibility for any adverse outcome down the road, as a result of their unwarranted meddling.

As for the court case, I understand depositions are due June 8. That's future tense. I should think it would be difficult to concentrate on depositions with my son missing.

Posted by: watchbird May 1 2007, 10:38 AM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 1 2007, 10:24 AM)
>
> I'll give you some insinuations, Eirene.
>
> I think it would have been wise for people to leave Nathan and his Norwegian doctor alone. This is true whether the patient is 24 or 94. And people should have been careful not interfere with the patient's mother, either.
>
> When a group of certified yahoos decided to interfere with that doctor-patient relationship -- as they seem to have done in this case regarding the Norwegian doctor -- the yahoos must ultimately take full responsible for any adverse outcome down the road, as a result of their unwarranted meddling.
>
> As for the court case, I understand depositions are due June 8. That's future tense. I should think it would be difficult to concentrate on depositions with my son missing.

Excellent points, Pete.

Responsibility.... that is the all to often neglected foundational principle of life.

And compassion... another one that seems in short supply in some circles....

Truly it is time for prayer...

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett May 1 2007, 11:13 AM

Many things are obviously happening with Linda, but right now her missing son is probably on the top of her list of happenings, therefore, I add my prayer that Nathan is OK and will be impressed to give her concerned mother a phone call.

Posted by: Aletheia May 1 2007, 02:17 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 1 2007, 10:24 AM)
>
> I'll give you some insinuations, Eirene.
>
> I think it would have been wise for people to leave Nathan and his Norwegian doctor alone. This is true whether the patient is 24 or 94. And people should have been careful not to interfere with the patient's mother, either.
>
> When a group of certified yahoos decided to interfere with that doctor-patient relationship -- as they seem to have done in this case regarding the Norwegian doctor -- the yahoos must ultimately take full responsibility for any adverse outcome down the road, as a result of their unwarranted meddling.

Who interfered between Nathan and his Doctor? and how?

Nathan was and is an adult who went into treatment at Doctor Abrahamsen's clinic in Jan of 2004, and to the best of my knowledge, that was it. If there was ever any follow up, or continuing treatment after that, then maybe you (or another) could supply evidence to support that, as I would be interested to hear that.

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 1 2007, 10:24 AM)
>
> As for the court case, I understand depositions are due June 8. That's future tense. I should think it would be difficult to concentrate on depositions with my son missing.

True, although she probably already filled out all the necessary information and gave the documents to to her previous attorney long since, as that is usually done early on, and all that has to be done is for her new attorney to make the deposiition.

The problem still is, as of right now Linda does not have a attorney listed in the online Franklin court records, and hasn't since she fired her previous one. The records were updated the day of her last court appearance, (April 25)and nothing was changed then regarding an attorney, and has not been changed since.

And although Laird Heal can pay online (preferred) and it can take up to 2 days to be updated on the website according to them, or at the specific depository mentioned with a cashiers check, also supposed to be posted withing 2 days....

Something is clearly wrong, especially if he paid almost 3 wks ago now, and ahas the receipt, or copy of a cashier check as some here claimed.

The ARDC online database, still says there is no lawyer liscensed to practice in Illinois with his name, and looking him up in MA per their site, still lists him as not authorized to practice law.

"ARDC Lawyer Search Results from the ARDC database last updated as of April 30, 2007 at 12:50:36 PM: for the following terms: Last Name: heal, First Name: laird, status: All, State: MA, Country: usa Name Laird James Heal, Date Admitted June 4, 1991, City State Sterling MA Authorized to Practice? No"

http://www.iardc.org/ardcroll.asp

Nor is he listed under "change of staus" as is usual for those updating or changing records.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 1 2007, 04:44 PM

I just wanted to let you all know, as of this morning, when I spoke to Linda, her son is still missing. A missing persons report has been filed.

I have posted a picture of Nathan and a few details over in the prayer request forum. Please feel free to copy that picture and send it around to anyone you know. If anyone sees him, hears something regarding him, or anything that might be helpful, please write to Linda at her website email address of linda@lindashelton.org.

This is very serious. The devil does use the timing of things to discourage and beat us down. She and her family needs our prayers.

The last time she spoke to him was March 17th. She is very very concerned, and with good reason.

That link is here http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=13459

Posted by: Johann May 1 2007, 05:21 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 1 2007, 10:17 PM)
>
> ------------------------
>
> Who interfered between Nathan and his Doctor? and how?
>
> Nathan was and is an adult who went into treatment at Doctor Abrahamsen's clinic in Jan of 2004, and to the best of my knowledge, that was it. If there was ever any follow up, or continuing treatment after that, then maybe you (or another) could supply evidence to support that, as I would be interested to hear that.
>
> True, although she probably already filled out all the necessary information and gave the documents to to her previous attorney long since, as that is usually done early on, and all that has to be done is for her new attorney to make the deposiition.
> The problem still is, as of right now Linda does not have a attorney listed in the online Franklin court records, and hasn't since she fired her previous one. The records were updated the day of her last court appearance, (April 25)and nothing was changed then regarding an attorney, and has not been changed > since.

> And although Laird Heal can pay online (preferred) and it can take up to 2 days to be updated on the website according to them, or at the specific depository mentioned with a cashiers check, also supposed to be posted withing 2 days....
>
> Something is clearly wrong, especially if he paid almost 3 wks ago now, and ahas the receipt, or copy of a cashier check as some here claimed.
>
> The ARDC online database, still says there is no lawyer liscensed to practice in Illinois with his name, and looking him up in MA per their site, still lists him as not authorized to practice law.
>
> "ARDC Lawyer Search Results from the ARDC database last updated as of April 30, 2007 at 12:50:36 PM: for the following terms: Last Name: heal, First Name: laird, status: All, State: MA, Country: usa Name Laird James Heal, Date Admitted June 4, 1991, City State Sterling MA Authorized to Practice? No"
>
> http://www.iardc.org/ardcroll.asp
>
> Nor is he listed under "change of staus" as is usual for those updating or changing records.

have told you before, Aletheia, that I can verify that Nathan had further treatments in Norway later on by)r. Arild Abrahamsen. Yes, he did return to Norway for further treatments. When he left Norway again and eturned to the States, I moved into the same apartment where he had stayed. I even ate some of the food ie left behind. It was all neatly labeled by his mother. She wanted to be sure he had some American food to eat while he was there, so that he would net get too homesick. Such are mothers, aren't they?

hen the other question:

f attorney Heal has a receipt to show that he has paid his fees, whose fault is that the information is not ıpdated? Could there be a sleeping secretary somewhere?

Posted by: Eirene May 1 2007, 11:43 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 1 2007, 05:21 PM)
>
> I have told you before, Aletheia, that I can verify that Nathan had further treatments in Norway later on by Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. Yes, he did return to Norway for further treatments. When he left Norway again and returned to the States, I moved into the same apartment where he had stayed. I even ate some of the food he left behind. It was all neatly labeled by his mother. She wanted to be sure he had some American food to eat while he was there, so that he would net get too homesick. Such are mothers, aren't they?
>
> Then the other question:
>
> If attorney Heal has a receipt to show that he has paid his fees, whose fault is that the information is not updated? Could there be a sleeping secretary somewhere?

he whole argument about why it hasn't been updated yet is a moot point. The guy knew his Arc number was ıot in active status when he came to Illinois and when the judge ask him point blank if he was licensed to ›ractice in Il he answered Yes your honor. It was only after the opposing side exposed to the judge that his ;tatus was inactive that he started making his excuses. The point is not about someone falling asleep at the vheel, it is about coming to IL knowing he was inactive to practice there and tried anyway until confronted. hen it would appear he lied to the judge.

hen your other questions to me. Show you when you have not told the truth or tried to spin things.

ou stated DS married Brandi days after the divorce. The guam divorce was final in june 04. Final and LEGAL.

From that day forward they were divorced. Because Linda tried to challenge that divorce (which she willingly signed) in court, did not make it any less valid or legal. Her taking it to court was just a technicality. Your spin? They weren't "really" divorced until 06 when the US court UPHELD THE legalities of the guam divorce. See that word UPHELD. That means that it was legal in june of 04 which DS and his attorneys already knew. To imply they weren't actually divorced until 06 and then married Brandi soon after, according even to court records, would be a lie. Yet you have repeated this falsehood several times. You could not argue this in a court of law and win, so why should we fall for it?

Then you state that Danny was "SEEN" in MN on this last Sunday. Then go on to ponder was it money or documents etc....Since he wasn't there, then there would be nothing to ponder. But, after you told that, everybody was discussing it here as if it were fact. It wasn't. Yet, you haven't acknowledged that your sources got it wrong and you got it wrong. You just left it lie.

You maintained for a long time that the relationship between LS and Her doctor friend was strictly professional. Then after many questions were raised you said she went to Norway following the divorce, because she needed her "Best Friends." First it was stricktly professional, according to you but then somehow by the time of the divorce he was one of her best friends. (your words).

You led people to believe that you were invited to tell your side at a board meeting and then was threatened to not come back to campmeeting. You failed to say You were told to stay away from the campmeeting because your presence along with the doctor only spelled trouble. But, because you were ask to stay away from the campmeeting you implied that you were not allowed at the board meeting then, after they had ask you to come. You intertwined all to give people the wrong impression. The board meeting and the campmeeting were 2 different and seperate events. You were told you could still come to the board meeting and chose not to. Giving wrong impressions of events that happens still adds up to a falsehood.
I could continue on repeating your own words and showing the fallacy of what you speak but I don't have a week to keep writing.

Posted by: summertime May 2 2007, 10:44 AM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 2 2007, 12:43 AM)
>
> The whole argument about why it hasn't been updated yet is a moot point. The guy knew his Arc number was not in active status when he came to Illinois and when the judge ask him point blank if he was licensed to practice in Il he answered Yes your honor. It was only after the opposing side exposed to the judge that his status was inactive that he started making his excuses. The point is not about someone falling asleep at the wheel, it is about coming to IL knowing he was inactive to practice there and tried anyway until confronted. Then it would appear he lied to the judge.
>
> Then your other questions to me. Show you when you have not told the truth or tried to spin things.
>
> You stated DS married Brandi days after the divorce. The guam divorce was final in june 04. Final and LEGAL. From that day forward they were divorced. Because Linda tried to challenge that divorce (which she willingly signed) in court, did not make it any less valid or legal. Her taking it to court was just a technicality. Your spin? They weren't "really" divorced until 06 when the US court UPHELD THE legalities of the guam divorce. See that word UPHELD. That means that it was legal in june of 04 which DS and his attorneys already knew. To imply they weren't actually divorced until 06 and then married Brandi soon after, according even to court records, would be a lie. Yet you have repeated this falsehood several times. You could not argue this in a court of law and win, so why should we fall for it?
>
> Then you state that Danny was "SEEN" in MN on this last Sunday. Then go on to ponder was it money or documents etc....Since he wasn't there, then there would be nothing to ponder. But, after you told that, everybody was discussing it here as if it were fact. It wasn't. Yet, you haven't acknowledged that your sources got it wrong and you got it wrong. You just left it lie.
>
> You maintained for a long time that the relationship between LS and Her doctor friend was strictly professional. Then after many questions were raised you said she went to Norway following the divorce, because she needed her "Best Friends." First it was stricktly professional, according to you but then somehow by the time of the divorce he was one of her best friends. (your words).

> You led people to believe that you were invited to tell your side at a board meeting and then was threatened to not come back to campmeeting. You failed to say You were told to stay away from the campmeeting because your presence along with the doctor only spelled trouble. But, because you were ask to stay away from the campmeeting you implied that you were not allowed at the board meeting then, after they had ask you to come. You intertwined all to give people the wrong impression. The board meeting and the campmeeting were 2 different and seperate events. You were told you could still come to the board meeting and chose not to. Giving wrong impressions of events that happens still adds up to a falsehood.
> I could continue on repeating your own words and showing the fallacy of what you speak but I don't have a week to keep writing.

Posted by: summertime May 2 2007, 11:02 AM

Eirene, surely you are not an innocent bystander who just happened by and has become so knowledgeable as to write the posts that I have read this week. I have written to Danny for information and the answers, which came straight from Mollie or others from the Danny Camp, sounds very much like your style of writing. ---I AM CERTAINLY NOT AMUSED OR IMPRESSED WITH YOUR STYLE OR MODE OF WRITING.----At best, you are a very hard and unsympathetic person. I have not posted for a long time, but just wanted to let some of you know that many are listening and are not impressed. Maybe it is people like you who has impressed Nathan to take some time off to sort things out---Nathan and Linda need our prayers, not our criticism.

Posted by: Johann May 2 2007, 12:33 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 2 2007, 07:43 AM)
>
> The whole argument about why it hasn't been updated yet is a moot point. The guy knew his Arc number was not in active status when he came to Illinois and when the judge ask him point blank if he was licensed to practice in Il he answered Yes your honor.

You sound as if you were there. How many of you were assembled before the judge?

When I was a kid we knew the favorite horses and the dogs of all the farmers in the whole area. So when we saw a certain horse tied outside a neighbor's farmhouse, and we saw his dog watching the horse, we took it or granted the farmer was inside for a cup of coffee. He might be attending to some business at the same ime. On rare occasions some other member of the family could be using his horse, but those were extremely rare occasions.

Nowadays it is the horsepowers that count, even in the sky where they often leave a track. I have double checked, and my source still insists that Danny Shelton's jet was seen at St. Paul both Sunday and Tuesday his week. How many miles is that, and what is the cost in fuel, etc.?

t is difficult to blame Danny Shelton for spinning details in his own favor. He has even stated on TV that Satan is the god of details. How?

Now to the other details.

f you think I sinned because I did not use the term UPHELD, to describe what happened at the court in West Frankfort just before DS and Brandi's marriage, I apologize for that. I have never been good at memorizing definite terms in any language that I use, either English, Danish, Norwegian, Faeroeese, Icelandic, or German. Using all of these languages means that I have no native language, and often exchange terms with synonyms. Even my wife finds it at times hilarious when I use uncommon or antique terms to describe things.

I was not arguing that the divorce was illegal.

I also really apologize that I made it possible for anyone to spin on my use of terms in connection with the relationship between Linda Shelton and Arild Abrahamsen. I have made several attempt to clarify þ but you have not heeded any of those. Other here on the net have done that too, and it looks like you never read what is being said.

Linda stated that at the time she was completely devastated because of the divorce, she felt she had no friends left anywhere except us. I suppose an unfriendly person would never understand that. It was therefore I stated that Linda needed to get away from those who made life impossible for her to see her best friends. By that I was never primarily referring to Dr. Arild Abrahamsen, but just as much to Irmgard and myself. Your spin on that demands an apology from you.

Eirene,

I appreciate your input. Now I know there is nothing but some minor misunderstandings. I apologize for not making myself so clear that you did not understand me. Just don't make these misunderstandings an occasion to spin other things, where there is nothing to spin.

Blessings,

Johann

Posted by: Aletheia May 3 2007, 09:23 AM

I quess we all know it wasn't Linda's Doctor and she wasn't in treatment and nobody can answer this regarding Nathan?

"Who interfered between Nathan and his Doctor? and how?"

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 1 2007, 07:21 PM) ☐
>
> I have told you before, Aletheia, that I can verify that Nathan had further treatments in Norway later on by Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. Yes, he did return to Norway for further treatments. When he left Norway again and returned to the States,

You did?!? Well that is certainly news to me! I'm sorry I must have missed it. Would you be so kind as to look up that post and give me the link to it ? so that I can read your explanation, and also figure out what conversation we were having, and why this was being discussed?

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 1 2007, 07:21 PM) ☐
>
> I moved into the same apartment where he had stayed. I even ate some of the food he left behind. It was all neatly labeled by his mother. She wanted to be sure he had some American food to eat while he was there, so that he would net get too homesick. Such are mothers, aren't they?

I'm assuming you either took over nathan's rental or they don't clean between tenants then? In any case, as I've expressed before, it certainly is amazing, how you always happened to have been anywhere the topics here take us, and so can persoanlly testify to so much..

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 1 2007, 07:21 PM)
>
> Then the other question:
>
> If attorney Heal has a receipt to show that he has paid his fees, whose fault is that the information is not updated? Could there be a sleeping secretary somewhere?

Possibly, or maybe he was taking a short nap and forgot to just show his receipt to the court? that probably would have solved everything,

We don't really know what has caused this delay though do we? I am sure we can agree It is a perplexing and strange situation which needs to get fixed.

Later--

Posted by: Jnana15 May 3 2007, 10:51 AM

Aletheia, calm down and quit being so negative all of the time.

Posted by: Observer May 3 2007, 11:04 AM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 1 2007, 11:43 PM)
>
> The whole argument about why it hasn't been updated yet is a moot point. The guy knew his Arc number was not in active status when he came to Illinois and when the judge ask him point blank if he was licensed to practice in Il he answered Yes your honor. It was only after the opposing side exposed to the judge that his status was inactive that he started making his excuses. The point is not about someone falling asleep at the wheel, it is about coming to IL knowing he was inactive to practice there and tried anyway until confronted. Then it would appear he lied to the judge.

O. K. in sports terms one might call this either a "foul ball," or possibley "strike one.' But, even if it is a strike one, the game is not over yet.

I have a somewhat cynical view of lawyers, to include experienced, competent ones. I expect them to make mistakes, all of them.

The game has entered a new phase with the litigation against Mr. Pickle and Mr. Joy. We who sit on the sidelines will probably observe each side making mistakes. Lawyers representing both sides will likely be slapped down by the judge for an error in pocess, or something.

Let us make the best of it, and not evaulate it byond its importance. It is going to happen.

Posted by: inga May 3 2007, 01:18 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 2 2007, 12:43 AM) ☐
>
> You maintained for a long time that the relationship between LS and Her doctor friend was strictly professional. Then after many questions were raised you said she went to Norway following the divorce, because she needed her "Best Friends." First it was stricktly professional, according to you but then somehow by the time of the divorce he was one of her best friends. (your words).

Eirene, you are clearly using the methodology of Satan in your posts. He is a liar from the beginning, but he doesn't usually come up with original lies. He simply twists the truth, possibly because that does more damage than outright, "original" lies. And that's exactly what you appear to do.

Case in point:
You insinuate that when Linda when to Norway to see her "best friends," she went to see Dr. Abrahamsen. In actual fact, she stayed with Irmgard and Johann Thorvaldsson who had befriended her. Since the doctor was a friend of the Thorvaldssons and was treating Irmgard, it was natural that Linda would run into him as well. But this is a far cry from your insinuation that Linda went to Norway specifically to be with Dr. Abrahamsen.

Note also that what Linda did after the divorce can hardly be used to justify the divorce that happened earlier. As I said, twisting truth is Satan's specialty.

Posted by: Snoopy May 6 2007, 02:50 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 1 2007, 11:43 PM) ☐
>
> The whole argument about why it hasn't been updated yet is a moot point. The guy knew his Arc number was not in active status when he came to Illinois and when the judge ask him point blank if he was licensed to practice in Il he answered Yes your honor. It was only after the opposing side exposed to the judge that his status was inactive that he started making his excuses. The point is not about someone falling asleep at the wheel, it is about coming to IL knowing he was inactive to practice there and tried anyway until confronted. Then it would appear he lied to the judge.
>
> Then your other questions to me. Show you when you have not told the truth or tried to spin things.
>
> You stated DS married Brandi days after the divorce. The guam divorce was final in june 04. Final and LEGAL. From that day forward they were divorced. Because Linda tried to challenge that divorce (which she willingly signed) in court, did not make it any less valid or legal. Her taking it to court was just a technicality. Your spin? They weren't "really" divorced until 06 when the US court UPHELD THE legalities of the guam divorce. See that word UPHELD. That means that it was legal in june of 04 which DS and his attorneys already knew. To imply they weren't actually divorced until 06 and then married Brandi soon after, according even to court records, would be a lie. Yet you have repeated this falsehood several times. You could not argue this in a court of law and win, so why should we fall for it?
>
> Then you state that Danny was "SEEN" in MN on this last Sunday. Then go on to ponder was it money or documents etc....Since he wasn't there, then there would be nothing to ponder. But, after you told that, everybody was discussing it here as if it were fact. It wasn't. Yet, you haven't acknowledged that your sources got it wrong and you got it wrong. You just left it lie.
>
> You maintained for a long time that the relationship between LS and Her doctor friend was strictly professional. Then after many questions were raised you said she went to Norway following the divorce, because she needed her "Best Friends." First it was stricktly professional, according to you but then somehow by the time of the divorce he was one of her best friends. (your words).
>
> You led people to believe that you were invited to tell your side at a board meeting and then was threatened to not come back to campmeeting. You failed to say You were told to stay away from the campmeeting because your presence along with the doctor only spelled trouble. But, because you were ask to stay away from the campmeeting you implied that you were not allowed at the board meeting then, > after they had ask you to come. You intertwined all to give people the wrong impression. The board meeting and the campmeeting were 2 different and seperate events. You were told you could still come to the board meeting and chose not to. Giving wrong impressions of events that happens still adds up to a falsehood.

> I could continue on repeating your own words and showing the fallacy of what you speak but I don't have a week to keep writing.

EEPERS!!

Hello, Eirene??
To quote a very wise acquaintance of mine, TAKE A PEPTO!!
Chill out girlfriend. I'm afraid you are going to blow a hose, or a fuse, or something!! Take a deep breath.... now another one...

You know? The more I read of your posts, the more familiar you sound...

Posted by: mozart May 6 2007, 06:54 PM

> QUOTE(Snoopy @ May 6 2007, 01:50 PM)
>
> JEEPERS!!
> Hello, Eirene??
> To quote a very wise acquaintance of mine, TAKE A PEPTO!!
> Chill out girlfriend. I'm afraid you are going to blow a hose, or a fuse, or something!! Take a deep breath.... now another one...
>
> You know? The more I read of your posts, the more familiar you sound...

Posted by: Johann May 8 2007, 02:07 PM

Thank God, our prayers are answered. Nathan is found and all seems well for now. Linda appreciates you prayers.

Posted by: daylily May 8 2007, 02:44 PM

I am SO glad to hear that!! Thanks for letting us know.

Posted by: lurker May 8 2007, 02:59 PM

> QUOTE(daylily @ May 8 2007, 02:44 PM)
>
> I am SO glad to hear that!! Thanks for letting us know.

Amen! Praise God!

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 8 2007, 04:39 PM

yi

Keep praying ... GP.g

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 04:41 PM

Praise God!!!

Posted by: Rosyroi May 8 2007, 04:46 PM

GP.g yi hug.gif

thank you God for helping Linda find her son Nathan.

Rosyroi

Posted by: Jnana15 May 8 2007, 08:40 PM

Praise God from whom all blessings flow! hug.gif

Posted by: IMM May 8 2007, 08:41 PM

Thanks for updating us. The family will remain in my prayers.

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 11:16 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 1 2007, 05:44 PM)
>
> I just wanted to let you all know, as of this morning, when I spoke to Linda, her son is still missing. A missing persons report has been filed.
>
> I have posted a picture of Nathan and a few details over in the prayer request forum. Please feel free to copy that picture and send it around to anyone you know. If anyone sees him, hears something regarding him, or anything that might be helpful, please write to Linda at her website email address of linda@lindashelton.org.
>
> This is very serious. The devil does use the timing of things to discourage and beat us down. She and her family needs our prayers.
>
> The last time she spoke to him was March 17th. She is very very concerned, and with good reason.
>
> That link is here http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=13459

I don't know what the deal is here???? and don't wish to disrupt the prayer forum, so am posting here.

You wrote in the link above:

"A missing persons report has been filed, and she feels very encouraged because the person that took her report has told her he would treat Nathan's case as if it were his own son he was searching for. One is very thankful and encouraged when they have someone that shows care and sincere concern with your situation as though it were their own.... please contact Linda at her website email address which is linda@lindashelton.org She is checking this email daily and welcomes any information."

When I wrote:
"I'm sure all are concerned and praying regarding this situation.

Usually, there is a contact person at the Police station, or a number there, where people with tips, or info, can call 24 hrs a day. That would be more quickly responded to then a e-mail to Linda and waiting on her to read and then report to them. Do you have that, or can you get it, and post it?

Thank you."

You answered:
"She requested it be done this way."

So I went to her website and nothing was on it about Nathan. so, I emailed her as I was concerned. No reply.

This all seemed weird to me, so I made some other inquiries.

And got this:

> QUOTE
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: <missing_missing@isp.state.il.us>
> To: <c*>
> Sent: Thursday, May 03, 2007 3:04 PM
>
> Ms *****:
>
> There has not been a missing report filed in Illinois for Nathan Moore.
> However, if he were last known to be in ~~Texas~~ Mississippi, there may be a report filed there. Without an exact name and date of birth I can not query the FBI's database to see if he is listed as missing.
> You may want to check with the other states Clearinghouse for Missing persons
> ...
>
> Sincerely,
>
> Cinda Lubich, Clearinghouse Manager > and Statewide AMBER Coordinator
> Illinois State Police
> Clearinghouse for Missing Persons
> 217-785-4341 or 1-800-843-5763

> Name: ****
> Address: ****
> City: ****
> State: ****
> ZIP: ****
> Email: ****
> Phone: ****
> Fax: ****
> Comment: I am trying to find out whether a missing person case is factual, or not.
>
> If you are not the correct entity to contact, I apologise.
>
> It is being widely circulated on Internet Forums that "Nathan Moore' age 26, and the Son of Linda Shelton of Springfield Illinois has been missing for 6 weeks, and a missing person report has been filed by her. However no number has been given to call in tips or with info, and all are being requested to e-mail his Mother through her e-mail at her website www.lindashelton.org She does not appear to be available though...
>
> Can you tell me if a missing person report has been made for Nathan Moore, or where I could go to find out.if this is true or a false alarm?
>
> .....
>
> Thank you. Many people are worried and praying about this.
>
> Sincerly,
> *****

or was one filed in Mississipi, I checked as Johann said that is where Nathan was working last...

ohann Posted Today, 03:07 PM
hank God, our prayers are answered. Nathan is found and all seems well for now. Linda appreciates you rayers.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 8 2007, 11:25 PM

Cindy,

Are you calling me a liar?
I told you and all a report was filed.
You don't believe me?
Is that what you are saying here?

What's weird? You expected her to interject on her website that her sons is missing? Because she did not, she is lieing? You expected her to write you back? Because you say she did not write you back, she is lieing? Is that your point Cindy?

The report was filed. Why don't you call Linda yourself.

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 10:16 PM)
>
> I don't know what the deal is here???? and don't wish to disrupt the prayer forum, so am posting here.

> You wrote in the link above:
>
> "A missing persons report has been filed, and she feels very encouraged because the person that took her report has told her he would treat Nathan's case as if it were his own son he was searching for. One is very thankful and encouraged when they have someone that shows care and sincere concern with your situation as though it were their own.... please contact Linda at her website email address which is linda@lindashelton.org She is checking this email daily and welcomes any information."
> When I wrote:
> "I'm sure all are concerned and praying regarding this situation.
>
> Usually, there is a contact person at the Police station, or a number there, where people with tips, or info, can call 24 hrs a day. That would be more quickly responded to then a e-mail to Linda and waiting on her to read and then report to them. Do you have that, or can you get it, and post it?
>
> Thank you."
> You answered:
> "She requested it be done this way."
>
> So I went to her website and nothing was on it about Nathan. so, I emailed her as I was concerned. No reply.
>
> This all seemed weird to me, so I made some other inquiries.
>
> And got this:
> Nor was one filed in Mississipi, I checked as Johann said that is where he last was...
> Johann Posted Today, 03:07 PM
> Thank God, our prayers are answered. Nathan is found and all seems well for now. Linda appreciates you prayers.

Posted by: princessdi May 9 2007, 12:55 AM

The only weird part is why you just would not pray for his safe return. The rest is none of your concern. You just had to pray, like everybody else. It did not require that you turn into Sherlock Holmes to verify anything. Lind ais Nathan's mother, and unless you are his wife and/or girlfriend, sister, your concerned should have stopped at the request for prayer. What is your problem? There is a itme and place for everything. This was highly insensitive, and very unchristlike.

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 10:16 PM)
>
> I don't know what the deal is here???? and don't wish to disrupt the prayer forum, so am posting here.
>
> You wrote in the link above:
>
> "A missing persons report has been filed, and she feels very encouraged because the person that took her report has told her he would treat Nathan's case as if it were his own son he was searching for. One is very thankful and encouraged when they have someone that shows care and sincere concern with your situation as though it were their own.... please contact Linda at her website email address which is linda@lindashelton.org She is checking this email daily and welcomes any information."
> When I wrote:
> "I'm sure all are concerned and praying regarding this situation.
>
> Usually, there is a contact person at the Police station, or a number there, where people with tips, or info, > can call 24 hrs a day. That would be more quickly responded to then a e-mail to Linda and waiting on her to read and then report to them. Do you have that, or can you get it, and post it?

>
> Thank you."
> You answered:
> "She requested it be done this way."
>
> So I went to her website and nothing was on it about Nathan. so, I emailed her as I was concerned. No reply.
>
> This all seemed weird to me, so I made some other inquiries.
>
> And got this:
> Nor was one filed in Mississipi, I checked as Johann said that is where Nathan was working last...
> Johann Posted Today, 03:07 PM
> Thank God, our prayers are answered. Nathan is found and all seems well for now. Linda appreciates you prayers.

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 07:26 AM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 9 2007, 12:25 AM)
>
> Cindy,
>
> Are you calling me a liar?
> I told you and all a report was filed.
> You don't believe me?
> Is that what you are saying here?
>
> What's weird? You expected her to interject on her website that her sons is missing? Because she did not, she is lieing? You expected her to write you back? Because you say she did not write you back, she is lieing? Is that your point Cindy?
>
> The report was filed. Why don't you call Linda yourself.

lo I am not calling you a liar. Perhaps you should call Linda yourself.

here is a discrepency between what you said she said, and what the Illnois state police and missing persons learinghouse in both Illinois and Mississippi state. Maybe she can clear it up for you.

rom: <missing_missing@isp.state.il.us> o: <c*> ent: Thursday, May 03, 2007 3:04 PM

1s *****:

here has not been a missing report filed in Illinois for Nathan Moore.....
incerely,

inda Lubich, Clearinghouse Manager
nd Statewide AMBER Coordinator
llinois State Police

Clearinghouse for Missing Persons

Posted by: awesumtenor May 9 2007, 07:42 AM

The link on the IL State Police site that sends the email to where you checked for a missing person's report on Nathan is the department for missing and exploited children. Amber alerts are not put out for missing adults.

While Nathan is Linda's child, he is not a minor... and as such, the office which responded to you would be expected to give the answer it did... because they only deal with missing and exploited juveniles.

In His service,
Mr. J

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 9 2007, 02:55 AM)
>
> The only weird part is why you just would not pray for his safe return. The rest is none of your concern. You just had to pray, like everybody else. It did not require that you turn into Sherlock Holmes to verify anything. Lind ais Nathan's mother, and unless you are his wife and/or girlfriend, sister, your concerned should have stopped at the request for prayer. What is your problem? There is a itme and place for everything. This was highly insensitive, and very unchristlike.

It's not weird Di; it's typical... and it's sad...that a woman who says she is a mother could be so utterly devoid of compassion.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 08:07 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 9 2007, 02:55 AM)
>
> !.)The only weird part is why you just would not pray for his safe return.

That is not true, I did pray, and then wrote the following, to you. Why do you insist on constantly making these false accusations and false personal judgments?

> QUOTE
>
> QUOTE(princessdi @ Apr 30 2007, 11:24 PM)
> Nathan? How old is he now?
>
> Posted on: May 1 2007, 12:56 PM by Aletheia
> I believe he is 26. Which makes it harder then when they are minors and you know where they are supposed to be, and they need to get their butts home, and if they aren't where they are supposed to be and don't come home, you know somethings definatly wrong.
>
> Still Mothers never stop worrying about Children no matter how old they are. I'm 45 and my Mom still worries about me. My Sons are 23, and 25, and if I don't hear from them I start worrying and praying, because often in the past that meant they had problems or were in trouble and not ready to tell me yet. Thank God my oldest who has had addiction problems also, and lives across the United States from me is > keeping in close contact now, good or bad. It makes it easier to help, encourage, support, and advise. and know what to lift him up in prayer about.

>
> I am not clear here though on what is meant by "missing". Is it that Linda hasn't heard from him in 6 wks, or that he hasn't been at home, or to work and no one has heard from him? If the latter is the case, was a missing persons report filed? It seems this would have been done at least 5 weeks ago???
>
> In any case we should all pray for nathan and all involved, it would just help to know a little more to know what to pray about more specifically.

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 9 2007, 02:55 AM)
>
> 2.) The rest is none of your concern. You just had to pray, like everybody else. It did not require that you turn into Sherlock Holmes to verify anything. Lind ais Nathan's mother, and unless you are his wife and/or girlfriend, sister, your concerned should have stopped at the request for prayer.

Did you read all that was posted here, and what was asked for in addition to prayer?

> QUOTE
>
> Johann Apr 30 2007, 05:56 PM Post #197
> On top of everything else she has not heard from her son, Nathan, since March 17,and she has been told that he has disappeared. This worried mother solicits our prayers. She is also wondering if there are any people of BSDA who are good at finding missing people?
>
> Nathan Moore was last at Pass Christian, Mississippi, working for Pink Marine Construction.

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 9 2007, 02:55 AM)
>
> What is your problem? There is a itme and place for everything. This was highly insensitive, and very unchristlike.

Beam, mote, eye...

> QUOTE
>
> Fran Apr 30 2007, 09:41 PM Post #198
> My, My, isn't this strange! right before court with Linda! This looks bad doesn't it?
>
> Is there such a thing as coincidence?
>
> Eirene Apr 30 2007, 11:11 PM
>
> Right before court with Linda? How so? The court date was last week, more than a month past Nathan's alleged disapearance. Yet another insinuation Fran?
> Also Di asked Nathan's age. He is 26 or soon will be....
>
> princessdi Apr 30 2007, 11:39 PM Post #202
>
> Thanks Eirene for the info. I will be keeping him in my prayers.

> Eirene, I am gong to assume you are not a mother, please correct me if I am worng, but if my child was missing for a monthe before going to court, I might be more than a bit distracted, and a lot worried. if someone wanted to keep Linda of"off balance" that would be a good way.

'ou were wrong, what you and Fran were doing is called evil surmising, which amounts to bearing false vitness - sin ev 22:14 Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and nay enter in through the gates into the city.

.5 For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever oveth and maketh a lie.

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 08:20 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 9 2007, 09:42 AM) ☐
>
> The link on the IL State Police site that sends the email to where you checked for a missing person's report on Nathan is the department for missing and exploited children. Amber alerts are not put out for missing adults.
>
> While Nathan is Linda's child, he is not a minor... and as such, the office which responded to you would be expected to give the answer it did... because they only deal with missing and exploited juveniles.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

'ou are incorrect. I said nothing about an amber alert. The link, adresses and phone numbers are for both nissing children and missing adults.

low go to the link here: http://www.theyaremissed.org/ncma/content.php?webid=state_clearinghouses ind see the same exact contact info:

LLINOIS

llinois State Police
00 Iles Park Place, Suite 104
pringfield, IL 62703-2982
hone: 1-217-785-4341
oll Free: 1-800-843-5763 (nationwide)
ax: 1-217-785-6793
mail: missing@isp.state.il.us
Vebsite: www.isp.state.il.us

> QUOTE
>
> It's not weird Di; it's typical... and it's sad...that a woman who says she is a mother could be so utterly devoid of compassion.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

What else can you do but keep maligning and making personal attacks...

Posted by: HUGGINS130 May 9 2007, 08:46 AM deep

Posted by: runner4him May 9 2007, 09:08 AM

Aletheia, Aletheia....I just had to comment on your harsh reactions to the posts regarding Linda's missing son. It amazes me how you can continue to attack everyone who is expressing concern about a missing child...yes, an adult but still he is someone's child. Please stop and think about your words and I would ask you to rethink your approach. I do not know you but you are coming across in a mean spirited way and you are losing any credibility that you might have had in the past before I joined this forum...I have not been impressed with your posts. Why would you be suspicious of where the missing person's report might be filed? I want to think the best of you and your motives but you are making it very difficult. Prayer is vital...not only for a missing son or daughter but for the lost children of Israel....may God bless and may none of us lose our way.

> QUOTE
>
> What else can you do but keep maligning and making personal attacks...

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 09:24 AM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 9 2007, 11:08 AM) ☐
>
> Aletheia, Aletheia....I just had to comment on your harsh reactions to the posts regarding Linda's missing son. It amazes me how you can continue to attack everyone who is expressing concern about a missing child...yes, an adult but still he is someone's child. Please stop and think about your words and I would ask you to rethink your approach. I do not know you but you are coming across in a mean spirited way and you are losing any credibility that you might have had in the past before I joined this forum...I have not been impressed with your posts. Why would you be suspicious of where the missing person's report might be filed? I want to think the best of you and your motives but you are making it very difficult. Prayer is vital...not only for a missing son or daughter but for the lost children of Israel....may God bless and may none of us lose our way.

What are you talking about?

I was concerned about Linda's son, and still am actually for i have gone through the same kind of things with my son.

Look in you mirror Aren't you, yourself reacting harshly here?

Why aren't you concerned that you may be being manipulated and lied to?

Is it worse to post something false, or to ask questions and point out the facts, and the truth?

Is it worse to be a liar whether by ignorance or willfully, or to call lies and error by their name?

It seems to me you've already demonstrated your answers...

Enough said?

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 9 2007, 09:26 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 08:26 AM)
>
> There is a discrepency between what you said she said, and what the Illnois state police and missing persons clearinghouse in both Illinois and Mississippi state. Maybe she can clear it up for you.

The discrepancy is based on the level of your abilities to find things on public Web sites and elsewhere, not necessarily between what Sonshineonme and Linda Shelton said.

One day, somebody points out that they think Laird J. Heal is not licensed in Illinois, based on what they can find on public Web sites. Later, we find that Laird Heal is licensed in Illinois, and then this licensing-conspiracy issue is quietly put to rest by the Dannyfingers.

And then that licensing issue is replaced with this "missing person" conspiracy theory.

And all of these unfounded theories are based on some manufactured flaws of Linda Shelton:

- Linda chose an unlicensed attorney who said he was licensed. Blah blah blah.
- Maybe Linda didn't really file any missing person reports. Blah Blah Blah Blah.
- Linda really did the hiring and promoting at 3ABN. Blah Blah Blah.
- Danny was "too busy" to be the President and do the hiring. It was really Linda's job. Blah Blah Blah.

Trying to make the entire weight of 3ABN's problems revolve around one solitary figure named Linda Shelton makes me laugh. It hasn't worked in three years, and it's not working now.

But, Aletheia, look at it this way: Nathan has been located, and now Linda and her Illinois-licensed attorney can focus on other things. That makes me very happy.

Posted by: caribbean sda May 9 2007, 09:45 AM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 9 2007, 11:26 AM)
>
> And all of these unfounded theories are based on some manufactured flaws of Linda Shelton:
>
> - Linda chose an unlicensed attorney who said he was licensed. Blah blah blah.
> - Maybe Linda didn't really file any missing person reports. Blah Blah Blah Blah.
> - Linda really did the hiring and promoting at 3ABN. Blah Blah Blah.

> - Danny was "too busy" to be the President and do the hiring. It was really Linda's job. Blah Blah Blah.
>
> Trying to make the entire weight of 3ABN's problems revolve around one solitary figure named Linda Shelton makes me laugh. It hasn't worked in three years, and it's not working now.
>
> But, Aletheia, look at it this way: Nathan has been located, and now Linda and her Illinois-licensed attorney can focus on other things. That makes me very happy.

..and the blah goes on and on and on...

Posted by: runner4him May 9 2007, 10:13 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 09:24 AM)
>
> What are you talking about?
>
> Look in you mirror Aren't you, yourself reacting harshly here?
>
> Why aren't you concerned that you may be being manipulated and lied to?
>
> Is it worse to post something false, or to ask questions and point out the facts, and the truth?
>
> Is it worse to be a liar whether by ignorance or willfully, or to call lies and error by their name?
>
> It seems to me you've already demonstrated your answers...
>
> Enough said by me here on this thread...
>
> toodles..

\letheia...Aletheia,

t sounds like you are calling me a liar "by ignorance or willfully"...where is this coming from? This is exactly vhat I was talking about. How and why would you call me a liar?

;orry that you did not understand what I was trying to say to you about your words and harsh reactions. I vas just trying to let you know how you are coming across. I may be new to this forum but I can assure you hat I am able to read and research info without letting others manipulate me. I have completely reviewed all he info on www.save3abn.com and I still have a little more material to read on this site. I have been to the }abn site and a couple other sites that give views of both sides of this current mess. I am the kind of person vho likes to research both sides and then determine for myself what is true based totally on the facts. I have 1o hidden agenda...I was a supporter of 3abn for years with my Dish and offerings...I have given liberally to \SI for 3abn projects. After the rumor mill began with questions being raised on this site and from certain)rominent faithful SDA leaders, I began to feel the need to investigate myself. I was convicted of my personal esponsibilty to dig and dig for the truth and to then to act in any way that I can. I am here to continue to earn and share with others, I have e-mailed friends to make them aware of the problems at 3abn (in order to ;AVE 3abn) and encouraging them to search for themselves, I have stopped all financial support, I have vritten letters to AF and elsewhere, I am praying for God to intervene. For me, the facts speak for hemselves...there is a need for cleaning house at 3abn....the corruption must be stopped....the lawsuits are vrong...we need to be about the Lord's business of winning souls...we need to fear no man...I am ready for he boatload of trouble if need be as long as it is the Lord's boat and He is in it with me. Blessings.
{4H

Posted by: princessdi May 9 2007, 12:45 PM

I remember that Cindy, which is why I am shocked that you would do such a thing! You needed to stop at the prayer. You, of all people, should have understood maybe more than the rest of us. If you can't see how insensitive, discompasssionate, and just plain evil your actions were, please ask somebody you really trust, but trust to tell you the truth whether you like it or not. Also, your implications about Linda did not go unnoticed. You really need to take hard look at when the defense of Danny is turning you into. It never even occurred to me(or anyone else) to overstep my bounds like that, let alone actually voice it as if you have some kind of authority. You can quote scripture all you want. Satan can quote them too, and better than you, but we already know his fate. Your heart has been revealed in this Cindy. However, perhaps you are a lot like Darth Vadar and ther is conflict within you, because, through this whole thing you seemed to be struggling with the right thing. You prayed and you even empathized, but in the end you just gave in to the dark side.

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 06:07 AM)
>
> That is not true, I did pray, and then wrote the following, to you. Why do you insist on constantly making these false accusations and false personal judgments?
>
> Did you read all that was posted here, and what was asked for in addition to prayer?
> Beam, mote, eye...
>
> You were wrong, what you and Fran were doing is called evil surmising, which amounts to bearing false witness - sin
>
> Rev 22:14 Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.
> 15 For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

Posted by: IMM May 9 2007, 01:08 PM

I read a lot and rarely post, due to the "if you can't say something nice..." rule my mamma taught me, but I just have to comment now.

Aletheia, you really went too far this time. What you did seems psycho and scary to me. I do not believe you were trying to help find Nathan. Also, what concern would it possibly be of yours about the contact information Linda left? He is 26, not 6. Using her email seems perfectly logical to me.

As far as her not replying to you, if I had given out an email address as contact for my missing child, I would probably not waste time replying to any message unless it was from someone who had seen or found him. I would probably not be in the mood for meaningless banter or to defend my methods of search.

...and to think some people refer to Gaillon Joy as a "self-appointed investigator" ??

Posted by: Rosyroi May 9 2007, 08:45 PM

My own two pennies worth...

Unfortunately it seem that whenever Alethia writes something in BSDA 3ABN threads that I cringe. It feels like very long very strong fingernails are scraping a very long time down on the chalk board. OUCH!!!

Months ago I posted a request asking Alethia to re read what she types and walk away then come back and edit edit edit. Sigh...

It certainly would be refreshing to be able to read something from Alethia without it being in a nasty vindictive rude (add any other words that apply) attitude.

Oh well, my mother never told me life would be fair... carry on Cindy.

Rosyroi

Posted by: erik May 11 2007, 10:58 AM

Hello all,

Does any one have any word on Nathan Shelton?

Last i had heard he was missing, we have been praying for his save return.

I was just wondering if that has happened yet?

Erik

Posted by: princessdi May 11 2007, 11:02 AM

He has been found, Erik. Click Here>>>>>>>>>http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=9174&st=225

> QUOTE(erik @ May 11 2007, 08:58 AM)
>
> Hello all,
>
> Does any one have any word on Nathan Shelton?
>
> Last i had heard he was missing, we have been praying for his save return.
>
> I was just wondering if that has happened yet?
>
> Erik

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 11 2007, 11:04 AM

> QUOTE(erik @ May 11 2007, 09:58 AM) ☐
>
> Hello all,
>
> Does any one have any word on Nathan Shelton?
>
> Last i had heard he was missing, we have been praying for his save return.
>
> I was just wondering if that has happened yet?
>
> Erik

Hi Erik,

Here's a link to Johann's good news post one page back:

http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9174&view=findpost&p=194643

Posted by: Eirene May 11 2007, 11:42 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 9 2007, 01:45 PM) ☐
>
> [You prayed and you even empathized, but in the end you just gave in to the dark side. [s]

That describes the attitude here, exactly concerning DS and 3abn. How many times have I read that we must pray for DS and 3abn and God loves them as much as he loves us. Then, in the next sentence will be unproven accusations, name calling and slanderous remarks. As you all like to say here, BEAM, MOTE, EYE.

Posted by: princessdi May 11 2007, 12:12 PM

Gurl Please! Danny can be wrong ALL day long, and that only means he requires more prayer. He is worng, on several counts, but he doesn't want anyone to question him or does he want to own up to his actions. Doesn't make him less of a Child of God, just one strugglling with sin, as we all are. it is not an either/or situation. He is a public figure so his struggles are also public.

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 11 2007, 10:42 AM) ☐
>
> [color=#990000]
>
> That describes the attitude here, exactly concerning DS and 3abn. How many times have I read that we must pray for DS and 3abn and God loves them as much as he loves us. Then, in the next sentence will be unproven accusations, name calling and slanderous remarks. As you all like to say here, BEAM, MOTE, EYE.

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 11 2007, 02:05 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 11 2007, 11:42 AM)
>
> That describes the attitude here, exactly concerning DS and 3abn. How many times have I read that we must pray for DS and 3abn and God loves them as much as he loves us. Then, in the next sentence will be unproven accusations, name calling and slanderous remarks. As you all like to say here, BEAM, MOTE, EYE.

In addition to the foregoing remark, wasn't the following remark also made by you, Eirene? Did you imply that Laird Heal may be a liar?

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 1 2007, 11:43 PM)
>
> The guy knew his Arc number was not in active status when he came to Illinois and when the judge ask him point blank if he was licensed to practice in Il he answered Yes your honor. It was only after the opposing side exposed to the judge that his status was inactive that he started making his excuses. The point is not about someone falling asleep at the wheel, it is about coming to IL knowing he was inactive to practice there and tried anyway until confronted. Then it would appear he lied to the judge.

I noticed in the http://www.iardc.org/lawyersearch.asp that Laird Heal is fully licensed to practice law in Illinois. So, Eirene, who is doing the name calling with the unproven accusations? Wouldn't you need to include yourself in doing that?

Name, Date Admitted , City, State, Authorized to Practice?
Laird James Heal June 4 1991, Sterling, MA, Yes

Posted by: Rosyroi May 11 2007, 09:16 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 11 2007, 01:05 PM)
>
> In addition to the foregoing remark, wasn't the following remark also made by you, Eirene? Did you imply that Laird Heal may be a liar?
> I noticed in the http://www.iardc.org/lawyersearch.asp that Laird Heal is fully licensed to practice law in Illinois. So, Eirene, who is doing the name calling with the unproven accusations? Wouldn't you need to include yourself in doing that?
>
> Name, Date Admitted , City, State, Authorized to Practice?
> Laird James Heal June 4 1991, Sterling, MA, Yes

PP THANK YOU VERY MUCH!!!

BSDA knew it. Dannyfingers tried to deny it. Didn't work.

Rosyroi

Posted by: Fran May 11 2007, 10:53 PM

Eirene;

Do this infer-maeshun mean he weren't "STUPID"? I recon not a tall.

Hummmmmm.

I sure be glad him arnt stupid! Iz gotta put this hearin wrds in my handy dandy blues cloos notbook!

Posted by: Aletheia May 12 2007, 04:53 AM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 11 2007, 04:05 PM)
>
> In addition to the foregoing remark, wasn't the following remark also made by you, Eirene? Did you imply that Laird Heal may be a liar?
> I noticed in the http://www.iardc.org/lawyersearch.asp that Laird Heal is fully licensed to practice law in Illinois. So, Eirene, who is doing the name calling with the unproven accusations? Wouldn't you need to include yourself in doing that?
>
> Name, Date Admitted , City, State, Authorized to Practice?
> Laird James Heal June 4 1991, Sterling, MA, Yes

PP, that is a pathetic attempt to malign another.

You know perfectly well you are quoting from, and responding to her May 1st post when Heal was NOT authorized to practice law. I myself quoted and posted that from the same website the day he went to court and wasn't authorized, and again just as recently as last week where he still wasn't authorized to practice law, or yet listed as Linda's attorney in the online case file in Franklin County. For the past month that has been the case.

It just got changed. as I myself noted yesterday.

When Laird Heal stood in court and told the judge "Yes your honor" (are you liscenced to practice law in Illinois") that was not true. He wasn't authorized to practice in Illinois, nor registered in the database, which states it may take up to 24 hours to show updates.

Falsely acusing Eirene not does not change those facts. Offering excuses as to why you all "think" he wasn't authorized to practice law in Illinois, without support or evidence, doesn't prove or change that either.

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ May 9 2007, 11:26 AM)
>
> The discrepancy is based on the level of your ablities to find things on public Web sites and elsewhere, not necessarily between what Sonshineonme and Linda Shelton said.

Clarification.

I did not get my info from a website. I only got the contact information from the website. I emailed the Illinois stste police, and then called the Mississippi State police. They both said "No missing report was filed for a Nathan Moore"

Argue with the State Police, as to why they disagree with L.S. as allegedly quoted by sonshineonme.

Posted by: Pickle May 12 2007, 06:31 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 12 2007, 04:53 AM)
>
> When Laird Heal stood in court and told the judge "Yes your honor" (are you liscenced to practice law in Illinois") that was not true. He wasn't authorized to practice in Illinois, nor registered in the database, which states it may take up to 24 hours to show updates.

It seems to matter not how many times your blatant misstatements are corrected, you still make them anyway. That is wrong.

"Are you licensed?" "Yes."

"Was he authorized?" "No."

Judging from the way you worded your post, I take it to mean that you understand the difference between "licensed" and "authorized," and yet you still said, "that was not true."

Posted by: Noahswife May 12 2007, 08:00 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 12 2007, 05:53 AM)
>
> I did not get my info from a website. I only got the contact information from the website. I emailed the Illinois stste police, and then called the Mississippi State police. They both said "No missing report was filed for a Nathan Moore"
>
> Argue with the State Police, as to why they disagree with L.S. as allegedly quoted by sonshineonme.

Aletheia!

I have had enough of this line of attack and nonsense.

YOU DID NOT DO YOUR HOMEWORK! I DID MINE AND THE REPORT WAS FILED IN THE RIGHT PLACE AND WITH THE RIGHT AUTHORITIES........

When you posted that there was no documentation, I understood why there was none in Illinois as it did not make sense to me that a missing persons report would be filed there if that is not where Nathan went missing. However, I have confirmed there was a report filed, where it was filed and that they now know where he is.

So many times on BSDA you have not seemed to understand how your personal credibility was at issue and why it mattered when reviewing anything else you had to say. You have now once again proven for everyone that reads here at BSDA that for whatever reason you either are not checking out things accurately, you come here with a huge bias against anything regarding Linda Shelton or you are being fed lines to post by someone else (who apparently does not care about your credibility here as they are in the shadows).

Do you have any clue how this makes you look to those of us who want to believe you are sincere in what you believe or post even if we disagree with you?

I was willing to think you were just misinformed here but your continued insistence on this point makes it impossible for me to believe that is what is going on.

PLEASE Aletheia think about this before you post again on matters where facts can in fact be verified as I did in this matter.

nw
C"i"

Posted by: starbright May 12 2007, 08:23 AM

Hello Noahswife: I am new here and still reading and learning. Could you give me a link to where you found the information that Nathan was reported to missing persons? Where was the report filed?

If you would provide the link so we could look it up, this would really show Aletheia was incorrect in her information.

Posted by: seraph|m May 12 2007, 08:29 AM

In thine own word...

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 12 2007, 07:53 AM)
> A, that is a pathetic attempt to malign another.

Mat 7:3 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

Posted by: Aletheia May 12 2007, 08:41 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 12 2007, 07:31 AM)
>
> It seems to matter not how many times your blatant misstatements are corrected, you still make them anyway. That is wrong.
>
> "Are you licensed?" "Yes."
>
> "Was he authorized?" "No."
>
> Judging from the way you worded your post, I take it to mean that you understand the difference between "licensed" and "authorized," and yet you still said, "that was not true."

Bob, you know better despite the word games you constantly play. The question by the Judge was, as Heal was in his Illinois court, was he liscenced to practice law in Illinois? You know, I quoted from the Ilinois database, the very day he went to court, in Gregory Matthews "Linda's Litigation" thread post # 56, to.. you :

> QUOTE
>
> > QUOTE
> >
> > Bob Pickle:
> > Here's the scoop according to Gailon:
> > Attorney Laird J. Heal is licensed to practice law in Illinois.

> Aletheia:
> Here's the real scoop:
>
> QUOTE
> http://www.iardc.org/ardcroll.asp
> ARDC Lawyer Search Results from the ARDC database last updated as of April 25, 2007 at 12:14:42 PM: for the following terms: Last Name: Heal, First Name: Laird, status: All, State: IL, Country: usa
>
> Your search terms do not match the record of any lawyer licensed in Illinois.
>
> http://www.iardc.org/ardcroll.asp
> ARDC Lawyer Search Results from the ARDC database last updated as of April 25, 2007 at 12:14:42 PM: for the following terms: Last Name: Heal, First Name: Laird, status: All, State: MA, Country: usa
>
> Name Laird James Heal
> Date Admitted June 4, 1991
> City State Sterling MA > Authorized to Practice? No

o, I don't care how many times you try and babble over the facts and evidence, it doesn't change it. This is ust like your arguments and explanations about how Gailon Joy is an "innocent convicted embezzler" (and efore I get the protests, a Christins past is NOT relevant if they have repented, Joy obviously has not as he till claims he did nothing wrong) he Attorney General of the United States used Joy's conviction as his case example for embezzlement, in the aw textbook he authored, and still you try to babble around that. Your explanations and denials, as well as atthews and Joy's, are just not credible to me.

> QUOTE
>
> Embezzlement
> Fraudulent conversion of property lawfully possessed
>
> Embezzlement: Fraudulent conversion of another's property by someone in lawful possession of the property. Embezzlement requires the intent to defraud the owner of the property. Conversion here means that the defendant handles the property inconsistathntly with the arrangement by which he or she has possession of it. Since many businesses rely on employees to receive payments and make disbursements, embezzlement is often a crime against a business..
>
> FACTS:
>
> Gailon A. Joy owned Credit management Services Corp., (CMS), a debt collection agency. When CMS made a collection, it would deposit the money in Barre, Vermont. CMS also had it's own separate account. However, CMS began transferring fund from the Barre account to it's own account to cover it's expenses. CMS received a collection for Stacey Fuel and Lumber Co., but never even told Stacey the money had been collected. A year later CMS filed for Bankruptcy. The State charged Joy with the crime of embezzling the collection made for Stacey. Joy claimed he intended to repay the money.
>
> Outcome:
>
> The Court upheld Joy's conviction, saying an intent to repay was irrelevant. --State v. Joy, 549A.2d 1033 (VT)

> Source: Law of Business, p 29, by John D. Ashcroft

eaders,
his citation saying Joy's defense was "he was going to pay it back" is significant as he has maintained hrough both Bob Pickle and Gregory Matthews that his defense, and why he is a "innocent convicted mbezzler" is because the money he was convicted of embezzling actually belonged to him, as it was owed im.... clearly that is not true.

ou can find the reference and the entire book above at google book search

---

Posted by: Clay May 12 2007, 08:44 AM

The point is moot Cindy.... whether he was or was not... now he is... as for Mr. Joy's past... I view it as another attempt by you and those who share your view of majoring in minutiae..... obviously you get something from it because it is done daily....

thank you for sharing your opinion.....

Posted by: Aletheia May 12 2007, 08:52 AM

> QUOTE(starbright @ May 12 2007, 10:23 AM)
>
> Hello Noahswife: I am new here and still reading and learning. Could you give me a link to where you found the information that Nathan was reported to missing persons? Where was the report filed?
>
> If you would provide the link so we could look it up, this would really show Aletheia was incorrect in her information.

elcome, and thank you.

would appreciate that also, as she forgot to cite the evidence and proof.

f she is correct, I need to know so I can apologise, and try to make it right.

here was it filed then? It was first reported here by Johann who said he was last in Mississippi. They didn't now he was missing....

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 12 2007, 10:44 AM)
>
> The point is moot Cindy.... whether he was or was not... now he is... as for Mr. Joy's past... I view it as another attempt by you and those who share your view of majoring in minutiae..... obviously you get something from it because it is done daily....
>
> thank you for sharing your opinion.....

Clay,

I'm sorry, but the point isn't moot just because you say so. I gave evidence to support what I posted. That isn't just my opinion as yours is.

Have a happy Sabbath. I'm off to worship.

Posted by: Clay May 12 2007, 08:56 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 12 2007, 09:52 AM)
>
> Clay,
>
> I'm sorry, but the point isn't moot just because you say so. I gave evidence to support what I posted. That isn't just my opinion as yours is.
>
> Have a happy Sabbath. I'm off to worship.

thank you again for your opinion.... and hope that your worship experience is rewarding.....

Posted by: seraph|m May 12 2007, 08:58 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 12 2007, 11:44 AM)
>
> The point is moot Cindy.... whether he was or was not... now he is... as for Mr. Joy's past... I view it as another attempt by you and those who share your view of majoring in minutiae..... obviously you get something from it because it is done daily....
>
> thank you for sharing your opinion.....

Don't miss the next exciting episode of "Opinions, er'body has one" When the next in depth search reveals AAAAAk...

☒ Attached Image

Posted by: Noahswife May 12 2007, 09:06 AM

> QUOTE(starbright @ May 12 2007, 09:23 AM)
>
> Hello Noahswife: I am new here and still reading and learning. Could you give me a link to where you found the information that Nathan was reported to missing persons? Where was the report filed?

> If you would provide the link so we could look it up, this would really show Aletheia was incorrect in her information.

tarbright ☒ h

Velcome to BSDA. Please feel free to PM any one here to ask for help in locating information or answering nformed questions. We have a number of very strong personalities here but as I am sure you have seen we ach contribute in different ways and bring different "credentials" to these discussions. Please get to know us n LC or through our many posts both here in the 3abn thread and elsewhere on this forum. And PLEASE bring ood when we party as we are known to do now and then.

know there is so much to read here. It can be frustrating and just a few months ago which would be several undred posts ago (thousands maybe? yikes!) I was totally overwhelmed and made more than one mistake in ny posts. But you know what, people are kind if you take the time to demonstrate you are reading and not ust asking people to hand you information (and believe me we have seen more than one borg/clone/finger lemand information).

s for the post......Here is where Johann posted about Nathan missing ----->
ttp://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9174&view=findpost&p=193630 tarbright. Please think about this. I am not going to due Aletheia's homework for her. Where would it be ogical to file a report regarding a missing adult?

w
"i"

Posted by: starbright May 12 2007, 09:40 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 12 2007, 10:06 AM) ☐
>
> Starbright ☒ h
>
> I
> Starbright. Please think about this. I am not going to due Aletheia's homework for her. Where would it be logical to file a report regarding a missing adult?
>
> nw
> C"i"

hank you for the kind welcome. Could you help me since I don't know where to look. I understand it is ogical to look in certain places but I've never filed a report before so I don't even know where to logically ook.

ould you give me the link anyway? Or pm it to me?

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 12 2007, 09:44 AM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 12 2007, 10:29 AM)
>
> In thine own word...
> Mat 7:3 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

In the werds of the "lang-west"....

How are you gonna remove the toothpick from your brother's eye when you got a telephone pole/transformer station up in ya own.....

Recognize!

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 12 2007, 10:44 AM)
>
> The point is moot Cindy.... whether he was or was not... now he is... as for Mr. Joy's past... I view it as another attempt by you and those who share your view of majoring in minutiae..... obviously you get something from it because it is done daily....
>
> thank you for sharing your opinion.....

Bless her heart....she don't know us well. We read and we pay attention!

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 12 2007, 10:58 AM)
>
> Don't miss the next exciting episode of "Opinions, er'body has one" When the next in depth search reveals AAAAAk...
>
> Attached Image

.....not only are aliens on the planet Earth...they are running some of the major "religions-like" organizations.....

OOOoooo!

sn

Posted by: seraph|m May 12 2007, 10:30 AM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ May 12 2007, 12:44 PM)
>
> In the werds of the "lang-west"....

> How are you gonna remove the toothpick from your brother's eye when you got a telephone pole/transformer station up in ya own.....
>
> Recognize!
>
> Bless her heart....she don't know us well. We read and we pay attention!
> .....not only are aliens on the planet Earth...they are running some of the major "religions-like" organizations.....
>
> OOOoooo!
> ☒ sn

☐ pass me some meaty bitz danke ☒ TVsnack.

Posted by: Panama_Pete May 12 2007, 11:27 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 12 2007, 04:53 AM) ☐
>
> PP, that is a pathetic attempt to malign another.
>
> You know perfectly well you are quoting from, and responding to her May 1st post when Heal was NOT authorized to practice law. I myself quoted and posted that from the same website the day he went to court and wasn't authorized, and again just as recently as last week where he still wasn't authorized to practice law, or yet listed as Linda's attorney in the online case file in Franklin County. For the past month that has been the case.

rankly, I didn't agree with Eirene's theory that Laird Heal may have lied to a judge. I wished to emphasize hat point before the issue got brushed under the carpet by the Danny-fingers.

ne case in point:

he Federal Communications Commission can take months to show that documents have been accepted and rocessed by them. That's why a FCC attorney gets a copy of the document hand-stamped with the date of elivery at the FCC's building.

oes that mean a radio or tv station shuts down during the period a document is not in the FCC database? Of ourse, not. I'm sure that some of the Dannyscribes, and those here who have proximity to the broadcasting ndustry, know that.

ince Mr. Heal is fully licensed, the paperwork would have had to have all been submitted by Mr. Heal, and aken care of, just as Mr. Heal told the judge.

ubsequent postings to a Web site would not necessarily have a legal bearing on anything.

letheia, the "pathetic attempt to malign another" (as you described it) occurred with the theory that Mr. eal stood in front of a judge and may have lied. Lying to a judge would be a rather strong accusation if true, ut, I sincerely doubt that it is.

ight now, you can probably look forward to the depositions that need to be completed by June 8, as the case moves forward.

Pete

Posted by: sonshineonme May 12 2007, 12:11 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 08:24 AM)
>
> What are you talking about?
>
> I was concerned about Linda's son, and still am actually for i have gone through the same kind of things with my son.
>
> Look in you mirror Aren't you, yourself reacting harshly here?
>
> Why aren't you concerned that you may be being manipulated and lied to?
>
> Is it worse to post something false, or to ask questions and point out the facts, and the truth?
>
> Is it worse to be a liar whether by ignorance or willfully, or to call lies and error by their name?
>
> It seems to me you've already demonstrated your answers...
>
> Enough said?

Cindy,

You say you are very concerned about being lied to? You are blinded by lies to start with, so how are you ever going to see the truth when it is in front of you? This worries me about you. You need some new friends. Some that don't lead you down the path of foolishness. JMO.

No one lied to anyone about Nathan missing, a report being filed, and that Nathan is found. It's all true. As true as the sky is blue, the sea is deep, and this world is full of sin. Don't want to accept it, your choice.

I am not sure who you spoke to in Mississippi, maybe you could provide the person, date and time you spoke to them? That is where the report was filed. I have the name and number of the officer who took the report from Linda, and who was working on the case to look for him. I myself have talked to them.

The past couple days, I have thought about whether to provide this information to you, but I've decided I am not going to give it to you - you know why? I don't trust YOU. I don't trust that you can do you're research properly without making things worse. You have made this a spectacle, like so many other things. I think that's because you do poor research and I believe you are being used to hurt others, and it has nothing to do with getting "truth" out there....maybe you should do some serious thinking about that.

Posted by: Noahswife May 12 2007, 01:32 PM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 12 2007, 09:58 AM)

> Don't miss the next exciting episode of "Opinions, er'body has one" When the next in depth search reveals AAAAAk...
>
> Attached Image

Sera ~

Gurrl,

Can I sign you up as an IRS Form 1099 to write more lines for me? Mine are far too serious.

iw
:"i"

Posted by: seraph|m May 12 2007, 01:42 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 12 2007, 03:11 PM)
>
> Cindy,
>
> You say you are very concerned about being lied to? You are blinded by lies to start with, so how are you ever going to see the truth when it is in front of you? This worries me about you. You need some new friends. Some that don't lead you down the path of foolishness. JMO.
>
> No one lied to anyone about Nathan missing, a report being filed, and that Nathan is found. It's all true. As true as the sky is blue, the sea is deep, and this world is full of sin. Don't want to accept it, your choice.
>
> I am not sure who you spoke to in Mississippi, maybe you could provide the person, date and time you spoke to them? That is where the report was filed. I have the name and number of the officer who took the report from Linda, and who was working on the case to look for him. I myself have talked to them.
>
> The past couple days, I have thought about whether to provide this information to you, but I've decided I am not going to give it to you - you know why? I don't trust YOU. I don't trust that you can do you're research properly without making things worse. You have made this a spectacle, like so many other things. I think that's because you do poor research and I believe you are being used to hurt others, and it has nothing to do with getting "truth" out there....maybe you should do some serious thinking about that.

Wise choice SSOM and very well said. It is truly sad, that a pawn does not know if, when or, how it is being used.

Posted by: awesumtenor May 12 2007, 02:00 PM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 12 2007, 03:42 PM)

> Wise choice SSOM and very well said. It is truly sad, that a pawn does not know if, when or, how it is being used.

hat way they don't know they are expendable until it is too late and, having run out the extent of their sefulness, they are tossed on the scrap heap...

n His service,
r. J

Posted by: HUGGINS130 May 12 2007, 02:16 PM

sn

Posted by: Fran May 12 2007, 05:34 PM

In my mind, I question why the payment did not get posted.

Look at the timing/date of the hearing for the divorce property settlement. Then look at the timing of the Lawsuit filed against Joy and Pickle!

Could this "error" have prevented any attempts for Linda to file any further suits against Danny and 3ABN?

There was just enough time for Danny to file suit against Joy and Pickle. THEN it got posted. My observation is this was very "Convenient." This I base on my knowledge of the relationships Danny has with folks in the area to get what he wants.

Since Danny & 3ABN filed against Joy and Pickle first, doesn't this leave a LOT of room for discovery? Please correct me if I got this wrong?

Come on legal folks contribute here for me.

Did Danny/3ABN follow Matthew 18 before he filed the suit. Danny could help with this as well as J/P. Is it possible to hear from these folks? Maybe not.

IMO 3ABN must be where some of the mis-information is coming from. I believe "loose lips sink ships" and open BIG cans of worms. Danny has very loose lips.

Discovery here we come! Too bad it is all sealed/impounded! Inquiring minds want to know!

(I must come to terms with this impounded stuff. Still sort of refusing to understand that -the right way- My problem)

Posted by: Pickle May 12 2007, 09:42 PM

Cindy,

I'm not sure that you have established that Laird was not an inactive licensed attorney in Illinois. What you cited said that his name didn't match any names in the database. It stopped short of saying that he wasn't licensed in Illinois.

Secondly, you haven't cited anything that would prove that Gailon's company was not holding in reserve an amount to offset lost payments Stacey Fuel received directly from debtors. Shouldn't you do that before being so emphatic that the point you're making is already proven before you make any attempt to prove it?

Fran,

I am unaware of any attempts by Danny or any 3ABN-related entity or individual to set the least esteemed among us in the church to judge regarding any issue discussed over the last 8 months, except Danny's divorce and remarriage and Linda's firing.

Posted by: Fran May 13 2007, 04:04 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 12 2007, 10:42 PM) ☐
>
> Fran,
>
> I am unaware of any attempts by Danny or any 3ABN-related entity or individual to set the least esteemed among us in the church to judge regarding any issue discussed over the last 8 months, except Danny's divorce and remarriage and Linda's firing.

I am going to have to diagram that sentence! Then I will respond! ☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ rofl

I taught Language once, and I do know the parts of speach. This one will be interesting! ☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ rofl

I have to make sure I "get" it! ☒

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 13 2007, 10:23 AM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 13 2007, 05:04 AM) ☐
>
> I am going to have to diagram that sentence! Then I will respond! ☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ rofl
>
> I taught Language once, and I do know the parts of speach. This one will be interesting! ☒ rofl ☒ rofl ☒ rofl
>
> I have to make sure I "get" it! ☒ [/b]

Lemmie breaketh it down.....per the Lang-west....

Ahem....

"I don't know nobody (3ABN/Danny and Dem) that got with with the littlest of the big dawgs in de chach to conversate (not a word) about any of this mess except the divorce, quickie wedding, and Linda gettin' de ax...."

Ahem.....

To wit......

Posted by: Noahswife May 13 2007, 10:53 AM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ May 13 2007, 12:23 PM) ☐
>
> Lemmie breaketh it down.....per the Lang-west....
>
> Ahem....
>
> "I don't know nobody (3ABN/Danny and Dem) that got with with the littlest of the big dawgs in de chach to conversate (not a word) about any of this mess except the divorce, quickie wedding, and Linda gettin' de ax...."
>
> Ahem.....
>
> To wit......

☒ ☒ ☒ ☒ ☒

Re: ☒

No betta I could'a spoke....

Thanks for clearing this up for me.......

Posted by: Eirene May 13 2007, 01:17 PM

[quote name='Pickle' date='May 12 2007, 10:42 PM' post='195316']
Cindy,

I'm not sure that you have established that Laird was not an inactive licensed attorney in Illinois. What you cited said that his name didn't match any names in the database. It stopped short of saying that he wasn't licensed in Illinois.

Of course it was established his license was not active in Illinois at the time of his court appearance. That is why the judge made his decision to put off the litigation until such time as Mrs. Shelton can get a "licensed" attorney in the state of Illinois. The case didn't go forward because of it.
Pickle ,don't even pretend you don't know the details of what happened. It isn't like you 4 aren't in contact with each other.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 13 2007, 07:32 PM

Wasn't certified/licensed/"authorized" at the time of the trial.

Okay.

Is he now? Did he do something that the city/state/USA would "invalidate" him as a lawyer?

No.

Let it go.

He's certified/licensed/"authorized" at this time.

☒ sna

Posted by: princessdi May 13 2007, 10:07 PM

Just some other "clarification"....it was not Aletheia's business to be getting info from anywhere! Taht is the problem. Not your son missing, not your business. You were aksed to pray, that was your business.

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 12 2007, 02:53 AM) ☐
>
> Clarification.
>
> I did not get my info from a website. I only got the contact information from the website. I emailed the Illinois stste police, and then called the Mississippi State police. They both said "No missing report was filed for a Nathan Moore"
>
> Argue with the State Police, as to why they disagree with L.S. as allegedly quoted by sonshineonme.

Posted by: IMM May 14 2007, 12:58 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 13 2007, 11:07 PM) ☐
>
> Just some other "clarification"....it was not Aletheia's business to be getting info from anywhere! Taht is the problem. Not your son missing, not your business. You were aksed to pray, that was your business.

ITA!

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 2 2007, 10:17 PM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 9 2007, 10:08 AM) ☐
>
> Aletheia, Aletheia....I just had to comment on your harsh reactions to the posts regarding Linda's missing son. It amazes me how you can continue to attack everyone who is expressing concern about a missing child...yes, an adult but still he is someone's child. Please stop and think about your words and I would ask you to rethink your approach. I do not know you but you are coming across in a mean spirited way and you are losing any credibility that you might have had in the past before I joined this forum...I have not been impressed with your posts. Why would you be suspicious of where the missing person's report might be filed? I want to think the best of you and your motives but you are making it very difficult. Prayer is vital...not only for a missing son or daughter but for the lost children of Israel....may God bless and may none of us lose our way.

Don't worry, Runner....she didn't have much credibility in the past, either...

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Questions From Gailon Joy

Posted by: Observer May 8 2007, 04:28 AM

Here are some questions asked by Gailon Joy on May 7, 2007.

> QUOTE
>
> 3ABN/Amazing Facts Merger: Dead On... or Dead On Arrival?
>
> The most recent issue of 3ABN World magazine is now out and heralds a new masthead with 3ABN/Amazing Facts boldly exhibited on the front cover.
>
> This reporter has received many inquiries regarding the proposed merger and therefore we have spent nearly two weeks asking questions, listening to answers and taking in various statements by various parties for analysis.
>
> The day the merger was announced with much exuberance there were admittedly a host of questions from throughout the SDA world and quite a bit of excitement mixed with some concerns. The excitement was clearly for a worldwide ministry with a new vision and a purpose to usher in the Second Coming of our Lord, something we have eagerly looked forward to as a denomination for 163 and a half years and spent literally billions of dollars, franks, rubles, and Deutche marks in evangelism, medical ministry, publishing and now media entities. And here before us was the proposal for an Adventist Ministry Conglomerate that transcends the SDA denomination and finally finish the work with the pied piper reportedly being Garwin McNeilus, personally overseeing the negotiations.
>
> And what came out of this was a proposal depicted by the Danny Shelton Apologists online something like this:
>
> An agreement, variously referred to as contracts, and most likely best described as Letters of Intent, that would allow Danny Shelton to bring his 3ABN marbles to the playground; Doug Batchelor would bring his AF Marbles to the playground; they could play marbles, but neither could play with the others' marbles; and if either of the key players decided not to play anymore, they each could take their marbles and go home. It would seem to be more of a joint venture than a merger, but who"s checking the dictionary of legal terms?
>
> Some, including Danny Shelton, would believe the devil is in the press that has dogged 3ABN for the past several months; others would recognize that the Devil is in the details.
>
> In the midst of the enthusiasm, there were a few, particularly employees from both sides and the denominational leadership, that were asking some detailed questions: Would Amazing Facts Secede from the denomination? Would 3ABN join the denomination? Would the employees of the joint venture be qualified for denominational benefits? And would denominational leadership still have at least some seats on the merged Board ex officio as they have currently on the AF Board? And who would be the new constituency that would elect the new board and officers of this merged entity?

Again, we were left to piecing together information from a variety of interviews, e-mails and chat-room apologists. Danny has clearly stated that he has invited Doug Batchelor to serve as President, but has clearly asserted that Danny will remain as CEO of 3ABN. This is in contrast to a Sacramento Central Church official who clearly had understood that Doug would most likely not serve as President, but rather Duane Peterson, the former managing director of AF who retired at the end of March. Duane, a former VP of Champion Corp, a merged Fortune 500 company, would clearly bring GAAP to 3ABN, if he could be convinced, but not likely, to play second fiddle to DLS.

Then there is the issue of denominational affiliation. A chat room question and answer with Danny Shelton at www.ClubAdventist.com probably speaks most profoundly by the very specific issues relating to denominational affiliation that went unanswered by Danny Shelton. Whether employees would be denominational employees remains unanswered to this day. However, Danny Shelton did reveal that the old constituency would be shed and they had asked the 14-member ASI Mission Board, Inc. to serve as their new constituency.

Many were left speechless that AF would secede from its current constituency consisting of a mix of several hundred pastors and laymen in the Northern California Conference to instead become the exclusive pervue of a club of SDA businessmen, very similar to the way 3ABN is run now with the 3-15 members selected by Danny Shelton also serving as the directors of the ministry. A situation this reporter has decried as the underlying reason that 3ABN is facing the dilemma it now faces.

And if the new entity will now be run by 14 laymen and little denominational leadership on the board, and certainly far from the council of many advocated by the Spirit of Prophecy, will AF have cast off its denominational affiliation and with it walked away from denominational benefits such as pensions, insurance and a host of other services under the NAD Umbrella? Apparently that would be the way Doug Batchelor has elected to go, whether by happenstance or by design is unknown.

But then there is the big question, will the current constituency opt to let AF simply walk away or secede from denominational affiliation and become a virtually independent, non-denominational ministry? And if it does, will the various constituencies continue to support AF? More importantly, will the talent accumulated at AF be willing to stay with AF if they lose that denominational affiliation that currently allows seamless transfers between AF and NAD opportunities? Or will they opt to stay with the NAD to complete their pension qualifications and qualify for the other NAD benefits Umbrella?

Many believe the option of having AF secede is dead on arrival. The brain drain would likely be too much to bear and would leave AF simply overwhelmed by the 3ABN side. And then the question, what if they secede and affiliate with Danny Shelton's 3ABN, and loose the support of constituency who may see this as endorsing Danny Lee Shelton and his administration? Who would put Humpty Dumpty back together again, particularly in light of the recently filed lawsuit against this reporter and the implications it bears if they lose?

On the other hand, many welcomed the idea of AF maintaining its denominational affiliation and allowing 3ABN with its 200 Million plus in assets to merge into Amazing Facts. This would bring 3ABN into the denominational fold, require GC audits, likely require significant leadership changes and preserve the assets > for the stockholders in the pews who are virtually unrepresented in the current governance of 3ABN.

>
> Harold Lance, President of the ASI Mission Board, Inc., former ASI coordinator for the Ecclesiastical committee that was to investigate the marriage, divorce and remarriage of Danny Lee Shelton, and those issues only, would clearly state that this is perfectly legal. But then he would also chair the constituency for this merged entity. For most people who learn of the lack of representation and the clubby self-perpetuating membership / board of 3ABN, it is certainly unsatisfactory for a ministry that derives the vast majority of its funds from the stockholders in the pews of the SDA Denomination.
>
> Some have even noted the current proposed mission conglomerate has undertones similar to the leadership issues between the head-strong John Harvey Kellogg, (leader of the Alpha of apostasy), and the denominational leadership of his day, ironically only a little over a century ago. E.G. White frequently admonished Kellogg and the SDA denominational leadership to practice leadership dispersion of the work as the God-given order of things, and frequently spoke against consolidation of the work, but to work together to finish the work. Ultimately, Kellogg created a rift that resulted in numerous casualties and disaffection and led to the medical work shifting from Battle Creek to Loma Linda.
>
> We pray that the wise counsels of many will prevail here and the Lord's Will be done!!!
>
> Gailon Arthur Joy
>
> AUReporter
>
> www.Save3ABN.com

hese questions are being asked by many. People have asked me those questions. I have asked some of hem to others. They are valid. It seems that no one has the answers! One wonders why announcments were nade prior to doing the foundation work which would have settled many organizational issues.

Posted by: watchbird May 10 2007, 05:32 AM

I'm surprised that we have not paid more attention to the questions gathered together in Gailon Joy's letter posted by Observer above.

I wonder which of these seem most important to us here. Does anyone have clues as to the answers to any of these? I'd be interested in knowing which ones seem the most important to various ones of us. Does anyone have additional questions besides these?

Personally, I wonder about why this was something that was pushed through so quickly. So quickly as I understand it, that there was not even time for all board members to be able to attend the hastily called board meetings in person. While those on the Thursday night program seemed focused on making it appear as though this had been "in the works" for months, yet it was obvious even there that from the actual proposal of merger to the consumation was a matter of days. Why the urgency?

I'm also curious as to the relationship of the Weimar/Amazing Facts plans for merger...which had been in the works for actual months if not years... to the new merger. And what about the reported reaction of Weimar officials to the news of an AF/3abn merger? What do Weimar directors see in the new merger that caused them to back away from their own nearly completed merger negotiations with AF?

I'm also very curious as to the basis on which Doug based his assurance to his board that church officials on the highest levels knew of and were approving of it.... especially in light of information I have received since that time which indicates that this is not an accurate reflection of reality.

And then this matter of "constituency". Constituency is a word that I have always considered meant the supporters and "members" of an organization. When used in our church circles, this has always referred to the member churches of the SDA church in a particular organizational unit. Thus the constituency of the Conference is all the SDA churches in that conference... which is interpreted to mean all the members of those churches. For a "Constituency Meeting" all churches elect representatives to that meeting. And so on, up the line it goes until we reach GC level which supposedly considers the membership of the world church as their constituency... the largest body to which the GC is directly accountable. In terms of 3abn, we have considered that the ultimate "consituency" is the "stockholders in the living rooms"... those who have supported 3abn with their cash and promotion through the years. And surely we have expected that as a "supporting ministry" of the church that it would have some lines of accountability to the Conference organization which has promoted it ... even saying that it was the "face of Adventism" to the world.

Of course this has been shown to have been all illusion on our part, for we have learned that Danny Shelton answers to no one... not even in actuality to his handpicked "board of directors" which only serve so long as they do not attempt to question or counter his decisions and actions. But now with this "merger", is this limited concept of "constituency" going to engulf AF as well... so that they are no longer accountable to a representative "constituency" which includes many Conference employees as well as laymen as is presently the case, but only to a small group of ASI leaders... including Garwin and Denzil McNeilus?

What REALLY went on behind the scenes to call for such a drastic change in the AF relationship with the official SDA church.... and caused it to be pushed through quicky board meetings of both AF and 3abn with no time for serious reflection.... and announced to the world before the questions and implications were even noted, much less given answers?

Perhaps we should be giving these questions... and others that may arise from them... more attention than what we have done so far.

Posted by: Observer May 10 2007, 06:54 AM

Watchbird has raised some questions in regard to the "constituency" of Amazing Facts (AF). The issue of constituency is important. I believe that I have some authorative comments to make, due to some reasearch. I am not quoting my source, so take my comments for what they may be. I have made comments in the past based upon an authorataive source, and been found to be wrong. I do not think that I am wrong this time. In addition, I am mixing my own thoughts into my post here.

As I have previously stated, AF is listed in the denominational YEARBOOK. Therefore, it officially has a formal relationship withe the SDA Church, and even while it has some independence, it is denominational organization. But, I have posted that before.

In this relationship, it is connected to the Northern California Conference (NCC). It is listed in the YEARBOOK under the NCC listing. However, as a somewhat independent agency, the NCC does not directly manage AF, and the NCC does not control the operation and minsitry of Amazing Facts.

As is typical, in the corporate world, AF is immediately governed by a Board of Directors. In theory, at least, the Board sets the overall goal and direction of AF. That direction is carried out by Doug Batchelor, as I understand it. The Northern California Conference President (2007 YEARBOOK lists James Pedersen), is believed to be the chairperson of the AF Board. As to what operational power he might have over AF, I would have to assume that it is limited. Typically Boards defer to the CEO, and only set overall goals and objectives.

Overall is the AF constituency. The AF constituency is in my opinion, an interesting one. As would be expected, it includes a number of people chosen by the NCC and AF. It also includes some people who are associated with the Pacific Union Conference, the entire NCC Executive Committee, and the AF Board. Included in this are lay members who probably are largely members of the NCC, and some NCC pastors.

As I look at the composition of the AF constituency, I have mixed evaulations of it. I can not be certain that one can predict exactly what the constituency might do in a situation where it was required to vote on a merger with 3-ABN. I do not think that any such vote is a given. However, part of my feeling is based upon the reality that the so-called merger plan is not complete. This plan is prematrue in that the specifics have not been settled. Once those are settled, I suspect that the AF constituency may be more likely to approve it. But, even then I am not prepared to stay that approval is a given. I simply do not know.

The question has been asked as to why this so-called mergere between Amazing Facts and 3-ABN has come about, why now, and why was it announced well before the specifics had be agreed upon by both parties. I do not think that we know the answer to this question.

The immediate partial response was the 3-ABN considered it in grave financial danger, and felt that a "merger" withe AF would help to reduce its financial danger. To me, this is simply speculative, and unfounded at this time.

There have been other suggestions raised in regard to the perception by 3-ABN that it was liable of some sort of potential harm, and that this was a pre-emptive stike to reduce that harm. I think that it is not helpful to repeat these at this time. So, I will only say that we shall have to wait and see what develops.

Posted by: lurker May 10 2007, 10:06 AM

As a religious organization, Amazing Facts is exempt from having to file 990's. 3ABN is considered to be NTEE Code: X82 (Religious Television) but is not considered to be the same kind of organization as Amazing Facts not just by the State of Illinois but by the IRS. Otherwise, it too would be exempt from filing 990's wouold it not. Might that be part of the reason for the proposed merger?

The 990's reveal a lot.

Will the new comibined organization come under scrutiny to determine its status and to determine whether the whole organization including the Amazing Facts component of it it will now be required to file them or whether the 3ABN component of the organization will now be exempt form filing them?

I'm not saying that 3ABN is not a 501C3 or that it is not tax exempt just that now it has to file 990's and either its staus or the status of Amazing Facts might change.

Posted by: Noahswife May 10 2007, 10:11 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 10 2007, 11:06 AM)
>
> As a religious organization, Amazing Facts is exempt from having to file 990's. 3ABN is not considered to be a religious organization not just by the State of Illinois but by the IRS. Otherwise, it too would be exempt from filing 990's wouold it not. Might that be part of the reason for the proposed merger?
>
> The 990's reveal a lot.
>
> Will the new comibined organization come under scrutiny to determine its status and to determine whether the whole organization including the Amazing Facts component of it it will now be required to file them or whether the 3ABN component of the organization will now be exempt form filing them?

Interesting question this is Lurker. Thanks for pointing out something I had missed and need to think about.

Posted by: lurker May 10 2007, 10:15 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 10 2007, 10:11 AM)
>
> Interesting question this is Lurker. Thanks for pointing out something I had missed and need to think about.

See my corrected post. 3ABN is considered to be religious television but this is not the same thing as being considered to be a religious organization exempt from having to file.

Posted by: lurker May 12 2007, 05:12 AM

This is a rather lengthy article but I found a lot of interest in it

http://www.runquist.com/ARTICLE_ReligTax.htm

OBTAINING FEDERAL EXEMPT DETERMINATION LETTER:990 Filings and UNREASONABLE COMPENSATION ISSUES are of particular interest.

PROPERTY TAX EXEMPTIONS is also of interest. I would assume that there is a charitable dedication clause in 3ABN's articles of incorporation. So what Judge Rowe was speaking of must have been that a portion of the property was used for the production of unrelated business taxable income (whether or not this income was properly reported by the indiviuals involved and taxed.)

Posted by: Observer May 12 2007, 05:51 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 10 2007, 10:06 AM)
>
> As a religious organization, Amazing Facts is exempt from having to file 990's. 3ABN is considered to be NTEE Code: X82 (Religious Television) but is not considered to be the same kind of organization as Amazing Facts not just by the State of Illinois but by the IRS. Otherwise, it too would be exempt from filing 990's wouold it not. Might that be part of the reason for the proposed merger?
>
> The 990's reveal a lot.
>
> Will the new comibined organization come under scrutiny to determine its status and to determine whether the whole organization including the Amazing Facts component of it it will now be required to file them or whether the 3ABN component of the organization will now be exempt form filing them?
>
> I'm not saying that 3ABN is not a 501C3 or that it is not tax exempt just that now it has to file 990's and either its staus or the status of Amazing Facts might change.

The discussion here in regard to IRS orm 990s, their filing by 3-ABN, and religioius organizaitons has stimulated my mind. As I recall the decsion by Judge Rowe, 3-ABN did not organize under the religious exemption section of the not-for-profit law. It simply organized as a general not-for- profit organization.

Therefore it had to file 990s.

If I am wrong on this point, please correct me.

Posted by: lurker May 12 2007, 12:44 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 12 2007, 05:51 AM)
>
> The discussion here in regard to IRS orm 990s, their filing by 3-ABN, and religioius organizaitons has stimulated my mind. As I recall the decsion by Judge Rowe, 3-ABN did not organize under the religious exemption section of the not-for-profit law. It simply organlzed as a general not-for- profit organization. Therefore it had to file 990s.
>
> If I am wrong on this point, please correct me.

Quoting the decision: Applicant was incorporated under the General Not For Profit Corporation Act of the State of Illinois on March 1, 1985, for the following: The purpose for which the corporation is organized are exclusively religious, charitable or educational within the meaning of 501©(3) of the Internal Revnue code of 1954, as amended, and, in furtherence of these purposes, the corporation may:

And then it goes on to say what the corporation may do.

It is my opinion and it is only an opinion that Since 3ABN is not a church according to the definition of a church in the runquist article, in order not to have to file 990's as Amazing Facts does not, 3ABN would have to become a supporting organization of the church under the "umbrella" of the Seventh-day Adventist Church as Amazing Facts is. At this point, if the church has not already accepted the legal liability for the actions of 3ABN, it definately would be forced to do so then.

Or in order to merge with 3ABN, Amazing Facts would have to remove itself from being under the Pacific Union Conference and would have to file 990's.

Posted by: lurker May 12 2007, 01:25 PM

Judge Rowe used Linda's product as an example of the property being used for the production of unrelated business taxable income. I have no quarrel with this and do not know if Linda was aware of whether the profit from her music was being donated to the ministry or being used as personal income. I do wish the judge Rowe had also revealed how the income from orders for books, music, and so forth by Danny, Tommy, Melody, Tammy was handled when it came in to the 3ABN call center. I also wish she had addressed 3ABN advertizing for and delivery of product by non 3ABN for profit entities such as the AntiChrist Agenda (DLS) and Tommy's product http://www.tommyshelton.com/products.htm and Melody's product http://www.melodyshelton.com/

Posted by: Eirene May 12 2007, 06:17 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 10 2007, 06:54 AM)
>
> The immediate partial response was the 3-ABN considered it in grave financial danger, and felt that a "merger" withe AF would help to reduce its financial danger. To me, this is simply speculative, and unfounded at this time.
>
> There have been other suggestions raised in regard to the perception by 3-ABN that it was liable of some > sort of potential harm, and that this was a pre-emptive stike to reduce that harm. I think that it is not helpful to repeat these at this time. So, I will only say that we shall have to wait and see what develops.

Jnless your "source" was Doug or Danny there is a great chance that they may be in error. At this point with letails still in the making, I do not honestly know how anyone could be a solid source. If there are questions o which Danny or Doug doesn't know the answers yet, how could anyone else?

'ou say the "immediate partial response". From who? Though every independent ministry that I know of has jood years and bad as far as finances go, 3abn WAS NOT and IS NOT in such a financial danger that they vould be forced to merge with AF or anyone else. I know this firsthand. The rumors here and elsewhere to he contrary are totally unfounded as usual. Instead of feeding off of each others gossip, and speculation, one ieeds to contact some actual sources at 3abn such as the CFO.
\s far as your statement about "potential harm" again, unfounded. If everyone here would use just a little hought process you would be asking different questions that the ones repeated over this merger.
'he questions to ask are this:
.. If there were "potential harm" why should AF involve itself in that?
!. If 3abn was in extreme financial danger, why would AF risk their own financial status by merging?
}. If there were even a chance that many of the net allegations were true with repurcussions down the road, io ministry would risk their reputation, finances, and standing in the church to merge with such a "corrupt" ind "troubled" ministry. AF has no need to involve themselves in "scandalous" actions. They do not need }abn. The only explanation and answer to those questions would be, they wouldn't involve themselves in such i mess if the "mess" really existed. They would be foolish to do so. I don't believe Doug, AF his constituency, ir his board are foolish. Do you?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 12 2007, 06:32 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 12 2007, 04:17 PM)
>
> The questions to ask are this:
> 1. If there were "potential harm" why should AF involve itself in that?
> 2. If 3abn was in extreme financial danger, why would AF risk their own financial status by merging?
> 3. If there were even a chance that many of the net allegations were true with repurcussions down the road, no ministry would risk their reputation, finances, and standing in the church to merge with such a "corrupt" and "troubled" ministry. AF has no need to involve themselves in "scandalous" actions. They do not need 3abn. The only explanation and answer to those questions would be, they wouldn't involve themselves in such a mess if the "mess" really existed. They would be foolish to do so. I don't believe Doug, AF his constituency, or his board are foolish. Do you?

:irene,

've asked and I agree. They aren't foolish.

Posted by: no_cults May 12 2007, 08:09 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ May 10 2007, 06:32 AM)
>
> I'm surprised that we have not paid more attention to the questions gathered together in Gailon Joy's letter posted by Observer above.
>
> I wonder which of these seem most important to us here. Does anyone have clues as to the answers to any > of these? I'd be interested in knowing which ones seem the most important to various ones of us. Does anyone have additional questions besides these?

>
> Personally, I wonder about why this was something that was pushed through so quickly. So quickly as I understand it, that there was not even time for all board members to be able to attend the hastily called board meetings in person. While those on the Thursday night program seemed focused on making it appear as though this had been "in the works" for months, yet it was obvious even there that from the actual proposal of merger to the consumation was a matter of days. Why the urgency?
>
> I'm also curious as to the relationship of the Weimar/Amazing Facts plans for merger...which had been in the works for actual months if not years... to the new merger. And what about the reported reaction of Weimar officials to the news of an AF/3abn merger? What do Weimar directors see in the new merger that caused them to back away from their own nearly completed merger negotiations with AF?
>
> I'm also very curious as to the basis on which Doug based his assurance to his board that church officials on the highest levels knew of and were approving of it.... especially in light of information I have received since that time which indicates that this is not an accurate reflection of reality.
>
> And then this matter of "constituency". Constituency is a word that I have always considered meant the supporters and "members" of an organization. When used in our church circles, this has always referred to the member churches of the SDA church in a particular organizational unit. Thus the constituency of the Conference is all the SDA churches in that conference... which is interpreted to mean all the members of those churches. For a "Constituency Meeting" all churches elect representatives to that meeting. And so on, up the line it goes until we reach GC level which supposedly considers the membership of the world church as their constituency... the largest body to which the GC is directly accountable. In terms of 3abn, we have considered that the ultimate "consituency" is the "stockholders in the living rooms"... those who have supported 3abn with their cash and promotion through the years. And surely we have expected that as a "supporting ministry" of the church that it would have some lines of accountability to the Conference organization which has promoted it ... even saying that it was the "face of Adventism" to the world.
>
> Of course this has been shown to have been all illusion on our part, for we have learned that Danny Shelton answers to no one... not even in actuality to his handpicked "board of directors" which only serve so long as they do not attempt to question or counter his decisions and actions. But now with this "merger", is this limited concept of "constituency" going to engulf AF as well... so that they are no longer accountable to a representative "constituency" which includes many Conference employees as well as laymen as is presently the case, but only to a small group of ASI leaders... including Garwin and Denzil McNeilus?
>
> What REALLY went on behind the scenes to call for such a drastic change in the AF relationship with the official SDA church.... and caused it to be pushed through quicky board meetings of both AF and 3abn with no time for serious reflection.... and announced to the world before the questions and implications were even noted, much less given answers?
>
> Perhaps we should be giving these questions... and others that may arise from them... more attention than what we have done so far.

'ou ask WHY this was pushed through so quickly (before org. structures were settled)?

\s I said in a previous post -- I "suspect" there may have been another reason and vould not be surprised if there were another BOMBSHELL looming on the horizon.

ust from reading posts from those who claim to know DS on a face-to-face level ınd observing his actions, I have some doubts re: his longterm success in his ıew domestic situation. Capiche? (Just a hunch and not a hope)

Posted by: Observer May 12 2007, 08:16 PM

> QUOTE(no_cults @ May 12 2007, 08:09 PM)
>
> You ask WHY this was pushed through so quickly (before org. structures were settled)?
>
> As I said in a previous post -- I "suspect" there may have been another reason and > would not be surprised if there were another BOMBSHELL looming on the horizon.
>
> Just from reading posts from those who claim to know DS on a face-to-face level > and observing his actions, I have some doubts re: his longterm success in his > new domestic situation. Capiche? (Just a hunch and not a hope)

Much of what is said on this issue is speculative, to include what I say.

We simpl do not know.

One reason that we do not know, and therefore speculate is that the details are not settled, and people connected with Amasing Facts, and 3-ABN have made statements that are not accurate.

Posted by: joyce May 12 2007, 08:53 PM

> QUOTE(no_cults @ May 12 2007, 06:09 PM)
>
> You ask WHY this was pushed through so quickly (before org. structures were settled)?
>
> As I said in a previous post -- I "suspect" there may have been another reason and > would not be surprised if there were another BOMBSHELL looming on the horizon.
>
> Just from reading posts from those who claim to know DS on a face-to-face level > and observing his actions, I have some doubts re: his longterm success in his > new domestic situation. Capiche? (Just a hunch and not a hope)

Probably a good hunch. Statistics show that very few third marriages survive, especially when both parties had two previous failed marriages. They need our prayers for sure.
Joyce

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 12 2007, 08:59 PM

> QUOTE(joyce @ May 12 2007, 10:53 PM)
>
> Statistics show that very few third marriages survive, especially when both parties had two previous failed marriages.
> Joyce

Especially if a third marriage is subjected to the combination fishbowl/tornado that this one has been subjected to since day one. The kids of the mix are the ones I feel the most sorry for--they didn't choose any of this...

shepherdswife

Posted by: Fran May 12 2007, 10:20 PM

[quote name='lurker' date='May 12 2007, 02:25 PM' post='195222']
Judge Rowe used Linda's product as an example of the property being used for the production of unrelated business taxable income. I have no quarrel with this and do not know if Linda was aware of whether the profit from her music was being donated to the ministry or being used as personal income. I do wish the judge Rowe had also revealed how the income from orders for books, music, and so forth by Danny, Tommy, Melody, Tammy was handled when it came in to the 3ABN call center. I also wish she had addressed 3ABN advertizing for and delivery of product by non 3ABN for profit entities such as the AntiChrist Agenda (DLS) and Tommy's product http://www.tommyshelton.com/products.htm and Melody's product http://www.melodyshelton.com/
[/quote]

Lurker;

Since you brought this up, I have questions too. The quote function is not working in preview, therfore, I am red & the Lawsuit is in Blue.

[quote]Applicant's contract with the Seventh-day Adventists does not state that applicant's use of the property is contingent upon any control what so ever of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The document merely states that the entities support the efforts of each other [/quote].

Fran: Praise God from Whom ALL blessings flow!

[quote]Nothing in the record establishes the Seventh-day Adventist's authority to operate the subject property under its own jurisdiction, and, in fact, the testimony of Danny Shelton was that applicant is not owned by or controlled by the Seventh-day Adventist Church. [/quote]

Yep, this is true.

[quote]Although Danny Shelton testified that he has written three books about the teachings and principles of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, (Tr. pp. 155-157) [/quote]

Danny openly testifies here that he wrote books.

[quote] Although Danny Shelton testified that he has written three books about the teachings and principles of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, (Tr. pp. 155-157) those books were not admitted into evidence, nor were the circumstances regarding the religious nature or financial information about the books admitted into evidence. [/quote]

This is another instance where "Information was not provided" and since they can only go by what they were provided they made the following statement. Silence on a subject can be lying about the subject.

Were the books copyrighted?

Did Danny receive royalties?

I believe we now know the answer of that!

Did Danny charge 3ABN for advertising the books since he was the publisher, Danny Lee Shelton?

How much did the "printing" cost;?

How much were the "royalties" received?

How much "profit" was received by Danny?

How much of his profits came from 3ABN donors, since the end purchaser was 3ABN to sell these books through 3ABN?

From reading on several pages of this document, you will read that Danny sets the sales price and the board has nothing to do with this decision. Remember that Danny also decides the cost to 3ABN! Is this "Price Fixing"?

Since the auditors/investigators trying to receive disclosure facts, were not provided any evidence/information, this is the only conclusion they could come to.

[quote]Certainly, nothing connects the writing, publication, or distribution of that material to the property at issue. [/quote]

Now we come to Linda's CD.

[quote]In addition, there is discrepancy in the testimony of Linda Shelton. She stated she did not receive royalty payments for the CDs (Tr. pp. 595, 617) and later admitted that she did (Tr. p. 619). [/quote]

Was she even aware she received royalties?

Danny handles all the finances at 3ABN.

Did he handle the household finances and taxes?

Did these royalties get reported on their tax return?

It was a fact that Linda did not do the taxes. Danny did. Danny sent her an email that he needed her to sign the tax documents. He did not go over them in the email, he just said he had to have her signature.

Did Linda blindly sign these tax returns?

[quote]The CD admitted into evidence, entitled "I think About Grace", has a copyright mark on it. (Applicant's Ex. No. 24) [/quote]

Were Danny's books copyrighted?

Did he receive royalties?

Why is it just her CD that is in question?

Why would Danny readily provide information about her stuff, but NOT PROVIDE information/evidence about his stuff?

What about Danny's music?

Why not Makin' Memories? Danny sang on that one! Did he get royalties?

What about Danny and Tommy's CD's?

Why were they not admitted into evidence?

Why was there no information provided except on Linda's music?

[quote]Broadcast Music Incorporated, a private company unaffiliated with applicant, licenses her songs. (Tr. pp. 617-620).

The songs on the CD belong to Linda, and were copyrighted by her in 2001. (Tr. pp. 620-623). [/quote]

Having her music copyrighted is absolutely what she should have done.

It is not a sin to protect your music.

It is smart business!

It seems the problem arose from using Danny to promote it as Danny/3ABN or as Danny Lee Shelton, the publisher.

[quote]Linda insisted that the (800) area code, toll free telephone number is strictly for prayer requests (Tr. p. 608, 612); [/quote]

I am sure she saw the number on the front. She would know that phone number!

[quote]however, it is the number listed on the inside label of her CD that was admitted into evidence. The (800) telephone number is listed for ordering additional CDs.

The outside label had the (618) area code telephone number listed with the address of applicant. [/quote]

Who entered this CD into evidence?

Who was it that pointed the inside 800 number out to the auditors? It says, " however, it is the number listed on the inside label of her CD that was admitted into evidence."

Again, who specifically admitted this particular CD into evidence?

Who purposely omitted any of Danny's, Melody's or Tommy's items?

Was this preplanned?

Applicant's Fall/Winter 2001-2002 newsletter has an advertisement for Linda Shelton's new CD, "I Think About Grace."

The advertisement has the toll free number listed for orders. (Intervenor's Ex. No. 8; Applicant's Ex. No. 24; Tr. pp. 644- 645).

This one Linda will have to answer. She did put the newsletters together.
Did she do the advertising slots, or did someone else?

Did she just receive the material and place them in the newsletters?

Pp 32/33 of 46

Posted by: Snoopy Jun 2 2007, 08:39 PM

> QUOTE(lurker @ May 12 2007, 05:12 AM)
>
> This is a rather lengthy article but I found a lot of interest in it

> http://www.runquist.com/ARTICLE_ReligTax.htm
>
> OBTAINING FEDERAL EXEMPT DETERMINATION LETTER:990 Filings and UNREASONABLE COMPENSATION ISSUES are of particular interest.
>
> PROPERTY TAX EXEMPTIONS is also of interest. I would assume that there is a charitable dedication clause in 3ABN's articles of incorporation. So what Judge Rowe was speaking of must have been that a portion of the property was used for the production of unrelated business taxable income (whether or not this income was properly reported by the indiviuals involved and taxed.)

Thank you for that link, lurker. I have not read the article yet, but plan to carefully.

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Proofs, Or Lack Thereof

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 5 2007, 06:26 PM

I hope no one thinks I'm in any way defending Danny or Tommy but there is something that has troubled me a bit. Many times there have been people calling on the defenders of DS and TS to offer proof that certain allegations are false. In many cases there can be no proof. It's almost impossible to prove a negative. Someone can prove you did something but it's much harder and many times impossible to prove you did not do something. Thus in the US we have to have proof of guilt for a conviction but the defendant does not have to prove innocence for an acquittal.

If someone accused me of robbing a bank on Jan 18, 1999 (for instance) it would in all likelihood be absolutely impossible for me to prove I did not rob the bank. There would be very little I could do to defend myself without something like maybe a check I wrote in some other state that day. To be acquitted of the robbery I would not have to prove my innocence, but the prosecution would have to prove my guilt for a conviction. (BTW I've never been accused of robbing a bank, at least not yet)

I guess what I'm getting at is that we are in danger of causing false assumptions when the defendants in these issues cannot offer proof that something did not happen. There is plenty of proof for the allegations, but one of those proofs should not be the lack of proof that they did not do something.

Yes I know this is not a court of law, however it is the court of public opinion which could ultimately affect a court decision.

Richard

Posted by: daylily Feb 5 2007, 08:48 PM

Richard, I hadn't thougth about it but I suppose you are correct in saying it is hard to prove what you didn't do unless you have witnesses to say you were doing something else.

daylily

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 5 2007, 09:03 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 5 2007, 07:26 PM)

> I hope no one thinks I'm in any way defending Danny or Tommy but there is something that has troubled me a bit. Many times there have been people calling on the defenders of DS and TS to offer proof that certain allegations are false. In many cases there can be no proof. It's almost impossible to prove a negative. Someone can prove you did something but it's much harder and many times impossible to prove you did not do something. Thus in the US we have to have proof of guilt for a conviction but the defendant does not have to prove innocence for an acquittal.
>
> If someone accused me of robbing a bank on Jan 18, 1999 (for instance) it would in all likelihood be absolutely impossible for me to prove I did not rob the bank. There would be very little I could do to defend myself without something like maybe a check I wrote in some other state that day. To be acquitted of the robbery I would not have to prove my innocence, but the prosecution would have to prove my guilt for a conviction. (BTW I've never been accused of robbing a bank, at least not yet)
>
> I guess what I'm getting at is that we are in danger of causing false assumptions when the defendants in these issues cannot offer proof that something did not happen. There is plenty of proof for the allegations, > but one of those proofs should not be the lack of proof that they did not do something.

>
> Yes I know this is not a court of law, however it is the court of public opinion which could ultimately affect a court decision.
>
> Richard

u contraire, mon frere... if you were accused of robbing a bank in Dallas on Jan 18, 1999 and you could rove you were not in Dallas on said date, you just proved you could not have robbed the bank in question; he space-time continuum in which we exist precludes one from being in two places at the same time.

he reason they are being asked to produce 'proof' is because they have said in myriad occasions that said roof exists and is in their possession... and the other side, when requested has brought forth evidence of the he things they have suggested.

he danny apologists are being asked nothing more or less than has been asked of those they oppose; by oth third parties and the danny apologists; the difference is that the danny apologistshave not been orthcoming yet keep insisting that they should be 'trusted'.

n His service,
r. J

Posted by: erik Feb 5 2007, 09:05 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 5 2007, 04:26 PM)
>
> I hope no one thinks I'm in any way defending Danny or Tommy but there is something that has troubled me a bit. Many times there have been people calling on the defenders of DS and TS to offer proof that certain allegations are false. In many cases there can be no proof. It's almost impossible to prove a negative. Someone can prove you did something but it's much harder and many times impossible to prove you did not do something. Thus in the US we have to have proof of guilt for a conviction but the defendant does not have to prove innocence for an acquittal.
>
> If someone accused me of robbing a bank on Jan 18, 1999 (for instance) it would in all likelihood be absolutely impossible for me to prove I did not rob the bank. There would be very little I could do to defend myself without something like maybe a check I wrote in some other state that day. To be acquitted of the robbery I would not have to prove my innocence, but the prosecution would have to prove my guilt for a conviction. (BTW I've never been accused of robbing a bank, at least not yet)
>
> I guess what I'm getting at is that we are in danger of causing false assumptions when the defendants in these issues cannot offer proof that something did not happen. There is plenty of proof for the allegations, but one of those proofs should not be the lack of proof that they did not do something.
>
> Yes I know this is not a court of law, however it is the court of public opinion which could ultimately affect a court decision.
>
> Richard

ichard,

ery valid point, but if the there was no truth to any of the charges against danny or tommy, they could at he very least put out affidavits signed under penlety of perjury in front of notory.

hat would go a long way to at least rebutting the charges that sit out there, and in the case of danny he could provide his grand proof of linda's wickedness.

erik

Posted by: daylily Feb 5 2007, 09:16 PM

.."the space-time continuum in which we exist precludes one from being in two places at the same time." (Mr J)

Unless, of course, you are a bird as suggested by Sir Robert Boyle

---

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 5 2007, 09:36 PM

If we knew we were talking directly with Danny then yes we could ask for proof, because he claims he has the proof, (proof of the proof?) however most of the time we have no idea who we are talking to when they are defending Danny, for all we know it's the village idiot down the street. From them we should not expect proof of innocense.. The accusers need to show proof for guilt, the defenders simply have to show that those proofs are in doubt. In all likelihood they cannot provide proof that they are innocent. I personally believe there is plenty of proof that Tommy is guilty.

Mr. J your example is valid for establishing innocence, however in a court of law it's not required. All that is required for acquittal is reasonable doubt of guilt. I once sat on a drunk driving jury where we were quite sure the defendant was guilty, there was no proof that he was innocent but neither was there reasonable proof that he was guilty, therefore against our personal preferences we acquitted him.

Really my only concern is that we don't take their lack of proof of innocence as proof of guilt.

Richard

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 5 2007, 09:40 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 5 2007, 11:36 PM)
>
> ...Really my only concern is that we don't take their lack of proof of innocence as proof of guilt.

...but that is how "real life" is.... if you don't have proof of your "innocence" in court - you are found guilty... (normally)

JMO.

☒ sn

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 5 2007, 09:46 PM

Daylily when you said something about a bird that reminded me of Jonathan Livingston Seagull, by Richard Bach. As one who flew airplanes in the 70's (as did Bach) anything to do with flight got my attention, especially a bird that went ourside the norms of society. Now where is that book? Hmmm

> QUOTE(daylily @ Feb 5 2007, 10:16 PM)
>
> .."the space-time continuum in which we exist precludes one from being in two places at the same time." (Mr J)
> Unless, of course, you are a bird as suggested by Sir Robert Boyle

No no no, you are not guilty until proven innocent, you are innocent until proven guilty. At least that's the way it's supposed to work. It dosn't? Maybe I've just not been in a court room enough. (Thankfully)

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ Feb 5 2007, 10:40 PM)
>
> ...but that is how "real life" is.... if you don't have proof of your "innocence" in court - you are found guilty... (normally)
>
> JMO.
>
> ☒ sn

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 5 2007, 09:55 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 5 2007, 10:36 PM)
>
> Mr. J your example is valid for establishing innocence, however in a court of law it's not required. All that is required for acquittal is reasonable doubt of guilt.

If you definitively can establish innocence, as a matter of fact, then you wont have to worry about burdens of proof or the opinion of 12 of your peers...

> QUOTE
>
> Really my only concern is that we don't take their lack of proof of innocence as proof of guilt.

We don't; we take the evidence of guilt as proof of guilt...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Ralph Feb 5 2007, 09:56 PM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ Feb 5 2007, 08:40 PM)

> ...but that is how "real life" is.... if you don't have proof of your "innocence" in court - you are found guilty... (normally)
>
> JMO.
>
> ☒ sn

Often that depends upon the lawyers. Ah to have a smart (I didn't say good) lawyer.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 5 2007, 11:08 PM

Remember the legal system uses all kinds of different standards of proof and also that there are different types of burdens (for example the evidentiary burden) that shifts at different times in a trial or other legal proceeding. (And different types of evidence are entitled to different evidentiary weight as well)

Probable cause is a relatively low standard of proof.

Preponderance of the evidence is generally used in most civil actions.

Clear and convincing evidence is used in some civil actions.

And the wikipedia defines beyond a reasonable doubt this way.....

Beyond a reasonable doubt

This is the standard required by the prosecution in most criminal cases within an adversarial system. This means that the proposition must be proven to the extent that there is no "reasonable doubt" in the mind of a reasonable person. There can still be a doubt, but only to the extent that it would be "unreasonable" to assume the falsity of the proposition. The precise meaning of words such as "reasonable" and "doubt" are usually defined within jurisprudence of the applicable country. In the United States, it is usually reversible error to instruct a jury that they should find guilt on a certain percentage of certainty (such as 90% certain). Usually, reasonable doubt is defined as "any doubt which would make a reasonable person hesitate in the most important of his or her affairs."

Posted by: wwjd Feb 5 2007, 11:22 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 5 2007, 06:26 PM)
>
> I hope no one thinks I'm in any way defending Danny or Tommy but there is something that has troubled me a bit. Many times there have been people calling on the defenders of DS and TS to offer proof that certain allegations are false. In many cases there can be no proof. It's almost impossible to prove a negative. Someone can prove you did something but it's much harder and many times impossible to prove you did not do something. Thus in the US we have to have proof of guilt for a conviction but the defendant does not have to prove innocence for an acquittal.
> Richard

Richard, for once, we agree on something and I must say you have stated it well. Several friends and I have discussed the fact that there are many situations that could arise where you could not prove your innocence. Thanks for making that point

---

Posted by: Johann Feb 6 2007, 01:05 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 6 2007, 07:22 AM)
>
> Richard, for once, we agree on something and I must say you have stated it well. Several friends and I have discussed the fact that there are many situations that could arise where you could not prove your innocence.
> Thanks for making that point

When this whole mess started Danny insisted that he had proofs that Linda and Dr. Arild Abrahamsen had been vacationing together in Florida together in April 2004. When my wife, Irmgard, and I stepped forward and told him this was impossible because we had been staying with the doctor at that time at hiscplace in Norway while Irmgard was getting daily treatments - this made Danny so angry that he had Dr. Walt Thompson fire me from the employment at 3ABN.

Then it seems like Danny realized he could not use that false proof, so he invented the Spiritual Adultery explanation and used it until it was demonstrated here on BSDA that this did not give him the right to divorce Linda.

Then he abandoned the Spiritual Adultery explanation and started inventing a host of others.

I hope that you have read my correspondance with Dr. Walt Thompson which I posted as post #101 in Was Linda innocent?

I have not seen any comments on it by Bystander nor WWJD.

Posted by: princessdi Feb 6 2007, 10:22 AM

The problem is that Danny keep saying he has evidence of this or that. We are just asking him to produce it. He hasn't, to my knowledge not even in a court of law, where some of it could have been presented.

Once, again, I am going to say that I, personally, am not looking at he lack of evidence to contradict the evidence already presented, but Dannyh's own actions. Spiritual adultery cannot be committed against Danny....he is not God - simple! They had Linda sign a gag order, and cheated her out of right portion as cofounder of 3ABN - we have the document to prove it, and nobody denies it. Danny lied with his first email here to BSDA, we have that, he professed his love for a women and calimed to want to work on his marriage. I would not be surprised if he wasn't on the plane typing that lie on his way to Guam for a quickie divorce[last sentence stricly from the book of Princess]. He allowed his brother who has standing allegations of child molestation work around children at 3ABn, without warning a soul. - We know Tommy was working there, there wwere children there, and we have at least three allegations posted here.

So you see, I don't have to worry about what Danny is not presenting, I am having a whole lot of trouble with what he has presented.

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 5 2007, 09:22 PM)
>
> Richard, for once, we agree on something and I must say you have stated it well. Several friends and I have discussed the fact that there are many situations that could arise where you could not prove your innocence.
> Thanks for making that point

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 11:28 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Feb 6 2007, 11:22 AM)
>
> [color=#993399] They had Linda sign a gag order, and cheated her out of right portion as cofounder of 3ABN - we have the document to prove it, and nobody denies it.

I do not claim to have in depth knowledge of not for profit corporations (and any book I have on the subject is in storage and unreachable), but I do not believe linda was cheated out of anything as a cofounder. She was basically given a severance pay that from what I have read elsewhere at BSDA was inline with what is customary in the industry for the position she held. Remember, she did not have an employment contract or the severance pay would have been covered in it should something go wrong. (Remember, like many SDA christians I have met that work for the denomination or do business with each other, we presume as christians we will treat each other fairly.......and I have a bridge too) I have no doubt that Illinois like most states is an "employment at will" state so she could have been fired like anyone else without a contract. Now she might have sued for wrongful discharge if she had not signed the contract but she gave up the right for the security of the agreement she signed.

When 3ABN chose to be a not for profit under IRS laws and state law, they benefited in many ways that other corporations do not. I also believe this means that Danny and Linda were no longer "owners" in the sense of one having ownership in a corporation. Someone with more knowledge of not for profits should quickly correct me here if I am wrong (which I may be).

The problem that I see (among many) is that Danny still acts like 3ABN is "his" to do with as he wishes. In his position on the board and in the day to day running he has the authority to still do things like an owner but he is not an owner anymore. He gave that up to get the benefits (tax) of having a not for profit. That is why the court in Illinois was concerned that 3ABN does not really function like a not for profit and I see little evidence to the contrary myself.

I am sorry Linda did not seek legal counsel before signing the agreement. I am disgusted that the people who presented her with the contract did not believe it would stand the test of legal scrutiny as to its fairness. The courts are not there to protect us from our merely dumb or uneducated mistakes unless they are illegal. I am sorry she was naive enough to think the ministry she has apparently given so much to would not betray her. I do not know her and have only seen her briefly when asked to watch something by my parents. I know from personal experience with lots of mistakes in my own life that realizing and accepting my role in that I "volunteered" to be part of the whole equation that in the end left me feeling betrayed for whatever reason and taking responsibility for my role is REALLY hard. I have found forgiving myself for participating in my own victimization was and still is the hardest thing I have ever done. Learning and not repeating what is often a life time behavior takes tremendous strength that only can come from understanding and prayer.

But, I am going to be honest here. I am tired of SDAs (or anyone else) thinking it is ok to not pay women equal salaries "for the good of the ministry" or ask people to subvert the law and "donate" their overtime hours rather than get paid for them or as I have read elsewhere, not use "GAP standards in their accounting practices. I am sorry but lack of education is NOT an excuse. As an SDA we are trained from childhood to "sacrifice" for the good of presenting the message to the world but I have seen too many instances of unfairness result and certainly a lack of commensurate sacrifice by those doing the asking (GW for example will never lose his child in Iraq or worry that he might).

It is my understanding that the property settlement is still being litigated. Therefore, what Linda is entitled to as an asset from their marriage is still in the process of resolution. But, unless I am wrong, she is not entitled to any assets of 3ABN just because she was a co-founder. Not on legal grounds.

As for Danny's evidence that he was morally entitled to divorce his wife and remarry, I have yet to see or hear anything I find supported by "evidence" in the legal sense. That is why civil and criminal courts have burdens of proof and rules for what constitutes evidence or even makes a prima facie case. The moral standard that Danny is being held to is on its face pretty clear. There either was adultery or there was not. I have no idea what kind of evidence the church normally requires in reaching that conclusion. I obviously do not know what evidence those in authority to decide such things were shown and why they found it allowed Danny to morally do what he did. But based on all I have seen and heard here, this is a perfect example why I have not (and would never) trust this church as a trier of facts.

OK. Off my soap box.

nw

Posted by: princessdi Feb 6 2007, 11:43 AM

I do not claim to have in depth knowledge of not for profit corporations (and any book I have on the subject is in storage and unreachable), but I do not believe linda was cheated out of anything as a cofounder. She was basically given a severance pay that from what I have read elsewhere at BSDA was inline with what is customary in the industry for the position she held. Remember, she did not have an employment contract or the severance pay would have been covered in it should something go wrong. (Remember, like many SDA christians I have met that work for the denomination or do business with each other, we presume as christians we will treat each other fairly.......and I have a bridge too) I have no doubt that Illinois like most states is an "employment at will" state so she could have been fired like anyone else without a contract. Now she might have sued for wrongful discharge if she had not signed the contract but she gave up the right for the security of the agreement she signed.

She was co founder, and you can still go many places on the internet that will tell you that. As co-founder she should have been bought out. Danny is also an employee, if he leaves, I really want to see what happens if they offer him $250,000.00. Not talking about what she had or didnt' have, I am talking aobut doing right when you call yourself a leader in [SDA]Christian Living. Man's law should not have been necessary for them to treat her fairly. Now 3ABN is pure big business then get them some big subiness programming and go for it, but while they are claiming to be agents to lead people to the life changing power of God, they need to do better. You can't claim buisness when it is convenient, your chirstianity should not stopat the door to your board room. She keeds to take the whole mess to Gloria Allred.........

When 3ABN chose to be a not for profit under IRS laws and state law, they benefited in many ways that other corporations do not. I also believe this means that Danny and Linda were no longer "owners" in the sense of one having ownership in a corporation. Someone with more knowledge of not for profits should quickly correct me here if I am wrong (which I may be).

The problem that I see (among many) is that Danny still acts like 3ABN is "his" to do with as he wishes. In his position on the board and in the day to day running he has the authority to still do things like an owner but he is not an owner anymore. He gave that up to get the benefits (tax) of having a not for profit. That is why the court in Illinois was concerned that 3ABN does not really function like a not for profit and I see little evidence to the contrary myself.

Exactly! Choosing to acknowledge that little loop hole when it suits him.........

I am sorry Linda did not seek legal counsel before signing the agreement. I am disgusted that the people who presented her with the contract did not believe it would stand the test of legal scrutiny as to its fairness. The courts are not there to protect us from our merely dumb or uneducated mistakes unless they are illegal. I am sorry she was naive enough to think the ministry she has apparently given so much to would not betray her. I do not know her and have only seen her briefly when asked to watch something by my parents. I know from personal experience with lots of mistakes in my own life that realizing and accepting my role in that I "volunteered" to be part of the whole equation that in the end left me feeling betrayed for whatever reason and taking responsibility for my role is REALLY hard.

Right once again, exactly my point. Had they not all checked their christianity at the board room dorr, they would not have even presented such a document to her. We are called to a higher standard in every area of our lives. If Linda was as wrong as she could be, caught int he act, 3ABN should have been the leader in showing God's loving correction, discipline, healing and forgiveness. Not resorting to tatics that rival Donald Trump.

But, I am going to be honest here. I am tired of SDAs (or anyone else) thinking it is ok to not pay women equal salaries "for the good of the ministry" or ask people to subvert the law and "donate" their overtime hours rather than get paid for them or as I have read elsewhere, not use "GAP standards in their accounting practices. I am sorry but lack of education is NOT an excuse. As an SDA we are trained from childhood to "sacrifice" for the good of presenting the message to the world but I have seen too many instances of unfairness result and certainly a lack of commensurate sacrifice by those doing the asking (GW for example will never lose his child in Iraq or worry that he might).

Go ahead!! you preachin' now!!

It is my understanding that the property settlement is still being litigated. Therefore, what Linda is entitled to as an asset from their marriage is still in the process of resolution. But, unless I am wrong, she is not entitled to any assets of 3ABN just because she was a co-founder. Not on legal grounds.

She would be had she not signed them away in that document..........

As for Danny's evidence that he was morally entitled to divorce his wife and remarry, I have yet to see or hear anything I find supported by "evidence" in the legal sense. That is why civil and criminal courts have burdens of proof and rules for what constitutes evidence or even makes a prima facie case. The moral standard that Danny is being held to is on its face pretty clear. There either was adultery or there was not. I have no idea what kind of evidence the church normally requires in reaching that conclusion. I obviously do not know what evidence those in authority to decide such things were shown and why they found it allowed Danny to morally do what he did. But based on all I have seen and heard here, this is a perfect example why I have not (and would never) trust this church as a trier of facts.

OK. Off my soap box.

Ain't nothing legal about "spiritual adultery".
nw

Posted by: Bystander Feb 6 2007, 12:48 PM

But, I am going to be honest here. I am tired of SDAs (or anyone else) thinking it is ok to not pay women.....
[/quote]

I agree but in this case, Linda made a larger salary than Danny..You can check it out

---

Posted by: Observer Feb 6 2007, 12:56 PM

Re: "I am sorry Linda did not seek legal counsel before signing the agreement.

Linda did have legal advice prior to signing that contract.

However, in spite of that signed contract, and the fact that she had legal advice there is still reason to litigate.

1) Most people do not realize that in complex issues you must obtain the services of an attorney who specializes in those issues. Many do not realize the care that goes into the preparation of legal advice.

I have a friend who until recently was a Senior Partner in a national law firm. He practiced law in a specialized area of law, and became a recognized expert. He would not even consider thinking about giving legal advice outside of his area of expertise.

When he was a Senior Partner in that national law firm, every written opinon that left the office where he worked, had to be reviewed and signed by two Senior Partners. That made it very expensive. His lowest fee was several hundred dollars an hour, and his fees went up from that level. Two of the senior partners, regardless of who wrote the opinon, brief, or whatever, had to review, check, and sign off one before the document left the office.

2) It is not enough for a person to sign away legal rights that they have, even if they retained counsel. The Court will want to know that they signed away their legal rights after fully understanding what they had done, and the consequences of that.

I once needed to retain an attorney to draft an agreement with me on a matter involving another person. I developed a list of ten expert lawyers in that field. I narrowed it down to three, and selected one. During my initial interview with him I told him: I want you to give X everything that they are legally entitled to recieve, without exception, but nothing more. The resposne from the attorney was: That is the way I will operate in representing you. In order to protect you, and the agreement that you want signed you must give them everything that they are entitled to.

The other person decided not to retain an attorney, and to represent themself. In order to protect me, and to prevent litigation to throw out the terms of the agreement, my attorney inserted several paragraphs into the document that clearly stated the issues and consequences of doing so. The other person persested in a refusal to retain an atorney, and the agreement was filed with the Court.

Folks, why are issues still in litigation? Very simply because the agreement signed by Linda and Danny was written is such a way that it has not prevented the presented litigation. That is the bottom line.

Prior to the present litigation, I discussed it with lawyers whom I know, and was told that it contained clauses that could be challenged, and likely would not be enforced by a judge.

Posted by: Chez Feb 6 2007, 12:58 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 12:48 PM)
>
> But, I am going to be honest here. I am tired of SDAs (or anyone else) thinking it is ok to not pay women.....
> I agree but in this case, Linda made a larger salary than Danny..You can check it out

I saw someplace where Danny made $50,000 and Linda made $49,000. This was a legal document submitted by Danny.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 6 2007, 01:25 PM

> QUOTE(Chez @ Feb 6 2007, 12:58 PM)
>
> I saw someplace where Danny made $50,000 and Linda made $49,000. This was a legal document submitted by Danny.

That must have been an older document. Before she left, she was making several more thousand than Danny because the board offered them a raise and Danny refused his and LInda took hers. Not saying there was anything wrong with that just that, in this case, the woman was making more.

[quote name='Observer' date='Feb 6 2007, 12:56 PM' post='175829']

Re: "I am sorry Linda did not seek legal counsel before signing the agreement.

Linda did have legal advice prior to signing that contract.

Greg, you just refuted the statements that have been made on here over and over that 3abn forced Linda to sign the contract without legal counsel. That has been hashed and rehashed here. You obviously found differently, and you are correct.

My question would be: If that information was false, (and it was), then how many other things told here for fact could be false.
Also I am quite sure, had I not pointed this out, none of the Linda apologists here, would have ever commented on it.

Posted by: inga Feb 6 2007, 01:27 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 01:48 PM)
>
> I agree but in this case, Linda made a larger salary than Danny..You can check it out

Evidence, please?

I understand that court-filed documents demonstrate that Dan and Linda each received the same salary.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 01:40 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 01:48 PM)
>
> But, I am going to be honest here. I am tired of SDAs (or anyone else) thinking it is ok to not pay women.....
> I agree but in this case, Linda made a larger salary than Danny..You can check it out Actually, I was not referring to Linda here and should have clarified my statement. I have read on BSDA that other positions are not paid the same for equal work and experience and that an EEOC investigation may or may not be pending or possibly brought at some point.

I wrote on another post some time ago that when I brought this possibility up with my mother several weeks ago that if it were true it bothered me. Her first response was it could not be true. Then when I asked how she felt if it were true as I have seen it in denominational employment in the past, she said it did not matter to her if it were true........

nw

Posted by: Observer Feb 6 2007, 01:45 PM

Bystander:

I stated that Linda had legal advice prior to signing the agreement because that is fact.

However, if that agreement had fully settled all matters, or if it was fully satisfactory, there would be no litigation going on now.

In regard to Linda's salery, vs Danny's: I once obtained some 990s from the IRS. According to my memory, which may be faulty, of the three 990s that I obtained, Danny was listed as being paid slightly more than Linda, or the same (?) in two, and Linda was listed as being paid slightly more than Danny in one.

My memory may be wrong.

However, if you were reading the posts that I made at that time in Club Adventist, I posted a statement that both Danny and Linda had been underpaid, according to the amounts listed in the 990s. I suggested that a fair wage for Danny, at that time, would have been in the $70,000 to $75,000 range, as I remember.

Of course there remain issues that were mentioned by Judge Rowe in her 40 page decision in regard to other compensation that Danny and Linda might have recieved. I certainly cannot, and do not deal with those isseus.

But, Bystander, I call it as I see it. I always have. I am on Linda's side, and I do not attempt to hide that fact. I do not believe that Danny had a Biblical reason to divorce Linda. But, I have not criticized him in regard to the divorce and remarriage. You know that if you have regularly read my posts.

Yes, I have been critical in other areas, as I believe it to be justified.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 01:51 PM

She was co founder, and you can still go many places on the internet that will tell you that. As co-founder she should have been bought out. Danny is also an employee, if he leaves, I really want to see what happens if they offer him $250,000.00. Not talking about what she had or didn't' have, I am talking about doing right when you call yourself a leader in [SDA]Christian Living. Man's law should not have been necessary for them to treat her fairly. Now 3ABN is pure big business then get them some big subiness programming and go for it, but while they are claiming to be agents to lead people to the life changing power of God, they need to do better. You can't claim buisness when it is convenient, your chirstianity should not stopat the door to your board room. She keeds to take the whole mess to Gloria Allred.........

Right once again, exactly my point. Had they not all checked their christianity at the board room dorr, they would not have even presented such a document to her. We are called to a higher standard in every area of our lives. If Linda was as wrong as she could be, caught int he act, 3ABN should have been the leader in showing God's loving correction, discipline, healing and forgiveness. Not resorting to tatics that rival Donald Trump.

[/quote]

I could not agree with you more that on the face of it the concept of fairness (and that is not only a christian principle) does not seem to be at play here.

Again, I thought the agreement only had to do with her position on the Board and her employment at 3ABN.

Let's think about this for a minute. Can someone remind me if her removal from the board was before or after the divorce was obtained. If after, then she would still be entitled to her share of the marital property if Danny still would be considered to have something he was entitled to as a co-founder of 3ABN. Can someone help me on that?

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 02:07 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 6 2007, 01:56 PM) ☐
>
> Linda did have legal advice prior to signing that contract.
>
> 1) Most people do not realize that in complex issues you must obtain the services of an attorney who specializes in those issues. Many do not realize the care that goes into the preparation of legal advice.
>
> Prior to the present litigation, I discussed it with lawyers whom I know, and was told that it contained clauses that could be challenged, and likely would not be enforced by a judge.

Thank you for the clarification. I had been under the false impression that she did not seek legal counsel. I have made that statement several times on this board and how unhappy that made me and no one has corrected my impression before.

As to obtaining the services of an attorney who is competent in the area you are seeking legal advise in, you cannot be more correct or accurate. You have given good examples and everyone who reads your post should take it to heart. In a local matter where I live I have seen people rely on totally incompetent legal counsel merely because he/she was an SDA attorney. Obviously, like the selection of any other professional, you have some responsibility to exercise due diligence in making your selection.

You have raised a couple questions that I doubt you can answer but I will ask them any way.

Has the person who gave her legal counsel been accused of malpractice?

Alleging you did not understand your rights when you have legal counsel I would think is going to be a harder sell if you challenge the countract. I am also wondering about the order of litigation if there is or is going to be a challenge to the contract. Observer do you know what the statute of limitations is for challenging the validity of the contract?

nw

PS Observer, I finished reading about an hour ago the latest postings at the Save3ABN site and commend you for your questions and analysis I found therein as you attempted to create a fair forum with ASI.

Posted by: Clay Feb 6 2007, 02:08 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 12:48 PM) ☐
>
> But, I am going to be honest here. I am tired of SDAs (or anyone else) thinking it is ok to not pay women.....
> I agree but in this case, Linda made a larger salary than Danny..You can check it out

"Great, and I'll also need some mirrors."

distraction by minutiae..... clearly he had the perks, he didn't need the salary......

Posted by: Observer Feb 6 2007, 02:11 PM

Re: "My question would be: If that information was false, (and it was), then how many other things told here for fact could be false."

Bystander you have stimulated me to respond to you in a manner that you are probably not expecting. :-)

We here are a group of independent people. We have differing backgrounds, and personalities. We have different life experiences. We have different perspectives in some aspects in regard to this 3-ABN mess. I am certain that some will disagree with some of what I post. But, we are united in a common set of objectives. That is what is bringing us together.

That unity means that we do not challenge and argue with every little comment that someone posts that differs from our personal belief. We are comfortable enough in relating to each other out of our common goals that we can be comfortable with someone posting something with which we disagree in some point. e.g. The example of whether or not Linda had legal advice prior to signing the agreement.

None of us considers ourselves to be perfect and 100 per-cent accurate in everything that we post. I do not have the slightest doubt that you can find some error in posts made here, and even, potentially, in mine. I recently posted, by implication, a clear error, of some significance. I publicly corrected it. My implication (I did state I had made an assumption.) was incorrect, and I corrected it.

My pont is: Some will disagree with some of what I post. But, comming our of our common committment of unified objectives/goals, or whatever you want to call them, we are not going to get involved in taking pot-shots at each other. We are going to live and let live. We are not going to be distracted by secondary (or more) issues from the real core of matter. We are not allowing ourselves to be divided over the areas where we may disagree.

As I posted earlier, in relating to each other in this manner, we are demonstrating the unity that could exist in the SDA Chruch between people who differ in some aspects of doctrine and lilfe style.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 02:13 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 6 2007, 02:45 PM) ☐
>
> Bystander:
>
> However, if that agreement had fully settled all matters, or if it was fully satisfactory, there would be no litigation going on now.

That statement does make sense to me legally as I doubt from even the little I know of the facts that all matters were fully settled by the agreement I have seen posted. IT makes more sense to me than challenging the validity of the contract to have it set aside.

Others have speculated here the idea that Linda signed the agreement under duress (and I indicated before it had been my understanding without an attorney) and that duress might be a reason to set the contact aside. Although I doubted that possibility from the facts (not speculation) I had, your statement as I said above makes more sense to me.

nw

Posted by: Observer Feb 6 2007, 02:17 PM

Re: "Has the person who gave her legal counsel been accused of malpractice?

Alleging you did not understand your rights when you have legal counsel I would think is going to be a harder sell if you challenge the countract. I am also wondering about the order of litigation if there is or is going to be a challenge to the contract. Observer do you know what the statute of limitations is for challenging the validity of the contract? "

Question # !: When you are dealing with malpractice and incompetence as they relate to a licensed attorney, you have a hard legal standard to meet.

I would never make such a statement about a licensed attorney.

My focus would be on other issues. But, then that would be for licensed lawyers to review and decide. My assumption is that since there is some litigation there must be some agreement that the agreement that Linda signed did not cover everything in a manner that prevented litigation.

Other questions and comments: You are getting into areas where I really do not know enough to make specific comments. So, I shall refrain from doing so.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 02:26 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 6 2007, 03:17 PM) ☐

> Re: "Has the person who gave her legal counsel been accused of malpractice?
>
> Question # !: When you are dealing with malpractice and incompetence as they relate to a licensed attorney, you have a hard legal standard to meet.
>
> I would never make such a statement about a licensed attorney.

would not want you to make such a statement and commend you for not doing so. However, as part of inda's support team you would have knowledge if any action with local or state bars has been taken.

agree it is a very high standard but attorney's really do police themselves much better than the medical rofession has ever done.

have also known attorneys willing to give a statement that they had not given competent legal advise in the ope of helping the former recipient of that advise that was challenging the "fruit" of that advise.

w

Posted by: Bystander Feb 6 2007, 02:37 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Feb 6 2007, 02:13 PM) ☐
>
> That statement does make sense to me legally as I doubt from even the little I know of the facts that all matters were fully settled by the agreement I have seen posted. IT makes more sense to me than challenging the validity of the contract to have it set aside.
>
> Others have speculated here the idea that Linda signed the agreement under duress (and I indicated before it had been my understanding without an attorney) and that duress might be a reason to set the contact aside. Although I doubted that possibility from the facts (not speculation) I had, your statement as I said above makes more sense to me.
>
> nw

y point has nothing to do with what the law allows or doesn't allow. It is about the fact that many have said n here that she didn't get to have legal counsel. She did. Period. Now where did that falsehood come from? riginally, I mean?

> QUOTE(inga @ Feb 6 2007, 01:27 PM) ☐
>
> Evidence, please?
>
> I understand that court-filed documents demonstrate that Dan and Linda each received the same salary.

ot in the last year. Find the evidence on the net. Fran coninually says those kind of records for a not profit re accesible to anyone.

ut, Bystander, I call it as I see it. I always have. I am on Linda's side, and I do not attempt to hide that fact. do not believe that Danny had a Biblical reason to divorce Linda. But, I have not criticized him in regard to he divorce and remarriage. You know that if you have regularly read my posts.

es, I have been critical in other areas, as I believe it to be justified.
/quote]

Yes Greg, I agree that you have been more fair than most here in your opinions. You have been wise not to criticize about the remarriage in my opinion. Why because, so far, evidence has not been released to prove her guilty, but on the otherhand, she cannot "prove" innocence. My point being is that truly, only 3 people and God know what really transpired until if or when, evidence is shown one way or the other. Therefore, because there is too much unknown in this realm, no one needs to be criticizing or judging the biblical aspects.

As far as the litigation goes, I would venture to guess that probably 95% of court documents can be challenged for one thing or another. Doesn't mean the challenge will be succesful.
Just my opinion

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 02:38 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 03:28 PM) ☐
>
> My point has nothing to do with what the law allows or doesn't allow. It is about the fact that many have said on here that she didn't get to have legal counsel. She did. Period. Now where did that falsehood come from? Originally, I mean?
> Not in the last year. Find the evidence on the net. Fran coninually says those kind of records for a not profit are accesible to anyone.

At some point I am going to have to personally go back and see where I first was given that impression or if I formed my own opinion that was affirmed by other's speculation. But regardless, I have stated it as one reason I was here in the first place wondering what was happening at 3ABN and not once did anyone correct me. Oh well. That is why every point must be looked at and analyzed for what type of evidence supports it. This one error does not change how I look at the whole picture but it does remind me to keep searching for demonstrable and verifiable facts. I try very hard to look beyond speculation and emotional exchanges but when I ask questions I seldom get answers from either "camp". So I do appreciate Observer correcting my statement.

nw

Posted by: Observer Feb 6 2007, 02:39 PM

Re: "However, as part of Linda's support team you would have knowledge if any action with local or state bars has been taken. "

I am not aware of anyone advising Linda to take such action. The standard is very high. The courts will suggest that an individual needing legal help has some responsibilities as to who is chosen to represent them.

I think that most of us would believe that our emotional energy, and other such resources should better be expended on other issues.

As a military officer: Pick your battles. Don't be distracted by minor squables.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 6 2007, 02:45 PM

Let's think about this for a minute. Can someone remind me if her removal from the board was before or after the divorce was obtained. If after, then she would still be entitled to her share of the marital property if Danny still would be considered to have something he was entitled to as a co-founder of 3ABN. Can someone help me on that?

[/quote]

It is my understanding her removal was before the divorce. As far as marital property, there seems to be a big misunderstanding here as usual. She already got more than her share, in my opinion. Danny bought our her share of the house and contents then, I believe if memory serves me, ended up giving her a good portion of the contents that he had already paid her for. To my knowledge she either took what she wanted or if she didn't, she was paid for that item. Unless something in the last 6 months has changed, that I don't know about, the only thing that was NOT settled was over some horses that they owned. It is my opinion that, that is what most of the lititgation has been about. Again, I say, unless something has changed that I don't know about. But lets get it straight that she was paid well for her share of the marital property and allowed to pick and choose what she took.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 02:46 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 6 2007, 03:39 PM)
>
> Re: "However, as part of Linda's support team you would have knowledge if any action with local or state bars has been taken. "
>
> I am not aware of anyone advising Linda to take such action. The standard is very high. The courts will suggest that an individual needing legal help has some responsibilities as to who is chosen to represent them.
>
> I think that most of us would believe that our emotional energy, and other such resources should better be expended on other issues.
>
> As a military officer: Pick your battles. Don't be distracted by minor squables.

I do not think we are in any disagreement on any of these topics of discussion and your statements only help clarify certain matters for me. I had concerns that as posters began reading your comments about the legal counsel she obtained there might be a great deal of speculation.

Thanks for taking the time for your responses.

nw

Posted by: Bystander Feb 6 2007, 02:51 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Feb 6 2007, 02:38 PM)
>
> At some point I am going to have to personally go back and see where I first was given that impression or if I formed my own opinion that was affirmed by other's speculation. But regardless, I have stated it as one reason I was here in the first place wondering what was happening at 3ABN and not once did anyone correct me. Oh well. That is why every point must be looked at and analyzed for what type of evidence supports it. This one error does not change how I look at the whole picture but it does remind me to keep searching for demonstrable and verifiable facts. I try very hard to look beyond speculation and emotional exchanges but when I ask questions I seldom get answers from either "camp". So I do appreciate Observer correcting my statement.
>
> nw

Not only were you "not corrected" but the false information was carried on, taken apart, ate and regurgitated and made to come to one conclusion. That once, again, all those horrible corrupt people had "forced" Linda to sign their contract with no legal counsel. Your statement about "searching" for "verifiable " facts one of the wisest statements I have read here. Common sense tell me If something like this has been mis represented, how many other things have been?

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 02:57 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 03:45 PM) ☐
>
> It is my understanding her removal was before the divorce. As far as marital property, there seems to be a big misunderstanding here as usual. She already got more than her share, in my opinion. Danny bought our her share of the house and contents then, I believe if memory serves me, ended up giving her a good portion of the contents that he had already paid her for. To my knowledge she either took what she wanted or if she didn't, she was paid for that item. Unless something in the last 6 months has changed, that I don't know about, the only thing that was NOT settled was over some horses that they owned. It is my opinion that, that is what most of the lititgation has been about. Again, I say, unless something has changed that I don't know about. But lets get it straight that she was paid well for her share of the marital property and allowed to pick and choose what she took.

It would be sad if the costs of litigation exceeded the value of any horses. However, there has been speculation that more is going on in this area than horses. How about the profit from the book that was written during the marriage?

Although you may conclude that Linda was fairly compensated with what she has received, the law may provide differently. One issue that I see and may be discussed directly or indirectly elsewhere is if she has been somehow precluded from/prejudiced in pursuing her professional career by things said or done by Danny or others at 3abn. Also, do you think Danny would be entitled to more than severance pay if he was asked to leave 3abn? Would he be entitled to something for having co-founded the organization? or for the non-monetary perks he was used to receiving?

nw

Posted by: Ralph Feb 6 2007, 03:22 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Feb 6 2007, 01:57 PM) ☐
>
> It would be sad if the costs of litigation exceeded the value of any horses. However, there has been speculation that more is going on in this area than horses. How about the profit from the book that was written during the marriage?
>
> Although you may conclude that Linda was fairly compensated with what she has received, the law may provide differently. One issue that I see and may be discussed directly or indirectly elsewhere is if she has been somehow precluded from/prejudiced in pursuing her professional career by things said or done by Danny or others at 3abn. Also, do you think Danny would be entitled to more than severance pay if he was asked to leave 3abn? Would he be entitled to something for having co-founded the organization? or for the non-monetary perks he was used to receiving?
>
> nw

This is a key point. I don't know whether or not you have read all the posts regarding 3ABN, but this was one of the issues that was brought up quite early in the discussion.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 04:02 PM

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Feb 6 2007, 04:22 PM)
>
> This is a key point. I don't know whether or not you have read all the posts regarding 3ABN, but this was one of the issues that was brought up quite early in the discussion.

I have done my best to read hundreds of posts in the various topics regarding 3ABN in my few weeks here but I assure you I have not read them all but hope that has not made me sound foolish in any way.

I know I came to my own conclusion regarding the possible damage to any future ministry Ms. Shelton might start on her own based not only on the direct and indirect activities of 3ABN personnel but what seemed to me questionable decisions by the church she had attended or the one she desired to attend etc. Those were some of the early threads I read so I do not remember all the specifics.

Whether I came to my opinion independently or if it was influenced by someone else's statements.....I suspect the latter. But I am glad you agree it is a valid point/question.

nw

Posted by: princessdi Feb 6 2007, 04:19 PM

Oh yeah now, they weren't making much, as far as the norm was concerned and for me them taking more would not have been a problem. If I remember correctly they still have to divide the marital property, which conveniently does not include 3ABN. I am not sure, but I would guess that the agreement was signed before the divorce, don't think Danny would leave town with Linda being able to talk while he was off in Guam move her out the way.......

> QUOTE(Observer @ Feb 6 2007, 11:45 AM)
>
> Bystander:
>
> I stated that Linda had legal advice prior to signing the agreement because that is fact.
>
> However, if that agreement had fully settled all matters, or if it was fully satisfactory, there would be no litigation going on now.
>
> In regard to Linda's salery, vs Danny's: I once obtained some 990s from the IRS. According to my memory, which may be faulty, of the three 990s that I obtained, Danny was listed as being paid slightly more than Linda, or the same (?) in two, and Linda was listed as being paid slightly more than Danny in one.
>
> My memory may be wrong.
>
> However, if you were reading the posts that I made at that time in Club Adventist, I posted a statement that both Danny and Linda had been underpaid, according to the amounts listed in the 990s. I suggested that a fair wage for Danny, at that time, would have been in the $70,000 to $75,000 range, as I remember.
>
> Of course there remain issues that were mentioned by Judge Rowe in her 40 page decision in regard to other compensation that Danny and Linda might have recieved. I certainly cannot, and do not deal with those isseus.
>
> But, Bystander, I call it as I see it. I always have. I am on Linda's side, and I do not attempt to hide that fact. I do not believe that Danny had a Biblical reason to divorce Linda. But, I have not criticized him in > regard to the divorce and remarriage. You know that if you have regularly read my posts.

>
> Yes, I have been critical in other areas, as I believe it to be justified.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 6 2007, 04:28 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Feb 6 2007, 05:19 PM)
>
> Oh yeah now, they weren't making much, as far as the norm was concerned and for me them taking more would not have been a problem. If I remember correctly they still have to divide the marital property, which conveniently does not include 3ABN. I am not sure, but I would guess htat the agreement was signed before the divorce, don't think Danny would leave town with Linda being able to talk while he was off in Guam move her out the way.......

ystander stated his belief that the agreement was signed prior to the divorce which is what I thought I ecalled but did not want to state as certainty.

ystander, I thank you and Observer for answering my question regarding Mr. Joy. Can you please now nswer my other question as to what you think Danny is entitled to if we hypothetically assumed that he left ABN. Please do not comment on whether he should or should not leave and for what reason or not. Just ssume for the purpose of the hypothetical that like Linda, he resigned and signed a contract. Would he get everance pay similar to what she was offered with a gag order or should he get something for being co-ounder? What do you think would be fair? (and again, marital assets are not the issue here or what Linda did r did not get in her contract).

w

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 6 2007, 06:12 PM

3abn cannot be included in a marital agreement because as a non-profit the Shelton's do not own it nor could they have sold it. At least that is my understanding of how non-profits operate.

Richard

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Feb 6 2007, 05:19 PM)
>
> Oh yeah now, they weren't making much, as far as the norm was concerned and for me them taking more would not have been a problem. If I remember correctly they still have to divide the marital property, which conveniently does not include 3ABN. I am not sure, but I would guess that the agreement was signed before the divorce, don't think Danny would leave town with Linda being able to talk while he was off in Guam move her out the way.......

Posted by: princessdi Feb 6 2007, 06:22 PM

Does this work for All nonprofits? i used to work for a FFA(foster family agnecy) for a while that was also a non profit, but it had an owner. This is interesting, I owuld really like to know how that works..........But like I said and NW is asking, what would they give to Danny as "severance" in the same or similar situation.....she was still shafted.

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 6 2007, 04:12 PM)
>
> 3abn cannot be included in a marital agreement because as a non-profit the Shelton's do not own it nor could they have sold it. At least that is my understanding of how non-profits operate.
>
> Richard

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 6 2007, 06:42 PM

Yup I'm a country boy. When you wrote FFA, I thought Future Farmers of America

My question is would there be anyway for Danny to convert the non-profit 3abn into a personal asset? If he could, and did, then it seems like Linda would have a case for 1/2 of the value of the company when she left.

Richard

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Feb 6 2007, 07:22 PM)
>
> Does this work for All nonprofits? i used to work for a FFA(foster family agnecy) for a while that was also a non profit, but it had an owner. This is interesting, I owuld really like to know how that works.........But like I said and NW is asking, what would they give to Danny as "severance" in the same or similar situation.....she was still shafted.

Posted by: JustTana Feb 6 2007, 06:57 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Feb 6 2007, 12:28 PM)
>
> But, I am going to be honest here. I am tired of SDAs (or anyone else) thinking it is ok to not pay women equal salaries "for the good of the ministry" or ask people to subvert the law and "donate" their overtime hours rather than get paid for them or as I have read elsewhere, not use "GAP standards in their accounting practices. I am sorry but lack of education is NOT an excuse. As an SDA we are trained from childhood to "sacrifice" for the good of presenting the message to the world but I have seen too many instances of unfairness result and certainly a lack of commensurate sacrifice by those doing the asking (GW for example will never lose his child in Iraq or worry that he might).

I am in complete agreement with you NW! The church seems to have only one definition for the word sacrifice. It is well illustrated with the old movie newsreels during the 1940's when we were in WWII. There was a segment in which 6year old Margaret O"Brien was pictured, saying with a very pained look on her face as she urged people to, "Give, give 'til it hurts.' I was reminded of this some years ago when my pastor gave a sermon just before Christmas in which he admonished us very strongly that we must remember to be careful how much we spent on Christmas presents in comparison to how much we gave to the 'Lord's Work.' His intimation was that we needed to remember that it was better to 'sacrifice' than to give our children 'too much.'

While I agree with this in principle, I resent that we give God so little credit for His desire to be generous with His children. We spend so much time paying attention to the Curses in Deuteronomy 28, that we totally forget the Blessings and that both depend upon our obedience to His instructions, not on our willingness to sacrifice until it hurts! JMO

JT

Posted by: Bystander Feb 6 2007, 07:05 PM

[
Although you may conclude that Linda was fairly compensated with what she has received, the law may provide differently. One issue that I see and may be discussed directly or indirectly elsewhere is if she has been somehow precluded from/prejudiced in pursuing her professional career by things said or done by Danny or others at 3abn. Also, do you think Danny would be entitled to more than severance pay if he was asked to leave 3abn? Would he be entitled to something for having co-founded the organization? or for the non-monetary perks he was used to receiving?

nw
[/quote]
NW Since my earlier post on the horse litigation, I have looked into things a little more. You are correct that, there, now, is more going on. Court records show that Danny bought out Linda for the house/contents as I stated earlier. She agreed to that settlement as did her attorney. At a later time she has tried to open the case again by saying she did not have legal representation when she signed the contract. As the courts looked into it the records were produced that show her signature, DannyS. signature and both of their attorney's signature, proving that shedid have legal counsel which also had agreed to the terms. I believe, because of the false information submitted to the court, she will be responsible for the legal fees resulting from this litigation.
On the subject of the book. You are right when you state that one never knows what the law will decide, but I feel she is not entitled as it is my understand that the book was not written before the divorce.

Posted by: inga Feb 6 2007, 07:07 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 03:37 PM)
>
> Find the evidence on the net. Fran coninually says those kind of records for a not profit are accesible to anyone.

Bystander, you are being coy or just nasty.

Since you appear to know what salaries Linda and Dan received, and you brought up the idea that Linda received more than Dan, you could be just a little decent and give the exact figures rather than merely claiming she receoved "more" (with the possible implication that it was significantly more).

But I'm not holding my breath ...

Posted by: Bystander Feb 6 2007, 07:13 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 6 2007, 05:42 PM)
>
> Yup I'm a country boy. When you wrote FFA, I thought Future Farmers of America
>
> My question is would there be anyway for Danny to convert the non-profit 3abn into a personal asset? If he could, and did, then it seems like Linda would have a case for 1/2 of the value of the company when she left.
>
> Richard

Richard, no he cannot "turn" it in to a personal asset. Danny nor Linda owned 3abn.

> QUOTE(inga @ Feb 6 2007, 06:07 PM)
>
> Bystander, you are being coy or just nasty.
>
> Since you appear to know what salaries Linda and Dan received, and you brought up the idea that Linda received more than Dan, you could be just a little decent and give the exact figures rather than merely claiming she receoved "more" (with the possible implication that it was significantly more).
>
> But I'm not holding my breath ...

Inga, I am trying to the best of my knowledge to answer some questions here, so the holding your breath comment is undeserved.
The only reason I didn't post the figures was because I was unsure of the exact figures. If you want me to post what my memory tells me, then I will but I cannot say, for sure, that they are exact. My understand for danny was 50,000 and Linda 55,000. Again approx. I could be off a thousand one way or the other.

Posted by: inga Feb 6 2007, 09:08 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 08:13 PM)
>
> The only reason I didn't post the figures was because I was unsure of the exact figures. If you want me to post what my memory tells me, then I will but I cannot say, for sure, that they are exact. My understand for danny was 50,000 and Linda 55,000. Again approx. I could be off a thousand one way or the other.

Okay, that's fair enough. Putting that together with Observer's post, it means that Linda may have received $5,000.00 or so more for the last year or two before being fired, while Dan may have received more in earlier years.

Thank you for your straightforward reply.

If you (or whoever else posted under this ID) had posted in less antagonistic fashion earlier, you would have found this a far friendlier place.

Some of us are well aware that Linda is not Ms Perfection (not that she should be required to be), but the posts of Dan's defenders on here have not helped us form a good opinion of Dan.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 12:32 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Feb 6 2007, 08:08 PM)
>
> Okay, that's fair enough. Putting that together with Observer's post, it means that Linda may have received $5,000.00 or so more for the last year or two before being fired, while Dan may have received more in earlier years.
>
> Thank you for your straightforward reply.
>
> If you (or whoever else posted under this ID) had posted in less antagonistic fashion earlier, you would have found this a far friendlier place.
>
> Some of us are well aware that Linda is not Ms Perfection (not that she should be required to be), but the posts of Dan's defenders on here have not helped us form a good opinion of Dan.

First let me say this. I and I alone have posted as bystander. No one else has "substituted" for me and you have my word on that.
Now, why would I have posted in a less antagonistic fashion when the largest part of what I was reading here was antagonistic towards Danny, The shelton's in general, 3abn, the board, Asi ect ect.
Friendly would not be the word I would use to describe this forum whether I had shown up, or not.
Saying danny's defenders did not reflect well on him can only make me turn that around and say have the things said and done here reflected well on the Linda supporters. Hardly. It takes two to tango..

Posted by: sister Feb 7 2007, 07:54 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 08:13 PM)
>
> The only reason I didn't post the figures was because I was unsure of the exact figures. If you want me to post what my memory tells me, then I will but I cannot say, for sure, that they are exact. My understand for danny was 50,000 and Linda 55,000. Again approx. I could be off a thousand one way or the other.

Bystander, these are the figures from 2003 - 2005, not including perks.

2003

Linda Shelton $58,169.00
Danny Shelton $53,695.00

2004 Now that Linda was gone, Dan gave himself a raise.

Danny Shelton $59,294.00

2005 Again Danny gave himself another substantial raise, why still claiming to make the same salary as an SDA pastor.

Danny Shelton $70,944.00

Perhaps you could supply the figures for 2006 and an estimate for 2007, since you appear to receive your information from Danny. Other than Danny or Linda, where else could you be so well informed? Unless you and Eye Witness, who use the same computer, are the husband and wife team of Hal and Mollie Steenson. But I still think your source is much closer to the "3ABN Prophet", himself.

Sister

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 10:11 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Feb 7 2007, 07:54 AM) ☐
>
> Bystander, these are the figures from 2003 - 2005, not including perks.
>
> 2003
>
> Linda Shelton $58,169.00
> Danny Shelton $53,695.00
>
> 2004 Now that Linda was gone, Dan gave himself a raise.
>
> Danny Shelton $59,294.00
>
> 2005 Again Danny gave himself another substantial raise, why still claiming to make the same salary as an SDA pastor.
>
> Danny Shelton $70,944.00 Where did the 70,944 come from?
>
> Funny you should say where would the figures come from except for Danny and Linda. How do you have them? I didn't have exact figures, you do. If that could only come from Danny or Linda...well, we know you're not Danny...........
>
> Sister

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 7 2007, 10:44 AM

You keep trying to make sister Linda... and you keep failing. The fact is, 501c3 organizations have to disclose that information... and it's available to any if one knows where to find it.

Give the identity guessing games a rest... you dont want folk to know who you are... and as a purported Christian you are supposed to do unto others as you would have them do unto you... and here, you would have others leave your identity anonymous.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: inga Feb 7 2007, 11:04 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 11:11 AM) ☐
>
> Where did the 70,944 come from?

> Funny you should say where would the figures come from except for Danny and Linda. How do you have them? I didn't have exact figures, you do. If that could only come from Danny or Linda...well, we know you're not Danny...........

And you know Sister is not Linda, right? Where would Linda get such a figure for 2005, long after he was excluded from 3ABN?

f course, we don't know that you don't have exact figures, only that you say you don't have exact figures.

☒ sn

Posted by: princessdi Feb 7 2007, 11:26 AM

For anyone coming in with gun blazing, no it is not a friendly place. You will defintiely find we give as goo as we get. Mainly because you have not shown your self to be friendly. Now, I know most here don't have a problem with me, I believe I have shown myself friendly, in that I keep saying we can all disagree, but there is no need to be enemies.

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 6 2007, 10:32 PM)
>
> First let me say this. I and I alone have posted as bystander. No one else has "substituted" for me and you have my word on that.
> Now, why would I have posted in a less antagonistic fashion when the largest part of what I was reading here was antagonistic towards Danny, The shelton's in general, 3abn, the board, Asi ect ect.
> Friendly would not be the word I would use to describe this forum whether I had shown up, or not.
> Saying danny's defenders did not reflect well on him can only make me turn that around and say have the things said and done here reflected well on the Linda supporters. Hardly. It takes two to tango..

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 11:35 AM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Feb 7 2007, 10:44 AM)
>
> You keep trying to make sister Linda... and you keep failing. The fact is, 501c3 organizations have to disclose that information... and it's available to any if one knows where to find it.
>
> Give the identity guessing games a rest... you dont want folk to know who you are... and as a purported Christian you are supposed to do unto others as you would have them do unto you... and here, you would have others leave your identity anonymous.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

ince you appear to receive your information from Danny. Other than Danny or Linda, where else could you e so well informed? Unless you and Eye Witness, who use the same computer, are the husband and wife eam of Hal and Mollie Steenson. But I still think your source is much closer to the "3ABN Prophet", himself.

ister

And you are telling me to give the identity game a rest? rofl

---

Posted by: inga Feb 7 2007, 11:39 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 12:35 PM)
>
> sister
>
> And you are telling me to give the identity game a rest? rofl

Nope. You mis-read. That was Mr. Awesome Tenor!

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 11:39 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Feb 7 2007, 11:04 AM)
>
> And you know Sister is not Linda, right? Where would Linda get such a figure for 2005, long after she was excluded from 3ABN?
>
> Of course, we don't know that you don't have exact figures, only that you say you don't have exact figures.
>
> sn

If I had them, I wouldn't have had a problem with posting them. So you think LInda coudn't get her hands on the 05 figures but some anonymous person who sent them to "sister" can?

Posted by: inga Feb 7 2007, 11:51 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 12:39 PM)
>
> If I had them, I wouldn't have had a problem with posting them.

Fair enough.

> QUOTE
>
> So you think LInda coudn't get her hands on the 05 figures but some anonymous person who sent them to "sister" can?

I suppose Linda could get them the same way any other motivated person could get them (That's not me!). However, having the figures doesn't "prove" anything, does it?

Posted by: sister Feb 7 2007, 05:56 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Feb 7 2007, 11:44 AM)
>
> You keep trying to make sister Linda... and you keep failing. The fact is, 501c3 organizations have to disclose that information... and it's available to any if one knows where to find it. Give the identity guessing games a rest... you dont want folk to know who you are... and as a purported Christian you are supposed to do unto others as you would have them do unto you... and here, you would have others leave your identity anonymous.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Mr. J you are correct! No one sent me the information, I am just one smart cookie who knows how to surf the Net! It really isn't that difficult, Bystander. I bet even you could find it, but you don't need to do that, you drink directly from the source. Right?

Sister

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 7 2007, 06:02 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 01:32 AM)
>
> Friendly would not be the word I would use to describe this forum whether I had shown up, or not.

If you hadn't shown up here and used another word that would make you a talebearer... and if a man will have friends he must first show himself friendly... whole you have shown yourself a great many things in your time here, friendly doesnt make the list...

So you come here in a hostile guise, acting in a hostile manner... and then you are shocked and appalled because people are inclined to treat you with hostility...

aaaaaaaaaaaaaall righty then...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 07:03 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Feb 7 2007, 06:02 PM)
>
> If you hadn't shown up here and used another word that would make you a talebearer... and if a man will have friends he must first show himself friendly... whole you have shown yourself a great many things in your time here, friendly doesnt make the list...
>
> So you come here in a hostile guise, acting in a hostile manner... and then you are shocked and appalled because people are inclined to treat you with hostility...

> aaaaaaaaaaaaaaall righty then...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

ou must have got your posts mixed up. I was shocked and appalled that this forum existed but once I ecame a member I realized quickly I had to be hostile, at times, to communicate. Especially with you.

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 7 2007, 07:09 PM

What I find really amusing is that it's the apologist that keep these 3abn threads really going. If they had the smarts to just not reply to any and everything there would be 100's of pages less of condemnation against Danny, Tommy, 3abn etc etc. Danny's loss, everyone elses gain. The truth is getting out as a result of the apologist, not in spite of them.

Richard

Posted by: Clay Feb 7 2007, 07:11 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 7 2007, 07:09 PM) ☐
>
> What I find really amusing is that it's the apologist that keep these 3abn threads really going. If they had the smarts to just not reply to any and everything there would be 100's of pages less of condemnation against Danny, Tommy, 3abn etc etc. Danny's loss, everyone elses gain. The truth is getting out as a result of the apologist, not in spite of them.
>
> Richard

ood point Richard..... the more they talk, the more that is revealed.... I think they protesteth too much...

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 07:12 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Feb 7 2007, 05:56 PM) ☐
>
> Mr. J you are correct! No one sent me the information, I am just one smart cookie who knows how to surf the Net! It really isn't that difficult, Bystander. I bet even you could find it, but you don't need to do that, you drink directly from the source. Right?
>
> Sister

agree sister, you certainly do know how to surf the net in lots of different ways. Fact is I had already seen he figures quite sometime ago that is why I said might not be exact because I didn't trust my memory. Of ourse I could have looked them up again but didn't want to go to the trouble. Wrong. You are the biggest ource I know and I sure don't drink from you. ☒ than

---

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 7 2007, 07:16 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 08:03 PM) ☐
>
> You must have got your posts mixed up. I was shocked and appalled that this forum existed but once I became a member I realized quickly I had to be hostile, at times, to communicate. Especially with you.

Therein lies the rub... you havent communicated with anyone here, least of all me... you have threatened, cajoled, pontificated, excoriated, castigated, obfuscated... I could go on at length... but you have not communicated...

Nor have you tried to... and you never will as long as you think you can unilaterally set the terms and bounds of discourse... or as long as you wear your contempt on your sleeve. You'd do better to agree to disagree and just walk away... but it's just not your style to quit while you're behind, is it...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 07:16 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 7 2007, 07:09 PM) ☐
>
> What I find really amusing is that it's the apologist that keep these 3abn threads really going. If they had the smarts to just not reply to any and everything there would be 100's of pages less of condemnation against Danny, Tommy, 3abn etc etc. Danny's loss, everyone elses gain. The truth is getting out as a result of the apologist, not in spite of them.
>
> Richard

We reply so that the readers won't be swallowed whole by rumors and assumption.

Posted by: Clay Feb 7 2007, 07:18 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 07:16 PM) ☐
>
> We reply so that the readers won't be swallowed whole by rumors and assumption.

uh huh.... thou protesteth too much.... thanks for sharing your rationale..... how's that workin for ya?

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 7 2007, 07:19 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 05:16 PM) ☐
>
> We reply so that the readers won't be swallowed whole by rumors and assumption.

.........and it's working, just not the way you intended.

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 7 2007, 07:19 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 12:39 PM)
>
> If I had them, I wouldn't have had a problem with posting them. So you think LInda coudn't get her hands on the 05 figures but some anonymous person who sent them to "sister" can?

Seeing you have admitted your were barking up the wrong tree in this regard, a retraction and an apology to sister would be in order...

Not that I'd expect you to do either...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 7 2007, 07:50 PM

Hate to tell you this but it just ain't helping your cause. Those on here searching for the truth are seeing documents, and first hand reports and people with real names, in other words proof for what they read. And what are you and the other apologist showing? Attacks on the messenger instead of the message. Instead of trying to dispute what's shown here you try to discredit the posters, the people BTW who have the guts to say who they are, unlike the apologist. Admittedly not all on here tell their real names, but nearly all the main participants do.

And the more you protest the more determined people are, not to bring down 3abn but to bring out the truth. Ya'll are doing the critics a favor. So carry on.

Richard

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 08:16 PM)
>
> We reply so that the readers won't be swallowed whole by rumors and assumption.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 08:50 PM

[quote name='awesumtenor' date='Feb 7 2007, 07:16 PM' post='176332']
Therein lies the rub... you havent communicated with anyone here, least of all me... you have threatened, cajoled, pontificated, excoriated, castigated, obfuscated... I could go on at length... but you have not communicated...

As I read those words aloud and a nice little beat started to come into my mind. If you don't mind maybe I will make a little rap out of them.......

Nor have you tried to... and you never will as long as you think you can unilaterally set the terms and bounds of discourse... or as long as you wear your contempt on your sleeve. You'd do better to agree to disagree and just walk away... but it's just not your style to quit while you're behind, is it...

If I was behind I might, but since I'm not, I won't.
Mr. J You would never consider yourself in the masses of all the "regular" people in the world but the truth is, your strings are being pulled just like most everyone else on this forum. I am sorry to be the barer of bad news, but you are no better than anyone else. The master puppateer has your little legs doing a jig but your to in love with yourself to notice.

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 7 2007, 07:50 PM)
>
> Hate to tell you this but it just ain't helping your cause. Those on here searching for the truth are seeing documents, and first hand reports and people with real names, in other words proof for what they read. And what are you and the other apologist showing? Attacks on the messenger instead of the message. Instead of trying to dispute what's shown here you try to discredit the posters, the people BTW who have the guts to say who they are, unlike the apologist. Admittedly not all on here tell their real names, but nearly all the main participants do.
>
> And the more you protest the more determined people are, not to bring down 3abn but to bring out the truth. Ya'll are doing the critics a favor. So carry on.
>
> Richard

In the last several days I have posted verified facts. I have also shown many rumors to be false with the facts. Some facts and evidence will have to wait until the proper time to be shown. Either way, it's there.

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Feb 7 2007, 07:19 PM)
>
> Seeing you have admitted your were barking up the wrong tree in this regard, a retraction and an apology to sister would be in order...
>
> Not that I'd expect you to do either...
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Are you reading the wrong posts. Did sister not post the salaries? Did sister not say that I would have to be an insider to get that information? Ridiculous you are

---

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 7 2007, 08:52 PM

You on a roll Clay.....

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 7 2007, 09:11 PM)
>
> .... I think they protesteth too much...

Shakespear...right?

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 7 2007, 09:18 PM)
>
> ..... how's that workin for ya?

Dr. Phil

Finally - I agree. I'm quick to tell the kids that I work with:

ahem

"You tell the truth one time. That's all you have to do. Eventually the lie will come out in the wash. Someone wants to lie on you and spread rumors. You tell the people that matter one time..... it's not true. You show your proof that it's not true and you drop it. The people that keep the mess going will be found out to be a lie ...eventually...and when it does happen - their shot for life. Trust me...."

It's refreshing to see kids actually work this in the day treatment/inpatient wards and it actually works as the rumor mill dies and people find something new to talk about.

Fact of the matter is - with all the "evidence" that exists about Linda - I ain't seen a thang...but yet there is bit after bit coming out about Danny, Tommy, and the "dirty deeds" that have been done in the background. If evidence exists against Linda - by all means Danny should have been a man from jump and let it go. To slander his ex-wife's name makes him look stankier and stankier. Normally the hen that cackles the loudest is the one that laid the egg...and in this case Danny is cackling, crowing, pecking, screaming, bellowing, spittin, and yellin'...all of which makes him look stankier and stankier.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 08:54 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Feb 7 2007, 07:19 PM)
>
> ....and it's working, just not the way you intended.

Actually, it is, by the outcry that I have heard from other Adventist. C'mon you guys just want to get us off of here so your own little group can continue to spin your tales to each other with no distractions.

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 7 2007, 09:01 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 06:50 PM)
>
> In the last several days I have posted verified facts. I have also shown many rumors to be false with the facts. Some facts and evidence will have to wait until the proper time to be shown. Either way, it's there.

you have not done this, in fact, you have only said more things that we have asked you to prove were true. why don't you do that, then you can say you did.

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 06:54 PM)
>
> Actually, it is, by the outcry that I have heard from other Adventist. C'mon you guys just want to get us off of here so your own little group can continue to spin your tales to each other with no distractions.

Reeeeaaaallyy?? And what SDA's would that be? The ones that don't know any better and have done no research of their own, just listened to the ramblings of their king and his court (lets not forget them) on the tv and since it sounds so good, it must be true? when will they learn??

If we have only tales to spin, then leave - you have nothing to worry about. And by all means, PLEASE don't go, in fact I have stated to the admin here that I want you to stay. I question your eithics and honesty, but for the most part, it really is good for the cause of truth that you remain, until you sucessfully get yourself booted and that will be that. So, hear you are!! Still here! (no, not necessarily because of my asking, but because I am not the only one that knows it's a good thing you are still here...)

Posted by: Clay Feb 7 2007, 09:17 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 08:54 PM)
>
> Actually, it is, by the outcry that I have heard from other Adventist. C'mon you guys just want to get us off of here so your own little group can continue to spin your tales to each other with no distractions.

even though you said you were leaving, you changed your mind and opted to stay and we are indeed thrilled...your presence and your explanations have said volumes....

reminds me of civil court commitments.... usually the judge is trying to decide if a person should be committed to a psychiatric hospital involuntarily. The petitioner gives evidence, the defense questions it... then comes the time when the person is asked if they want to testified on their own behalf.... the person is usually told it would be better if they didn't because maybe they would get the benefit of the doubt.... however, human nature being what it is, the person 9 times out of 10 opts to testify... in every case when the person testifies, that person is committed against their will for treatment....their own testimony usually seals their fate.....

All you who have come to defend Danny, have provided all the information to remove doubt and make it clear.... yeah he did it... and then some.... sort of like had O.J. testified during his own trial.... so please continue to share....

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 7 2007, 09:23 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 7 2007, 11:17 PM)
>
> ....All you who have come to defend Danny, have provided all the information to remove doubt and make it clear.... yeah he did it... and then some.... sort of like had O.J. testified during his own trial.... so please continue to share....

...all I am seeing fa real is that Danny is way, WAY DIRTY.

Pernt blank.

That is all...

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 7 2007, 09:26 PM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ Feb 7 2007, 10:23 PM)
>
> ...all I am seeing fa real is that Danny is way, WAY DIRTY.

> Pernt blank.

have been told by no less than 10 employees after everything that's been siad, they feel the same way as 'ou do PDR. I have a feeling the idea is going to spread.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 09:27 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Feb 7 2007, 09:01 PM) ☐
>
> you have not done this, in fact, you have only said more things that we have asked you to prove were true. why don't you do that, then you can say you did.
> Reeeeaaaallyy?? And what SDA's would that be? The ones that don't know any better and have done no research of their own, just listened to the ramblings of their king and his court (lets not forget them) on the tv and since it sounds so good, it must be true? when will they learn??

\gain, you show everytime how narrow your mind is. Out of what 16 million adventists around the world (and }abn reaches the biggest portion of it) You think the only people that support 3abn are just a dumb little luped group. What a slam against the adventist people and the church as a whole since so many conference)eople are supportive also. What an insult to their intelligence. Again, they know nothing but you know all. 'ou just keep repeating the impossible. That all the world is fooled and/or corrupt.

'rove what. The facts I have posted today are verifiable. If anyone in the other camp had posted just what I lid it would be taken as truth without question. Even you have to see how lopsided you think. You jump on he bandwagon of any junk that is posted here and never question how someone knew or how it can be :hecked out as long as, it is against 3abn.
;ad really that you have so much anger, jealousy and/or hate for 3abn, the administration ect when all of 'our information has originated from one source even though it was passed through several sources first. The iarder to trace. you are manipulated to the extreme and don't even know it.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 7 2007, 09:31 PM

One mo gen....jes read my signature line....
"Karma...."

(loosely based on the "digging a ditch, dig two" addage....)

Posted by: Clay Feb 7 2007, 09:33 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 09:27 PM) ☐
>
> Again, you show everytime how narrow your mind is. Out of what 16 million adventists around the world (and 3abn reaches the biggest portion of it) You think the only people that support 3abn are just a dumb little duped group. What a slam against the adventist people and the church as a whole since so many conference people are supportive also. What an insult to their intelligence. Again, they know nothing but you know all. You just keep repeating the impossible. That all the world is fooled and/or corrupt.
>
> Prove what. The facts I have posted today are verifiable. If anyone in the other camp had posted just what I did it would be taken as truth without question. Even you have to see how lopsided you think. You jump > on the bandwagon of any junk that is posted here and never question how someone knew or how it can be checked out as long as, it is against 3abn.

> Sad really that you have so much anger, jealousy and/or hate for 3abn, the administration ect when all of your information has originated from one source even though it was passed through several sources first. The harder to trace. you are manipulated to the extreme and don't even know it.

ell us more... interesting... people are manipulated and don't know it.... and you believe you are here to free s from the manipulation? By all means.... if you would could you address Mr. Shelton's first contact with sda, the one in which he indicated that he loved Linda and that they had been counseled for hours.... xcept, they hadn't been counseled for hours and it wasn't long after that statement that we learned of the uam excursion.....

Posted by: sonshineonme Feb 7 2007, 09:35 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 07:27 PM) ☐
>
> Again, you show everytime how narrow your mind is. Out of what 16 million adventists around the world (and 3abn reaches the biggest portion of it) You think the only people that support 3abn are just a dumb little duped group. What a slam against the adventist people and the church as a whole since so many conference people are supportive also. What an insult to their intelligence. Again, they know nothing but you know all. You just keep repeating the impossible. That all the world is fooled and/or corrupt.
>
> Prove what. The facts I have posted today are verifiable. If anyone in the other camp had posted just what I did it would be taken as truth without question. Even you have to see how lopsided you think. You jump on the bandwagon of any junk that is posted here and never question how someone knew or how it can be checked out as long as, it is against 3abn.
> Sad really that you have so much anger, jealousy and/or hate for 3abn, the administration ect when all of your information has originated from one source even though it was passed through several sources first. The harder to trace. you are manipulated to the extreme and don't even know it.

☒ no

vrong you are, so many times...YOU my friend are the one manipulated by the cult you worship, or you are he manipulator of the cult you own and you don't see your true mental condition.
feel very sorry for you, really.

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 09:39 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Feb 7 2007, 09:26 PM) ☐
>
> I have been told by no less than 10 employees after everything that's been siad, they feel the same way as you do PDR. I have a feeling the idea is going to spread.

oty, why didn't you dispute those ,that told, that Danny said he was "going after" Linda and her supporters. urely you were there. You know everything that goes on. You knew it was false yet did nothing to correct it. f that doesn't prove that you have your own personal ax to grind, then nothing does. Or, maybe you were ctually not there at all and are just being "fed" I have heard from way more than 10 that they can't believe omeone so 2 faced works among them. It appears to most there, that you are trying to help take down the ninistry which in turn takes down their jobs. Good thing, that for now, you are anonymous because if the rest f the employees find out who you are, well, it won't be a pretty picture. People that thought you were a riend will feel betrayed and they will have been.

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Feb 7 2007, 09:35 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ nop
>
> wrong you are, so many times...YOU my friend are the one manipulated by the cult you worship, or you are the manipulator of the cult you own and you don't see your true mental condition.
> I feel very sorry for you, really.

Don't waste your emotions feeling sorry for me because If I belong to Danny's cult, then you belong to Linda's so are still, being manipulated,....wait...unless you are her, then you would be doing the manipulating. Either way you are in no better position than you say I am.

Posted by: Clay Feb 7 2007, 09:44 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 09:39 PM) ☐
>
> Hoty, why didn't you dispute those ,that told, that Danny said he was "going after" Linda and her supporters. Surely you were there. You know everything that goes on. You knew it was false yet did nothing to correct it. If that doesn't prove that you have your own personal ax to grind, then nothing does. Or, maybe you were actually not there at all and are just being "fed" I have heard from way more than 10 that they can't believe someone so 2 faced works among them. It appears to most there, that you are trying to help take down the ministry which in turn takes down their jobs. Good thing, that for now, you are anonymous because if the rest of the employees find out who you are, well, it won't be a pretty picture. People that thought you were a friend will feel betrayed and they will have been.
> Don't waste your emotions feeling sorry for me because If I belong to Danny's cult, then you belong to Linda's so are still, being manipulated,....wait...unless you are her, then you would be doing the manipulating. Either way you are in no better position than you say I am.

Bystander you sound a bit defensive and paranoid... please share with us more truth, it will set you and us free....and the hostility towards HOTY and Sonshine.... frustrated that they don't seem to believe your version of the truth?

Posted by: Bystander Feb 7 2007, 09:48 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 7 2007, 09:33 PM) ☐
>
> tell us more... interesting... people are manipulated and don't know it.... and you believe you are here to free us from the manipulation? By all means.... if you would could you address Mr. Shelton's first contact with bsda, the one in which he indicated that he loved Linda and that they had been counseled for hours.... except, they hadn't been counseled for hours and it wasn't long after that statement that we learned of the Guam excursion.....

Wrong on several counts, as usual. They can produce signed documents, if need be, from pastors who counseled with them. They can produce receipts from proffessional counselors they went to see out of state.

Let me correct the guam statement once and for all. THERE WAS NO EXCURSION TO GUAM. It was all done by mail with Lindas signature in agreement. That can also be produced, if need be. How many times can I count on previous posts about danny's quickie little trip to guam and again, that is totally false.
How many more things will have to be shown (many of these things you can look at yourself if you know where to go) before you can see that somebody has been very busy telling tales out of school and you have all been a part of it.

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 7 2007, 09:44 PM)
>
> Bystander you sound a bit defensive and paranoid... please share with us more truth, it will set you and us free....and the hostility towards HOTY and Sonshine.... frustrated that they don't seem to believe your version of the truth?

Not frustrated, sad for them. Really, nobody is any more defensive than you. The only frustration comes from thinking that it would take a year to straighten out all the false tales that have been told here. Whether purposely or not, I don't know but I know I and others don't have time to put a year into it. That is where the frustration comes in.

Posted by: Clay Feb 7 2007, 09:50 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 09:45 PM)
>
> Wrong on several counts, as usual. They can produce signed documents, if need be, from pastors who counseled with them. They can produce receipts from proffessional counselors they went to see out of state.
>
> Let me correct the guam statement once and for all. THERE WAS NO EXCURSION TO GUAM. It was all done by mail with Lindas signature in agreement. That can also be produced, if need be. How many times can I count on previous posts about danny's quickie little trip to guam and again, that is totally false. How many more things will have to be shown (many of these things you can look at yourself if you know where to go) before you can see that somebody has been very busy telling tales out of school and you have all been a part of it.

they can? anyone can forge a document, you know for a fact that there was counseling? You were bystanding there when these sessions occurred?.... professional is spelled with one f by the way.... of course as you pointed out they cant be produced here because no one here would believe... please continue to share more... this is quite interesting.... why would a christian man seek a divorce in Guam?

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 09:48 PM)
>
> Not frustrated, sad for them. Really, nobody is any more defensive than you. The only frustration comes from thinking that it would take a year to straighten out all the false tales that have been told here. Whether purposely or not, I don't know but I know I and others don't have time to put a year into it. That is where the frustration comes in.

I am not defensive... see I don't have to worry about my wife getting a quick divorce in Guam and marrying someone 20 yrs younger than she is... the false tales that have been told? You mean you believe that Danny is telling the whole truth? Let's see, was Danny telling the truth about his brother Tommy?

Posted by: Johann Feb 7 2007, 10:09 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 8 2007, 05:48 AM)
>
> - - - They can produce signed documents, if need be, from pastors who counseled with them. They can produce receipts from proffessional counselors they went to see out of state.

> - - -

}ystander, do you realize that the cousellor Mr. Danny Shelton has referred to as his greatest witness as iaving counselled Linda, called me recently. When I mentioned this fact to him, he told me that he had never iad a real counselling session with Linda.

'ell me, Bystander, who is your source? Can you believe he is telling you the truth when the star counsellor lenies he ever had any such counselling session? That same counsellor has also stated he is convinced that .inda is innocent of Danny's accusations. Do you doubt this man's integrity?

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 7 2007, 10:23 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 09:50 PM)
>
> As I read those words aloud and a nice little beat started to come into my mind. If you don't mind maybe I will make a little rap out of them.......

f I dont mind? Well, as a matter of fact, I DO mind.

was wondering how much longer before you resorted to racial stereotypes...and let your white sheet show. 'ou gonna put on blackface too since you are looking to be as offensive as possible?

t is shameful on your part that your knowledge and understanding of african-americans is so limited that you vould think yourself amusing by resorting to such ignorant stereotypes. Is this how you think you are communicating'? What's next? Offering me chicken and watermelon?

\nd just so you know... we don't all live in the ghetto, receiving welfare checks, listening to rap music and lrinking malt liquor. We don't all have criminal records and we're all not under or unemployed. Many of the people you are dealing with here have better education and income than you have ever thought of having... iad higher test scores and higher GPAs and have had more professional accomplishment than you... and you, knowing you cannot compete, this is what you throw out.

'es, I mind. And you should be ashamed of yourself.

n His service,
4r. J

Posted by: princessdi Feb 7 2007, 11:05 PM

Bystander, now why would we want that? We were here a long time before you got here. In fact Danny came here before you got here. Did I not wish you a Happy Sabbath and invite you to the SS lesson study. That was no empty invitation,you were, indeed welcome. I keep telling you we know how to diagree without becoming enemies. You can stay, long as you follow the rules.....

Now, we do asked, however, that you do watch yourself, this still is BlackSDA. You gots to leave them little comments for somewhere else. Afterall, we(SDAs) ain't supposed to have those racial issues, right?

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 06:54 PM)

> Actually, it is, by the outcry that I have heard from other Adventist. C'mon you guys just want to get us off of here so your own little group can continue to spin your tales to each other with no distractions.

Posted by: inga Feb 7 2007, 11:40 PM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ Feb 7 2007, 09:52 PM)
>
> Danny should have been a man from jump and let it go. To slander his ex-wife's name makes him look stankier and stankier. Normally the hen that cackles the loudest is the one that laid the egg...and in this case Danny is cackling, crowing, pecking, screaming, bellowing, spittin, and yellin'...all of which makes him look stankier and stankier.

Posted by: inga Feb 7 2007, 11:59 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 10:27 PM)
>
> Out of what 16 million adventists around the world (and 3abn reaches the biggest portion of it)

ust a minor little correction: 3abn's potential reach is almost as great as the number of Adventists around he world.

Fact is that 3ABN does not actually reach that many people. Just because a satellite beam could potentially reach people doesn't mean that it does reach those people.

really don't have the figures, but I know for sure that your statement is highly exaggerated -- like most of your statements and those of Dan Shelton.

Posted by: Johann Feb 8 2007, 12:12 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Feb 8 2007, 07:59 AM)
>
> Just a minor little correction: 3abn's potential reach is almost as great as the number of Adventists around the world.
>
> Fact is that 3ABN does not actually reach that many people. Just because a satellite beam could potentially reach people doesn't mean that it does reach those people.
>
> I really don't have the figures, but I know for sure that your statement is highly exaggerated -- like most of your statements and those of Dan Shelton.

And I know that more and more Adventists are tuning in on HOPE, the official TV channel of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. There was a reason why the Church no longer could depend on 3ABN to bring the message o the World.

Posted by: Clay Feb 8 2007, 09:09 AM

I go back to this first letter:

> QUOTE
>
> Hi, my name is Danny Shelton and I work for 3ABN. It's not a credit your Black SDA that it appears to be nothing more than a tabloid gossip page.
> Not one of the people that I could see commenting have even attempted to contact me, that I know of, about all the things they are judging me of.
> You do have some people in the "know" that you could find out some info from if it means that much to you. Pastor John Lomacang has spent many hours counseling with Linda and me and even made some recommendations to the board about our situation which the 3ABN board took very seriously.
> As of late Pastor Mark Finley has counseled with both Linda and Me. He agrees with the decision the board has taken on this issue and so does Pastor John. Several others have also counseled us and all agree with the board's action.
> Paula and Curtis have indeed been back to do more programming without me or Linda. Their program stands on it's own.
> No one has been hurt like Linda and me have been through this whole situation. We still love each other and spend considerable time together..... snip.....

Mr. Shelton indicated that Lomacang and also Mark Finley counseled them... there is no indication that this ever happened... He stated that they loved each other except his actions suggested otherwise... Likewise there is no indication that they spent time together working on their relationship....

Again I will say it, men in love do not attempt to get a divorce as quickly as possible.... not any men that I know of....

Posted by: Johann Feb 8 2007, 09:44 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 8 2007, 05:09 PM) ☐
>
> - - -
>
> Again I will say it, men in love do not attempt to get a divorce as quickly as possible.... not any men that I know of....

Neither do they spend fortunes on private investigators to have them issue false reports on what the wife is doing so they can get this divorce as quickly as possible. Nor do they threaten to have the police incarcerate witnesses who appear to exonerate the wife.

There are too many questionable dispositions to clear Danny Shelton of strong suspicions that he did not want to save his marriage at all.

Posted by: Denny Feb 8 2007, 10:23 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 8 2007, 03:09 PM) ☐
>
> I go back to this first letter:

> Mr. Shelton indicated that Lomacang and also Mark Finley counseled them... there is no indication that this ever happened... He stated that they loved each other except his actions suggested otherwise... Likewise there is no indication that they spent time together working on their relationship....
>
> Again I will say it, men in love do not attempt to get a divorce as quickly as possible.... not any men that I know of....

ut men in love with the new Mrs waiting in the wings do.......

Posted by: Johann Feb 8 2007, 10:31 AM

> QUOTE(Denny @ Feb 8 2007, 06:23 PM)
>
> but men in love with the new Mrs waiting in the wings do.......

hank you Denny. During the Second World War we tuned our radio in on London. From there we always eard the truth of what was going on.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 8 2007, 05:42 PM

I am presently watching the news on NBC and Brian Williams' conversation with Tim Russert concerning his being on the witness stand today in the Libby trial.

Two wise things were said by Tim following his statements of what he could report from his testimony today.

1. He gave a quote from Lyndon Johnson that we probably have all heard but I will paraphrase here....

It is easier to throw grenades than catch them......

2. Tim said he learned a lesson in the 7th grade and that is:

if you tell just one story you don't need to worry.........

nw

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 8 2007, 11:08 PM

One mo gen......

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ Feb 7 2007, 10:52 PM)
>
> I'm quick to tell the kids that I work with:
>
> ahem
>
> "You tell the truth one time. That's all you have to do. Eventually the lie will come out in the wash. Someone wants to lie on you and spread rumors. You tell the people that matter one time..... it's not true. You show your proof that it's not true and you drop it. The people that keep the mess going will be found out to be a lie ...eventually...and when it does happen - their shot for life. Trust me...."
>
> It's refreshing to see kids actually work this in the day treatment/inpatient wards and it actually works as > the rumor mill dies and people find something new to talk about.

>
> Fact of the matter is - with all the "evidence" that exists about Linda - I ain't seen a thang...but yet there is bit after bit coming out about Danny, Tommy, and the "dirty deeds" that have been done in the background. If evidence exists against Linda - by all means Danny should have been a man from jump and let it go. To slander his ex-wife's name makes him look stankier and stankier. Normally the hen that cackles the loudest is the one that laid the egg...and in this case Danny is cackling, crowing, pecking, screaming, bellowing, spittin, and yellin'...all of which makes him look stankier and stankier.

Posted by: wwjd Feb 8 2007, 11:35 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Feb 8 2007, 09:09 AM) ☐
>
> Again I will say it, men in love do not attempt to get a divorce as quickly as possible.... not any men that I know of....

asy to solve. Ask Mark Finley if he counseled her on the phone 3 different times and what was said. He is villing to make that statement or sign a document saying so. Read my other post in corporate worship. It will ill in the details. THERE ARE RECEIPTS for 8 hours of out of state counseling with 2 christian counselors that re not adventist to the best of my understanding.
ohn Lomacang will also testify or sign a sworn statement on the counseling he did with them. Why would a nan who loved his wife hire PI's to follow her. One that knew what she was doing while they were still narried and who would have still, forgiven, and reconciled even after seeing the evidence but she was not villing. That being the case, he was I guess, glad, if you can use that word that he had proof because of the eople like you that would never believe she was capable of such a thing.

Posted by: wwjd Feb 8 2007, 11:47 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Feb 8 2007, 05:42 PM) ☐
>
> 1. He gave a quote from Lyndon Johnson that we probably have all heard but I will paraphrase here....
>
> It is easier to throw grenades than catch them......
>
> 2. Tim said he learned a lesson in the 7th grade and that is:
>
> if you tell just one story you don't need to worry.........
>
> nw

W, see my last post here and my post in corporate worship. You see, they have tried to keep quiet. They ave tried not to start nameing names and dates. They have tried not to talk about evidence they have. But eople here on this forum and a couple of other places on the net, have gossiped, ridiculed and demanded roof of the allegations against Linda. Not only that but several on the net are responsible for calling/mailing ut slanderous accusations against 3ABN. They encourage people not to support by "sharing" their rumor and character slander with absolutely no proof of the things they are accusing of. Some things have had to be posted that they would rather not have discussed but when all of these false allegations are beginning to hurt the cause of Christ, they have no choice but to defend themselves. Whether than means providing the evidence to prove the reasons for the divorce and dismissal, or filing suit for defamation of character with no evidence to back it up, they will do it. How can you blame them? Don't you think they would love to just "tell one story" and then not have to worry? But they can't. You won't let them.

Posted by: awesumtenor Feb 9 2007, 12:16 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 9 2007, 12:47 AM) ☐
>
> NW, see my last post here and my post in corporate worship. You see, they have tried to keep quiet. They have tried not to start nameing names and dates. They have tried not to talk about evidence they have. But people here on this forum and a couple of other places on the net, have gossiped, ridiculed and demanded proof of the allegations against Linda. Not only that but several on the net are responsible for calling/mailing out slanderous accusations against 3ABN. They encourage people not to support by "sharing" their rumor and character slander with absolutely no proof of the things they are accusing of. Some things have had to be posted that they would rather not have discussed but when all of these false allegations are beginning to hurt the cause of Christ, they have no choice but to defend themselves. Whether than means providing the evidence to prove the reasons for the divorce and dismissal, or filing suit for defamation of character with no evidence to back it up, they will do it. How can you blame them? Don't you think they would love to just "tell one story" and then not have to worry? But they can't. You won't let them.

You are worse than the Bush administration. It's always anybody's fault but yours Danny... and no, I'm not buying these attempts to speak in the 3rd person...as if the people responding to these posts are doing it without being directed... and neither is anyone else. You will see this and tell whichever minion is hiding behind this screen name what to say in response... so I will just cut out the middle man...

If you had

[A)] not tried to make Linda wear a scarlet letter before 3ABN's donors in an attempt to make sure donations continued after she was pushed out and

[B)] not tried to convince the world of her guilt so your relationship with Brandi would appear to be legit or

[C)] not continued to treat Linda and anyone who appeared sympathetic to her in the most unChristian manner possible or

[D)] not shown up here telling lies to cover the lies you already told when you claimed to be trying to save your marriage even as you were filing for divorce or [E)] roll your lackeys in here in shifts pretending to be unaffiliated yet concerned viewers and supporters of 3ABN and failing miserably to pull it off... showing up claiming to be seeking truth and only spreading more lies... and the sad part is just as those who the Sanhedrin tried to get to lie about Jesus... the lies dont even match up...

AND had just told the truth from the beginning...

THEN you'd have had nothing to worry about...

so if you need to point fingers... find the nearest mirror.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: wwjd Feb 9 2007, 12:49 AM

In His service,
Mr. J
[/quote]
I am NOT Danny. But go ahead and make your accusations, you have made many. There have been several posts yesterday and this evening by me with dates, names and papers that can be verified. Put them all together and someone has not been telling the truth. Hence, the origination of your accusations. As arrogant as you are mr. J. even you need to come down off of your throne and look at the facts. I will challenge, dare or even beg you to make phone calls to verify some of this. Even though you always think you are several steps above the rest of us, I don't think even you, would call Mark Finley a liar. Even you couldn't refute receipts and paper trails. Even you can't refute sworn testimonies. You can try, but it won't fly.

On the other hand mr. in love with himself, I nor anyone else has seen one shred of evidence from you to prove any of your allegations. All I have seen from you is a big ugly mouth repeating all the gossip and rumors you have heard here. Where is your proof, evidence, dates, verifiable facts ect ect.
I am sorry but all of your posts wreak with envy. It is beyond your comprehension how someone uneducated like Danny could be president of a world wide tv ministry when someone as knowledgeable and learned as you, is not. The only thing you can do is make allegations that he is there because of wrong doing. Do you think (obviously you do) that you, mr. j know more than asi, the board, the counselors, that did indeed counsel LInda, ASI, the pastors, Mark F, Doug B, David A., Wintley Phipps. and a host of other people that defend and stay with 3abn because they "do know" the "real truth". If you really believe that you know more than they do about the situation, if you really believe that you are smart than them, then you are far worse off than I could have imagined.

Posted by: Spike Feb 9 2007, 12:55 AM

WWJD go to bed!!! It's late where you are.

Posted by: Spike Feb 9 2007, 01:41 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 8 2007, 11:49 PM)
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J
>
> I am NOT Danny. But go ahead and make your accusations, you have made many. There have been several posts yesterday and this evening by me with dates, names and papers that can be verified. Put them all together and someone has not been telling the truth. Hence, the origination of your accusations. As arrogant as you are mr. J. even you need to come down off of your throne and look at the facts. I will challenge, dare or even beg you to make phone calls to verify some of this. Even though you always think you are several steps above the rest of us, I don't think even you, would call Mark Finley a liar. Even you couldn't refute receipts and paper trails. Even you can't refute sworn testimonies. You can try, but it won't fly.
>
> On the other hand mr. in love with himself, I nor anyone else has seen one shred of evidence from you to prove any of your allegations. All I have seen from you is a big ugly mouth repeating all the gossip and rumors you have heard here. Where is your proof, evidence, dates, verifiable facts ect ect.
> I am sorry but all of your posts wreak with envy. It is beyond your comprehension how someone uneducated like Danny could be president of a world wide tv ministry when someone as knowledgeable and learned as you, is not. The only thing you can do is make allegations that he is there because of wrong doing. Do you think (obviously you do) that you, mr. j know more than asi, the board, the counselors, that did indeed counsel LInda, ASI, the pastors, Mark F, Doug B, David A., Wintley Phipps. and a host of other people that defend and stay with 3abn because they "do know" the "real truth". If you > really believe that you know more than they do about the situation, if you really believe that you are smart than them, then you are far worse off than I could have imagined.

VWJD, You say you have proof. Then why don't you show Pickle or Greg, they are representing Linda and I vould take their word for the truth. That way you can spare Linda as you say you want to.

'hat would not clear Tommy or DS covering for him.

Posted by: sister Feb 9 2007, 07:53 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 9 2007, 12:35 AM)
>
> Easy to solve. Ask Mark Finley if he counseled her on the phone 3 different times and what was said. He is willing to make that statement or sign a document saying so. Read my other post in corporate worship. It will fill in the details. THERE ARE RECEIPTS for 8 hours of out of state counseling with 2 christian counselors that are not adventist to tlie best of my understanding.
> John Lomacang will also testify or sign a sworn statement on the counseling he did with them. Why would a man who loved his wife hire PI's to follow her. One that knew what she was doing while they were still married and who would have still, forgiven, and reconciled even after seeing the evidence but she was not willing. That being the case, he was I guess, glad, if you can use that word that he had proof because of the people like you that would never believe she was capable of such a thing.

VWJD, you are the one making the claim that Mark Finley counseled Linda, by telephone, on 3 separate ›ccasions. You are the one who claims Mark Finley is willing to sign a document attesting to the facts of your :laim. SO, it is upon you, not the readers here, to do the leg work and contact Mark Finley. Since 'ou now claim you can produce evidence, produce this evidence: a signed, notarized statement from Mark 'inley attesting to your claims and mail it to Calvin and then post it here. Until you have done that you have 10 credibility here and your claims of "evidence" are nothing more than dust in the wind---no substance. We ıre all waiting, but I am sure no one is holding their breath. Let's make this a test of your credibility, if you :an produce this evidence I for one am willing to listen to you, if not, are you willing to be banned from BSDA or all the slander and false accusations you have made against Linda Shelton. Are sure enough of your evidence" to take this challenge? Are you a Christian who stands with your witness or merely a minion of)anny Shelton, sent here to do his bidding?

;ister

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 9 2007, 10:58 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 7 2007, 10:39 PM)
>
> Hoty, why didn't you dispute those ,that told, that Danny said he was "going after" Linda and her supporters. Surely you were there. You know everything that goes on. You knew it was false yet did nothing to correct it. If that doesn't prove that you have your own personal ax to grind, then nothing does. Or, maybe you were actually not there at all and are just being "fed" I have heard from way more than 10 > that they can't believe someone so 2 faced works among them. It appears to most there, that you are trying to help take down the ministry which in turn takes down their jobs. Good thing, that for now, you are anonymous because if the rest of the employees find out who you are, well, it won't be a pretty picture. People that thought you were a friend will feel betrayed and they will have been.

id you happen to be at that farce of a worship, because I was. Stood there and prayed the whole time ecause I knew that Satan was at work, but it was THROUGH and not AGAINST a select few in attendance. or a man to take his personal agenda, one that many in that circle knew nothing about, and plaster it all ver company worship was disgusting at best and possibly even sacrilegious!

don't know how many times I have to say that I am not trying to bring down 3ABN. And the assumption hat if DS goes down, 3ABN will go with him is ridiculous. DS is not 3ABN. 3ABN is not DS.

f you are concerned about people talking, I think you should start with administration. THEY are the ones ith the information. DS blabs everything he knows, and it's to the people closest to him, not the lowest in he group.

xactly how do you think the emloyees will feel about DS when many of the accusations are roven to be true?

Posted by: glenetta Feb 9 2007, 11:30 AM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Feb 9 2007, 10:58 AM) ☐
>
> Did you happen to be at that farce of a worship, because I was. Stood there and prayed the whole time because I knew that Satan was at work, but it was THROUGH and not AGAINST a select few in attendance. For a man to take his personal agenda, one that many in that circle knew nothing about, and plaster it all over company worship was disgusting at best and possibly even sacrilegious!
>
> I don't know how many times I have to say that I am not trying to bring down 3ABN. And the assumption that if DS goes down, 3ABN will go with him is ridiculous. DS is not 3ABN. 3ABN is not DS.
>
> If you are concerned about people talking, I think you should start with administration. THEY are the ones with the information. DS blabs everything he knows, and it's to the people closest to him, not the lowest in the group.
>
> Exactly how do you think the emloyees will feel about DS when many of the accusations are proven to be true?

can guess that if any of the accusations are true, then how could 3ABN exsist? I would say that it would be estructured from the ground up. According to this site. There is no one good, nothing good about ABN. So it will effect the little man all the way to the top, wouldn't you think? So there would not be the mployees there that are there now!
iring new people, I mean if a person was to check into your back ground would it be clean as a whistle? So herefore who is worthy? I guess it would depend on who is restructuring the ministry to determine when and f God has forgiven. I don't want that job!!!

Posted by: Nuggie Feb 9 2007, 11:36 AM

> QUOTE(glenetta @ Feb 9 2007, 12:30 PM)
>
> I can guess that if any of the accusations are true, then how could 3ABN exsist? I would say that it would be restructured from the ground up. According to this site. There is no one good, nothing good about 3ABN. So it will effect the little man all the way to the top, wouldn't you think? So there would not be the employees there that are there now!
> Hiring new people, I mean if a person was to check into your back ground would it be clean as a whistle? So therefore who is worthy? I guess it would depend on who is restructuring the ministry to determine when and if God has forgiven. I don't want that job!!!

See, you're doing it again...this statement is a blatant untruth...several people have commented on the fact that they appreciate the message and mission of 3ABN, but have a problem with the self-appointed messenger and his dispicable methods...

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 9 2007, 11:43 AM

> QUOTE(glenetta @ Feb 9 2007, 12:30 PM)
>
> I can guess that if any of the accusations are true, then how could 3ABN exsist? I would say that it would be restructured from the ground up. According to this site. There is no one good, nothing good about 3ABN. So it will effect the little man all the way to the top, wouldn't you think? So there would not be the employees there that are there now!
> Hiring new people, I mean if a person was to check into your back ground would it be clean as a whistle? So therefore who is worthy? I guess it would depend on who is restructuring the ministry to determine when and if God has forgiven. I don't want that job!!!

First, welcome to BSDA. I know when I happened on this site that I looked at it and then didn't for about 6 months because I just couldn't bring myself to get involved. I guess I didn't really want to know...

Please forgive me if I sound rude, but you cannot honestly believe that organizations that function can not have serious matters going on in the background, right? How many times has it been shown to be the opposite. Think of Jim Jones, Enron, Watergate...there's a whole list out there. The only difference is that someone exposed these organizations to the world, while it hasn't happened for 3ABN on the same scale.

Please read the information presented here. It will take several weeks to get through it all, but I think it's necessary for anyone that begins their search here, that is, if that's what their purpose is.

(BTW, yes, my background is "clean as a whistle.")

HOTY

Posted by: Clay Feb 9 2007, 12:27 PM

> QUOTE(glenetta @ Feb 9 2007, 11:30 AM)
>
> I can guess that if any of the accusations are true, then how could 3ABN exsist? I would say that it would be restructured from the ground up. According to this site. There is no one good, nothing good about 3ABN. So it will effect the little man all the way to the top, wouldn't you think? So there would not be the employees there that are there now!
> Hiring new people, I mean if a person was to check into your back ground would it be clean as a whistle?

> So therefore who is worthy? I guess it would depend on who is restructuring the ministry to determine when and if God has forgiven. I don't want that job!!!

ıf course you are here to tell us that there is much good at 3ab.... I think you are intimately involved with)anny, how long has this been going on?

Posted by: Observer Feb 9 2007, 12:44 PM

Re: "I can guess that if any of the accusations are true, then how could 3ABN exsist? I would say that it would be restructured from the ground up. According to this site. There is no one good, nothing good about 3ABN. So it will effect the little man all the way to the top, wouldn't you think? So there would not be the employees there that are there now! "

False. such would not be required.

If 3-ABN were to be restructured, it would require a major change in management. That is all.

When you restructure a secular business, you change management. You do not chnge the so called "little guy."

Sometimes that change only requires a change in CEO. Sometimes it requires changes in the Executive Board. Sometimes it requires further management changes. There is no one set pattern. But, it seldom goes down the ladder any further.

Yes, if 3-ABN were to be restructured, the majority of employees would be able to continue on as employees, if they wished to do so. Some might wish to leave. But, that would be their choice.

Posted by: princessdi Feb 9 2007, 02:36 PM

wwjd, personal aatacks are not allowed. Now I read Awsumtenors post and then read yours. Awsumtenor is expressing diagreement with the information you put forth, in great detail. You are attacking him as a peson in the bolded statements below. This is your last warning, and that goes for anywhere on this site. You will be suspended permanently without further notice******

Now, with that out of the way, my response to your post is that it is your proof. youa re the one maintaining Linda had counseling, etc. You need to bring it. Everyone else who made accusations brought proof with them. Examples: 1)It was said they had Linda to sign a gag order and she was cheated, the order was posted for all to see and decide for themselves. It was true. 2) It was said that Tommy Shelton was removed from pastoring because of inappropriate advance toward boys. The letters from the Church of God, and victims, their mothers were posted for all to see for them selves.

You cna't just come up here and claim somthing and then make everybody to looking to verify your claims. Bring it yourself!

One other thing. At anytime, anyone of these individuals you mentioned could have come here and spoken their piece, still can. Theirs will be added anw eighed witht he rest of the evidence. You have the mis understood that everyone here only wants evidence that would exonerate Linda that is not true. Plus, I dont' see why Danny would hold anything back see as he is still taking about it to this day, making snide remarks, etc. Going around atalking about she was seduced by the Dr. is not sparing anything. He got proof, bring it!

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 8 2007, 10:49 PM) ☐
>
> In His service,

Mr. J

I am NOT Danny. But go ahead and make your accusations, you have made many. There have been several posts yesterday and this evening by me with dates, names and papers that can be verified. Put them all together and someone has not been telling the truth. Hence, the origination of your accusations. As arrogant as you are mr. J. even you need to come down off of your throne and look at the facts. I will challenge, dare or even beg you to make phone calls to verify some of this. Even though you always think you are several steps above the rest of us, I don't think even you, would call Mark Finley a liar. Even you couldn't refute receipts and paper trails. Even you can't refute sworn testimonies. You can try, but it won't fly.

On the other hand mr. in love with himself, I nor anyone else has seen one shred of evidence from you to prove any of your allegations. All I have seen from you is a big ugly mouth repeating all the gossip and rumors you have heard here. Where is your proof, evidence, dates, verifiable facts ect ect.
I am sorry but all of your posts wreak with envy. It is beyond your comprehension how someone uneducated like Danny could be president of a world wide tv ministry when someone as knowledgeable and learned as you, is not. The only thing you can do is make allegations that he is there because of wrong doing. Do you think (obviously you do) that you, mr. j know more than asi, the board, the counselors, that did indeed counsel LInda, ASI, the pastors, Mark F, Doug B, David A., Wintley Phipps. and a host of other people that defend and stay with 3abn because they "do know" the "real truth". If you really believe that you know more than they do about the situation, if you really believe that you are smart than them, then you are far worse off than I could have imagined.

Posted by: Nuggie Feb 9 2007, 02:46 PM

QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 9 2007, 01:49 AM)

In His service,
Mr. J

I am NOT Danny. But go ahead and make your accusations, you have made many. There have been several posts yesterday and this evening by me with dates, names and papers that can be verified. Put them all together and someone has not been telling the truth. Hence, the origination of your accusations. As arrogant as you are mr. J. even you need to come down off of your throne and look at the facts. I will challenge, dare or even beg you to make phone calls to verify some of this. Even though you always think you are several steps above the rest of us, I don't think even you, would call Mark Finley a liar. Even you couldn't refute receipts and paper trails. Even you can't refute sworn testimonies. You can try, but it won't fly.

On the other hand mr. in love with himself, I nor anyone else has seen one shred of evidence from you to prove any of your allegations. All I have seen from you is a big ugly mouth repeating all the gossip and rumors you have heard here. Where is your proof, evidence, dates, verifiable facts ect ect.
I am sorry but all of your posts wreak with envy. It is beyond your comprehension how someone uneducated like Danny could be president of a world wide tv ministry when someone as knowledgeable and learned as you, is not. The only thing you can do is make allegations that he is there because of wrong doing. Do you think (obviously you do) that you, mr. j know more than asi, the board, the counselors, that did indeed counsel LInda, ASI, the pastors, Mark F, Doug B, David A., Wintley Phipps. and a host of other people that defend and stay with 3abn because they "do know" the "real truth". If you really believe that you know more than they do about the situation, if you really believe that you are smart than them, then you are far worse off than I could have imagined.

know one thing for sure...this is not what Jesus would do...

Posted by: simplysaved Feb 9 2007, 02:51 PM

Good question...is it being indirectly being suggested that Whitley Phipps and Mark Finley are co-conspirators and covering up something?

Posted by: LadyTenor Feb 9 2007, 03:04 PM

I see folks can't hang with the discussions here because failing to proving the veracity of one's statements is frowned upon....so they resort to the easier road, personal attacks!

Posted by: princessdi Feb 9 2007, 03:21 PM

Not a good, question, Sarah. Go back and read. Wwjd is sugesting that these people are ready to make statement tot he fact that Linda was given counseling before the end of her marriage. They are in progress now of trying to get said statement from Mark Finley. No one is suggesting that any of them are co-conspirators to anything, In fact it is quite the opposite. These men are well respected and a word from them might shed some light on this. Wwjd is claiming they are willing to make the statements, and he is being told to bring it! Simple as that! I know you don't post or even keep up in this area. Please read everything in order to get a good understanding before posting here again.

> QUOTE(simplysaved @ Feb 9 2007, 12:51 PM)
>
> Good question...is it being indirectly being suggested that Whitley Phipps and Mark Finley are co-conspirators and covering up something?

Posted by: inga Feb 9 2007, 03:24 PM

> QUOTE(simplysaved @ Feb 9 2007, 03:51 PM)
>
> Good question...is it being indirectly being suggested that Whitley Phipps and Mark Finley are co-conspirators and covering up something?

No one who has been critical of 3ABN administration has suggested such a thing.

However, some defending 3ABN have falsely suggested that those criticizing current admnistration are implicating Wintley Phipps and Mark Finley as well!

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Feb 9 2007, 10:05 PM

Posted by: Green Cochoa Feb 11 2007, 05:40 AM

> QUOTE(LadyTenor @ May 7 2006, 11:09 AM)

> Exactly why these threads are tired...when Clay started this one, I didn't realize it would become yet another 3ABN thread, but it has...I will not be revisiting this thread...I will leave it where I left all the other 3ABN threads...in the trash...
>
> ...I'm sure someone will respond to my somewhat harsh response, but I regret that I won't see it, since this is my last time looking at ANY 3ABN thread on this site...there are more interesting threads to follow up on...

> QUOTE(LadyTenor @ Feb 9 2007, 03:04 PM)
>
> I see folks can't hang with the discussions here because failing to proving the veracity of one's statements is frowned upon....so they resort to the easier road, personal attacks!

lay? rofl Is this... ...tiresome?

aw...it's just gir che right? rofl (You know, every woman has the right to change her ind...)

adyTenor, please accept my apologies for laughing, it's just....ouch! tom Hey! sofa1.gif

---

Posted by: HUGGINS130 Feb 11 2007, 05:56 AM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ Feb 9 2007, 10:05 PM)
>
> sna

m back with you on these threads...back to...um... sna lurkin

---

Posted by: Grace Feb 11 2007, 07:03 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Feb 9 2007, 10:24 PM)
>
> No one who has been critical of 3ABN administration has suggested such a thing.
>
> However, some defending 3ABN have falsely suggested that those criticizing current admnistration are implicating Wintley Phipps and Mark Finley as well!

"Some" defending Danny have all the same technique: falsely suggesting that we have said things agains honest people that we haven't said nor implied. ☒ notworkir

"Tiresome they are"...

Posted by: seraph|m Mar 16 2007, 04:34 PM

Tiresome, very much so.

Posted by: Johann Apr 11 2007, 01:05 AM

> QUOTE(Grace @ Feb 11 2007, 03:03 PM)
>
> "Some" defending Danny have all the same technique: falsely suggesting that we have said things agains honest people that we haven't said nor implied. ☒ notworkir
>
> "Tiresome they are"...

And they do not seem to see it themselves. A very important point, Grace.

Posted by: Treniece May 19 2007, 04:29 PM

So much information. It is mind boggling.

Posted by: howdy May 19 2007, 11:13 PM

I believe you are quite right N W in your assessment. The church is too inbred to ever find an impartial jury. There has been nepotism for decades. The management of 3ABN will not produce their evidence against Linda claiming as their reason to "protect Linda" while all the time trashing her worldwide. The only thing they are trying to protect is themselves. There is obviously no proof of their charges against Linda.

howdy

Posted by: Rosyroi May 19 2007, 11:17 PM

> QUOTE(howdy @ May 19 2007, 09:13 PM)
>
> I believe you are quite right N W in your assessment. The church is too inbred to ever find an impartial jury. There has been nepotism for decades. The management of 3ABN will not produce their evidence > against Linda claiming as their reason to "protect Linda" while all the time trashing her worldwide. The only thing they are trying to protect is themselves. There is obviously no proof of their charges against Linda.

>
> howdy

MEN howdy
osyroi

Posted by: Seraphim7 May 20 2007, 09:52 AM

> QUOTE(howdy @ May 20 2007, 02:13 AM)
>
> I believe you are quite right N W in your assessment. The church is too inbred to ever find an impartial jury. There has been nepotism for decades. The management of 3ABN will not produce their evidence against Linda claiming as their reason to "protect Linda" while all the time trashing her worldwide. The only thing they are trying to protect is themselves. There is obviously no proof of their charges against Linda.
>
> howdy

he above can be seen on every level of leadership w/in the church. Sad but true.

Posted by: mozart May 20 2007, 04:03 PM

i agree sera and i think that what i have always understood as ".....a falling away first...." does not pertain to those who i thought it did. i thought the "falling away" would be those leaving the faith, but now i think that the "falling away" IS the organizational church leaving the Faith. it seems so clear to me now that those that will stand to the end are those few who stay faithful to the truth; small groups scorned by the SDA (name copyrighted) church as we know it.
i'm sure some out there will see fit to yell at me and "set me straight" for saying that but so be it.

> QUOTE(Seraphim7 @ May 20 2007, 09:52 AM)
>
> The above can be seen on every level of leadership w/in the church. Sad but true.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 20 2007, 04:50 PM

> QUOTE(Seraphim7 @ May 20 2007, 08:52 AM)
>
> The above can be seen on every level of leadership w/in the church. Sad but true.

erhaps it can be seen in every level of leadership within the church but not every leader, IMO. I am certain hat there are many in leadership who are pure and true followers of the Lord.

Posted by: Skyhook May 20 2007, 07:49 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 20 2007, 05:50 PM)
>
> Perhaps it can be seen in every level of leadership within the church but not every leader, IMO. I am certain that there are many in leadership who are pure and true followers of the Lord.

Amen to that PB!
I recall that EGW stated very plainly that "the church would appear as about to fall, but it would not fall. Instead, the sinners in Zion would be shaken out." (paraphrased)

Posted by: Seraphim7 May 20 2007, 08:39 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 20 2007, 07:03 PM)
>
> i agree sera and i think that what i have always understood as ".....a falling away first...." does not pertain to those who i thought it did. i thought the "falling away" would be those leaving the faith, but now i think that the "falling away" IS the organizational church leaving the Faith. it seems so clear to me now that those that will stand to the end are those few who stay faithful to the truth; small groups scorned by the SDA (name copyrighted) church as we know it.
> i'm sure some out there will see fit to yell at me and "set me straight" for saying that but so be it.

☒ ofl Your train of thought, would be better suited as a new topic. You have shared what you "think" but, the question is, what does scripture state regarding the subject of who will "fall away"?

My statement, that there are problems in every level of leadership is an acknowledgment of a simple reality. Where one sees long term nepotism one often (not always) find areas of corruption w/in the organization. That is the area where I agree with howdy.

Posted by: mikemike May 20 2007, 08:58 PM

> QUOTE(Seraphim7 @ May 20 2007, 10:39 PM)
>
> ☒ ofl Your train of thought, would be better suited as a new topic. You have shared what you "think" but, the question is, what does scripture state regarding the subject of who will "fall away"?
>
> My statement, that there are problems in every level of leadership is an acknowledgment of a simple reality. Where one sees long term nepotism one often (not always) find areas of corruption w/in the organization. That is the area where I agree with howdy.

Your comment seem out of place, you stated your own opinion but when the other person did you said they should start a new topic. How so, please explain.

Posted by: Pickle May 20 2007, 09:46 PM

"The church may appear as about to fall, but it does not fall."

I once told a leader at the Reformed Movement's headquarters about that quote. He said it was new to him.

Later he was telling me that we have to come out of Babylon into the true fold, and it dawned on me that he was saying we need to come out of the SDA church into his group, the true fold. The following hit me, and I told him: "According to that quote, any group that doesn't appear as about to fall cannot be the true fold."

He didn't know what to say.

There is a passage that speaks about those in Ellen White's day who were calling the Adventist Church Babylon. It also predicts that people would do that very same thing at the end of time. I was talking with a lady who was saying that the Adventist Church is Babylon, and I asked her if she thought the passage in question was being fulfilled now, or if she thought it was simply a conditional prophecy.

Posted by: mozart May 20 2007, 11:01 PM

yes, but does that mean the "church - body of true believers" or the "church - organization"?
i wasn't suggesting the SDA church is Babylon. not sure if you thought i was saying that or not. just wanted to make that clear.

sera,
as far as my comment being "off topic", i think it's completely relative to what you were saying, just in a wider scope maybe, but you are certainly entitled to your opinion. selah

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 20 2007, 08:46 PM)
>
> "The church may appear as about to fall, but it does not fall."
>
> I once told a leader at the Reformed Movement's headquarters about that quote. He said it was new to him.
>
> Later he was telling me that we have to come out of Babylon into the true fold, and it dawned on me that he was saying we need to come out of the SDA church into his group, the true fold. The following hit me, and I told him: "According to that quote, any group that doesn't appear as about to fall cannot be the true fold."
>
> He didn't know what to say.
>
> There is a passage that speaks about those in Ellen White's day who were calling the Adventist Church Babylon. It also predicts that people would do that very same thing at the end of time. I was talking with a lady who was saying that the Adventist Church is Babylon, and I asked her if she thought the passage in question was being fulfilled now, or if she thought it was simply a conditional prophecy.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 20 2007, 11:19 PM

Okay, the link didn't work so here is the EGW statement in question:

"Maranatha, Chap. 195 - The Church Appears About to Fall
But Zion said, The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Isa. 49:14, 15.

Satan will work his miracles to deceive; he will set up his power as supreme. The church may appear as about to fall, but it does not fall. It remains, while the sinners in Zion will be sifted out--the chaff separated from the precious wheat. This is a terrible ordeal, but nevertheless it must take place. None but those who have been overcoming by the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony will be found with the loyal and true, without spot or stain of sin, without guile in their mouths.... The remnant that purify their souls by obeying the truth gather strength from the trying process, exhibiting the beauty of holiness amid the surrounding apostasy. {Mar 203.1}

I know that the Lord loves His church. It is not to be disorganized or broken up into independent atoms. There is not the least consistency in this; there is not the least evidence that such a thing will be. Those who shall heed this false message and try to leaven others will be deceived and prepared to receive advanced delusions, and they will come to nought. {Mar 203.2}

I am encouraged and blessed as I realize that the God of Israel is still guiding His people, and that He will continue to be with them, even to the end. {Mar 203.3}

We cannot now step off the foundation that God has established. We cannot now enter into any new organization; for this would mean apostasy from the truth. {Mar 203.4}

The church, soon to enter upon her most severe conflict, will be the object most dear to God upon earth. The confederacy of evil will be stirred with power from beneath, and Satan will cast all the reproach possible upon the chosen ones whom he cannot deceive and delude with his satanic inventions and falsehoods. But exalted "to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and remission of sins," will Christ, our representative and head, close His heart, or withdraw His hand, or falsify His promise? No; never, never. {Mar 203.5}"

Posted by: Pickle May 20 2007, 11:23 PM

Hi Mozart.

My comments were more regarding the general topic rather than the specifics you referred to.

Is the church that appears to be about to fall a body of true believers, or is it an organization? I'll break your question into two parts.

First of all, we cannot limit the church to only true believers because then there is no place for church organization. Only God can read the heart, and thus only God can tell who is a true believer and who isn't. Because of our inability to read the heart, there is no guarantee that every member and every officer is a true believer, and thus there can be no church organization if we have to limit membership and offices to only true believers.

Secondly, you appropriately used the word "body," for Paul uses that word too. The human body is extremely organized. Thus the very word "body" in reference to the church mandates that that term refer to an organization of parts that are as closely associated and as intricately connected as the parts of the human body.

Posted by: mozart May 20 2007, 11:28 PM

thanks mr. p. i'll have to digest that for a bit.

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 20 2007, 10:23 PM)
>
> Hi Mozart.
>
> My comments were more regarding the general topic rather than the specifics you referred to.
>
> Is the church that appears to be about to fall a body of true believers, or is it an organization? I'll break your question into two parts.

> First of all, we cannot limit the church to only true believers because then there is no place for church organization. Only God can read the heart, and thus only God can tell who is a true believer and who isn't. Because of our inability to read the heart, there is no guarantee that every member and every officer is a true believer, and thus there can be no church organization if we have to limit membership and offices to only true believers.
>
> Secondly, you appropriately used the word "body," for Paul uses that word too. The human body is extremely organized. Thus the very word "body" in reference to the church mandates that that term refer to an organization of parts that are as closely associated and as intricately connected as the parts of the human body.

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 21 2007, 08:02 AM

The natural human response to encountering sin and corruption on a localized level is to globalize it. In our families when one spouse says or does something wrong the injured spouse says something like, "you always do that." or "You never do this." The fact is that this is not allways true. The same is true with the church, which is referred to as the 'household' of God. The main reason that people go out the back door and leave the church is because they globalize sin and try to throw the wheat out with the tares. Some even go so far as to throw Jesus out with the dirty church bath water. They forget that the church is a hospital for sinners. They forget that church administrators are sinners too. Of course their sins are often believed to be unforgiveable (of course they do have greater responsibility).
The temptation with the 3ABN problem (as bad as it is) is to globalize and view the entire church leadership as corrupt. This is really nothing more than a prejudicial/bigoted response. Most church members on the local level don't know any administrators personally. Yet they are willing to lump them all together into one corrupt nepotistic group. Have they personal knowledge of any specific sin? Or, have they just blindly accepted third or fourth hand gossip without having confirmed the facts. Have they lodged a grievance or protest with the proper or specific authorities? Not usually. Instead prejudiced gossip prevails. Even to the extent of taking Biblical texts that have always been applied by Adventists to the Great Roman Apostasy and now applying them to the Adventist church. Can anyone who understands how fully anti-christian that Biblical apostasy is, apply it to Adventism?
We live in a time when all organization is suspect. We often forget that one of the reasons organization is developed is to minimize and prevent corruption! That of course was a major intent with the development of our current system of democratic American government. Does corruption exist? Definitely! Would we want to discard our government? No! As imperfect as it is, its the best we have to work with. Anything else would produce even more corruption, chaos, or anarchy.
Likewise our system of church polity is one of the best in Christendom - helping to minimize and prevent corruption on the corporate level - while also helping to facilitate the spread of the gospel on the wordwide level in an organized way, rather than an independent/haphazard/disorganized fashion.
"Although there are evils existing in the church, and will be until the end of the world, the church in these last days is to be the light of the world that is polluted and demoralized by sin.. The church, enfeebled and defective, needing to be reproved, warned, and counselled, is the only object upon earth upon which Christ bestows His supreme regard. "- RH Sept. 5, 1893
"I know that the Lord loves His church. It is not to be disorganized or broken up into independent atoms. There is not the least consistency in this; there is not the least evidence that such a thing will be. Those who shall heed this false message and try to leaven others will be deceived and prepared to receive advanced delusions, and they will come to nought."{Mar 203.2}

Posted by: LaurenceD May 21 2007, 09:03 AM

Voktar, as always...thanks for your comments. Would you be willing to offer an explanation on why certain groups feel compelled to become "independent ministries" or "self-supporting?"

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 21 2007, 10:21 AM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 21 2007, 10:02 AM)
>
> The natural human response to encountering sin and corruption on a localized level is to globalize it. The temptation with the 3ABN problem (as bad as it is) is to globalize and view the entire church leadership as corrupt. This is really nothing more than a prejudicial/bigoted response. Most church members on the local level don't know any administrators personally. Yet they are willing to lump them all together into one corrupt nepotistic group.

Thanks so much for that human nature/big-picture view... I had been pondering how to respond to it myself.

I have the privilege of being good friends with all of the leadership in our local conference office and their wives as well and find them to be anything but corrupt.

I understand the frustration with the seeming lack of official response on the part of the church to the allegations. I wonder about it myself. However, in my experience here locally, when legal issues are involved, leadership moves v-e-r-y cautiously and only when all the "i"s are dotted and "t"s are crossed, for obvious reasons. They get the job done, just not hastily. Which in the long run is best, I suppose :-)

shepherdswife

Posted by: mozart May 21 2007, 10:31 AM

Thank you Voktar of Zargon and Shepherdswife for some food I've been seeking. That gives me even more to digest. ☒ than

> QUOTE(Shepherdswife @ May 21 2007, 10:21 AM)
>
> Thanks so much for that human nature/big-picture view... I had been pondering how to respond to it myself.
>
> I have the privilege of being good friends with all of the leadership in our local conference office and their wives as well and find them to be anything but corrupt.
>
> I understand the frustration with the seeming lack of official response on the part of the church to the allegations. I wonder about it myself. However, in my experience here locally, when legal issues are involved, leadership moves v-e-r-y cautiously and only when all the "i"s are dotted and "t"s are crossed, for obvious reasons. They get the job done, just not hastily. Which in the long run is best, I suppose :-)
>
> shepherdswife

Posted by: LadyTenor May 21 2007, 11:08 AM

> QUOTE(Green Cochoa @ Feb 11 2007, 07:40 AM)

> Clay? ☒ rofl Is this... ☒ ...tiresome? ☒
>
> Naw...it's just ☒ gi ☒ che right? ☒ rofl (You know, every woman has the right to change her mind...)
>
> LadyTenor, please accept my apologies for laughing, it's just....ouch! ☒ tom Hey! ☒ sofa1.gif ou said it quite perfectly...I can change my mind as much as you can laugh. ruthfully, I don't come here often...unless one of my BSDA buddies asks me a legal uestion and then I have to read a whole bunch of posts to ensure I don't put my foot in ny mouth when I respond. Otherwise, this is one of my least read forums....plenty of ther more important things on BSDA to get involved in...like the arcade... ☒

Posted by: FineArt May 21 2007, 12:19 PM

Hi,

I am going to add this for whatever it is worth pertaining to the "church"/"falling away"

2Th 2:3
"Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition;"

The Great Controversy--- A Great Religious Awakening-----PG- 356

"The apostle Paul warned the church not to look for the coming of Christ in his day. "That day shall not come," he says, "except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed." 2 Thessalonians 2:3. Not till after the great apostasy, and the long period of the reign of the "man of sin," can we look for the advent of our Lord. The "man of sin," which is also styled "the mystery of iniquity," "the son of perdition," and "that wicked," represents the papacy, which, as foretold in prophecy, was to maintain its supremacy for 1260 years. This period ended in 1798. The coming of Christ could not take place before that time. Paul covers with his caution the whole of the Christian dispensation down to the year 1798. It is this side of that time that the message of Christ's second coming is to be proclaimed."

This is History.....what we are going to experience is the sifting and shaking.

the church is not Babylon, but there is Babylon in the church. The Church is not in apostacy but there is apostacy in the church. Jesus comes back for a pure people and the above is the refining fire. There will come a time in the near future, where the laws will be in place that will cause God's people to flee for their lives......there is no organised church in that day, the victorious saints will be dwelling in caves, " etc...etc.

an added thought:

Even in the Adventist Church

"We have far more to fear from within than from without. The hindrances to strength and success are far greater from the church itself than from the world. Unbelievers have a right to expect that those who profess to be keeping the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus, will do more than any other class to promote and honor, by their consistent lives, by their godly example and their active influence, the cause which they represent. But how often have the professed advocates of the truth proved the greatest obstacle to its advancement! The unbelief indulged, the doubts expressed, the darkness cherished, encourage the presence of evil angels, and open the way for the accomplishment of Satan's devices."--1SM 122 (1887).

Praise God from whom all blessings fall

Posted by: Skyhook May 21 2007, 12:59 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 21 2007, 01:19 PM)
>
> Even in the Adventist Church
>
> "We have far more to fear from within than from without. The hindrances to strength and success are far greater from the church itself than from the world. Unbelievers have a right to expect that those who profess to be keeping the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus, will do more than any other class to promote and honor, by their consistent lives, by their godly example and their active influence, the cause which they represent. But how often have the professed advocates of the truth proved the greatest obstacle to its advancement! The unbelief indulged, the doubts expressed, the darkness cherished, encourage the presence of evil angels, and open the way for the accomplishment of Satan's devices."--1SM 122 (1887).
>
> Praise God from whom all blessings fall

Thanks for your comments FineArt. It is true that there will come a time when the church will not be able to function as an organization. When access to the financial system is denied to us by law, the church cannot pay salaries, cannot pay bills and will not be able to carry out its mission as an organization. As I understand it that will be just before or after the close of probation when the work of the organized church is finished.

It is clear that in EGW's statements about the church not falling, she is talking about the organized church, not some mystical unorganized body of true believers, some in and some out of the organized church, as some believe.

I have heard it said by one influential minister that in decades past we expected Satan to attack the church like a herd of elephants, but he came in like a herd of termites, and like termites, by the time we became fully aware of it the pillars and foundation of the church were already under attack.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 21 2007, 02:44 PM

Voktar--congratulations on your note posted to save3abn.com!!

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 21 2007, 07:02 AM)
>
> The temptation with the 3ABN problem (as bad as it is) is to globalize and view the entire church leadership as corrupt. This is really nothing more than a prejudicial/bigoted response. Most church members on the local level don't know any administrators personally. Yet they are willing to lump them all together into one corrupt nepotistic group. Have they personal knowledge of any specific sin? Or, have they just blindly accepted third or fourth hand gossip without having confirmed the facts. Have they lodged a grievance or protest with the proper or specific authorities? Not usually.

A lot of times people believe the organization to be corrupt when in fact the people involved are inept or apathetic, or because they believe the ends justify the means.

450 people in my area witnessed the latter when our union president tried to manipulate the constituency in session to re-elect the conference president. Is the union guy a bad man? No, but like is true of myself most of the time, he visibly was not trusting the Lord enough. He tried to end discussion and deny people the voice they'd gathered for; he manipulated the data; and he tried to make it look like he wasn't offering recommendations to the group when everyone could see that the way he said it was exactly that. In the end our local president was re-elected by just a few votes. The margin was so narrow the word on the street is already that they're looking for a job for him.

I like both guys, but the union chair obviously didn't trust the church members to do what was right for the conference.

> QUOTE
>
> Likewise our system of church polity is one of the best in Christendom - helping to minimize and prevent corruption on the corporate level - while also helping to facilitate the spread of the gospel on the wordwide level in an organized way, rather than an independent/haphazard/disorganized fashion.

There are many positives to our church organization in terms of unity and getting "the work" done--not to mention the benefits to employees.

At the same time, it's even more, um, beastly than the RC church. The only religious structure that is more organized is the LDS (Mormon) church. I don't think this is a positive; it disempowers the local church by sending money up and down the ladder (AU profs will tell you that most of the money is spent on the local level--not acknowledging that it comes with excessive control); and the documents that govern the organization are so arcane and difficult that people who aren't familiar with them are able to make very little sense of them.

When it comes to electing the GC, for example, we have a "Committee to Select the President." College of Cardinals, anyone?

The reason that we have to be so organized and insular (the trademark on "Seventh-day Adventist" is an example; the fact that conferences and not congregations usually own the sanctuary buildings is another) is that 90% of the time (rhetorical emphasis, okay?) we make Adventists by appealing to spiritual pride. "Be better than your other Christian neighbors--keep the seventh day! Don't be deceived like everyone else--look here and see that the dead are asleep until the resurrection!" The kind of mindset this creates, turns out to keep going. People want to be the remnant of the remnant of the remnant--and you get Reformed Adventists, etc, who start calling the Adventist church Babylon.

(By the way, other religious groups mentioned in this post are there for illustrative purposes only. The author of this post by no means intends to impugn the spiritual commitment of adherents or such groups. We can disagree theologically without drinking haterade.)

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 21 2007, 11:59 AM)
>
> It is clear that in EGW's statements about the church not falling, she is talking about the organized church, not some mystical unorganized body of true believers, some in and some out of the organized church, as some believe.

Be that as it may ... here are a couple of questions.

Are all the people who are going to be saved members of the Adventist church?
Are all the members of the Adventist church going to be saved?
Who, then, makes up the "true church"?

The EGW statements posted on this thread have been wonderful and I have appreciated them.

But EGW was capable of being wrong, you know.

sofa1.gif

Posted by: Noahswife May 21 2007, 03:42 PM

Has anyone else noticed what I believe is a most interesting phenomena that occurs when the Danny scribes/fingers/clones are essentially mute?

We have two things occurring at the same time in my opinion. The first is that discussion on old and new topics regarding 3abn (notice not just LS and associated issues) move forward with fascinating input often from newbies in addition to the old guard. The second is that our conversations often revolve around the SDA church and what it means to not only the membership in good standing but the rest of the world.

My kudos to the newbies who speak with fresh and inspired voices lately.

Also, the next time we have DS supporters in our midst, lets just put every darn one of them on ignore and carry on without their distractions and subversions.......

Posted by: Skyhook May 21 2007, 05:34 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 21 2007, 03:44 PM)
>
> Be that as it may ... here are a couple of questions.
>
> Are all the people who are going to be saved members of the Adventist church?
>
> \>No.
> Are all the members of the Adventist church going to be saved?
> \>No.
> Who, then, makes up the "true church"?
> \>If you mean who is going to be saved, That is God's department to decide. My statement concerned what EGW was talking about. It seems very clear that she was writing about the visible, concrete existing organized church.
>
> The EGW statements posted on this thread have been wonderful and I have appreciated them.
>
> But EGW was capable of being wrong, you know.
>
> \>I don't know about you SE, but that is the kind of statement made by those who apply a "higher critical" approach to her writings. In other words, that attitude is that we must decide for ourselves if this or that statement was really inspired. We become the judge of inspiration. The same approach is often used with the Bible itself. It is very appealing for a person who doesn't like some of the thing she said. I don't personally subscribe to that approach.
>
> I believe that there is a different thread that has been dealing with the inspiration of Ellen White.

☒ sofa1.gif

Posted by: Pickle May 21 2007, 07:21 PM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 21 2007, 12:59 PM) ☐
>
> It is true that there will come a time when the church will not be able to function as an organization. When access to the financial system is denied to us by law, the church cannot pay salaries, cannot pay bills and will not be able to carry out its mission as an organization. As I understand it that will be just before or after the close of probation when the work of the organized church is finished.

hesitate to say one way or the other on this one. For example, have there been times in the history of the vorld when there has been church organization even though no one was paying salaries? In the USSR? In hina? Throughout Europe during the escapades of the Waldensians and kindred groups?

t what point prior to the second coming will there no need for any sort of leadership to encourage and pray vith the believers?

erhaps we just need to wait and see.

Posted by: FineArt May 21 2007, 07:24 PM

I have found that when i think i am reading something from the Bible or SOP that might be confusing ....further study [topical study/comparing SOP with the Bible] always reveals MY understanding is flawed, not the Inspired Word.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 21 2007, 07:33 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 21 2007, 01:42 PM) ☐
>
> Has anyone else noticed what I believe is a most interesting phenomena that occurs when the Danny scribes/fingers/clones are essentially mute?
>
> We have two things occurring at the same time in my opinion. The first is that discussion on old and new topics regarding 3abn (notice not just LS and associated issues) move forward with fascinating input often from newbies in addition to the old guard. The second is that our conversations often revolve around the SDA church and what it means to not only the membership in good standing but the rest of the world.
>
> My kudos to the newbies who speak with fresh and inspired voices lately.
>
> Also, the next time we have DS supporters in our midst, let just put every darn one of them on ignore and carry on without their distractions and subversions.......

W... I was thinking the same thing. Thank you very much for voicing my thoughts so elequently.

osyroi

Posted by: FineArt May 21 2007, 07:51 PM

Psa 34:7 The angel of the LORD encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them.

The saints are sealed, do we need each other for prayer and encouragement....always, but at this time the saintly leaders of the organized church, will all be in the same boat......clinging to our only life support, Jesus Christ. Comunication will be through the angels. The Holy Spirit has been withdrawn.

- S.D.A. Bible Commentary Vol. 7--- REV14-----PG- 976

"When the Protestant churches shall unite with the secular power to sustain a false religion, for opposing which their ancestors endured the fiercest persecution; when the state shall use its power to enforce the decrees and sustain the institutions of the church--then will Protestant America have formed an image to the papacy, and there will be a national apostasy which will end only in national ruin" (STMarch 22, 1910).

- The Great Controversy----PG- 614

When He leaves the sanctuary, darkness covers the inhabitants of the earth. In that fearful time the righteous mustlive in the sight of a holy God without an intercessor. The restraint which has been upon the wicked is removed, and Satan has entire control of the finally impenitent. God's long-suffering has ended. The world has rejected His mercy, despised His love, and trampled upon His law. The wicked have passed the boundary of their probation; the Spirit of God, persistently resisted, has been at last withdrawn. Unsheltered by divine grace, they have no protection from the wicked one. Satan will then plunge the inhabitants of the earth into one great, final trouble. As the angels of God cease to hold in check the fierce winds of human passion, all the elements of strife will be let loose. The whole world will be involved in ruin more terrible than that which came upon Jerusalem of old.

Leaning on the Promises.......

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 21 2007, 08:01 PM

QUOTE(FineArt @ May 21 2007, 06:51 PM)

> Psa 34:7 The angel of the LORD encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them.
>
> The saints are sealed, do we need each other for prayer and encouragement....always, but at this time the saintly leaders of the organized church, will all be in the same boat......clinging to our only life support, Jesus Christ. Comunication will be through the angels. The Holy Spirit has been withdrawn.
>
> - S.D.A. Bible Commentary Vol. 7--- REV14-----PG- 976
>
> "When the Protestant churches shall unite with the secular power to sustain a false religion, for opposing which their ancestors endured the fiercest persecution; when the state shall use its power to enforce the decrees and sustain the institutions of the church--then will Protestant America have formed an image to the papacy, and there will be a national apostasy which will end only in national ruin" (STMarch 22, 1910).
>
> - The Great Controversy----PG- 614
>
> When He leaves the sanctuary, darkness covers the inhabitants of the earth. In that fearful time the righteous mustlive in the sight of a holy God without an intercessor. The restraint which has been upon the wicked is removed, and Satan has entire control of the finally impenitent. God's long-suffering has ended. The world has rejected His mercy, despised His love, and trampled upon His law. The wicked have passed the boundary of their probation; the Spirit of God, persistently resisted, has been at last withdrawn. Unsheltered by divine grace, they have no protection from the wicked one. Satan will then plunge the inhabitants of the earth into one great, final trouble. As the angels of God cease to hold in check the fierce winds of human passion, all the elements of strife will be let loose. The whole world will be involved in ruin more terrible than that which came upon > Jerusalem of old.

>
> Leaning on the Promises.......

ineArt, onderful collection of statements!

wonder if satellites will still be beaming signals around the world while we are in hiding and waiting for eliverance.....

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 21 2007, 08:04 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 21 2007, 11:03 AM)
>
> Voktar, as always...thanks for your comments. Would you be willing to offer an explanation on why certain groups feel compelled to become "independent ministries" or "self-supporting?"

here are different types of self-supporting and independent ministries both positive and negative. I can't egin to give all the reasons that these develop.
he first truely self-supporting missionary in the New Testament sense was the apostle Paul. He decided to emain a tent-maker so that he could not be accused of ministering for gain or being a burden on the church. ome follow this example today.
he organized church obviously cannot do it all. Therefore Adventists must develop "independent/self upporting" (I use these terms here in the positive sense) ministries to help finish the world-wide work. There re unique missonary endeavors that must be done without direct support, or even official approval, of the hurch.
s a chaplain and a pastor I receive my wages from the State and from the Church. Therefore I am nswerable to multiple entities. The taxpayers and tithe-payers, the state authorities and the church uthorities. I actually have no less than 5 or 6 bosses in 4 different locations. I appreciate the advantages of wning one's own business. Being your own boss can be difficult too though.
n the other hand I believe that some Adventists develop "independent" ministries (in the negative sense) ecause they do not want to answer to any authority - particularly church authority. Those with an egocentric r even sociopathic personality would of course be drawn to this advantage. I seem to remember Danny heltons reason that he gave for wanting to remain "independent" from the church was so that he could aintain a "prophetic" voice in the denomination. The implication was that 3ABN was holier than the church eadership and needed to remain in a sort of watchdog status in relation to church leadership. I think in this ase his independence has instead bred a pathetic voice. If 3ABN was more under the influence of organized hurch authority and audit, perhaps less corruption would have developed.

Posted by: Noahswife May 21 2007, 08:09 PM

Speaking of false assumptions or other statements.......

A couple weeks ago I raised the question if anyone had heard about 3abn's return to sky angel as was announced at my mother's church the sabbath after the merger announcement.

I had dinner tonight with my parents and my mother brought up the fact she called 3abn today to find out what was happening in that regard. After all, it has been 4 weeks and they were told it WOULD BE in 3 weeks. She was transferred from the switchboard to a voicemail. She asked to return to the operator using input commands and never was answered again. Has anyone heard anything? Maybe we should all call tomorrow and compare answers?

I believe this weekend is 3abn campmeeting. Has anyone heard anything about any special announcements? Anyone going to be there?

nw
C"i"

Posted by: Fran May 21 2007, 08:21 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 21 2007, 09:09 PM)
>
> Speaking of false assumptions or other statements.......
>
> A couple weeks ago I raised the question if anyone had heard about 3abn's return to sky angel as was announced at my mother's church the sabbath after the merger announcement.
>
> I had dinner tonight with my parents and my mother brought up the fact she called 3abn today to find out what was happening in that regard. After all, it has been 4 weeks and they were told it WOULD BE in 3 weeks. She was transferred from the switchboard to a voice mail. She asked to return to the operator using input commands and never was answered again. Has anyone heard anything? Maybe we should all call tomorrow and compare answers?
>
> I believe this weekend is 3abn campmeeting. Has anyone heard anything about any special announcements? Anyone going to be there?
>
> nw
> C"i"

Could this action be contingent on the Amazing Facts Merger?

It has been longer than 3 weeks, and I have been looking.

Is this merger still on?

Silence on that front too?

Posted by: FineArt May 21 2007, 08:26 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 21 2007, 09:01 PM)
>
> FineArt,
> Wonderful collection of statements!
>
> I wonder if satellites will still be beaming signals around the world while we are in hiding and waiting for deliverance.....

Yes i believe so.....why?, because we are told that life will go on as usual...."thief in the night" "they know not the Hour" and "at a time when they think not"....."Satan came as an angel of light and is evangelizing the world and telling the people that Sunday is the day of rest" Via satellites????? what do you think.??

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 21 2007, 09:03 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 21 2007, 04:44 PM)
>
> At the same time, it's even more, um, beastly than the RC church. The only religious structure that is more organized is the LDS (Mormon) church. I don't think this is a positive; it disempowers the local church by sending money up and down the ladder (AU profs will tell you that most of the money is spent on the local level--not acknowledging that it comes with excessive control); and the documents that govern the organization are so arcane and difficult that people who aren't familiar with them are able to make very little sense of them.
> There are many in the church who would like to see our church government more congregational, with more power in the local congregation, with less finances leaving the local congregation. I have spoken with many ministers of other congregationally based denominations and they often envy our system of finance and government. Many have suffered much hardship at the hands of local church leaders who feel entitled to treat their pastor as a 'hired hand' to do their bidding. Of course many of our pastors have suffered at the hands of conference leadership.
>
> When it comes to electing the GC, for example, we have a "Committee to Select the President." College of Cardinals, anyone?
> I don't think Catholic Prelates trace their election to any democratic process involving lay constituency. Do these GC selection committee members? Or are they appointed by the Adventist pope?
>
> The reason that we have to be so organized and insular (the trademark on "Seventh-day Adventist" is an example; the fact that conferences and not congregations usually own the sanctuary buildings is another) is that 90% of the time (rhetorical emphasis, okay?) we make Adventists by appealing to spiritual pride.
> I have worked long enough in conference work to not trust local church leaders anymore than conference leaders. (at least conference leaders are often well-educated, a process that minimizes pathology)(I know, Judas was a college grad) You are right, spiritual pride is rampant in our church. I am constantly preaching and teaching against it. You would think that men who have been humiliated by incarceration would not be afflicted with it but you ought to see how strong it is in prison too.

Posted by: mozart May 21 2007, 11:35 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 21 2007, 02:44 PM)
>
> Are all the people who are going to be saved members of the Adventist church?
> Are all the members of the Adventist church going to be saved?
> Who, then, makes up the "true church"?

Even tho' I think you mean these as rhetorical questions, IMO, the answer to all three is "Only God Knows".

Posted by: ex3ABNemployee May 21 2007, 11:52 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 21 2007, 08:21 PM)
>
> Could this action be contingent on the Amazing Facts Merger?
>
> It has been longer than 3 weeks, and I have been looking.
>
> Is this merger still on?
>
> Silence on that front too?

Yes. I seem to remember Danny proudly stating that the merger would be national or even world news. I haven't seen a thing about it, and now even 3ABN is strangely silent about it. Trouble in paradise?

One must wonder.......

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 21 2007, 08:09 PM)
>
> I believe this weekend is 3abn campmeeting. Has anyone heard anything about any special announcements? Anyone going to be there?

Actually, I was wondering how some strategically placed "Visit Save3ABN.com" signs would go over this weekend.

A few around town, a few along the highways toward Thompsonville....

Posted by: mozart May 22 2007, 12:09 AM

OUCH !!!

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ May 21 2007, 11:52 PM)
>
> Actually, I was wondering how some strategically placed "Visit Save3ABN.com" signs would go over this weekend.
>
> A few around town, a few along the highways toward Thompsonville....

Posted by: Noahswife May 22 2007, 04:21 AM

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ May 22 2007, 12:52 AM)
>
> Actually, I was wondering how some strategically placed "Visit Save3ABN.com" signs would go over this > weekend.

>
> A few around town, a few along the highways toward Thompsonville....

wonder how long they would be allowed to stay before being removed?

Posted by: Shepherdswife May 22 2007, 05:34 AM

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ May 22 2007, 01:52 AM)
>
> Yes. I seem to remember Danny proudly stating that the merger would be national or even world news. I haven't seen a thing about it, and now even 3ABN is strangely silent about it. Trouble in paradise?

n a somewhat related note...

have a friend who is on staff at Weimar, who told me that the Weimar/AF merger is on hold for the time eing, that the AF/3ABN merger has "temporarily preempted" the talks. That AF continues to express their nterest in the Weimar merger, but that no one will commit to any specific time frame.

hepherdswife

Posted by: LaurenceD May 22 2007, 06:14 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife)
>
> I wonder how long they would be allowed to stay before being removed?

ey Nw...if he prepares a little in advance, he should be okay. He should do some research, like go to the city nd/or county and see if there is a form to fill out notifying police of a peaceful demonstration and protest. nd stay on a public ROW--keep of private property. Also, he might consider sending out a press release and nvite the media...this is always effective. Also, he might hold the signs, rather than post them along the oads, and hand out a brochure with links to his favorite web sites--including the link to 3abn v. Dept of Rev.. he town people might even enjoy the links.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 22 2007, 06:37 AM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 21 2007, 09:04 PM)
>
> There are different types of self-supporting and independent ministries both positive and negative. I can't begin to give all the reasons that these develop.
> The first truely self-supporting missionary in the New Testament sense was the apostle Paul. He decided to > remain a tent-maker so that he could not be accused of ministering for gain or being a burden on the church. Some follow this example today.

> The organized church obviously cannot do it all. Therefore Adventists must develop "independent/self supporting" (I use these terms here in the positive sense) ministries to help finish the world-wide work. There are unique missonary endeavors that must be done without direct support, or even official approval, of the church.
> As a chaplain and a pastor I receive my wages from the State and from the Church. Therefore I am answerable to multiple entities. The taxpayers and tithe-payers, the state authorities and the church authorities. I actually have no less than 5 or 6 bosses in 4 different locations. I appreciate the advantages of owning one's own business. Being your own boss can be difficult too though.
> On the other hand I believe that some Adventists develop "independent" ministries (in the negative sense) because they do not want to answer to any authority - particularly church authority. Those with an egocentric or even sociopathic personality would of course be drawn to this advantage. I seem to remember Danny Sheltons reason that he gave for wanting to remain "independent" from the church was so that he could maintain a "prophetic" voice in the denomination. The implication was that 3ABN was holier than the church leadership and needed to remain in a sort of watchdog status in relation to church leadership. I think in this case his independence has instead bred a pathetic voice. If 3ABN was more under the influence of organized church authority and audit, perhaps less corruption would have developed.

wonder if there is a distinction between "independent" and "self-supporting" ministries. If Paul was truely elf-supporting, does this imply he would have turned down donations?

y experience tells me that the self-supporting type folks often have a disagreement with establishment--in everal areas including, but not limited to, authority, monitoring, finance, scheduling, and perhaps doctrine. ith regards to scheduling, this might include the rate and methods of finishing "the work."

he reason I ask is because if, for example, 3abn claims to have NO disagreements, but to be part of the ship rather than a friendship or part of a fleet), why so independent? I assume it's for several of the reasons I isted above...but not sure. True independent ministries operate above reproach in order to diminish the ppearance of separation, or give cause for the public to be thinking of a possible schism. I'm guessing that inance and authority is the big one here, but not sure. Campmeetings, separate from the church, can often e suspect of fundamental disagreements, but not always.

Posted by: YogusBearus May 22 2007, 06:52 AM

> QUOTE(ex3ABNemployee @ May 21 2007, 11:52 PM)
>
> Actually, I was wondering how some strategically placed "Visit Save3ABN.com" signs would go over this weekend.
>
> A few around town, a few along the highways toward Thompsonville....

nteresting thought Duane. Someone asked me the other day to send them a link to what I was seeing on the abn mess. I thought long and hard before sending them to the save3abn.com site as quite frankly it's mbarrassing. If I didn't think they could stand to wade through the inflammatory garbage there to find the 0% of content that was meaningful, I would not have provided the link.

m thinking there are many that will never get past the gratuitous inferences on the save3abn site to see the eal issues with 3abn.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 22 2007, 11:25 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 21 2007, 07:01 PM)
>
> FineArt,
> Wonderful collection of statements!
>
> I wonder if satellites will still be beaming signals around the world while we are in hiding and waiting for deliverance.....

In my youth I had believed that we would be able to 'hide in the mountains' with no problems. Even be able to live in groups to support and help each other. Later with infared and now satellites and other technowlogy we don't even know about, we will not be able to hide anywhere no matter how remote we try to hide. It concerned me for awhile.

Once when I was discussng this concern with another child of God the person pointed out to me that God can put his hand over our bodies to hide us from any infared or satellite or any other modern technology man can devise. 'With men this is impossible, but with God ALL things are possible.(Matt. 19:26, RSV)(emphasis mine)

I felt embarrassed to have forgotten that promise. Daily I need to remind myself to trust God in ALL things.

IMHO

Rosyroi

Posted by: Brick Step May 23 2007, 04:50 AM

'Voktar of Zargon' 'May 21 2007
"The natural human response to encountering sin and corruption on a localized level is to globalize it. In our families when one spouse says or does something wrong the injured spouse says something like, "you always do that." or "You never do this." The fact is that this is not allways true. The same is true with the church, which is referred to as the 'household' of God. The main reason that people go out the back door and leave the church is because they globalize sin and try to throw the wheat out with the tares."

Thank you, Voktar of Zargon, for these very insightful comments. God grant us all the wisdom and grace we need at this time. I am for respect of the organized, worldwide Seventh-day Adventist church. I recognize also that independent, self-supporting ministries have always been part of His plan, and they also are run by fallible mortals, sometimes needing to be rebuked, but also encouraged. I like the way you have cautioned us, as a general rule, not to "globalize" when we see corruption and sin in the family or in the church. Would you agree that under God, it is just as important, as a general rule, not to globalize when we see corruption and sin in an independent ministry? While feeling there are issues in the 3ABN administration that need to be set right, I confess to loving and being greatly blessed by 3ABN in its up front witness. Thousands would say the same. It IS leading souls to Christ and stablishing them in the faith.

Whether church structure or independent ministry, I feel much cautioned also by this counsel.

"I have warned you against a spirit of censure, and I would again caution you in regard to that fault. Christ sometimes reproved with severity, and in some cases it may be necessary for us to do so; but we should consider that while Christ knew the exact condition of the ones He rebuked, and just the amount of reproof they could bear, and what was necessary to correct their course of wrong, He also knew just how to pity the erring, comfort the unfortunate, and encourage the weak. He knew just how to keep souls from despondency and to inspire them with hope, because He was acquainted with the exact motives and peculiar trials of every mind. He could not make a mistake.

"But we may misjudge motives; we may be deceived by appearances; we may think we are doing right to reprove wrong, and go too far, censure too severely, and wound where we wished to heal; or we may exercise sympathy unwisely and counteract, in our ignorance, reproof that is merited and timely. Our judgment may be wrong, but Jesus was too wise to err. He reproved with pity and loved with a divine love those whom He rebuked." Testimonies, Vol. 4, p. 66.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 23 2007, 06:41 AM

Welcome Brick Step!

More wise counsel from you and Voktar.

If we see blatant sin within one of our Christian organizations, we must confront it or become culpable for it as well. However, when confronting it we MUST do so as our Example did, with pity and with love.

The "Church Lady" approach to rebuking sin misses the mark in this regard and solves nothing.

Posted by: Brick Step May 23 2007, 07:12 AM

As the 3ABN situation is being placed under the microscope, understandings about God's attitude to church structure and independent ministries are obviously part of the equation, part of the bank of knowledge that will affect attitudes and motivations in the judgment process. Our home is praying most earnestly that God will move to administer the right blend of justice and mercy to every person and entity concerned.

I love the Seventh-day Adventist Church. I just fear that thousands are going to be left clinging to the structure, thinking this was safely to be equated with clinging to Jesus.

The Jews of Jesus' day had been taught to look for triumph for their Jewish church organization, and deliverance from the Romans. When Jesus preached, "My kingdom is not of this world," He disappointed the expectations of the majority of church members. Thousands turned away and ceased from following Him. Could similar false expectations lead us off course just before Jesus' second coming?

- If (because the gospel work is done) God's ownership of the SDA church organization ceases at the close of probation;
- if the close of probation for the church occurs during the sealing time and ahead of the general close of probation for the world;
- if the time of the close of probation is near;
- if the time of the close of probation for the church, as for the world, is not to come for us "as a thief in the night";

is it not imperative that Adventist believers are prepared doctrinally, philosophically, psychologically and in every way, for this moment? The security of the final 144,000 is to be found—even before the close of probation—in "following the Lamb wherever He goes", not in following any mere mortal or committee of mere mortals. Church members, of all people, should be careful not to judge other members and friends as being proud, arrogant or egotistical because in their devotion to Jesus and desire to follow the directives of Providence, they feel led to work in a manner different from "the regular lines."

On the subject of the Seventh-day Adventist Church structure—so often the selections and compilations of texts and quotes are made by those in the employ of the church, or otherwise find their security in harmonising with the status quo. For this reason sometimes I feel there is a tendency, as in Jesus' day, to focus upon statements which favour the church structure, to the neglect of statements which speak of the conditional nature of God's ownership of it. These statements, much as we may not like them, are there, too, and they have weight, too. (On the other hand, of course, save us from focussing upon this side of the picture, and minimizing the importance of the approving statements.)

Ellen White was called of God at the close of the 2300 day prophecy, to give guidance to and help establish the prophesied remnant who would prepare the world for Jesus' second coming. She thought she was living in the time of the last generation before this event. But, not so. I believe in respect for the church structure to the degree possible. While we have been let down and disappointed at times, we yet see many talented and godly persons still in the structure. We are inspired by, greatly appreciate and need their witness. We must be organized for service. The outpouring of the latter rain will make the greatest ever demands upon the church structure. It is wonderful to see already the spirit of cooperation that is taking the gospel to places like Russia and China and other ends of the earth.

But, we have been warned that in the final events we can expect also that portions of the structure—even big ones—may do nothing but get in the way, even betray the flock in their faithles human efforts to "save the church" - or themselves from persecution.

I assuredly do not pretend to know all the answers, but is it not reasonable to conclude that just before the close of probation for the church and world, when the work of the last remnant church structure is nearly done, believers should be being prepared for the future by hearing a "present truth" emphasis upon church structure? Would this not in some important respects have to be different from the emphasis that was needed when the organization and structure of the remnant church was being set up?

Posted by: Johann May 23 2007, 07:23 AM

> QUOTE(Brick Step @ May 23 2007, 03:12 PM)
>
> As the 3ABN situation is being placed under the microscope, understandings about God's attitude to church structure and independent ministries are obviously part of the equation, part of the bank of knowledge that will affect attitudes and motivations in the judgment process. Our home is praying most earnestly that God will move to administer the right blend of justice and mercy to every person and entity concerned.

3ABN make is clear that they are not part of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Should we make it appear as if they are?

> QUOTE
>
> I love the Seventh-day Adventist Church. I just fear that thousands are going to be left clinging to the structure, thinking this was safely to be equated with clinging to Jesus.

Do you mean that Jesus was a stumbling block to many? Should he, then, have remained in heaven to avoid this?

Should 3ABN avoid cleansing because that might be a stumbling block to many?

Posted by: Noahswife May 23 2007, 07:37 AM

> QUOTE(Brick Step @ May 23 2007, 08:12 AM)

> I love the Seventh-day Adventist Church. I just fear that thousands are going to be left clinging to the structure, thinking this was safely to be equated with clinging to Jesus.
>
> The Jews of Jesus' day had been taught to look for triumph for their Jewish church organization, and deliverance from the Romans. When Jesus preached, "My kingdom is not of this world," He disappointed the expectations of the majority of church members. Thousands turned away and ceased from following Him. Could similar false expectations lead us off course just before Jesus' second coming?

rick Step.....

elcome to Black SDA......

hank you for your post and thoughts. I look forward to some real discussion following your post.

he newbies continue to amaze and encourage me.

hank you...

w
"i"

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 23 2007, 11:58 AM

> QUOTE
>
> There are many in the church who would like to see our church government more congregational, with more power in the local congregation, with less finances leaving the local congregation. I have spoken with many ministers of other congregationally based denominations and they often envy our system of finance and government. Many have suffered much hardship at the hands of local church leaders who feel entitled to treat their pastor as a 'hired hand' to do their bidding. Of course many of our pastors have suffered at the hands of conference leadership.

guess we gravitate towards what's happened in our own experience. Our system has definite strengths, but ocal empowerment certainly isn't one of them. It's a very top-down organization, the leaders tend to assume hey know what's best for every church in every situation, and I believe the appearance of a democratically-un church is an illusion.

gain, this is my experience, which is limited, and it would be unfair to globalize it. But I do believe the eneral principles are correct.

> QUOTE
>
> I don't think Catholic Prelates trace their election to any democratic process involving lay constituency. Do these GC selection committee members? Or are they appointed by the Adventist pope?

o they're not appointed in the same way, but let's not pretend it's something other than a club. I'm not mpugning their character, btw. I just don't think that the Adventist church constituency could put in a andidate for president without that committee's approval. They're the deciders. Not us. So, the beat goes n ...

> QUOTE
>
> I have worked long enough in conference work to not trust local church leaders anymore than conference > leaders. (at least conference leaders are often well-educated, a process that minimizes pathology)

our direct experience is probably more extensive than my own, but I would ten times trust the local leaders nore than the conference--and I'm not impugning my local conference this time either! I just don't believe hey know what's right for local contexts.

> QUOTE
>
> (I know, Judas was a college grad) You are right, spiritual pride is rampant in our church. I am constantly preaching and teaching against it. You would think that men who have been humiliated by incarceration would not be afflicted with it but you ought to see how strong it is in prison too.

riginal sin ...

> QUOTE
>
> Are all the people who are going to be saved members of the Adventist church?
> Are all the members of the Adventist church going to be saved?
> Who, then, makes up the "true church"?

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 21 2007, 10:35 PM)
>
> Even tho' I think you mean these as rhetorical questions, IMO, the answer to all three is "Only God Knows".

re you saying we can't know we are saved? (1 John 5:11-13)

y point was this: logic dictates that we should not equate God's end-time people with those who are a part f any structure, even the Seventh-day Adventist Church which I love.

ased on fruits as per Matthew 7, it's obvious to me that not all Adventists are saved, not all non-Adventists re lost, and that in fact membership is a good deal less important than faithfulness to Christ. In fact, it fades nto nothingness. IMO.

ow, I believe our message has never been more relevant, but we've promoted it as a part of our own dentity and how everyone should be like us ... instead of as a part of Christ's reality and gifts of grace to us.

n the context of the 3ABN fiasco ... well ... I got hold of a copy of the latest 3ABN world, and it was clear hat the principals involved were taking it upon themselves to "take the gospel to the entire world." Certainly elevision can be a part of that -- but to say "that's it" was out-and-out wrong.

Vhat I mean is this: as long as we think we're "it"--be that Adventists or 3ABN donors--not only will we be ıarboring the sin of pride in our own hearts, we'll be keeping people from knowing Christ. If we want people o see Him, we'd better learn to get out of the way--kneeling, perhaps.

Posted by: princessdi May 23 2007, 12:42 PM

I didn't realize the educational requirements for conferences officers were that different from pastors. In fact, I thought it was about the same, that is why the the pay is about the same(differeing only sightly between conferences depending on the region, cost of living, etc.). What educational requirements do conference official have that are not required of Pastors. No I do know that certain jobs such as teasurer might take some additional or specialized education.Sorry I know this is a bit ofl

> QUOTE
>
> I have worked long enough in conference work to not trust local church leaders anymore than conference leaders. (at least conference leaders are often well-educated, a process that minimizes pathology)

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 23 2007, 01:56 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 23 2007, 02:42 PM)
>
> I didn't realize the educational requirements for conferences officers were that different from pastors. In fact, I thought it was about the same, that is why the the pay is about the same(differeing only sightly between conferences depending on the region, cost of living, etc.). What educational requirements do conference official have that are not required of Pastors. No I do know that certain jobs such as teasurer might take some additional or specialized education.Sorry I know this is a bit ofl

I'm sorry, when I was talking about local leadership I wasn't referring to pastors. I was talking about the rest of the local (lay)leaders who help to run the church. My experience is mostly in smaller churches where the educational level may be slightly less than in a larger church environment. I'm not an educational eliteist (after all, most of the apostles were illiterate fishermenn), I just know that navigating the waters of a lengthy educational process can help to weed out some psychological and spiritual pathology. When I went to seminary we had to take an MMPI.

Posted by: Artiste May 23 2007, 05:40 PM

> QUOTE(Brick Step @ May 23 2007, 02:50 AM)
>
> .
>
> "...we may exercise sympathy unwisely and counteract, in our ignorance, reproof that is merited and timely..." Testimonies, Vol. 4, p. 66.

I agree with this!

Posted by: mozart May 23 2007, 07:47 PM

I couldn't agree with you more.

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 23 2007, 11:58 AM)
>
> I guess we gravitate towards what's happened in our own experience. Our system has definite strengths, but local empowerment certainly isn't one of them. It's a very top-down organization, the leaders tend to assume they know what's best for every church in every situation, and I believe the appearance of a democratically-run church is an illusion.
>
> Again, this is my experience, which is limited, and it would be unfair to globalize it. But I do believe the general principles are correct.
> No they're not appointed in the same way, but let's not pretend it's something other than a club. I'm not impugning their character, btw. I just don't think that the Adventist church constituency could put in a candidate for president without that committee's approval. They're the deciders. Not us. So, the beat goes on ...
> Your direct experience is probably more extensive than my own, but I would ten times trust the local leaders more than the conference--and I'm not impugning my local conference this time either! I just don't believe they know what's right for local contexts.
> Original sin ...
> Are you saying we can't know we are saved? (1 John 5:11-13)
>
> My point was this: logic dictates that we should not equate God's end-time people with those who are a part of any structure, even the Seventh-day Adventist Church which I love.
>
> Based on fruits as per Matthew 7, it's obvious to me that not all Adventists are saved, not all non-Adventists are lost, and that in fact membership is a good deal less important than faithfulness to Christ. In fact, it fades into nothingness. IMO.
>
> Now, I believe our message has never been more relevant, but we've promoted it as a part of our own identity and how everyone should be like us ... instead of as a part of Christ's reality and gifts of grace to us.
>
> In the context of the 3ABN fiasco ... well ... I got hold of a copy of the latest 3ABN world, and it was clear that the principals involved were taking it upon themselves to "take the gospel to the entire world." Certainly television can be a part of that -- but to say "that's it" was out-and-out wrong.
>
> What I mean is this: as long as we think we're "it"--be that Adventists or 3ABN donors--not only will we be harboring the sin of pride in our own hearts, we'll be keeping people from knowing Christ. If we want people to see Him, we'd better learn to get out of the way--kneeling, perhaps.

Posted by: Brick Step May 24 2007, 01:50 AM

Brick Step. Thank you for the welcomes.

PB. "When we see blatant sin within one of our Christian organizations, we must confront it or become culpable for it as well."

Johann (quoting Martin Luther King). "He who passively accepts evil is as much involved in it as he who helps to perpetrate it."

Brick Step. Believe me I agree with the above two statements.

Brick Step. "I love the SDA Church. I just feel thousands are going to be left clinging to the structure, thinking this was safely to be equated with clinging to Jesus."

Johann. Do you mean that Jesus was a stumbling block to many? Should he then have stayed in heaven to avoid this? Should 3ABN avoid cleansing because that might be a stumbling block to many?

Brick Step. Johann, I'm trying to understand your reaction. I should have italicized also the word "safely." The text I had in mind was Matthew 12:6, where Jesus Himself told the priests of the church structure that He was "greater than the temple." Obviously, when the church structure is obeying God, teaching the truth and taking up power and authority according to the boundaries prescribed in His Word, then to follow Jesus means to obey and support the church structure. But infallibility belongs to God alone. It is wrong to blindly follow Conference directives.

I've just about forgotten it all now, but I thought even the book ISSUES was shown to contain many errors of reporting.

In Nazi Germany (as somebody already quoted somewhere on this website) Conference officers directed that all those of Jewish descent should be disfellowshipped, and other church members should cut ties with them. So Seventh-day Adventists of Jewish descent were left defenceless and without friends, and sent to concentration camps where many died. It seems to me that in the judgment Jesus will point the involved to this happening, and will not excuse those whose only plea is, "The Conference made me do it."

Please, I do not feel negative thoughts towards you, Johann, or to the obviously sincere and godly attempts by many others on this website to find and stand by the truth in regard to the divorce of Danny and Linda, and related issues. God bless and guide you all. My problem is that I have never been to 3ABN and have never met anyone who has worked at 3ABN. I feel that while it might be right for many on BSDA to speak strongly to their concerns, I need to move more slowly, for I simply cannot be or am not 100% sure of some facts. Also, we have had providences in our own experience which seem to caution us further to separate between the up front ministry of 3ABN over satellite TV, which is still blessing the souls of so many, and the behind-the-scenes (?) concerns with administration.

God must have good reason to allow this terrible scandal to break out like this. There are big lessons to be learned. I want to learn those lessons.

I am so looking forward to hearing that Linda has found a new nitch in life that is a happy and fulfilling one. God gave her that beautiful singing voice to be used in His service.

Posted by: Johann May 24 2007, 03:20 AM

> QUOTE(Brick Step @ May 24 2007, 09:50 AM)
>
> Brick Step. Thank you for the welcomes.
>
> Please, I do not feel negative thoughts towards you, Johann, or to the obviously sincere and godly attempts by many others on this website to find and stand by the truth in regard to the divorce of Danny and Linda, and related issues.
>
> God must have good reason to allow this terrible scandal to break out like this. There are big lessons to be learned. I want to learn those lessons.
>
> I am so looking forward to hearing that Linda has found a new nitch in life that is a happy and fulfilling one. God gave her that beautiful singing voice to be used in His service.

Dear Brick Step,

I really like your reply. I did not for a moment have negative thoughts about you. I should have given you a warm welcome while I asked you some questions to give you the opportunity to explain further what you meant.

Linda told me recently that in her past it was only Danny who would do the preaching in churches while she was asked to have the Scripture reading and prayer. Now people are asking her to preach, and this is a new challenge to her. She is looking forward to meeting the people at Camp Meeting and elsewhere where she is presenting a message inspired by the Lord.

Blessings,

Johann

Posted by: inga May 28 2007, 12:01 PM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 21 2007, 09:04 PM)
>
> Being your own boss can be difficult too though.
> On the other hand I believe that some Adventists develop "independent" ministries (in the negative sense) because they do not want to answer to any authority - particularly church authority. Those with an egocentric or even sociopathic personality would of course be drawn to this advantage. I seem to remember Danny Sheltons reason that he gave for wanting to remain "independent" from the church was so that he could maintain a "prophetic" voice in the denomination. The implication was that 3ABN was holier than the church leadership and needed to remain in a sort of watchdog status in relation to church leadership.

What you have described of Danny's attitude seems rather typical of some self-supporting ministries, as they used to call themselves -- rather fittingly, in my view (supporting self rather than serving God, that is). The attitude of being specially called to superior ministry than the whole church is always a fruitful ground for producing Pharasaism and fanaticism.

In the case of 3ABN, it seems that all the worst scenarios came together.

Other independent ministries, are, of course truly supportive of the work of God, and they work closely with the church.

Posted by: inga May 28 2007, 12:14 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 20 2007, 05:03 PM)
>
> i think that what i have always understood as ".....a falling away first...." does not pertain to those who i thought it did. i thought the "falling away" would be those leaving the faith, but now i think that the "falling away" IS the organizational church leaving the Faith. it seems so clear to me now that those that will stand to the end are those few who stay faithful to the truth; small groups scorned by the SDA (name copyrighted) church as we know it.

Mozart, that's precisely the kind of thinking that got 3ABN to the place where it is now -- the conviction that they are a special "small group" "who stay faithful to the truth" while the church "falls away." The money that's keeping 3ABN's misdeeds covered comes from folks with the same kind of mindset.

Do you really want to go there?

Posted by: mozart May 28 2007, 01:19 PM

inga,
what got 3ABN to the place where it is now is backsliding, unfaithfulness, pride and following and believing in self above God. also, i don't think 3ABN can be called a "small group".

i'm not sure what mindset you read into what i said, but i don't think the mindset is the problem. i think it's the person behind the mindset. would you say Martin Luther was of that mindset? was he a problem to the organizational church? absolutely. was he a problem to God? i don't think so.

if the church organization falls away (which it is gradually doing) then we who want to stay faithful have to follow our conscience as God leads us. maybe the GC will turn around and start to "walk that narrow path". who knows? i pray it will.

i said nothing about thinking that i am special. i am, however, determined to follow God as best i can, not an organization.

the Bible says in the end times we will have to "flee to the mountains". even Mrs. White said that in the end times we will have to shelter ourselves and worship in small groups. does that make us radicals or rebels? absolutely not. it just means we are faithful.
now if some people want to "jump the gun" and go off on a self-righteous tangent (as many have) that's their problem, but that is not what i'm talking about.

> QUOTE(inga @ May 28 2007, 12:14 PM) ☐
>
> Mozart, that's precisely the kind of thinking that got 3ABN to the place where it is now -- the conviction that they are a special "small group" "who stay faithful to the truth" while the church "falls away." The money that's keeping 3ABN's misdeeds covered comes from folks with the same kind of mindset.
>
> Do you really want to go there?

Posted by: inga May 28 2007, 02:35 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 28 2007, 02:19 PM) ☐
>
> inga,
> what got 3ABN to the place where it is now is backsliding, unfaithfulness, pride and following and believing in self above God. also, i don't think 3ABN can be called a "small group".
>
> i'm not sure what mindset you read into what i said, but i don't think the mindset is the problem. i think it's the person behind the mindset.

The mind set of "I am part of the elect and most of the rest of the church will fall away" is precisely what is creating a lot of trouble through independent ministries. The participants do not realize that their attitude is most like the Pharisees who crucified Jesus. The attitude is also one that leads to extremism because folks with an "elect" attitude will not listen to anyone. (Note that Danny Shelton is an extreme example. He is specifically "chosen" and "anointed" to lead 3ABN in its "prophetic" ministry.)

> QUOTE
>
> would you say Martin Luther was of that mindset?

I don't recall Luther as being on record for believing that he was especially chosen of God to root out the evil in his church. What caused Luther to rise as a leader was his integrity that caused him to stand for the right, though the heavens fall. We need that kind of spirit. Let God take care of the consequences.

> QUOTE
>
> was he a problem to the organizational church? absolutely. was he a problem to God? i don't think so.
>
> if the church organization falls away (which it is gradually doing) then we who want to stay faithful have to follow our conscience as God leads us. maybe the GC will turn around and start to "walk that narrow path". who knows? i pray it will.

As I indicated, I believe this line of thinking is dangerous to your/our personal relationship with God. It is so easy to become another "Danny" in our own sphere.

Ellen White made clear that the church would appear as though it were about to fall, but it would not fall. This cannot be the invisible church (true believers) because it cannot appear to be about to fall, by definition. (It is invisible.) Ellen's reference, therefore, is to the organized church.

> QUOTE
>
> i said nothing about thinking that i am special. i am, however, determined to follow God as best i can, not an organization.

I was not addressing you personally, but the line of thinking you proposed. I am still doing that.

There is a difference between being determined to follow God at all costs and keeping in mind that the church will likely fall. The latter has a subtle and not-so-subtle influence to make us deaf to counsel that may very well be needed to keep us on the narrow path. I've seen it, and I see it in my own local congregation. I've been quite astonished to see it in individuals that always appeared (to me, at least) to be conscientious Christians. It's stunning to witness the un-Christlike behavior of those who perceive themselves to be among the "elect" while most of the rest of the church will likely "fall away."

Ellen White actually had something to say on this very subject. She indicate that, at the end of time, the conservative element would hinder the work of Christ.

For an interesting exercise, look up every mention of "conservative" and "conservatism" in the writings of Ellen White. You may be in for a surprise ..

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 28 2007, 02:56 PM

> QUOTE
>
> (mozart @ May 20 2007, 05:03 PM)
>
> i think that what i have always understood as ".....a falling away first...." does not pertain to those who i thought it did. i thought the "falling away" would be those leaving the faith, but now i think that the "falling away" IS the organizational church leaving the Faith. it seems so clear to me now that those that will stand to the end are those few who stay faithful to the truth; small groups scorned by the SDA (name copyrighted) church as we know it.

> QUOTE(inga @ May 28 2007, 10:14 AM)
>
> Mozart, that's precisely the kind of thinking that got 3ABN to the place where it is now -- the conviction that they are a special "small group" "who stay faithful to the truth" while the church "falls away." The money that's keeping 3ABN's misdeeds covered comes from folks with the same kind of mindset.

> Do you really want to go there?

s flawed as our organizational structure may be, I believe that many of our leaders are dedicated to ollowing God's guidance and will for our church. Of course there are obviously some leaders who don't have hat connection with God that keeps their faith as strong as it needs to be to stay strong to principle. This is a ourse that any of us are in danger of following anytime we look to self or man rather than to God for trength.

Ve can't know for certain whether or not the church structure will stay in place until we are told to run for the ills, but I think there are three things we can be certain of:

. If we lose faith that God is in control of our church, we will be in danger of losing faith in the message as vell. That will lead to second-guessing what that message actually is and then we will be vulnerable to atan's "winds of doctrine".

. Man is not in a position to determine if the church structure as a whole should be cast off, but should seek o help solve problems as they are revealed.

. There will be church leaders hiding in the hills joyously waiting for the first glimpse of that small cloud that eralds our deliverance.

Posted by: inga May 28 2007, 04:27 PM

Amen to all you wrote above, PB!

Of course, not all leaders are dedicated. There are various means and various motivations that lead to leadership positions.

However, it's well to not the example of Christ. As apostate as most of the church leaders of the time were, Christ did not preach against the church of the time. He did call leaders to repentance, and He told the people to do as the leaders said, not as they did. I think we should be very careful about even thinking that the church will "fall away." We need the checks and balances we find by being in church fellowship. Otherwise we all have the tendency to become our own gods. The history of off-shoots and many independent ministries should be a warning to us.

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 28 2007, 03:56 PM)
>
> As flawed as our organizational structure may be, I believe that many of our leaders are dedicated to following God's guidance and will for our church. Of course there are obviously some leaders who don't have that connection with God that keeps their faith as strong as it needs to be to stay strong to principle. This is a course that any of us are in danger of following anytime we look to self or man rather than to God for strength.
>
> We can't know for certain whether or not the church structure will stay in place until we are told to run for the hills, but I think there are three things we can be certain of:
>
> 1. If we lose faith that God is in control of our church, we will be in danger of losing faith in the message as well. That will lead to second-guessing what that message actually is and then we will be vulnerable to Satan's "winds of doctrine".
>
> 2. Man is not in a position to determine if the church structure as a whole should be cast off, but should seek to help solve problems as they are revealed.
>
> 3. There will be church leaders hiding in the hills joyously waiting for the first glimpse of that small cloud that heralds our deliverance.

Posted by: Clay May 28 2007, 04:54 PM

A warning that we should not trust men... a warning that we need to keep our focus on Christ... Paul said follow me AS I follow Christ, the directive being clear, if he (Paul) wasn't following Christ he was not to be followed...

God's true church is invisible, we have no idea who comprises that church, though we often act like the denomination we see, comprises God's true church...

Lastly, where in the bible does it say that in the last days will followers of Christ will have to flee to the mountains? Scripture please....

Posted by: YogusBearus May 28 2007, 05:12 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 28 2007, 04:54 PM)
>
> A warning that we should not trust men... a warning that we need to keep our focus on Christ... Paul said follow me AS I follow Christ, the directive being clear, if he (Paul) wasn't following Christ he was not to be followed...
>
> God's true church is invisible, we have no idea who comprises that church, though we often act like the denomination we see, comprises God's true church...
>
> Lastly, where in the bible does it say that in the last days will followers of Christ will have to flee to the mountains? Scripture please....

Absolutely agreed on both points!

I would also love to see the scripture basis for hiding in the mountains/hills scenario.

-bear

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 28 2007, 05:45 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 28 2007, 03:54 PM)
>
> A warning that we should not trust men... a warning that we need to keep our focus on Christ... Paul said follow me AS I follow Christ, the directive being clear, if he (Paul) wasn't following Christ he was not to be followed...
>
> God's true church is invisible, we have no idea who comprises that church, though we often act like the denomination we see, comprises God's true church...

God's true church is that body of believers, The Body of Christ, who truly follow HIM. Our denomination can certainly be included in that Body. It is only when we claim to be the only true church that we are in error. I love the description of the "true church" in Ephesians 4:11 - 16:

11 It was he who gave some to be apostles, some to be prophets, some to be evangelists, and some to be pastors and teachers, 12 to prepare God's people for works of service, so that the body of Christ may be built up 13 until we all reach unity in the faith and in the knowledge of the Son of God and become mature, attaining to the whole measure of the fullness of Christ.

14 Then we will no longer be infants, tossed back and forth by the waves, and blown here and there by every wind of teaching and by the cunning and craftiness of men in their deceitful scheming. 15 Instead, speaking the truth in love, we will in all things grow up into him who is the Head, that is, Christ. 16 From him the whole body, joined and held together by every supporting ligament, grows and builds itself up in love, as each part does its work.

> QUOTE
>
> Lastly, where in the bible does it say that in the last days will followers of Christ will have to flee to the mountains? Scripture please....

Clay,

Since it is your 47th birthday I will gladly show you where in the bible it says that in the last days the followers of Christ will have to flee to the mountains. Matthew 24:15 - 25:

15 "So when you see standing in the holy place 'the abomination that causes desolation,' spoken of through the prophet Daniel—let the reader understand— 16 then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains. 17 Let no one on the roof of his house go down to take anything out of the house. 18 Let no one in the field go back to get his cloak. 19How dreadful it will be in those days for pregnant women and nursing mothers! 20 Pray that your flight will not take place in winter or on the Sabbath. 21 For then there will be great distress, unequaled from the beginning of the world until now—and never to be equaled again. 22 If those days had not been cut short, no one would survive, but for the sake of the elect those days will be shortened. 23 At that time if anyone says to you, 'Look, here is the Christ!' or, 'There he is!' do not believe it. 24 For false Christs and false prophets will appear and perform great signs and miracles to deceive even the elect—if that were possible. 25 See, I have told you ahead of time."

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 28 2007, 05:47 PM

In Matthew 24:15,16 etc. it says: "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand:) Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains..."
The events surrounding the destruction of Jerusalem were a type of the events which will transpire at the end of the world. In Matthew 24 Christ answers His disciples question about both the destruction of the temple and the end of the world in one "Olivet Discourse." The abomination of desolation in 70A.D was the sight of the Pagan Roman power and the idolotrous emblem of its authority. The abomination of the last days will be the idolotrous emblem of Papal Rome and its blasphemous authority. When this standard is raised before the world, its time to head for the hills. Then "Pray that your flight is not on the Sabbath' - and, that your faith is grounded in the Word of God.

Posted by: Clay May 28 2007, 05:50 PM

Ummmm time out... we do not live in Judea.... V of Z you have taken scriptural license given that what Jesus was talking about was the siege of Jerusalem... and that has happened..... so given that what Jesus was talking about happened within the 1st century, are there any more texts you care to provide to support this position of fleeing to the mountains?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 28 2007, 05:55 PM

Clay,
If you click on the link below, it will take you to Matthew 24 on the Bible Gateway site. If you look at the headings and read the whole chapter, you will find that Jesus is talking about the end of the age and also the signs of the coming of the son of man. Yes, He was warning of the coming destruction of Jerusalem, but also about the end times just before He was to come back.

http://www.biblegateway.com/passage/?book_id=47&chapter=24&version=31

Posted by: Clay May 28 2007, 06:01 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 28 2007, 06:55 PM)
>
> Clay,
> If you click on the link below, it will take you to Matthew 24 on the Bible Gateway site. If you look at the headings and read the whole chapter, you will find that Jesus is talking about the end of the age and also the signs of the coming of the son of man. Yes, He was warning of the coming destruction of Jerusalem, but also about the end times just before He was to come back.
>
> http://www.biblegateway.com/passage/?book_id=47&chapter=24&version=31

I am aware of the interpretations, Jesus was speaking to the people who were listening to him at the time. His words had meaning for them at that time, not 2000 yrs in the future, it is safe to say that He expected to return long before now... having said that however consider the fact that the "end times" started after Jesus returned to heaven... Paul in fact states in Hebrews, "in these last days" so I will give you the siege of Jerusalem, and even the persecution by the Catholic Church during the dark ages..... but are you extrapolating the meaning to here and now?

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 28 2007, 06:11 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 28 2007, 07:50 PM)
>
> Ummmm time out... we do not live in Judea.... V of Z you have taken scriptural license given that what Jesus was talking about was the siege of Jerusalem... and that has happened..... so given that what Jesus was talking about happened within the 1st century, are there any more texts you care to provide to support this position of fleeing to the mountains?

Don't tell me. We are not Israel either? If I am taking Scriptural license then so are a host of Historicist expositors. You, however are sounding like a Preterist. Are you of the Preterist persuasion?

"3rd. What should be the signs that the end of the world was near. To these questions he replies in this and the following chapters. This he does, not by noticing them distinctly, but by intermingling the descriptions of the destruction of Jerusalem, and of the end of the world; so that it is sometimes difficult to tell to what particular subject his remarks apply. The principle on which this combined description of two events was spoken appears to be, that they could be described in the same words, and, therefore, the accounts are intermingled. A similar use of language is found in some parts of Isaiah, where the same language will describe the return from the Babylonish captivity, and deliverance by the Messiah, and therefore was used by the prophet. See Barnes "Isaiah 1:1", paragraph 7. " - Albert Barnes Commentary on NT

It is your perfect right to stay put when the abomination comes down. As for me and my house, we're headin' for the hills!

Posted by: Clay May 28 2007, 06:25 PM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 28 2007, 07:11 PM)

> Don't tell me. We are not Israel either? If I am taking Scriptural license then so are a host of Historicist expositors. You, however are sounding like a Preterist. Are you of the Preterist persuasion?
>
> "3rd. What should be the signs that the end of the world was near. To these questions he replies in this and the following chapters. This he does, not by noticing them distinctly, but by intermingling the descriptions of the destruction of Jerusalem, and of the end of the world; so that it is sometimes difficult to tell to what particular subject his remarks apply. The principle on which this combined description of two events was spoken appears to be, that they could be described in the same words, and, therefore, the accounts are intermingled. A similar use of language is found in some parts of Isaiah, where the same language will describe the return from the Babylonish captivity, and deliverance by the Messiah, and therefore was used by the prophet. See Barnes "Isaiah 1:1", paragraph 7. " - Albert Barnes Commentary on NT
>
> It is your perfect right to stay put when the abomination comes down. As for me and my house, we're headin' for the hills!

thank you for the clarification...... no we are not Israel.... no matter how many times we tell ourselves that we are...

As for my persuasion.... It is my belief that what was told or written had specific meaning for those listening or receiving the word at that time... it may or may not have meaning for us here and now...

If something should occur here and now, it is my belief that God will take care of his own as he always has throughout earth's history....

For your consideration and why I think you are wrong.....emphasis mine....

Mar 13:19-27

> QUOTE
>
> For those days will be a time of suffering, a kind that has not happened from the beginning of the creation that God made until now and certainly will never happen again. (20) If the Lord did not limit those days, no one would be saved. But for the sake of the elect whom he has chosen, he has limited those days. (21) "At that time, if anyone says to you, 'Look! Here is the Christ!', or, 'Look! There he is!', don't believe it. (22) For false christs and false prophets will appear and produce signs and omens to deceive, if possible, the elect. (23) So be on your guard! I've told you everything before it happens." (24) "But after the suffering of those days, 'The sun will be darkened, the moon will not give its light, (25) the stars will fall from the sky, and the powers of heaven will be shaken loose.' (26) Then people will see 'the Son of Man coming in clouds' with great power and glory. (27) He will send out his angels and gather his elect from the four winds, from the ends of the earth to the ends of heaven."

Jesus said after the suffering the stars would fall and the sun darkened... as adventists we said that happened in 1700s and early 1800s.... that being the case, according to the text, the next thing on the agenda is the 2nd coming... so what's your take?

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 28 2007, 06:37 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 28 2007, 08:25 PM)
>
> thank you for the clarification...... no we are not Israel.... no matter how many times we tell ourselves that we are...

Do you mean that you are not a Jew or Abraham's seed either?

Posted by: Jnana15 May 28 2007, 06:46 PM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 28 2007, 07:11 PM)
>
> It is your perfect right to stay put when the abomination comes down. As for me and my house, we're headin' for the hills!

Amen!! I headed for the hills before Y2K and it has been a learning experience for me being of color living in the mountains. There is no way that our family could have survived without the help of other christians that were willing to show us how to get through the rough winters and I mean rough. Now we can help others.

My husband and I are pleading with family to prepare to leave the city before it's too late. They think that we are crazy. They remind me of Lot's wife.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 28 2007, 06:57 PM

Well, wherever those who have remained connected to God, have grown to really know Him and have, through His power, remained faithful, that's where I want to be standing and watching for Jesus. If that is the hills, we will know without a doubt. If that is in Union Square, we will know it without a doubt.

I happen to believe it will be the hills and that those waiting will be of one accord. Once we all flee the structure of society, we will probably not call ourselves Seventh-day Adventists. Many will have separated themselves from other denominations to flee the persecution of those trying to force on them the worship of an earthly power instead of God. We will not be tithing to the storehouse, supporting the church budget, censuring errant members, holding outreach programs or any of the other trappings of the corporate church because there won't be a need for any of that, including any corporate name. All will simply know that they are The Redeemed of the Lord.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 28 2007, 07:07 PM

> QUOTE(Clay)
>
> Jesus said after the suffering the stars would fall and the sun darkened... as adventists we said that happened in 1700s and early 1800s....

Stars? Or, cosmic Tempel-Tuttle debris?

The Great Leonid Meteor Storm of 1833
http://science.nasa.gov/NEWHOME/headlines/ast22jun99_2.htm

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 28 2007, 07:07 PM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 28 2007, 05:37 PM)
>
> Do you mean that you are not a Jew or Abraham's seed either?

VoZ,

Galations 3:15, 16 is very clear who Abraham's seed is and it is not us:

15 Brothers, let me take an example from everyday life. Just as no one can set aside or add to a human covenant that has been duly established, so it is in this case. 16 The promises were spoken to Abraham and to his seed. The Scripture does not say "and to seeds," meaning many people, but "and to your seed," meaning one person, who is Christ.

I know it came as a shock to me to read it the other day. However, we are his descendants that God told would be "as the sand" (or was it the dust).

Galations 3:6, 7 says:

6 Consider Abraham: "He believed God, and it was credited to him as righteousness." 7 Understand, then, that those who believe are children of Abraham.

Posted by: Clay May 28 2007, 07:16 PM

> QUOTE(Voktar of Zargon @ May 28 2007, 07:37 PM)
>
> Do you mean that you are not a Jew or Abraham's seed either?

and neither are you.... for your consideration.....you and I are gentiles... unless you know something I don't....

Rom 11:1-36

> QUOTE
>
> So I ask, "Has God rejected his people Israel?" That's unthinkable! Consider this. I'm an Israelite myself, a descendant of Abraham from the tribe of Benjamin. (2) God has not rejected his people whom he knew long ago. Don't you know what Elijah says in the Scripture passage when he complains to God about Israel? He says, (3) "Lord, they've killed your prophets and torn down your altars. I'm the only one left, and they're trying to take my life." (4) But what was God's reply? God said, "I've kept 7,000 people for myself who have not knelt to worship Baal." (5) So, as there were then, there are now a few left that God has chosen by his kindness. (6) If they were chosen by God's kindness, they weren't chosen because of anything they did. Otherwise, God's kindness wouldn't be kindness. (7) So what does all this mean? It means that Israel has never achieved what it has been striving for. However, those whom God has chosen have achieved it. The minds of the rest of Israel were closed, (8) as Scripture says, "To this day God has given them a spirit of deep sleep. Their eyes don't see, and their ears don't hear!" (9) And David says, "Let the table set for them become a trap and a net, a snare and a punishment for them. (10) Let their vision become clouded so that they cannot see. Let them carry back-breaking burdens forever." (11) So I ask, "Has Israel stumbled so badly that it can't get up again?" That's unthinkable! By Israel's failure, salvation has come to people who are not Jewish to make the Jewish people jealous. (12) The fall of the Jewish people made the world spiritually rich. Their failure made people who are not Jewish spiritually rich. So the inclusion of Jewish people will make the world even richer. (13) Now, I speak to you who are not Jewish. As long as I am an apostle sent to people who are not Jewish, I bring honor to my ministry. (14) Perhaps I can make my people jealous and save some of them. (15) If Israel's rejection means that the world has been brought back to God, what does Israel's acceptance mean? It means that Israel has come back to life. (16) If the first handful of dough is holy, the whole batch of dough is holy. If the root is holy, the branches are holy. (17) But some of the olive branches have been broken off, and you, a wild olive branch, have been grafted in their place. You get your nourishment from the roots of the olive tree. (18) So don't brag about being better than the other branches. If you brag, remember that you don't support the root, the root supports you. (19) "Well," you say, "Branches were cut off so that I could be grafted onto the tree." (20) That's right! They were broken off because they didn't believe, but you remain on the tree because you do believe. Don't feel arrogant, but be afraid. (21) If God didn't spare the natural branches, he won't spare you, either. (22) Look at how kind and how severe God can be. He is severe to those who fell, but kind to you if you continue to hold on to his kindness. Otherwise, you, too, > will be cut off from the tree. (23) If Jewish people do not continue in their unbelief, they will be grafted onto the tree again, because God is able to do that. (24) In spite of the fact that you have been cut from a wild olive tree, you have been grafted onto a cultivated one. So wouldn't it be easier for these natural branches to be grafted onto the olive tree they belong to? (25) Brothers and sisters, I want you to understand this mystery so that you won't become arrogant. The minds of some Israelites have become closed until all of God's non-Jewish people are included. (26) In this way Israel as a whole will be saved, as Scripture says, "The Savior will come from Zion. He will remove godlessness from Jacob. (27) My promise to them will be fulfilled when I take away their sins." (28) The Good News made the Jewish people enemies because of you. But by God's choice they are loved because of their ancestors. (29) God never changes his mind when he gives gifts or when he calls someone. (30) In the past, you disobeyed God. But now God has been merciful to you because of the disobedience of the Jewish people. (31) In the same way, the Jewish people have also disobeyed so that God may be merciful to them as he was to you. (32) God has placed all people into the prison of their own disobedience so that he could be merciful to all people. (33) God's riches, wisdom, and knowledge are so deep that it is impossible to explain his decisions or to understand his ways. (34) "Who knows how the Lord thinks? Who can become his adviser?" (35) Who gave the Lord something which the Lord must pay back? (36) Everything is from him and by him and for him. Glory belongs to him forever! Amen!

Posted by: Voktar of Zargon May 28 2007, 07:25 PM

> QUOTE(Jnana15 @ May 28 2007, 08:46 PM)
>
> Amen!! I headed for the hills before Y2K and it has been a learning experience for me being of color living in the mountains. There is no way that our family could have survived without the help of other christians that were willing to show us how to get through the rough winters and I mean rough. Now we can help others.
>
> My husband and I are pleading with family to prepare to leave the city before it's too late. They think that we are crazy. They remind me of Lot's wife.

can't help but think that the most important thing is not our geographical location but our spiritual locale. Ve need to be in the "Cleft of the Rock." The flight spoken of in Matthew 24 is a much more dramatic exodus ust before the close of probation. Then our geographical locale may be important, just as it was for the hristians who fled to Pella when the legions retreated from their siege of Jerusalem. Unless our lives are hid n Christ though, it doesn't matter if you're holed up in Antarctica - the Devil will get you there.

n the other hand there are very good reasons that we have been counseled to migrate (in a less hasty way) o rural areas at this time. The exposure to sin and its consequences is greatly lessened. The spiritual benefits f a life lived more in harmony with nature is after God's created order. A life lived in an urban environment is nore like ancient Babel.

y experience is that many people have difficulty breaking with a life lived in the city for a variety of reasons. am convinced that many of the men I have worked with in the prisons I have been employed at would not ave suffered incarceration if they grew up in the country. Many of them would not have returned for multiple tays in prison if they had found the motivation and support to migrate elsewhere. It is not easy to break free f one's environment of origin, for multiple reasons.

ore power to you for the courage to be different. Let us not forget that there are still millions of souls in hose cities who need to hear the gospel - perhaps you can still reach some of them from your outpost.

Posted by: Clay May 28 2007, 07:26 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 28 2007, 07:57 PM)

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ 3abn Action Steps

Posted by: icedragon May 28 2007, 11:49 PM

I have been MIA from BSDA for a while. I would like to know what is being DONE, what ACTIONS are being taken to help solve this problme. It It is going on 3 years now. what is BSDA ,MSDAOL, going to DO. could someone please update me on the follow.

1. Have we E-mailed out packs to chruches? It's free you know.

2. Have we Assembled all 1st hand statments. in to 1 place for distributation?

3. Have we raised any money to help linda fund her lawsuit.

4. Encourage others to donate money somewhere else.

5. An Action plan.

6. Any thing else we might come up with.

are we just talking about the probem or are we going to DO something? Talk is worthless.

When it comes time to act on our convictions are we going to back off.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 29 2007, 02:05 AM

QUOTE(icedragon @ May 28 2007, 10:49 PM)

> I have been MIA from BSDA for a while. I would like to know what is being DONE, what ACTIONS are being taken to help solve this problme. It It is going on 3 years now. what is BSDA ,MSDAOL, going to DO. could someone please update me on the follow.
>
> 1. Have we E-mailed out packs to chruches? It's free you know.
>
> 2. Have we Assembled all 1st hand statments. in to 1 place for distributation?
>
> 3. Have we raised any money to help linda fund her lawsuit.
>
> 4. Encourage others to donate money somewhere else.
>
> 5. An Action plan.
>
> 6. Any thing else we might come up with.
> are we just talking about the probem or are we going to DO something? Talk is worthless.
>
> When it comes time to act on our convictions are we going to back off.

Some things that are being done:

1. As of this morning, nearly 175,000 people have visited www.save3abn.com. There are numerous first hand statements listed there.

2. If you have read the email dialogue with NCC president and AF Board Chairman Jim Pedersen, that Noahswife posted in the "News Release from Amazing Facts... " thread http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=13535&view=findpost&p=196668 you will see that he has been advised.

3. A fund has been set up to gather donations to support the legal defense of Bob Pickle and Gailon Joy in the lawsuit filed against them by Danny Shelton.

Can you share with us what you have been doing in the way of action?

Posted by: watchbird May 29 2007, 06:27 AM

> QUOTE(icedragon @ May 29 2007, 01:49 AM)
>
> I have been MIA from BSDA for a while. I would like to know what is being DONE, what ACTIONS are being taken to help solve this problme. It It is going on 3 years now. what is BSDA ,MSDAOL, going to DO. could someone please update me on the follow.
>
> 1. Have we E-mailed out packs to chruches? It's free you know.
>
> 2. Have we Assembled all 1st hand statments. in to 1 place for distributation?
>
> 3. Have we raised any money to help linda fund her lawsuit.
>
> 4. Encourage others to donate money somewhere else.
>
> 5. An Action plan.
>
> 6. Any thing else we might come up with.
> are we just talking about the probem or are we going to DO something? Talk is worthless.
>
> When it comes time to act on our convictions are we going to back off.

Welcome back to BSDA icedragon.

First let me remind you that this forum on BSDA was never intended to be an "Action Group". This is a place for sharing information and keeping it available for those unfamiliar with the information stored here to come and read, think, and learn.

What actions have been taken have been taken by individuals. Some of which appear here.... and more of which have been undertaken privately.

As to a website where information is available, including some primary documents, see http://www.save3abn.com/.

Other than that, you will learn the most by the same way you learned what was here to learn when you were here before... a patient perusal of all that has been posted since you left.

That will be no easy task, since there has been so much added in the time you were away. And the additions continue ... at a rate that makes it a non-trivial task just to keep up. But if you want a real look at what has been said.... including reports of what has been done.... then there are no shortcuts. Go back to the very earliest page of the menu which has threads preceded by the "go to last unread" icon... and start reading. When you have finished, you will have answers to most of your questions above, and will most likely have accumulated a lot more questions... most of which will be answered as you continue to work your way up to the present.

When you are all caught up, come back and ask the questions that remain.... and give us your comments on what you have read.

Posted by: inga May 30 2007, 11:03 PM

The defense fund for Bob Pickle is something where we can all make a difference.

Whether you can contribute $5.00 or $5,000.00, every little bit helps.
Here it is: http://www.pickle-publishing.com/defensefund.htm

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 29 2007, 03:05 AM) ☐
>
> Some things that are being done:
>
> 1. As of this morning, nearly 175,000 people have visited www.save3abn.com. There are numerous first hand statements listed there.
>
> 2. If you have read the email dialogue with NCC president and AF Board Chairman Jim Pedersen, that Noahswife posted in the "News Release from Amazing Facts... " thread http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=13535&view=findpost&p=196668 you will see that he has been advised.
>
> 3. A fund has been set up to gather donations to support the legal defense of Bob Pickle and Gailon Joy in the lawsuit filed against them by Danny Shelton.
>
> Can you share with us what you have been doing in the way of action?

Posted by: calvin May 31 2007, 07:47 AM

Pickle, if you will create a 468x60 banner ad I will put it on the main BSDA index page with a link to your paypal account when clicked. I plan to install a rotating banner ad program this weekend. BTW, this service will be available to any active member with a service or business you would like to advertise on BSDA, free of charge. You must have 50 post to be considered an active member.

Posted by: Jnana15 May 31 2007, 07:56 AM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 08:47 AM) ☐
>
> Pickle, if you will create a 468x60 banner ad I will put it on the main BSDA index page with a link to your paypal account when clicked. I plan to install a rotating banner ad program this weekend. BTW, this service will be available to any active member with a service or business you would like to advertise on BSDA, free of charge. You must have 50 post to be considered an active member.

Thank you Calvin, you are a very thoughtful, and kind person...don't let this go to your head now. ☒

Just kidding. ☒ than

Posted by: Noahswife May 31 2007, 09:09 AM

> QUOTE(Jnana15 @ May 31 2007, 09:56 AM)
>
> Thank you Calvin, you are a very thoughtful, and kind person...don't let this go to your head now.
>
> Just kidding. than

Well Jnana, I notice that you qualify as an active member....

I wonder if you got extra points for all those hours in the arcade?

nw

And btw, did you answer Di's question yet?

Posted by: Jnana15 May 31 2007, 10:00 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 31 2007, 10:09 AM)
>
> Well Jnana, I notice that you qualify as an active member....
>
> I wonder if you got extra points for all those hours in the arcade?
>
> nw
>
> And btw, did you answer Di's question yet?

Which question? PM or post? If PM, yes.

Posted by: Noahswife May 31 2007, 11:04 AM

> QUOTE(Jnana15 @ May 31 2007, 12:00 PM)
>
> Which question? PM or post? If PM, yes.

No dear, this one>>>>>>>
http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=13485&view=findpost&p=197426

Posted by: princessdi May 31 2007, 11:43 AM

Good thing you posted that link, I was about to ask which question myself.......I talk so much!

Posted by: caribbean sda May 31 2007, 12:49 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 31 2007, 01:43 PM)
>
> Good thing you posted that link, I was about to ask which question myself.......I talk so much!

girl hursh!

Posted by: Pickle May 31 2007, 02:59 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 08:47 AM)
>
> Pickle, if you will create a 468x60 banner ad I will put it on the main BSDA index page with a link to your paypal account when clicked. I plan to install a rotating banner ad program this weekend. BTW, this service will be available to any active member with a service or business you would like to advertise on BSDA, free of charge. You must have 50 post to be considered an active member.

Thanks so much Calvin!

Posted by: mozart May 31 2007, 06:55 PM

ur awesome dude!

if it goes to his head we will just give him one of these.......

> QUOTE(calvin @ May 31 2007, 06:47 AM)
>
> Pickle, if you will create a 468x60 banner ad I will put it on the main BSDA index page with a link to your paypal account when clicked. I plan to install a rotating banner ad program this weekend. BTW, this service will be available to any active member with a service or business you would like to advertise on BSDA, free of charge. You must have 50 post to be considered an active member.

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Arbitration & Mediation

Posted by: Observer May 29 2007, 08:52 AM

Many of you reading this know that ASI attempted to mediate a resolution of the issues regarding 3-ABN with a three people representing Linda Shelton. I was one of the three people who represented her.

While I appreciated the hard work that Harold Lance did in attempting to put this tothether, I have publicly stated that it failed, in part, due to the failure of the parties to agree on the process, the areas for consideration, and publication of the findings along with the evidence obtained. It failed well before all of us could discuss fully the issues.

For those of you interested in these public standards for arbitration and mediation, you may want to reference www.adr.org That is the website of the American Arbitration Association. They have standards for both arbitration and mediation.

Posted by: Fran May 30 2007, 02:48 AM

Maybe Linda and Danny could have done better with these people?

My bank sent a new policy about resolution by arbitration. I read up on it and decided if we disputed anything we would go to court. So I signed out of the program. I may change my mind later!

Did someone send this web address to ASI?

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Behind The Scenes

Posted by: sister Aug 16 2006, 10:44 AM

I have received the following narrative from Jorgen VanBraun. Jorgen and I agreed to start a new thread in which he will continue the work he began in "The Televengelist". As new selections become available they will be posted. I will allow Jorgen's words to speak for themselves without further comment.

Sister

The Solution

Jorgen VanBraun

The walls appear to be closing in on Danny Shelton as he and a bevy of acolytes struggle against an avalanche of accusations that continues to grow daily. In their traditional manner, they strike out ever more viciously against all who dare to expose the deeply rooted evils of "God's anointed" one, yet every rock they roll seems to become a boulder, but an unseen hand reverses the direction of those boulders, allowing their own words to condemn them. How can this scandal-ridden televangelist save his place in the Seventh-day Adventist world, and once again regain his exulted position riding atop the pinnacle of the wave of worship and adulation handed to him by a denomination who coveted the results of what he was selling and never questioned the means, allowing the end result to justify any carnage strewn along the path?

We look back over the past year and see that an exalted member of the 3ABN family engages in activities that result in a "surprise package", a little bundle of joy whose untimely appearance will verify the falsified stories concerning it's conception. Shortly thereafter this person and the other party involved in the... ahem... sensual activities are baptized within days of the discovery of the "surprise". We see the intent of this ceremony is to wash away the stain, not only of the most recent event, but those stains of the many illicit sensual activities that have occurred over the past few years, including the adultery and long term phone sex relationship. The intent is to secure silence concerning past transgressions and absolve the sinner from accountability and reaping the results connected with the offences. It can serve as a spiritual bankruptcy, where the sinner is saved in, not from her sins.

Now we see Danny Shelton on the set, surrounded by his most faithful cronies – a virtual rouges gallery who have sold their integrity, self respect, and honesty one piece at a time for the various pieces of silver they have received along the way. In their exaltation of Danny and their degradation of his "enemies" they secure their positions within his realm and the favor of its anointed ruler. In desperation, they lash out against the people whose words are bringing their tin god down and in turn threatening their own exulted positions within this kingdom where he wields absolute power. They quote scripture, making allegorical statements meant to incriminate those they so fear, seeking the downfall of his enemies through insinuation robed in a garb of lies. Danny sits in his seat beaming with pleasure while their portrayals of his status as God's anointed is applied to him, in direct contrast to the condemnation applied to those he hates.

Amidst this ruckus, it is cautiously repeated several times that good people make mistakes...comparisons are made to Moses and David. As the rhetoric resumes, the pastor's statements alludes to the fact that the prophets were not free from sin. Was not Moses himself a murderer, didn't he kill an Egyptian? Then he addresses his anointed one from God and asks the question, "Danny, have you ever murdered anyone?" A hush falls over the others gathered there awaiting his reply: "Well, not lately..." A bit flustered he carries on, "Not that I know of...well unless you mean people can kill with words?"

Danny is impressed to take some time off for spiritual renewal...

Remember this hypotheses:

1. Renewal and rebaptism wash away anything that happened before. None can bring it up again, the baptized are not culpable for past transgressions, nor is there any accountability.

2. Good people make mistakes, even the prophets of God sinned.
3. Time off for spiritual renewal.

Bearing this in mind, if a great cult leader goes up to the mountain top to "reconnect with God", returns and confesses that he did a few things wrong, and that he feels led to show his recommitment to ministry by rebaptism, do we walk away and concede that he has filed his spiritual bankruptcy? Do we say "He is once again the anointed one", all is forgiven and needs to be forgotten? Do we allow the evil to continue through a forced lip-service platitude that gives a warm feeling but leaves the fox in the hen house? Has God given Danny Shelton special dispensation, absolving him from the consequences of his actions and the requirement of restitution, unlike the rest of us?

Posted by: calvin Aug 16 2006, 01:04 PM

Is this Jorgen VanBraun a real person? Who is he? What is his connection with 3ABN?

Posted by: watchbird Aug 16 2006, 01:17 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Aug 16 2006, 01:04 PM)
>
> Is this Jorgen VanBraun a real person? Who is he? What is his connection with 3ABN?

He is a real person. This is not his real name. He is the same person who wrote The Televangelist ..... and he deserves to be allowed to fly "under the radar" now for the same reasons he did then. There are several of us on here who know him and will vouch for his authenticity. His "connection" with 3ABN cannot be divulged, for to do so would make his identity known. If you compare what Sister said in her introduction here to what was said in that thread about The Televangelist document (written in 2005) needing to be brought up to date, you will see that this is is the beginning of that updating process.

Posted by: justme Aug 16 2006, 01:18 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Aug 16 2006, 11:44 AM)
>
> I have received the following narrative from Jorgen VanBraun. Jorgen and I agreed to start a new thread in which he will continue the work he began in "The Televengelist". As new selections become available they will be posted. I will allow Jorgen's words to speak for themselves without further comment.
>
> Sister
>
> ## The Solution
>
> Jorgen VanBraun
>
> The walls appear to be closing in on Danny Shelton as he and a bevy of acolytes struggle against an avalanche of accusations that continues to grow daily. In their traditional manner, they strike out ever more viciously against all who dare to expose the deeply rooted evils of "God's anointed" one, yet every rock they roll seems to become a boulder, but an unseen hand reverses the direction of those boulders, allowing their own words to condemn them. How can this scandal-ridden televangelist save his place in the Seventh-day Adventist world, and once again regain his exulted position riding atop the pinnacle of the wave of worship and adulation handed to him by a denomination who coveted the results of what he was selling and never questioned the means, allowing the end result to justify any carnage strewn along the path?

> We look back over the past year and see that an exalted member of the 3ABN family engages in activities that result in a "surprise package", a little bundle of joy whose untimely appearance will verify the falsified stories concerning it's conception. Shortly thereafter this person and the other party involved in the... ahem... sensual activities are baptized within days of the discovery of the "surprise". We see the intent of this ceremony is to wash away the stain, not only of the most recent event, but those stains of the many illicit sensual activities that have occurred over the past few years, including the adultery and long term phone sex relationship. The intent is to secure silence concerning past transgressions and absolve the sinner from accountability and reaping the results connected with the offences. It can serve as a spiritual bankruptcy, where the sinner is saved in, not from her sins.
>
> Now we see Danny Shelton on the set, surrounded by his most faithful cronies - a virtual rouges gallery who have sold their integrity, self respect, and honesty one piece at a time for the various pieces of silver they have received along the way. In their exaltation of Danny and their degradation of his "enemies" they secure their positions within his realm and the favor of its anointed ruler. In desperation, they lash out against the people whose words are bringing their tin god down and in turn threatening their own exulted positions within this kingdom where he wields absolute power. They quote scripture, making allegorical statements meant to incriminate those they so fear, seeking the downfall of his enemies through insinuation robed in a garb of lies. Danny sits in his seat beaming with pleasure while their portrayals of his status as God's anointed is applied to him, in direct contrast to the condemnation applied to those he hates.
>
> Amidst this ruckus, it is cautiously repeated several times that good people make mistakes...comparisons are made to Moses and David. As the rhetoric resumes, the pastor's statements alludes to the fact that the prophets were not free from sin. Was not Moses himself a murderer, didn't he kill an Egyptian? Then he addresses his anointed one from God and asks the question, "Danny, have you ever murdered anyone?" A hush falls over the others gathered there awaiting his reply: "Well, not lately..." A bit flustered he carries on, "Not that I know of...well unless you mean people can kill with words?"
>
> Danny is impressed to take some time off for spiritual renewal...
>
> Remember this hypotheses:
>
> 1. Renewal and rebaptism wash away anything that happened before. None can bring it up again, the baptized are not culpable for past transgressions, nor is there any accountability.
> 2. Good people make mistakes, even the prophets of God sinned.
> 3. Time off for spiritual renewal.
>
> Bearing this in mind, if a great cult leader goes up to the mountain top to "reconnect with God", returns and confesses that he did a few things wrong, and that he feels led to show his recommitment to ministry by rebaptism, do we walk away and concede that he has filed his spiritual bankruptcy? Do we say "He is once again the anointed one", all is forgiven and needs to be forgotten? Do we allow the evil to continue through a forced lip-service platitude that gives a warm feeling but leaves the fox in the hen house? Has God given Danny Shelton special dispensation, absolving him from the consequences of his actions and the requirement of restitution, unlike the rest of us?

Moses a murderer? Yup
David a murderer? Yup
David an adulterer? Yup
Did Moses repent of his murder? Yup
Did David repent of his murder and adultery? Yup

Did Moses "glory in his own leadership"? Nope
Did Israel exalt Moses to "anointed one" status? Nope
Did Moses flaunt his roll as leader? Nope
Did Moses WANT to be leader of Israel? Nope
Did Moses get to realize his dream of the Holy City? Nope
Did Moses have to surrender his leadership after he did his initial job leading Israel up to the gates of the Promised land? Yup

Did David choose to be leader of Israel? Nope

Did David misuse and abuse his position of power? Yup
Did Davis take advantage of the women around him? Yup
Did David suffer public humiliation for his sins? Yup
Did David suffer the consequences of his sins? Yup
Was David forgiven for his sins? Yup
Did David lose his own flesh and blood as a result of his sins? Yup

Both Moses and David were chosen by God for a particular purpose.
Moses was to lead Israel out of Egypt to a Promised land.
Did he get to go in? Nope!

David was also forgiven for his adultery and his murders. But David also had to forfeit the blessing of building the great temple as God had originally planned for David. David's sins bore the consequences even though he had been forgiven.

Did Danny choose his ministry? Yup
Was it a good ministry? Yup
Does Danny relish his roll at 3ABN? YUP
Has Danny confessed his sins openly as did Moses or David? Nope
Has Danny committed "spiritual murder"? YUP
Will Danny be forgiven, "GOK" (God Only, Knows)
Has he asked for forgiveness from Linda? good question!
Would he forgive Linda if she had anything to be forgiven for? hasn't so far.
Is it time for "TCO" to relinquish his post at the ministry? Only if it goes to the original Co-founder, who has been "spitirually murdered".

Remember SOLOMON? Wisest man ever to live. He let flattery from his "staff" be his undoing as well, especially from Queen "Bathsheba". Then he let the charasmatics take over his kingdom permitting adultery and fornication in the church and in his offices.

That's good, "TCO" keep comparing yourself to God's chosen men. See what they got in the end. Broken kingdoms and heartache. and BAD, BAD PRESS. "Welcome to the club". It is YOUR HARVEST TIME!

When "the chosen one" "TCO" if you will, doesn't like to be crossed or disobeyed he fires them. WHere is the forgiveness for that dear soul, he so deeply desires for himself? Are we not told by our Precious Creator and Redeemer, Jesus, that we are forgiven only so far as we are willing to forgive others? "TCO" doesn't have a clue ... he has never tried to see if it works. And what about his own Delilah? Did she figure into his "spitirual murder" of his own wife. If she committed "spiritual adultery" can his sin against Linda be called "spiritual murder"?

The difference between faith and presumption is that presumption follows itself. Faith follows the Holy Spirit, the Comforter. IF he is not feeling comforted lately maybe he is following his accuser, a familiar voice, maybe?

Comparing oneself with Moses and David makes him look even worse. Neither of them wanted the job God gave them. "TCO" glories in his job. When Moses or David were flattered by those around them, they immediately messed up. It led them away from God. So what makes "TCO" think he can handle it. Because he believes the lie himself, having heard it all these years from his Pentecostal "support group".
The programming becomes more and more Pentecostal every week. Thanks Mollie. but no thanks ..

Posted by: Fran Aug 16 2006, 02:14 PM

> QUOTE(justme @ Aug 16 2006, 02:18 PM)
>
> Comparing oneself with Moses and David makes him look even worse. Neither of them wanted the job God gave them. "TCO" glories in his job. When Moses or David were flattered by those around them, they immediately messed up. It led them away from God. So what makes "TCO" think he can handle it.

> Because he believes the lie himself, having heard it all these years from his Pentecostal "support group". The programming becomes more and more Pentecostal every week. Thanks Mollie. but no thanks ..

hat may be the plan; To drop the SDA bit and go Pentecostal! It could be. That would get those blasted eventh-day Adventists a run for their money! Many would continue to give! When God said the devil ould deceive the VERY ELECT HE MEANT IT! ,

---

Posted by: sister Aug 16 2006, 02:26 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Aug 16 2006, 02:04 PM)
>
> Is this Jorgen VanBraun a real person? Who is he? What is his connection with 3ABN?

orgen VanBraun is a real person. He has had a continuing intimate relationship with 3ABN, for which I am illing to vouch. There are many who assume they know his true identity or current location, but are istaken. As I have chosen to protect my identity in order to reveal the knowledge I have concerning 3ABN, I ave offered Jorgen that same protection through being his intermediary on this forum. This arrangement llows him to freely share information without the threat of retribution against him becoming a hindrance to nforming the public in regard 3ABN. He has given me the responsibility to represent him and post his writings n BSDA. I have agreed to do so for his personal protection.

Posted by: calvin Aug 16 2006, 02:34 PM

thank you Sister and Watchbird for that clarification

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Sep 2 2006, 09:24 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Aug 16 2006, 11:44 AM)
>
> Bearing this in mind, if a great cult leader goes up to the mountain top to "reconnect with God", returns and confesses that he did a few things wrong, and that he feels led to show his recommitment to ministry by rebaptism, do we walk away and concede that he has filed his spiritual bankruptcy? Do we say "He is once again the anointed one", all is forgiven and needs to be forgotten? Do we allow the evil to continue through a forced lip-service platitude that gives a warm feeling but leaves the fox in the hen house? Has God given Danny Shelton special dispensation, absolving him from the consequences of his actions and the requirement of restitution, unlike the rest of us?

an is counting on exactly this.

f he "reconnects with God and is born again"- he is untouchable in many of his past action and you can bet hat he'll be even better the second - er - third - er - the next time around to keep his secrets secret.

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Sep 4 2006, 08:30 AM

It seems though that he is taking his time to actually go on this so-called revival and reformation vacation.

Posted by: Jvat Sep 4 2006, 01:22 PM

Well, Dan seems to be denying everything so perhaps he does not feel that he needs that vacation right now.

Posted by: steffan Sep 9 2006, 09:42 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Aug 16 2006, 12:44 PM)
>
> I have received the following narrative from Jorgen VanBraun. Jorgen and I agreed to start a new thread in which he will continue the work he began in "The Televengelist". As new selections become available they will be posted. I will allow Jorgen's words to speak for themselves without further comment.
>
> Sister
>
> The Solution
>
> Jorgen VanBraun
>
> The walls appear to be closing in on Danny Shelton as he and a bevy of acolytes struggle against an avalanche of accusations that continues to grow daily. In their traditional manner, they strike out ever more viciously against all who dare to expose the deeply rooted evils of "God's anointed" one, yet every rock they roll seems to become a boulder, but an unseen hand reverses the direction of those boulders, allowing their own words to condemn them. How can this scandal-ridden televangelist save his place in the Seventh-day Adventist world, and once again regain his exulted position riding atop the pinnacle of the wave of worship and adulation handed to him by a denomination who coveted the results of what he was selling and never questioned the means, allowing the end result to justify any carnage strewn along the path?

I am confused here. They strike out more viciously against whom? How do they strike out viciously?

> QUOTE
>
> We look back over the past year and see that an exalted member of the 3ABN family engages in activities that result in a "surprise package", a little bundle of joy whose untimely appearance will verify the falsified stories concerning it's conception. Shortly thereafter this person and the other party involved in the... ahem... sensual activities are baptized within days of the discovery of the "surprise". We see the intent of this ceremony is to wash away the stain, not only of the most recent event, but those stains of the many illicit sensual activities that have occurred over the past few years, including the adultery and long term phone sex relationship. The intent is to secure silence concerning past transgressions and absolve the sinner from accountability and reaping the results connected with the offences. It can serve as a spiritual bankruptcy, where the sinner is saved in, not from her sins.

Who is this exalted member? Why not just name the exalted member's name? What is this little bundle of joy's name?

> QUOTE
>
> Now we see Danny Shelton on the set, surrounded by his most faithful cronies - a virtual rouges gallery who have sold their integrity, self respect, and honesty one piece at a time for the various pieces of silver > they have received along the way. In their exaltation of Danny and their degradation of his "enemies" they secure their positions within his realm and the favor of its anointed ruler. In desperation, they lash out against the people whose words are bringing their tin god down and in turn threatening their own exulted positions within this kingdom where he wields absolute power. They quote scripture, making allegorical statements meant to incriminate those they so fear, seeking the downfall of his enemies through insinuation robed in a garb of lies. Danny sits in his seat beaming with pleasure while their portrayals of his status as God's anointed is applied to him, in direct contrast to the condemnation applied to those he hates.

Vho are the rogues in the gallery? Are you referring to the John Lomacang sermon on John the Baptist? Does hat make him a rogue in the rogue's gallery?

> QUOTE
>
> Bearing this in mind, if a great cult leader goes up to the mountain top to "reconnect with God", returns and confesses that he did a few things wrong, and that he feels led to show his recommitment to ministry by rebaptism, do we walk away and concede that he has filed his spiritual bankruptcy? Do we say "He is once again the anointed one", all is forgiven and needs to be forgotten? Do we allow the evil to continue through a forced lip-service platitude that gives a warm feeling but leaves the fox in the hen house? Has God given Danny Shelton special dispensation, absolving him from the consequences of his actions and the requirement of restitution, unlike the rest of us?

low does that make him a cult leader? Waco, Jonestown and almost all the cults I read about had very strict ontrol over who goes in and who comes out. The members of the cult were controlled, brain-washed and onfined to the compound. How is it possible for 3abn to be called a cult when it seems that people are mployed there and get to go home every night?

t is very difficult for me to take information coming from sources like these without identity verification. (Yes, es, I know, the same insinuation that I am in the employ of 3ABN). However, people who speak out against njustice and evil, it seems, do so knowing that God is their protection and they have nothing to fear.

low is it that 3ABN employees have so much to fear? Loss of job? Name? Income? The Lord will provide and ione can harm because God is their shield.

s usual, my name and email is at the end of this post.

teffan Philip
teffankp@gmail.com

Posted by: Panama_Pete Sep 9 2006, 03:39 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 9 2006, 10:42 AM)
>
> It is very difficult for me to take information coming from sources like these without identity verification.
>
> Steffan Philip
> steffankp@gmail.com

dentity verification?

You've asked for identities on three different threads, today.

If I said, "Jane Doe, in Peoria," how would that make life less "difficult" for you?

It seems that the phishing expedition continues.

rofl

Posted by: sonshineonme Sep 9 2006, 04:39 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Sep 9 2006, 02:39 PM)
>
> Identity verification?
>
> You've asked for identities on three different threads, today.
>
> If I said, "Jane Doe, in Peoria," how would that make life less "difficult" for you?
>
> It seems that the phishing expedition continues.
>
> rofl

Me too. We ain't as dumb as we must appear to be, aye Pete?

Posted by: Lee Sep 9 2006, 06:27 PM

I am new on this forum and haven't posted much but I have been reading all along.

It isn't just having names that I believe Steffan wants--it is having information that is clearly presented without insinuations or inuendoes. I understand not presenting real names--but when I read the "televangelist" I felt like I was reading a work of fiction. Now this new chapter reads the same way. I am reading words like "cronies" and "rogues gallery" and "cult leader" and other unkind words. I come away feeling that Jorgen actually enjoyed writing this way. These things are written seemingly with malice and hatred oozing everywhere.

I am sure you all know that envy will lead to jealousy if not checked and overcome? And that jealousy will lead to hatred, again if not checked and overcome? And that hatred will lead to murder? There are many ways in which to murder someone.

Posted by: steffan Sep 9 2006, 09:51 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Sep 9 2006, 04:39 PM)

> Identity verification?
>
> You've asked for identities on three different threads, today.
>
> If I said, "Jane Doe, in Peoria," how would that make life less "difficult" for you?
>
> It seems that the phishing expedition continues.

Vell, Jane Doe would be useless, eh? How about John Smith, Production Manager, 3ABN - for example? Then could say to myself, alright then, let's hear what this person has to say.
ope, having anonymous people constantly posting makes it difficult to even figure out what the truth is.
nd I presume the truth is what we want to get at.
don't see how else to assure you that I am not on a "phishing" expedition, other than to say I'm not.
hishing is normally used for identity theft, in which case, I guess mine would be the first one stolen.
trictly speaking, phishing is stealing user names and passwords and I don't see how I could do that on this orum.

teffan Philip
teffankp@gmail.com

Posted by: sister Sep 9 2006, 09:58 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 9 2006, 10:51 PM)
>
> Well, Jane Doe would be useless, eh? How about John Smith, Production Manager, 3ABN - for example?
> Then I could say to myself, alright then, let's hear what this person has to say.
> Nope, having anonymous people constantly posting makes it difficult to even figure out what the truth is.
> And I presume the truth is what we want to get at.
> I don't see how else to assure you that I am not on a "phishing" expedition, other than to say I'm not.
> Phishing is normally used for identity theft, in which case, I guess mine would be the first one stolen.
> Strictly speaking, phishing is stealing user names and passwords and I don't see how I could do that on this forum.
>
> Steffan Philip
> steffankp@gmail.com

ow is this for you:

ister
arious duties at 3ABN
ister.bsda@hotmail.com

his is as much as I am willing to offer, under the circumstances, take it or leave it...

Posted by: steffan Sep 9 2006, 09:59 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Sep 9 2006, 05:39 PM)
>
> Me too. We ain't as dumb as we must appear to be, aye Pete?

Unless Panama Pete and you have 3ABN related information that speaks to the truth (however that turns out to be), I really don't care about your identity.
But if someone says, I have this to report in 3ABN, how am I supposed to figure out whether that person is speaking the truth, or at least, verifiable truth.
In this situation, let's see what has been verified.

Linda spoke to Dr. AA for very long periods of time (she admits it). But for what reason - both sides differ.
Danny divorced Linda.
Danny remarried.

Then we have "stories" of things that go on inside 3ABN. Most people seem to forget that this was happening even when Linda was at 3ABN. The plane, the horses, the (reported) arrogance, both of them, not just one, indulged.

If you call my posts, phishing, so be it. I know it's not. But you seem to have a real problem with anyone who is not anti-Danny and pro-Linda.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Sep 9 2006, 10:34 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 9 2006, 08:59 PM)
>
> Unless Panama Pete and you have 3ABN related information that speaks to the truth (however that turns out to be), I really don't care about your identity.
> But if someone says, I have this to report in 3ABN, how am I supposed to figure out whether that person is speaking the truth, or at least, verifiable truth.
> In this situation, let's see what has been verified.
>
> Linda spoke to Dr. AA for very long periods of time (she admits it). But for what reason - both sides differ.
> Danny divorced Linda.
> Danny remarried.

Aside from the verified facts listed above, the only additional fact that I am aware of (as a complete outsider) is that Danny's hair is no longer a reddish color but is now a true brunette. What is unknown is if it got that way through the application of Just For Men or some other method.

Posted by: beartrap Sep 9 2006, 10:42 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Sep 9 2006, 11:34 PM)
>
> Aside from the verified facts listed above, the only additional fact that I am aware of (as a complete outsider) is that Danny's hair is no longer a reddish color but is now a true brunette. What is unknown is if it got that way through the application of Just For Men or some other method.

rofl Shall we again bring up the topic of hair seeds? Perhaps someone could resurrect the previous discussion for PB's amusement. Anyone remember what thread that was on?

Posted by: beartrap Sep 9 2006, 10:53 PM

Here, PB. The truth shall set your laghter free!

http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=9455&st=45&p=133601&#entry133601

Posted by: steffan Sep 9 2006, 10:54 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Sep 9 2006, 10:58 PM) ☐
>
> How is this for you:
>
> Sister > various duties at 3ABN > sister.bsda@hotmail.com
>
> This is as much as I am willing to offer, under the circumstances, take it or leave it...

I'm curious about why you would want to stay in such a wicked organization if that's the case. Why not just shake the dust off your feet, as it were, and move away from this evil?

An organization filled with child molestors, evil rogues, a man who calls/thinks himself to be God? Surely you would want to run from the place?

Considering the volume of information you have posted, no that's not good enough for me. So I guess I can throw out as bogus anything you post.

Steffan Philip

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Sep 9 2006, 11:01 PM

> QUOTE(beartrap @ Sep 9 2006, 09:53 PM) ☐
>
> Here, PB. The truth shall set your laghter free!
>
> http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=9455&st=45&p=133601&#entry133601

Thanks for the chuckles!

Posted by: beartrap Sep 9 2006, 11:24 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 9 2006, 11:54 PM) ☐
>
> I'm curious about why you would want to stay in such a wicked organization if that's the case. Why not just shake the dust off your feet, as it were, and move away from this evil?
>
> An organization filled with child molestors, evil rogues, a man who calls/thinks himself to be God? Surely you would want to run from the place?
>
> Considering the volume of information you have posted, no that's not good enough for me. So I guess I > can throw out as bogus anything you post.

>
> Steffan Philip

Jh oh, Sister! ☒ bot

Posted by: sister Sep 10 2006, 12:03 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 9 2006, 11:54 PM) ☐
>
> I'm curious about why you would want to stay in such a wicked organization if that's the case. Why not just shake the dust off your feet, as it were, and move away from this evil?
>
> An organization filled with child molestors, evil rogues, a man who calls/thinks himself to be God? Surely you would want to run from the place?
>
> Considering the volume of information you have posted, no that's not good enough for me. So I guess I can throw out as bogus anything you post.
>
> Steffan Philip

ow do you know if I am currently at 3ABN or not? Another assumption on your part...

o have you changed your tune? ☐ Are you now agreeing that the administration of 3ABN is so wicked that mployees should all kick the dust off their feet and flee into the wilderness of southern Illinois? As we speak nany are attempting to do just that, but with the sacrificial income received by the majority of 3ABN mployees, one must first secure another position before moving on or risk the consequences that their hildren will soon go hungry.

re you still fishing for the identity of current and former 3ABN employees that are posting on BSDA and will ot be satisfied until you hunt us all down? Last I heard Danny hasn't offered a finders fee yet and I haven't een a poster with "Sister" on the wall in the T'ville post office with a reward listed for my capture "dead or live".

our belief or disbelief does not change the truths about 3ABN that have been posted on BSDA. I am only one vitness and there are many others that have given their testimonies and are in agreement with mine. Or are ou calling everything that everyone has posted, that contradicts your opinion, "bogus"? Time will tell...much ooner than you may imagine.

ister

> QUOTE(beartrap @ Sep 10 2006, 12:24 AM) ☐
>
> Uh oh, Sister! ☒ bot

ear, a proper southern Illinois belle would never allow her backside to be so indecently exposed in public!

☒ sofa1.gif ☒ rofl

Posted by: beartrap Sep 10 2006, 12:22 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Sep 10 2006, 01:03 AM) ☐
>
> Bear, a proper southern Illinois belle would never allow her backside to be so indecently exposed in public!
> ☒ sofa1.gif ☒ rofl

☒ ☒ rofl

Posted by: steffan Sep 10 2006, 12:25 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Sep 10 2006, 12:57 AM) ☐
>
> How do you know if I am currently at 3ABN or not? Another assumption on your part...
>
> So have you changed your tune? ☒ Are you now agreeing that the administration of 3ABN is so wicked that employees should all kick the dust off their feet and flee into the wilderness of southern Illinois? As we speak many are attempting to do just that, but with the sacrificial income received by the majority of 3ABN employees, one must first secure another position before moving on or risk the consequences that their children will soon go hungry.
>
> Are you still fishing for the identity of current and former 3ABN employees that are posting on BSDA and will not be satisfied until you hunt us all down? Last I heard Danny hasn't offered a finders fee yet and I haven't seen a poster with "Sister" on the wall in the T'ville post office with a reward listed for my capture "dead or alive".
>
> Your belief or disbelief does not change the truths about 3ABN that have been posted on BSDA. I am only one witness and there are many others that have given their testimonies and are in agreement with mine. Or are you calling everything that everyone has posted, that contradicts your opinion, "bogus"? Time will tell...much sooner than you may imagine.
>
> Sister

Quite correct. It was an assumption. If you're not, then you no longer have current information that would be accurate. If you are, then my previous post stands.

My tune remains the same. Truth is what I'm after and not fancifully done word pictures like the ones you have painted. I don't care which way the truth points but verifiable truth it must be. My internal radar goes into alert mode when I hear additional words added on when a plain and simple sentence will do.

Should employees leave 3ABN if it is as wicked as portrayed? Yes. Should they leave before securing another job? You tell me whether I should take money from an evil man (as your portray him) because if I don't, then they will starve. I would not. I have foregone employment (and suffered hard days) by refusing unethical money but that's just me. I trust in the Lord to provide as long as I'm doing the right thing. And exactly where did I say they should flee into the wilderness of southern Illinois? Another example of your adding on words.

Once again, I am not hunting down identities. If you speak the truth, speak it plainly, honestly and in broad daylight instead of speaking from the shadows. As I repeated earlier, it is very hard to place credence when it comes from sources that cannot be verified. And once again, adding that Danny hasn't offered a finder's fee, is another example of your adding on words.

My point is that with all the things being written, it has become almost impossible to figure out what the truth is. You are one example of someone who should have spoken plainly and left it at that. Your embellishments have made all your posts suspect. The same thing I said about you goes for all those others who are in agreement with what you wrote. If they are not verifiable, then they are bogus.

And yes, I am waiting. Waiting for the truth and circumstances to show who is indeed speaking the truth. And hopefully, even sooner than I can imagine. Let's say I imagine September 19. Can it be sooner than that? In case you wonder, that is the "2-3 weeks" written about elsewhere in this forum about Linda being completely vindicated within 2 days and details being released in that timeframe.

Steffan Philip

Posted by: beartrap Sep 10 2006, 12:52 AM

Does anyone here know who "Denny" is, and if it can be verified? How about Clay, Steffan, Calvin, and Princessdi... or anyone else? What about anything they say? How can we truly verify it? Until such time as full verification of everything posted on this site is accomplished, everyone here is declared bogus and so is everything they say. Especially you, PrincessDrRe, you are especially bogus with all of the embellishments you add to your words! Oh, and all those people who agree with you are unverifiably bogus too! rofl

---

Posted by: calvin Sep 10 2006, 08:50 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 10 2006, 01:25 AM)
>
> Once again, I am not hunting down identities. If you speak the truth, speak it plainly, honestly and in broad daylight instead of speaking from the shadows. As I repeated earlier, it is very hard to place credence when it comes from sources that cannot be verified. And once again, adding that Danny hasn't offered a finder's fee, is another example of your adding on words.
>
> My point is that with all the things being written, it has become almost impossible to figure out what the truth is. You are one example of someone who should have spoken plainly and left it at that. Your embellishments have made all your posts suspect. The same thing I said about you goes for all those others who are in agreement with what you wrote. If they are not verifiable, then they are bogus.
>
> And yes, I am waiting. Waiting for the truth and circumstances to show who is indeed speaking the truth. And hopefully, even sooner than I can imagine. Let's say I imagine September 19. Can it be sooner than that? In case you wonder, that is the "2-3 weeks" written about elsewhere in this forum about Linda being completely vindicated within 2 days and details being released in that timeframe.
>
> Steffan Philip

What you have here is the most comprehensive discussion on the saga of 3abn that you are going to fine anywhere. . I agree, there is a lot to this story to be skeptical about. Let me remind everyone that this is a discussion board, opinions and ideals are always welcome here. All sides are welcome to present their case. To find whatever truth is available here, you are going to have to dig for it and use your God given ability to reason, evaluate, and come to your own conclusions after you have internalized the evidence, however suspect it may be. There is a lot of data here, much of it collaborated by insiders on the scene, some of those insiders have identified themselves and others have not. Determine for yourself how creditable the storytellers are.

Posted by: inga Sep 10 2006, 10:40 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 9 2006, 10:42 AM) ☐
>
> How does that make him a cult leader? Waco, Jonestown and almost all the cults I read about had very strict control over who goes in and who comes out. The members of the cult were controlled, brain-washed and confined to the compound. How is it possible for 3abn to be called a cult when it seems that people are employed there and get to go home every night?

Dan isn't in the same class as Koresh & Jones -- yet. However, Dan certainly appears to exercise "strict control" over his employees. (Have you read the thread on "new security measures" that indicates installation of AV recording equipment that is set up to recognize key words and phrases?) If you had read the threads available on this forum, you would know that brainwashing does happen. In fact, even Dan's public broadcasts do a certain amount of "brainwashing" through his continually repeated statements that he receives direct "words from the Lord," that any criticism of the administration of 3ABN (i.e. Dan Shelton) is an attack on God, etc. Folks listening to these oft-repeated statements begin to believe them, especially if they watch only 3ABN -- which is the case for a lot of folks. The main difference in Waco was that, at a certain point, folks could not leave the brainwashing sessions.

You speak of 3ABN employees getting to "go home" every night. However, where they get to go, isn't really "home," which is where they came from in order to "serve God" by working for 3ABN at substandard wages, living in substandard housing and requiring government subsidy in order to survive.

You imply that employees have nothing to lose by just resigning and leaving. That demonstrates you have not read the personal testimonies of former employees and what Dan Shelton does to prevent them from being employed elsewhere. Add to the equation that, by the time folks realize that they've been "had," their financial resources are used up, and they have no reserve for food and clothing, let alone moving. Thus they are not physically locked in to a compound with walls, but they are as truly "locked in" by circumstances Dan Shelton controls. For the sake of their sanity they must believe that Dan is truly led by God for as long as they possibly can, as was true for many of David Koresh's victims. (I still find it difficult to believe that he snared so many apparently intelligent, reasonable people. Those at Waco were not all "kooks.")

And you wonder why employees don't come on this board giving their real names and addresses? Considering the underhanded means Dan has used to spy on people, you wonder that they suspect you of being a spy? This is one place they are believed , and that surely must be important to folks who are in such desperate circumstances.

Of course there are certain others working at 3ABN who are well-paid and/or have millions $'s available of personal means.

> QUOTE
>
> It is very difficult for me to take information coming from sources like these without identity verification. (Yes, yes, I know, the same insinuation that I am in the employ of 3ABN). However, people who speak out against injustice and evil, it seems, do so knowing that God is their protection and they have nothing to fear.

Like I said, you don't know what you're saying. Even Elder Johann Thorvaldsson, who was not dependent on 3ABN for a salary, since he worked as a European liaison as a volunteer, has paid a heavy price for opposing Dan Shelton and refusing to spread lies about Linda. Even though I've not had the honor of meeting his late wife, Irmgard, I'm convinced through her personal testimony, that she was a sweet Christian lady who loved Linda dearly and was terribly stressed by all the persecution Linda had to endure. Knowing that stress lowers the body's immune system's ability to fight cancer, I have no doubt that Dan's continual harassment of Linda and of Johann and Irmgard contributed to her untimely death.

Yes, Johann has paid a price for his "whistle-blowing."

> QUOTE

> How is it that 3ABN employees have so much to fear? Loss of job? Name? Income? The Lord will provide and none can harm because God is their shield.

From your posts, I'm guessing you're rather young, and make statements with the brashness and assurance of youth. Even David, the Psalmist, recognized that the "wicked prosper" while the righteous often suffer. While it is true that nothing can befall us that the Lord does not allow, it takes a mature Christian faith to deal with the fall-out. The results for 3ABN employees can be homelessness and starvation, as well as loss of reputation and income -- not just present, but future, since Dan does all in his power to make sure no one else employs them. What makes you think that God will shield 3ABN employees more than He shielded His own Son?

Until you have demonstrated that you are willing to give up all to ensure that wrongs are righted, please do not judge 3ABN employees so harshly.

Posted by: inga Sep 10 2006, 11:15 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 9 2006, 10:59 PM)
>
> But if someone says, I have this to report in 3ABN, how am I supposed to figure out whether that person is speaking the truth, or at least, verifiable truth.

Some of us happen to know enough about individuals involved that is verifiable that we accept their words as true and can judge other postings by those criteria. Others have used the good brains God gave them to put the pieces of the puzzle together. That's why we "know" more than you do.

Now, just why do you need to "know" all these things?

There is plenty of public information available that is rather problematic. If you had read the information availabe on this board, you would know of this information. Instead, you demand that persons reveal their identity and expose themselves to grave danger. What makes you think you have the right?

> QUOTE
>
> Linda spoke to Dr. AA for very long periods of time (she admits it). But for what reason - both sides differ.
> Danny divorced Linda.
> Danny remarried.
>
> Then we have "stories" of things that go on inside 3ABN. Most people seem to forget that this was happening even when Linda was at 3ABN. The plane, the horses, the (reported) arrogance, both of them, not just one, indulged.

So do you consider long phone conversations with one's child's doctor as grounds for divorce? (If you do, the Bible doesn't, and 3ABN supposedly promotes a conservative Adventist view which takes the Bible literally. The only kind of "spiritual adultery" known in the Bible is for those "married to God" worshiping other gods. Perhaps that's really what Dan means -- that Linda transgressed by not worshiping Dan Shelton as god?)

You forget a few other verifiable facts:

- Linda did not marry again.
- Statements on the 3ABN website implied the worst about Linda, without giving any evidence. (And now you want evidence that their unverified implications are not true??
- Walt Thompson has sent out letters vilifying Linda and implying that Dan is the chosen of God while Linda and her supporters are equated with Lucifer.
- Danny's current wife moved in very close to him very shortly after Linda was kicked out. He started keeping company with her rather quickly, as I understand. Although she came for "employment' reasons, her "employment" record is a bit unusual, to put it charitably. (You can find the details on this board, if 3ABN employees won't tell you over the phone.)

- Publicly available records give rise to grave questions regarding millions of dollars sent to 3ABN for the ministry, millions that are not accounted for. There are other questions regarding financial misdeeds.
- Dr. Abrahamsen gave his own version of events, and his identity, his reputation in his own church and conference, and his reputation and experience as a medical doctor are verifiable. (If you don't accept this, just what kind of "verifiable information" do you expect??)
- If you con't accept Dr. Abrahamsen's testimony because he has been accused by Dan Shelton and thus would have a stake in the affair, what excuse do you have for not accepting Johann Thorvaldsson's testimony? He has absolutely no stake in this whatsover, except that he cannot abide the abuse of innocent victims. His reputation and previous record of service in the Seventh-day Adventist church is verifiable, if you care to go to the effort.
- Dan's statements on 3ABN continue to refer to his "former wife" in a derogatory manner.

What I see happening is that you ask for verification which you are unlikely to believe anyway, since it comes via this board. (There are those on this board who have given a great deal of information about their identities, with at least one having given his true name. If you are too lazy to read the posts here to find out the details, why should anyone here tell you?)

You don't have to know anything more than is widely and publicly available, and you don't even have to know that. However, if you really want to know, there's plenty of solid information on this board, verified by several parties, for you to make up your own mind.

Yes, there are emotional statements, exaggerated statements and speculation, but you shouldn't have too hard a time to sort things out if you use the brains God gave you.

This continual asking for identities and verification simply demonstrates to the users of this board that you don't care enough to do your own reading, and you just might be a Dan Shelton plant, or even an alter identity for him. (Hey, don't blame people too much for being paranoid when they have already either experienced harassment themselves or watched the harassment of others.))

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Sep 10 2006, 04:25 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 10 2006, 11:40 AM)
>
> Even though I've not had the honor of meeting his late wife, Irmgard, I'm convinced through her personal testimony, that she was a sweet Christian lady who loved Linda dearly and was terribly stressed by all the persecution Linda had to endure.

I can testify that this lady was, indeed, as you say, a "sweet Chrstian lady."

Posted by: Johann Sep 10 2006, 05:08 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Sep 11 2006, 12:25 AM)
>
> I can testify that this lady was, indeed, as you say, a "sweet Chrstian lady."

I can testify that Irmgard told Danny she wanted to give him a real good spanking for all the evil he did to Linda.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Sep 10 2006, 05:41 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 10 2006, 03:08 PM)
>
> I can testify that Irmgard told Danny she wanted to give him a real good spanking for all the evil he did to Linda.

Johann, that certainly showed Irmgard's strength of character!

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Sep 10 2006, 07:27 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 10 2006, 06:08 PM)
>
> I can testify that Irmgard told Danny she wanted to give him a real good spanking for all the evil he did to Linda.

My mama always told me that I would never be too old. She's threatened a few times! And how I would have loved to see Irmgard after Dan! Whew!

bot

Hey - I bet we could sell tickets!

Posted by: steffan Sep 10 2006, 07:28 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 10 2006, 11:40 AM)
>
> Dan isn't in the same class as Koresh & Jones -- yet. However, Dan certainly appears to exercise "strict control" over his employees. (Have you read the thread on "new security measures" that indicates installation of AV recording equipment that is set up to recognize key words and phrases?)

It is standard practice in all the companies I've worked in to
a. have card swipe for entry and exit. No card, no entry, no exit.
b. record _every_ telephone conversation, with phrase recognition
c. Backup and store _every_ email that passes through company servers
d. Have video cameras in every possible location, including parking, where parking is applicable.

> QUOTE
>
> If you had read the threads available on this forum, you would know that brainwashing does happen. In fact, even Dan's public broadcasts do a certain amount of "brainwashing" through his continually repeated > statements that he receives direct "words from the Lord," that any criticism of the administration of 3ABN (i.e. Dan Shelton) is an attack on God, etc. Folks listening to these oft-repeated statements begin to believe them, especially if they watch only 3ABN -- which is the case for a lot of folks. The main difference in Waco was that, at a certain point, folks could not leave the brainwashing sessions.

o I did a quick poll of people I know. Of the 28 people I asked, none of them "believed" in Danny. Sure they vatched 3ABN, and Hope and LLBN, but none actually believed that just because Danny said it, it must be. ount me amongst them, making it 26. So I don't know which folks you know, obviously you don't know the olks I know.

> QUOTE
>
> You speak of 3ABN employees getting to "go home" every night. However, where they get to go, isn't really "home," which is where they came from in order to "serve God" by working for 3ABN at substandard wages, living in substandard housing and requiring government subsidy in order to survive.

o leave and get a job where you don't have to have substandard housing and government subsidies. If you erve the Lord with all your heart, difficulties on earth are pointless. And as I pointed out before, I have ersonally experienced this.

> QUOTE
>
> You imply that employees have nothing to lose by just resigning and leaving. That demonstrates you have not read the personal testimonies of former employees and what Dan Shelton does to prevent them from being employed elsewhere. Add to the equation that, by the time folks realize that they've been "had," their financial resources are used up, and they have no reserve for food and clothing, let alone moving. Thus they are not physically locked in to a compound with walls, but they are as truly "locked in" by circumstances Dan Shelton controls. For the sake of their sanity they must believe that Dan is truly led by God for as long as they possibly can, as was true for many of David Koresh's victims. (I still find it difficult to believe that he snared so many apparently intelligent, reasonable people. Those at Waco were not all "kooks.")

o locked in by circumstances becomes equating 3ABN with Koresh? I know plenty of people locked in by ircumstances, so they are members of a cult?

> QUOTE
>
> And you wonder why employees don't come on this board giving their real names and addresses? Considering the underhanded means Dan has used to spy on people, you wonder that they suspect you of being a spy? This is one place they are believed , and that surely must be important to folks who are in such desperate circumstances.

don't ask for real addresses. Real names, yes. Verifiable information, yes. Addresses? Please point out vhere I have asked for addresses. I don't wonder about why I am thought of as a spy. I simply keep epeating that I am not. Let me get this straight. I don't believe you, but I am asked to. You don't believe me nd I ask you to. Can you see how this is never going to be resolved?

> QUOTE
>
> Like I said, you don't know what you're saying. Even Elder Johann Thorvaldsson, who was not dependent on 3ABN for a salary, since he worked as a European liaison as a volunteer, has paid a heavy price for opposing Dan Shelton and refusing to spread lies about Linda. Even though I've not had the honor of meeting his late wife, Irmgard, I'm convinced through her personal testimony, that she was a sweet Christian lady who loved Linda dearly and was terribly stressed by all the persecution Linda had to endure. Knowing that stress lowers the body's immune system's ability to fight cancer, I have no doubt that Dan's > continual harassment of Linda and of Johann and Irmgard contributed to her untimely death.

ike I keep saying, when I read "dressed" up narratives, I can't believe them. And it is quite a stretch to lame the unfortunate Irmgard's cancer related death to Danny. But yet you do.

> QUOTE
>
> Yes, Johann has paid a price for his "whistle-blowing."

wonder which price. Johann himself states that Danny tried to make life difficult for him. Yet his local church nd his conference rejected any interference. He continues to get his sustentation from the church. These are is words, not mine.

> QUOTE
>
> From your posts, I'm guessing you're rather young, and make statements with the brashness and assurance of youth. Even David, the Psalmist, recognized that the "wicked prosper" while the righteous often suffer. While it is true that nothing can befall us that the Lord does not allow, it takes a mature Christian faith to deal with the fall-out. The results for 3ABN employees can be homelessness and starvation, as well as loss of reputation and income -- not just present, but future, since Dan does all in his power to make sure no one else employs them. What makes you think that God will shield 3ABN employees more than He shielded His own Son?
>
> Until you have demonstrated that you are willing to give up all to ensure that wrongs are righted, please do not judge 3ABN employees so harshly.

'm not young and if I were, I presume I wouldn't spend so much time on this forum. And there you have it. od did not promise us riches and glory on earth for following Him. On the contrary, He said men will ersecute you for My sake. What He did promise was an inner peace. So 3ABN employees suffering hardship rom Danny have an exemption? They can continue working under this "evil" because people in this forum say hey will be persecuted? As I pointed out before, I have taken ethical stands that have cost me my job and ubsequent hardships. What did not change was the peace I had, regardless of circumstances.

s far as my being a spy, please be patient. I will reply to all other posts that directly addressed me, reveal nore information concerning myself and will retire from this forum permanently.

he admins can then verify, via my IP address, that I am not lurking on this forum, reading more posts that tart to make less and less logical sense.

teffan Philip

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Sep 10 2006, 08:08 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 10 2006, 11:40 AM)
>
> The results for 3ABN employees can be homelessness and starvation, as well as loss of reputation and income . . .

ere is the type of hyperbole that Steffen, myself, and a few others just don't buy. When you throw this stuff ut, make statements like this with absolutely no supportive material it makes it very difficult to accept your ssertions.

Who has starved, lived in a car or under a bridge, who has lost reputation and how, and whose income has been eliminated as a result of working at 3ABN and being let go, fired, or left of their own volition because they have disagreed with some aspect of how 3ABN is run? (terribly constructed sentence sorry)

Now, I could say I called 3ABN and talked with Danny, Pastor John, Dr. Thompson, May Chung, Kenneth Denslow, Bill Hulsey, Ellsworth McKee, G. Ralph Thompson, Owen Troy, Larry Welch, Shelley Quinn, Brenda and the sisters, Kay Kuzma, the Steensons, Moses Primo, Mark Finley, or Doug Bacehlor (I am sure I got someones name spelled wrong there) and they assured me that the allegations are false. They could have agreed that Danny should have handled things differently, but that the running of this ministery (from the broom pusher to the board room) is in the hands of God and though humans with faults are doing the daily tasks - with God's guiding hand everything will work out the way it needs to to keep the ministry operating for the greater glory of our Heavenly Father. I could share that and the pro-Linda faction would deride and say that whomever I spoke with is a 3ABN stooge and lying to me. That begs the question - how do any of us know that those who claim to "have the true facts" are telling the truth? We don't, we can't. We have to accept on faith what you say, we have to accept on faith the words of 3ABN - the only thing we have that is "official" would be the tax documents in the case that is still pending before the appelate court in Illinois, and the divorce degree which of course will not give any detail because they are basically form documents these days - there is nothing else official, the letters form Dr. Thompson, and Dr. Abrahamsen, and Johan. The other documents here are not official, as they even titled themselves so (The Unofficial History of 3ABN), so can not be considered reliable.

You ask, no expect, those coming here to gather what they can so they can decide to support or not 3ABN to accept all you say as the unmitigated truth. There is an arrogance in that, can you not see that? Maybe you don't realize this - you have told your tale so long that you can not understand why anyone would doubt you - not thinking there is an equal and just as strong corresponding question - why should we believe you. There is offense taken when we don't accept and join in the harping. If this is indeed a place you want to share your story and your side of the issues then you must be willing and ready to accept - without malice - that there will be people who will come in here, ask pointed questions, not like your response, disagree with it, just as there will be those who accept your "testimony" as full of truth.

In a high school, debate team members are those who do not take the fact that someone is going to disagree with them personally - you can't. If you want to be taken seriously, if you want your position to carry weight, you need to be emotionless when it comes to the case against you - though not emotionless when making your case. You can not belittle, ridicule, berate, question the intellligence, integrity, or character of your opposition - in the end this will lead to you losing the support of those you wish to convince.

Yes Panama, this is lengthy, but I guarentee you I thought it through long and hard, as well as wrote and rewrote it a few times to try and be even handed and as PrincessDi asked yesterday, take it down a few notches (you were right PD, I was a bit edgy and defensive).

There are a few more thoughts I have, but will wait until I can run them through a reductionist machine so they are more concise.

- fhb

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Sep 10 2006, 08:19 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 10 2006, 08:28 PM) ☐
>
> It is standard practice in all the companies I've worked in to > a. have card swipe for entry and exit. No card, no entry, no exit.
> b. record _every_ telephone conversation, with phrase recognition
> c. Backup and store _every_ email that passes through company servers
> d. Have video cameras in every possible location, including parking, where parking is applicable.

This does not discribe only Fortune 500 companies or financial institutions or governmental offices - it applies ot a myriad of business in a plehora of businesses/industry/think tanks. In an age when the most valuable comodity is information, these are the safeguards to keep the product created secure as well as to make sure the post-it notes aren't headed home as a way to make shopping lists and post them on the fridge.

This is SOP in western society.

- fhb

Posted by: steffan Sep 10 2006, 10:04 PM

I tried editing this post to get the quotes come out right but it isn't happening.
So here goes

[quote name='inga' date='Sep 10 2006, 12:15 PM' post='151128']
Some of us happen to know enough about individuals involved that is verifiable that we accept their words as true and can judge other postings by those criteria. Others have used the good brains God gave them to put the pieces of the puzzle together. That's why we "know" more than you do.

Now, [b]just why do you need to "know" all these things?[/b]
[/quote]

Some of you know these people and that somehow makes everything you say verified? "John Smith verifies that Susan Q is speaking the truth" is worthless in terms of veracity.
I'm sorry, we are playing games here now? We are putting a puzzle together? How does that work with plain and honest speaking?

[quote]

There is plenty of public information available that is rather problematic. If you had read the information availabe on this board, you would know of this information. Instead, you demand that persons reveal their identity and expose themselves to grave danger. What makes you think you have the right?
[/quote]
Grave danger? Danny calls Dr. AA's church to demand something be done about it and is turned down by their church pastor and is called a nut case and he seems to be in no physical danger (Johann and/or Dr. AA, in their own words). As far as I can tell, grave danger would imply what? Death? Disfigurement? Another example of hyperbole.

[quote]
So do you consider long phone conversations with one's child's doctor as grounds for divorce? (If you do, the Bible doesn't, and 3ABN supposedly promotes a conservative Adventist view which takes the Bible literally. The only kind of "spiritual adultery" known in the Bible is for those "married to God" worshiping other gods. Perhaps that's really what Dan means -- that Linda transgressed by not worshiping Dan Shelton as god?)
[/quote]

So of course I asked my wife the same question. What if her child was being treated by a doctor? How much time would she spend on the phone with the doctor (and _not_ her son). 30 minutes, 1 hour to stretch it, maybe 2 hours. Every day? Here's her answer. 1. Find out how my son is doing 2. Thank the doctor effusively 3. Talk to my son as long as posisble. Total time for 1+2? 15 to 30 minutes. So how did 6 hours sound to her? She said that woman is foolish and crazy for even doing such a thing. Sorry, not my words, my wife's (whose question who started me on this journey of inquiry). What if she did it every day? Wife replies, you would raise a ruckus. Darn right, I would. And what if you refused to stop? No answer there and I don't think there could be one for this tangled situation.
On the other hand, Jesus said adultery can be committed in the heart and since I am not God, I don't know what was in your heart, only how long your phone conversations were.
And again, your introducing silly elements of conversation "Linda transgressed by not worshipping Dan Shelton as God" which have no real bearing on the conversation make me distrust anything you post.

[quote]

[*]Statements on the 3ABN website implied the worst about Linda, without giving any evidence. (And now you want evidence that their unverified implications are not true??

[/quote]
That's your opinion. I can read very plainly "Linda did not follow counsel" and see no implication. Your mind is bent on implication. To-may-to to-mah-to.

[quote]
[*]Walt Thompson has sent out letters vilifying Linda and implying that Dan is the chosen of God while Linda and her supporters are equated with Lucifer.
[/quote]
See above.

[quote]
[*]Danny's current wife moved in very close to him very shortly after Linda was kicked out. He started keeping company with her rather quickly, as I understand. Although she came for "employment' reasons, her "employment" record is a bit unusual, to put it charitably. (You can find the details on this board, if 3ABN employees won't tell you over the phone.)
[/quote]
Unverified bogus information.

[quote]
[*]Publicly available records give rise to grave questions regarding millions of dollars sent to 3ABN for the ministry, millions that are not accounted for. There are other questions regarding financial misdeeds.
[/quote]
When Linda was there. Linda also lied about receiving funds for the CDs she sells. Also in the same document.

[quote]
[*]Dr. Abrahamsen gave his own version of events, and his identity, his reputation in his own church and conference, his reputation in his own church and conference, and his reputation and experience as a medical doctor are verifiable. (If you don't accept this, just what kind of "verifiable information" do you expect??)
[*]If you con't accept Dr. Abrahamsen's testimony because he has been accused by Dan Shelton and thus would have a stake in the affair, what excuse do you have for not accepting Johann Thorvaldsson's testimony? He has absolutely no stake in this whatsover, except that he cannot abide the abuse of innocent victims. His reputation and previous record of service in the Seventh-day Adventist church is verifiable, if you care to go to the effort.
[/quote]
Dr. Walt T gave his own version of events and his identity, his reputation in his own church and conference, his reputation in his own church and conference, and his reputation and experience as a medical doctor are verifiable. (If you don't accept this, just what kind of "verifiable information" do you expect??)
And should I continue cutting and pasting the rest of paragraph or do you get the drift?

[quote]
[*]Dan's statements on 3ABN continue to refer to his "former wife" in a derogatory manner.
[/quote]
It's obvious you're watching 3ABN Venus and I'm watching 3ABN Mars since you seem to read a lot into things that are not even said. Like I said, there is no meeting of minds here, just mutual distrust.

[quote]
What I see happening is that you ask for verification which you are unlikely to believe anyway, since it comes via this board. (There are those on this board who have given a great deal of information about their identities, with at least one having given his true name. If you are too lazy to read the posts here to find out the details, why should anyone here tell you?)
[/quote]
"An exalted one close to Danny and a little bundle of joy"
I asked for the name of the exalted one and the name of the little bundle of joy at first. Nobody has yet named these people.
You are obviously too lazy to even read the latest posts.

[quote]
You don't have to know anything more than is widely and publicly available, and you don't even have to know that. However, if you really want to know, there's plenty of solid information on this board, verified by several parties, for you to make up your own mind.

Yes, there are emotional statements, exaggerated statements and speculation, but you shouldn't have too hard a time to sort things out if you use the brains God gave you.
[/quote]
bogus information is not made solid information just because you say so. Verification by shadows is not verification, it's just more bogus verification.

[quote]
This continual asking for identities and verification simply demonstrates to the users of this board that you don't care enough to do your own reading, and you just might be a Dan Shelton plant, or even an alter identity for him. (Hey, don't blame people too much for being paranoid when they have already either experienced harassment themselves or watched the harassment of others.))
[/quote]
So I should not ask for verification. Just drink the anti-Danny kool-aid and all will be well with me? Sorry, I'm not that kind. Your paranoia exists in your own mind and I pray that you will be cured.

And this is as good a time as any to reveal more details about myself and bid sayonara to this nasty swamp.

Steffan Philip
member of the Greater New York Conference
New York

Feel free to contact me via email since I won't be here.

And this time, for real, goodbye and God bless.

Steffan
steffankp@gmail.com

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Sep 10 2006, 10:13 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 10 2006, 06:08 PM) ☐
>
> Here is the type of hyperbole that Steffen, myself, and a few others just don't buy. When you throw this stuff out, make statements like this with absolutely no supportive material it makes it very difficult to accept your assertions.
>
> Who has starved, lived in a car or under a bridge, who has lost reputation and how, and whose income has been eliminated as a result of working at 3ABN and being let go, fired, or left of their own volition because they have disagreed with some aspect of how 3ABN is run? (terribly constructed sentence sorry)
>
> Now, I could say I called 3ABN and talked with Danny, Pastor John, Dr. Thompson, May Chung, Kenneth Denslow, Bill Hulsey, Ellsworth McKee, G. Ralph Thompson, Owen Troy, Larry Welch, Shelley Quinn, Brenda and the sisters, Kay Kuzma, the Steensons, Moses Primo, Mark Finley, or Doug Bacehlor (I am sure I got someones name spelled wrong there) and they assured me that the allegations are false. They could have agreed that Danny should have handled things differently, but that the running of this ministery (from the broom pusher to the board room) is in the hands of God and though humans with faults are doing the daily tasks - with God's guiding hand everything will work out the way it needs to to keep the ministry operating for the greater glory of our Heavenly Father. I could share that and the pro-Linda faction would deride and say that whomever I spoke with is a 3ABN stooge and lying to me. That begs the question - how do any of us know that those who claim to "have the true facts" are telling the truth? We don't, we can't. We have to accept on faith what you say, we have to accept on faith the words of 3ABN - the only thing we have that is "official" would be the tax documents in the case that is still pending before the appelate court in Illinois, and the divorce degree which of course will not give any detail because they are basically form documents these days - there is nothing else official, the letters > form Dr. Thompson, and Dr. Abrahamsen, and Johan. The other documents here are not official, as they even titled themselves so (The Unofficial History of 3ABN), so can not be considered reliable.

>
> You ask, no expect, those coming here to gather what they can so they can decide to support or not 3ABN to accept all you say as the unmitigated truth. There is an arrogance in that, can you not see that? Maybe you don't realize this - you have told your tale so long that you can not understand why anyone would doubt you - not thinking there is an equal and just as strong corresponding question - why should we believe you. There is offense taken when we don't accept and join in the harping. If this is indeed a place you want to share your story and your side of the issues then you must be willing and ready to accept - without malice - that there will be people who will come in here, ask pointed questions, not like your response, disagree with it, just as there will be those who accept your "testimony" as full of truth.
>
> In a high school, debate team members are those who do not take the fact that someone is going to disagree with them personally - you can't. If you want to be taken seriously, if you want your position to carry weight, you need to be emotionless when it comes to the case against you - though not emotionless when making your case. You can not belittle, ridicule, berate, question the intellligence, integrity, or character of your opposition - in the end this will lead to you losing the support of those you wish to convince.
>
> Yes Panama, this is lengthy, but I guarentee you I thought it through long and hard, as well as wrote and rewrote it a few times to try and be even handed and as PrincessDi asked yesterday, take it down a few notches (you were right PD, I was a bit edgy and defensive).
>
> There are a few more thoughts I have, but will wait until I can run them through a reductionist machine so they are more concise.
>
> - fhb

HB, I am impressed. This is solid reasoning and we all would do well to take it to heart. Well done.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Sep 10 2006, 10:23 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 10 2006, 08:04 PM)
>
> And this time, for real, goodbye and God bless.
>
> Steffan
> steffankp@gmail.com

ou made some very good points. Goodbye Steffan.

Posted by: Ralph Sep 10 2006, 11:44 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 10 2006, 07:08 PM)
>
> Now, I could say I called 3ABN and talked with Danny, Pastor John, Dr. Thompson, May Chung, Kenneth Denslow, Bill Hulsey, Ellsworth McKee, G. Ralph Thompson, Owen Troy, Larry Welch, Shelley Quinn, Brenda and the sisters, Kay Kuzma, the Steensons, Moses Primo, Mark Finley, or Doug Bacehlor (I am sure I got someones name spelled wrong there) and they assured me that the allegations are false. They could have agreed that Danny should have handled things differently, but that the running of this ministery (from the broom pusher to the board room) is in the hands of God and though humans with faults are doing the daily tasks - with God's guiding hand everything will work out the way it needs to to keep the ministry operating for the greater glory of our Heavenly Father. I could share that and the pro-Linda faction would deride and say that whomever I spoke with is a 3ABN stooge and lying to me.

Did you contact each of these people, or did you not? "Could" is such a slippery word and I notice that you used it three times in the quote. If you contacted all the people you mentioned, this is first hand information and I will sit up and take notice. But if you did not, I will just assume that this is an old debating trick where you have other people mouth your personal thoughts.

Posted by: Ralph Sep 11 2006, 12:38 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 10 2006, 09:40 AM) ☐
>
> You imply that employees have nothing to lose by just resigning and leaving. That demonstrates you have not read the personal testimonies of former employees and what Dan Shelton does to prevent them from being employed elsewhere. Add to the equation that, by the time folks realize that they've been "had," their financial resources are used up, and they have no reserve for food and clothing, let alone moving. Thus they are not physically locked in to a compound with walls, but they are as truly "locked in" by circumstances Dan Shelton controls.

Some good thoughts, Inga. Even under the most ideal circumstances, changing jobs and moving brings up a number of challenges.
1. Locating a job where a person can be proficient. If a person is working full time, it is often difficult to get away for an interview. If a person is in a specialized field, he may have to move hundreds of miles to find any place where he can work in his field.
2. A move is traumatic on the family. Children have been with their friends for most of their lives. To set them in a church and a new school, regardless of how nice they are, is not easy.
3. Moving is expensive, and a person always has to buy some new things for a new place. My mother said that three moves was equal to one fire.

I have a burden for the workers who are faithfully doing their work, and are scarcely aware what is happening in the upper eschalons of an organization. They are working as unto the Lord. God bless each one of them.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Sep 11 2006, 01:38 AM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 10 2006, 09:08 PM) ☐
>
> Now, I could say I called 3ABN and talked with Danny, Pastor John, Dr. Thompson, May Chung, Kenneth Denslow, Bill Hulsey, Ellsworth McKee, G. Ralph Thompson, Owen Troy, Larry Welch, Shelley Quinn, Brenda and the sisters, Kay Kuzma, the Steensons, Moses Primo, Mark Finley, or Doug Bacehlor (I am sure I got someones name spelled wrong there) and they assured me that the allegations are false.
> - fhb

You should take your advice and make some of those phone calls. That would be solid reasoning, but just saying you "could" is not.

Mark Finley was at the 2004 3ABN Campmeeting when some things were transpiring, so why not start with him? He's mentioned in Arild Abrahamsen's letter. Ask Finley what he saw and heard. What makes you think Finley will assure you of anything?

Then, ask Doug Batchelor or Amazing Facts if they donated TV equipment to Danny Shelton, in return for air time. Find out if Batchelor assures you of anything.

Ask Walter Thompson to FedEX you his "unquestionable" evidence.
Get Thompson's audio copies of the phone calls, too. Look for your assurance in the the FedEx envelope you receive from him - filled with vital evidence. (Yes, that will happen.)

http://www.chattanoogan.com/articles/article_78798.asp

"Chattanoogan - Attorneys in a $16 million lawsuit are questioning why the chairman of the board of McKee Bakery cannot give a deposition in the case. Ellsworth McKee, who is also chief administrative officer at McKee, testified Tuesday morning that he suffers from sleep apnea and has trouble staying awake...It says the problem is causing "decreased ability to concentrate and make proper decisions."

Will Ellsworth, a 3ABN board member, stay awake long enough to even talk to you about his proper decision regarding Linda Shelton? Was he even awake during his own board meeting when they fired Linda? I'm not so sure.

As for the paid management and board members of 3ABN on your list, that's all they are.

I remember when the executives of tobacco companies were assuring everyone cigarettes did not cause cancer, when, in fact, they had internal documents saying the exact opposite. How much were the assurances of these paid executives worth, in the end? Some of these tobacco executives had social status in their respective communities. But they were still lying.

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 01:57 AM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 04:08 AM)
>
> ---
>
> Now, I could say I called 3ABN and talked with Danny, Pastor John, Dr. Thompson, May Chung, Kenneth Denslow, Bill Hulsey, Ellsworth McKee, G. Ralph Thompson, Owen Troy, Larry Welch, Shelley Quinn, Brenda and the sisters, Kay Kuzma, the Steensons, Moses Primo, Mark Finley, or Doug Bacehlor
>
> ----
>
> - fhb

You state you "could", but I have actually talked to 13 of the people you mention, 8 of them about this issue. None of them have been able to convince me that 3ABN is giving a true picture of what happened, because they have not been able to show any valid evidense against what Irmgarad and I experienced, saw and heard. They have merely confirmed my conviction that the whole affair was staged for a certain purpose.

Posted by: lurker Sep 11 2006, 06:45 AM

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Sep 11 2006, 01:38 AM)
>
> Some good thoughts, Inga. Even under the most ideal circumstances, changing jobs and moving brings up a number of challenges.
> 1. Locating a job where a person can be proficient. If a person is working full time, it is often difficult to get away for an interview. If a person is in a specialized field, he may have to move hundreds of miles to > find any place where he can work in his field.

> 2. A move is traumatic on the family. Children have been with their friends for most of their lives. To set them in a church and a new school, regardless of how nice they are, is not easy.
> 3. Moving is expensive, and a person always has to buy some new things for a new place. My mother said that three moves was equal to one fire.
>
> I have a burden for the workers who are faithfully doing their work, and are scarcely aware what is happening in the upper eschalons of an organization. They are working as unto the Lord. God bless each one of them.

here is another reason why some may be staying at 3ABN though they are convinced that there is a problem here. There may be divided families where one spouse is convinced that Danny is God's messenger and the ther spouse is convinced that a cultlike situation exists among the followers of DS. As in any cult there is oncern about families being broken up if one leaves the cult and the other stays. One may not be able to onvince the other that it is not his or her duty to stay loyal to the leader and of the danger of remaining here. That one may stay out of concern for the deceived one, hoping to be able to protect him or her. Or hey may be concerned about their children or parents who are in the cult.

Posted by: Freedom Sep 11 2006, 07:47 AM

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Sep 10 2006, 10:38 PM)
>
> Some good thoughts, Inga. Even under the most ideal circumstances, changing jobs and moving brings up a number of challenges.
> 1. Locating a job where a person can be proficient. If a person is working full time, it is often difficult to get away for an interview. If a person is in a specialized field, he may have to move hundreds of miles to find any place where he can work in his field.
> 2. A move is traumatic on the family. Children have been with their friends for most of their lives. To set them in a church and a new school, regardless of how nice they are, is not easy.
> 3. Moving is expensive, and a person always has to buy some new things for a new place. My mother said that three moves was equal to one fire.
>
> I have a burden for the workers who are faithfully doing their work, and are scarcely aware what is happening in the upper eschalons of an organization. They are working as unto the Lord. God bless each one of them.

lso, is the fact the if an employee tries to find work elsewhere, or does -- some of the management alls/writes to the new employer or potential employer and "bad mouths" etc., the employee.

o for an employee to leave is even more difficult!

reedom

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Sep 11 2006, 08:01 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 11 2006, 02:57 AM)
>
> You state you "could", but I have actually talked to 13 of the people you mention, 8 of them about this issue. None of them have been able to convince me that 3ABN is giving a true picture of what happened, because they have not been able to show any valid evidense against what Irmgarad and I experienced, saw and heard. They have merely confirmed my conviction that the whole affair was staged for a certain > purpose.

)kay, three responses to my posting, all focused on one paragraph and all missed the point completely.

ust to make it as concise as possible - the point of the pargraph was that it wouldn't matter to any one of 'ou that an individual at 3ABN made the comments to me you would dismiss it out of hand because they are :mployed by 3ABN (which makes me wonder why you believe HOTY, after all he works there too.) In the)rocess to deify Linda and vilify Danny I fear there is no room for the unmitigated truth. There is no villingness to listen to anyone associated with 3ABN.

Iot sure if I read your sentence correctly PP, but the board members are not paid.

3TW, can any of you answer the question I asked:

> QUOTE
>
> Who has starved, lived in a car or under a bridge, who has lost reputation and how, and whose income has been eliminated as a result of working at 3ABN and being let go, fired, or left of their own volition because they have disagreed with some aspect of how 3ABN is run? (terribly constructed sentence sorry)

fhb

Posted by: Chez Sep 11 2006, 08:35 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 10 2006, 01:25 AM) ☐
>
> Once again, I am not hunting down identities.
>
> Steffan Philip

'es, you are hunting down identities. [Tell the truth and shame the Devil.] The truth will come forth with or vithout these people. These folk have experienced and/or witnessed injustices or wrongs and they are ;peaking against it. There were people in the Branch Davidian group who experienced and witnessed wrongful ıcts. Many of them said nothing and some of them are not alive. Then there is the other group who have ȷone or will go to their graves knowing that they could have saved some people, only if they would have evealed the wrongful acts that were occurring.

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 10 2006, 08:28 PM) ☐
>
> So leave and get a job where you don't have to have substandard housing and government subsidies. If you serve the Lord with all your heart, difficulties on earth are pointless. And as I pointed out before, I have personally experienced this.
>
> Steffan Philip

t is easy to tell people to leave a place and get a job. It is easier said than done. Why don't you offer these)eople a job (with a decent salary) and provide housing and other amenities for them? When I visited that community (before the break up), my husband and I had this "eery" feeling about the community. Leaving isn't always that easy.

Posted by: Chez Sep 11 2006, 08:46 AM

> QUOTE(lurker @ Sep 11 2006, 07:45 AM)
>
> There is another reason why some may be staying at 3ABN though they are convinced that there is a problem there. There may be divided families where one spouse is convinced that Danny is God's messenger and the other spouse is convinced that a cultlike situation exists among the followers of DS. As in any cult there is concern about families being broken up if one leaves the cult and the other stays. One may not be able to convince the other that it is not his or her duty to stay loyal to the leader and of the danger of remaining there. That one may stay out of concern for the deceived one, hoping to be able to protect him or her. Or they may be concerned about their children or parents who are in the cult.

Very Good Point!

Posted by: summertime Sep 11 2006, 10:37 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 11 2006, 01:57 AM)
>
> You state you "could", but I have actually talked to 13 of the people you mention, 8 of them about this issue. None of them have been able to convince me that 3ABN is giving a true picture of what happened, because they have not been able to show any valid evidense against what Irmgarad and I experienced, saw and heard. They have merely confirmed my conviction that the whole affair was staged for a certain purpose.

Johann, I have appreciated your revealing your true indentity----I wonder how many of us really believe that fhb has truly revealed his real name as Fallible Human Being---the name sounds a little fictitious to me.

Posted by: summertime Sep 11 2006, 11:13 AM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Sep 4 2006, 08:30 AM)
>
> It seems though that he is taking his time to actually go on this so-called revival and reformation vacation.

Accordng to Pastor Carter's announcement, reformation and revival has already happened---in the last week, I think.

Posted by: sister Sep 11 2006, 11:19 AM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 09:01 AM)

> Okay, three responses to my posting, all focused on one paragraph and all missed the point completely.
>
> Just to make it as concise as possible - the point of the pargraph was that it wouldn't matter to any one of you that an individual at 3ABN made the comments to me you would dismiss it out of hand because they are employed by 3ABN (which makes me wonder why you believe HOTY, after all he works there too.) In the process to deify Linda and vilify Danny I fear there is no room for the unmitigated truth. There is no willingness to listen to anyone associated with 3ABN.
>
> - fhb

Fallible,

If your point is only to give a hypothetical situation (that it wouldn't matter to any one of us that an individual at 3ABN made certain comments to you, but that we would dismiss it out of hand because they are employed by 3ABN) and then by your personal observation dismiss the foundation of you hypotheses (stating that the testimony of a 3ABN employee, HOTY, is judged by you as believable by the readership of this forum), it is logically impossible to arrive at the conclusion there is no willingness to listen to anyone associated with 3ABN. In fact, you have disproved your own hypothese.

For anyone who has read the Unauthorized History of 3ABN, it is obvious that an association has existed between myself and 3ABN. In addition to myself an association has existed between Beartrap and 3ABN, between Johann and 3ABN, between PaperTigers and 3ABN, between HOTY and 3ABN, just to mention a few of the members of BSDA who are or were employed by Danny Shelton.

I have made no attempt to deify Linda. I do see her as a victim, but only one of many victims. The only suggested deification of any individual at 3ABN has been of Danny Shelton. Nor have I attempted to vilify Danny. The only vilification of Danny has been through his own actions being revealed publicly, not though the revelation, but through the reaction his behavior evokes in the reader. There is always a place for unmitigated truth, but where the public and the personal persona differ so broadly, the experience can be extremely shocking for many individuals.

Sister

Posted by: beartrap Sep 11 2006, 11:29 AM

"A wretched soul, bruised with adversity,
We bid be quiet when we hear it cry;
But were we burdened with like weight of pain,
As much or more we should ourselves complain."
William Shakespear

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Sep 11 2006, 11:44 AM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 06:01 AM)
>
> Okay, three responses to my posting, all focused on one paragraph and all missed the point completely.
>
> - fhb

FHB, there were 4 responses before this. Check out mine - post #39 I believe.

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Sep 11 2006, 01:11 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Sep 11 2006, 12:19 PM)
>
> For anyone who has read the Unauthorized History of 3ABN, it is obvious that an association has existed between myself and 3ABN. In addition to myself an association has existed between Beartrap and 3ABN, between Johann and 3ABN, between PaperTigers and 3ABN, between HOTY and 3ABN, just to mention a few of the members of BSDA who are or were employed by Danny Shelton.

Again, you miss the context. The individuals I mention are still currently associated or working with 3ABN - actively associated. It is my understanding that beartrap, Johann, PaperTigers, and yourself are no longer there, not employed or associated with the day-to-day operations or programming. My point still stands. If I spoke with any of the people I listed and received a response that was contrarian to you own, even if it were substantiated, because of your entrenched position you would dismiss it out of hand.

The sole individual, as far as I can ascertain, who still is there and posting here is HOTY. Now, why should he be the only one from 3ABN to be trusted to "tell the truth?" It would seem to the casual observer that the answer to the question is, because he agrees with you. To disagree means to automatically be perceived as the enemy and thus a lying scoundral.

I am curious too as to the way in which the Unauthorized History equates an obvious association between you and 3ABN. As I read it, you have acted as the mouthpiece for other individuals/entities that have provided you with material to present your version of things. Do you state somewhere in there that you were/are indeed a part of the 3ABN experience?

-fhb

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Sep 11 2006, 12:44 PM)
>
> FHB, there were 4 responses before this. Check out mine - post #39 I believe.

I stand corrected.

Posted by: sister Sep 11 2006, 01:32 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 02:11 PM)
>
> Do you state somewhere in there that you were/are indeed a part of the 3ABN experience?
>
> -fhb

Yes. In fact, the only driver's licence I posess was issued in Benton, Illinois.

Posted by: sister Sep 11 2006, 01:44 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 02:11 PM)
>
> To disagree means to automatically be perceived as the enemy and thus a lying scoundral.

> -fhb

hose are your words, not mine. I have neither accused you of being an enemy or a lying·scoundrel. Perhaps, nisinformed would be a kinder description. I and others have spoken from experience as employees of Danny helton, my understanding is that your knowledge is received through watching 3ABN broadcasts, that you ave not personal knowledge or association with 3ABN or Danny Shelton. Based upon those facts I could ogically extrapolate that your posts are at best pure speculation or merely an uneducated opinion.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Sep 11 2006, 02:53 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 01:11 PM)
>
> Again, you miss the context. The individuals I mention are still currently associated or working with 3ABN - actively associated. It is my understanding that beartrap, Johann, PaperTigers, and yourself are no longer there, not employed or associated with the day-to-day operations or programming. My point still stands. If I spoke with any of the people I listed and received a response that was contrarian to you own, even if it were substantiated, because of your entrenched position you would dismiss it out of hand.

any of these events occurred in 2004 and earlier. Some "currently associated" employees, such as Shelley uinn, were not even at 3ABN when some of these things transpired. I place no premium simply on the fact hat a person is currently employed there -- or not.

econdly, there is no legitimate evidence. Therefore, to say "if it were substantiated" calls for a conclusion eyond the evidence 3ABN possesses. Why even go there?

hirdly, nobody would be wasting their time here "entrenched" if 3ABN had a case.

Posted by: fallible humanbeing Sep 11 2006, 03:05 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Sep 11 2006, 02:44 PM)
>
> To disagree means to automatically be perceived as the enemy and thus a lying scoundral.
> -fhb

ou are correct, they are my words. They are based on the responses often found here and from personal xperience here. The accusation of being a plant, or being Hal, or being Danny, or being on the 3ABN payroll n addition to the tone of many posts will lead to the perception that you ("you" here not specifically refering o you as a person, but to those aligned on your side of the issue) do consider that individual an "enemy." he assertion that truth does not eminate from 3ABN automatically transfers to anyone who aligns hemselves on that side of the issue - thus my statement.

ven your statement that I am misinformed indicates that because I seem to have a contrarian view to yours hat I am wrong.

To date all of the above accusations have fallen my way (being called Danny, Hal, a plant, etc). Simply because I take a skeptical and contrarian view to the majority here. If one were to flip that coin, one might postulate that you are in deed Linda since you have such an overwhelming intimate knowledge of 3ABN and all of the people who work there. I don't think you are - but one could make a strong case for that theory.

> QUOTE(sister @ Sep 11 2006, 02:44 PM)
>
> . . . my understanding is that your knowledge is received through watching 3ABN broadcasts, that you have not personal knowledge or association with 3ABN or Danny Shelton . . .

What do you base this understanding on? I have spent more time reading the material here and other sister sites, as well as books to gain a picture of 3ABN. In fact I have never owned a dish that pulls the channel in and the cable system in my current place of residence does not carry it. I have seen programming from there on occassion over the years and attended at some of the churches they have broadcast from. One need not have a direct association with 3ABN or Danny in order to learn about them. I have talked to a number of people associated with the ministry over the years. So my understanding comes from a variety of sources - yours included.

- fhb

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Sep 11 2006, 03:53 PM)
>
> Secondly, there is no legitimate evidence.

Not sure you can make this claim since you don't know what evidence they have. You have simply said, because they haven't played their hand they must not have one. That doesn't make your claim true.

Do date you can not prove they don't have it.

- fhb

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 05:26 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 11:05 PM)
>
> Do date you can not prove they don't have it.
>
> - fhb

Quite a statement! Since I was involved in the initial happening in our own kitchen at 3ABN - and I even dare use my real name - I have seen plenty of the evidence they have crumble and new strange evidence manufactured with the help of expensive Private Investigators following me have made. You can always get what you pay for, but is it true? Not if you were there and know it isn't. You can make lotsof tricks with a spy camera, I have experienced. You can eliminate unwanted people in the picture and try to prove they are not there becauase they are not seen on the picture. Such is some of the strongest evidence Mollie Steenson and her gang have produced and told people they have.

I have heard the strongest evidence from members of the board, and I know from personal experience they are mere fabrication and falsehood.

In a few days your will all see plenty of evidence that will rock the boat. Just stay tuned. . . The Linda case will then be a mere drop in the bucket. It might send some people screaming for mercy!

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Sep 11 2006, 05:32 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 11 2006, 04:26 PM)
>
> In a few days your will all see plenty of evidence that will rock the boat. Just stay tuned. . . The Linda case will then be a mere drop in the bucket. It might send some people screaming for mercy!

Okay, my interest is piqued! I hope it will answer some of the questions I have - ones that I feel very strongly about.

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 05:39 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Sep 12 2006, 01:32 AM)
>
> Okay, my interest is piqued! I hope it will answer some of the questions I have - ones that I feel very strongly about.

Pray about it. Pray the Lord's hand will intervene where needed,and that it will strengthen His Church!

Posted by: PaperTigers Sep 11 2006, 05:43 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 11 2006, 03:11 PM)
>
> ...The sole individual, as far as I can ascertain, who still is there and posting here is HOTY. Now, why should he be the only one from 3ABN to be trusted to "tell the truth?" It would seem to the casual observer that the answer to the question is, because he agrees with you. To disagree means to automatically be perceived as the enemy and thus a lying scoundral....
> -fhb

I think it all depends on who you talk to at 3ABN... if you talk to the actual employees you will get a completely different view then if you talk to those who have a vested interest in getting you to believe what they want you to believe.

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 06:10 PM

> QUOTE(PaperTigers @ Sep 12 2006, 01:43 AM)
>
> I think it all depends on who you talk to at 3ABN... if you talk to the actual employees you will get a > completely different view then if you talk to those who have a vested interest in getting you to believe what they want you to believe.

lave you ever considered why? Personally, I have nothing to lose or gain, either way. All I am intersted in is he truth, because a Christian must adhere to what he knows is the truth, even if the heavens may fall.

receive my pension from the Seventh-day Adventist Church, having worked for my Lord for half a century. 3ABN could not stop my income nor my health insurance, when I was fired for refusing to lie. This is the eason I sign my real name. I can testify that many of the others are in serious danger if they use their real iames. I don't mind Danny calling me his greates enemy or a liar. I am responsible to my Lord, and not to)anny. I have seen him calling others murderers, liars, and you name it. And once he bites into a person he icts like an angry dog who never lets go, regardless if the person is innocent or not. This does not only apply o Linda. Once he has spoken his word remains, as if he was a divine prophet. This is the reason some have :alled 3ABN a cult.

Posted by: paleface Sep 11 2006, 06:21 PM

Johann:

Sir, I have been praying, pleading with the Lord for Truth ever since June 1,2004 of why Linda disappeared. Thank you for being a faithful friend to Linda. By the way are you the faithfull caregiver of Fluffy?
May God bless you in His Service. Please let Linda know she has a whole host of us who are praying for her and her family.

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Sep 11 2006, 06:27 PM

I am at a loss here...

FHB says:
he has not worked at 3ABN
he lives hundreds of miles from 3ABN
he has only met Dan once or twice
he does not have 3ABN in his home
he only watches 3ABN on occasion and my personal favorite -
"One need not have a direct association with 3ABN or Danny in order to learn about them.

It makes no sense to me why someone who is so DETACHED from the situation - by his own admission - is so interested IN the situation.

And if they do not need to know Dan personally to learn about him - why did they come to a sight where they could learn and choose to scoff at the information. Instead we have a person willing to protect someone they DON'T know against people who DO.

Like I said, I am at a loss.

Posted by: inga Sep 11 2006, 06:33 PM

Steffan, I'll just reply to one point of your post -- a fairly clear example of how you erect straw men to knock down in order to support your point. (Your claim that we considered Danny the devil himself was another such "straw man."):

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 10 2006, 08:28 PM)
>
> And it is quite a stretch to blame the unfortunate Irmgard's cancer related death to Danny. But yet you do.

I did not blame Danny for Irmgard's death, as you accuse me of doing. I said I have no doubt that he contributed to her untimely death. Knowing how stress prevents the body's immune system from functioning at its fullest, I am quite sure that the extreme stress experienced by Irmgard because of Danny's continual harassment of Linda and Johann served to hasten her death because the cancer was able to grow more quickly with the immune system so compromised. Please read my post again. (No. 29)

Your distortion of posts is subtle, but it is distortion nevertheless. Yes, you will find some hyperbole on this forum, as well as some speculation, but it is generally quite evident. (There is no hyperbole in my post that I can see, since each point can be backed up from my personal knowledge and/or by the experience of others on this forum.)

I wonder if you're not a pot calling the kettle black.

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 06:33 PM

> QUOTE(paleface @ Sep 12 2006, 02:21 AM)
>
> Johann:
>
> Sir, I have been praying, pleading with the Lord for Truth ever since June 1,2004 of why Linda disappeared. Thank you for being a faithful friend to Linda. By the way are you the faithfull caregiver of Fluffy?
> May God bless you in His Service. Please let Linda know she has a whole host of us who are praying for her and her family.

Thank you, paleface. No, I have not taken care of Fluffy, who is taken care of by a family taking care of vistors and Fluffy right by the premises of 3ABN. Many visitors have enjoyed their hospitaily, and Fluffy is well taken care of. Shelty is with Linda, and that has been a great comfort to Linda in her great trials.

Shelty thought all men were as bad as Danny, so it took me a long time to get Shelty to "talk" to me when I visited Linda. Shelty shuddered when Danny was yelling at Linda to get out of his house, when she was not prepared to leave him nor suffer a divorce.

Posted by: sonshineonme Sep 11 2006, 06:34 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Sep 11 2006, 05:27 PM)
>
> I am at a loss here...
>
> FHB says:
> he has not worked at 3ABN
> he lives hundreds of miles from 3ABN
> he has only met Dan once or twice
> he does not have 3ABN in his home
> he only watches 3ABN on occasion
> and my personal favorite -
> "One need not have a direct association with 3ABN or Danny in order to learn about them.
>
> It makes no sense to me why someone who is so DETACHED from the situation - by his own admission - is so interested IN the situation.

> And if they do not need to know Dan personally to learn about him - why did they come to a sight where they could learn and choose to scoff at the information. Instead we have a person willing to protect someone they DON'T know against people who DO.
>
> Like I said, I am at a loss.

have been thinking about all this circling going on....back and forth in my mind I have thought, what is the oint of FHB's writings - and a couple others I won't name. It's not that I don't like others to have varied pinions of what they want to believe, etc., but, it's as if you can not reason, or let be of something with hese folk. I tend to think maybe they are not what they would like to appear as? Someone who just wants to ead, discuss, disagree or get it? I mean, this has been one of those different shaped circular things...with no oint or destination in sight - just another form of provoking for some reason - what could that be? FHB, if ou don't want to accept what you read here, by people who have given testimony to their own experiences, hen don't. But let it go. You can not change people's stories. Do you think they will suddenly say "oh, what vas I thinking - that didn't really happen, I must have dreampt it or out right lied to you all". Don't you see, hese people have stoies - testimonies, of what happened. Accept, decline or move on. You can't change the tripes on a zebra, but you sure seem to think you can "rationalize" anything away...and if everyone wants to pend more energy trying to reason with you, I believe it's pointless, because there is something about you hat isn't right to me. But, that is JMO.

Posted by: PaperTigers Sep 11 2006, 06:42 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ Sep 11 2006, 07:34 PM)
>
> I have been thinking about all this circling going on....back and forth in my mind I have thought, what is the point of FHB's writings - and a couple others I won't name. It's not that I don't like others to have varied opinions of what they want to believe, etc., but, it's as if you can not reason, or let be of something with these folk. I tend to think maybe they are not what they would like to appear as? Someone who just wants to read, discuss, disagree or get it? I mean, this has been one of those different shaped circular things...with no point or destination in sight - just another form of provoking for some reason - what could that be? FHB, if you don't want to accept what you read here, by people who have given testimony to their own experiences, then don't. But let it go. You can not change people's stories. Do you think they will suddenly say "oh, what was I thinking - that didn't really happen, I must have dreampt it or out right lied to you all". Don't you see, these people have stoies - testimonies, of what happened. Accept, decline or move on. You can't change the stripes on a zebra, but you sure seem to think you can "rationalize" anything away...and if everyone wants to spend more energy trying to reason with you, I believe it's pointless, because there is something about you that isn't right to me. But, that is JMO.

men

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 07:08 PM

> QUOTE(steffan @ Sep 11 2006, 03:28 AM)
>
> to blame the unfortunate Irmgard's cancer related death to Danny. But yet you do.
> I wonder which price. Johann himself states that Danny tried to make life difficult for him. Yet his local church and his conference rejected any interference. He continues to get his sustentation from the church.
> These are his words, not mine.
> Steffan Philip

I have told before that Linda got up at Irmgard's funeral and expressed her appreciation because Irmgard remained a friend when all other friends failed. It so happened, we learned from sad experience, that Linda was not permitted to have any other friends than those who would play a part in destroying Linda. . . (and destroying Danny too in the long run)

I would receive plenty of e-mails from Danny where he hurled at me all kinds of accusations, of being a liar, accusing my friends of similar things, even being murderers. That can kill the spirit of a a sick person, I can tell you! Have you ever tried that, when your wife is dying? Salary is not the only thing the soul needs. Whose local church rejected interference? What conference?

I gave the union some good advice which they rejected. Some of the members there have since told me it was good advice, and they lament the majority did not follow the advice that the higher office in the church supportred (TED). They claimed that Mark Finley had approved of what they were doing. Later Mark Finley wrote that he had adviced to work in cooperation with HOPE. So what are you referring to? The Norwegian TV had a numer of listeners before this. They lost most of them with their new venture. Was that an advantage?

Why did the Scandinavian 3ABN lose their chairman of the board? There are some similarities to Danny Shelton.

Posted by: inga Sep 11 2006, 07:12 PM

> QUOTE(fallible humanbeing @ Sep 10 2006, 09:19 PM)
>
> This does not discribe only Fortune 500 companies or financial institutions or governmental offices - it applies ot a myriad of business in a plehora of businesses/industry/think tanks. In an age when the most valuable comodity is information, these are the safeguards to keep the product created secure as well as to make sure the post-it notes aren't headed home as a way to make shopping lists and post them on the fridge.
>
> This is SOP in western society.
>
> - fhb

You say that this sort of spying on employees is standard practice in many businesses, and I don't doubt you.

However, can you give us a good reason why this is necessary at 3ABN? I thought 3ABN was supposed to exist precisely for distribution "the most valuable commodity" of "information" regarding the Good News of Jesus Christ?

Maybe I just don't "get it," and you can enlightne me, FHB?

Posted by: sonshineonme Sep 11 2006, 07:24 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 11 2006, 05:33 PM)
>
> Thank you, paleface. No, I have not taken care of Fluffy, who is taken care of by a family taking care of vistors and Fluffy right by the premises of 3ABN. Many visitors have enjoyed their hospitaily, and Fluffy is well taken care of. Shelty is with Linda, and that has been a great comfort to Linda in her great trials.

> Shelty thought all men were as bad as Danny, so it took me a long time to get Shelty to "talk" to me when I visited Linda. Shelty shuddered when Danny was yelling at Linda to get out of his house, when she was not prepared to leave him nor suffer a divorce.

nother thing that makes Linda's and my friendship unique is we both have and share a love for shelties. I ave two of them. A male and female. Anyone that has shelties knows how intuitive they really are - ncredibly sensitive to the "heard" they live with. I have a male, like Shelty is, and males tend to go towards emales (most breeds are this way) and will be more protective of that person, and my male is very quick to efend me (with his "talking") if my husband and I are in the house together and he leaves the room or akes a thumping noice, or even if our voices raise at each other (not very often) etc. My husband colded my male when he was small and he has not really ever forgotten. My husband had no idea how ensitive these type of dogs are to tone and body language. We have been working on it ever sense, to ssure him (the dog) that everything is ok. If there were ever a problem of yelling or fighting or omething of very serious nature, I have no doubt that my male sheltie would be quite upset and would emain so for some time. These dogs are amazing at sensing when you are hurting emotionally or physically, nd will be glued to you and not leave. Ask anyone who has one.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Sep 11 2006, 07:25 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 11 2006, 08:12 PM)
>
> You say that this sort of spying on employees is standard practice in many businesses, and I don't doubt you.
>
> However, can you give us a good reason why this is necessary at 3ABN? I thought 3ABN was supposed to exist precisely for distribution "the most valuable commodity" of "information" regarding the Good News of Jesus Christ?
>
> Maybe I just don't "get it," and you can enlightne me, FHB?

nga, don't you see?

hose angels - all three of them -- have been classified as "top secret."

um's the word.

Used by Shakespeare in Henry VI, Part 2. 'Seal up your lips and give no words but mum'.)

Posted by: beartrap Sep 11 2006, 07:35 PM

> QUOTE
>
> I have seen programming from there on occassion over the years

e were the people making and airing the programming you saw on occassion.

> QUOTE

> and attended at some of the churches they have broadcast from.

We were the people often speaking in the churches they broadcast from.

> QUOTE
>
> One need not have a direct association with 3ABN or Danny in order to learn about them.

We had a direct association with 3ABN and Danny which makes us more knowledgeable about it than those whose info is only second hand, at best.

> QUOTE
>
> I have talked to a number of people associated with the ministry over the years.

We were the people associated with the "ministry" who many people like you talked to over the years.

> QUOTE
>
> So my understanding comes from a variety of sources - yours included.

So our understanding comes from living, breathing, and working 3ABN side by side with Danny, Linda, and each other. Not from a variety of other sources.

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 07:43 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 12 2006, 03:12 AM)
>
> You say that this sort of spying on employees is standard practice in many businesses, and I don't doubt you.
>
> However, can you give us a good reason why this is necessary at 3ABN? I thought 3ABN was supposed to exist precisely for distribution "the most valuable commodity" of "information" regarding the Good News of Jesus Christ?
>
> Maybe I just don't "get it," and you can enlightne me, FHB?

Some claim the reason for this is fear that Linda is planning terror attacks on 3ABN! Those of you working there now, has Danny given any indication?

Posted by: cottageK Sep 11 2006, 08:24 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 11 2006, 07:43 PM)
>
> Some claim the reason for this is fear that Linda is planning terror attacks on 3ABN! Those of you working there now, has Danny given any indication?

By that statement, do I detect an inference of some paranoia in the ranks of 3ABN? Linda planning terror attacks on 3ABN???? rofl

---

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Sep 11 2006, 08:25 PM

> QUOTE(cottageK @ Sep 11 2006, 09:24 PM)
>
> By that statement, do I detect an inference of some paranoia in the ranks of 3ABN? Linda planning terror attacks on 3ABN???? rofl

"Paranoia" is putting it mildly...

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 08:32 PM

> QUOTE(husbandoftheyear @ Sep 12 2006, 04:25 AM)
>
> "Paranoia" is putting it mildly...

An intersting statement. We might soon see how true it is!

Posted by: Lucyladye Sep 11 2006, 08:42 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 11 2006, 07:32 PM)
>
> An intersting statement. We might soon see how true it is!

Hmmmmmmmm Paranoia.....now that seems to fit perfectly!

Posted by: caribbean sda Sep 11 2006, 08:46 PM

I do believe that housecleaning needs to be done in the hierarchy at 3ABN...but I'm wondering if this new information, that is about to come to light, has any potential to destroy the ministry of 3ABN. Yes, some of those at the top should be replaced, in my opinon; but I hope the ministry and the purpose for which it was founded would continue...

Posted by: Johann Sep 11 2006, 08:51 PM

> QUOTE(caribbean sda @ Sep 12 2006, 04:46 AM)
>
> I do believe that housecleaning needs to be done in the hierarchy at 3ABN...but I'm wondering if this new information, that is about to come to light, has any potential to destroy the ministry of 3ABN. Yes, some of those at the top should be replaced, in my opinon; but I hope the ministry and the purpose for which it > was founded would continue...

ray that the Lord will intervene. His guidance is sorely needed. Let BSDA be like a prayer band around what s happening. We do not want 3ABN to become a station that works against SDA, do we?

Posted by: inga Sep 11 2006, 10:25 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Sep 11 2006, 08:43 PM) ☐
>
> Some claim the reason for this is fear that Linda is planning terror attacks on 3ABN!

☒ blc

?? : ☒ rofl

Posted by: Johann Sep 12 2006, 04:00 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 12 2006, 06:25 AM) ☐
>
> ☒ blc
>
> ?? : ☒ rofl

ood to have some humor! After M. L. Andreasen had spent several days at Elmshaven he was so surpriced hat such a godly woman could laugh. He stated that she giggled like a schoolgirl. Lets be happy too.

Posted by: Observer Sep 16 2006, 06:30 AM

> QUOTE(inga @ Sep 11 2006, 09:25 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ blc
>
> ?? : ☒ rofl

O. K. I now understand. In a prior life, Linda was probably a member of Delta Force, and therefore wll trained as to how to do such. Well, if she was ever a member of Delta Force, they will not be able to stop her by locking the doors. She will simply rapel through a skylight.

Here she comes folks: Linda, the unmasked avenger.

Posted by: simplysaved Sep 17 2006, 06:59 PM

A very good question...and a very real reality. This makes me think about the example of the EGW post in another thread that I will include here:

> QUOTE(Uncle Sam @ Sep 14 2006, 08:08 AM) ☐
>
> Our Pastor shared this with us last night at prayer meeting. It gave me something to think about with all of this exposing of Danny's sins......just thought I would share.
> Australian Years 1893-1900 pages 134, 135. The origional letter is referenced as Letter 48, 1894. She was writing to Elder Littlejohn,
>
> She wrote 12 pages so these are just a couple of paragraphs.
>
> "Elder Littlejohn, you have undertaken to point out the defects of Reformers and pioneers in the cause of God. No one should trace the lines which you have done. You have made public errors and defects of the people of God and in so doing have dishonored God and Jesus Christ. I would not for my right arm have given to the world that which you have written. You have not been conscience of what would be the influence of your work...
> The Lord did not call upon you to present these things to the public as a correct history of our people. Your work will make it necessary for us to put forth labor to show why these brethern took the extreme position that they did, and call up the circumstances that vindicate those upon whom your articles have laid suspicion and reproach. ...
>
> God will charge those who unwisely expose the mistakes of their brethern with sin of far greater magnitude than He will charge the one who made the misstep. Criticism and condemnation of the brethern are counted as criticism and condemnation of Christ.

> QUOTE(caribbean sda @ Sep 11 2006, 08:46 PM) ☐
>
> I do believe that housecleaning needs to be done in the hierarchy at 3ABN...but I'm wondering if this new information, that is about to come to light, has any potential to destroy the ministry of 3ABN. Yes, some of those at the top should be replaced, in my opinon; but I hope the ministry and the purpose for which it was founded would continue...

Posted by: Grith May 28 2007, 04:02 PM

☒ bum

After reading part of The Televangelist again, I was wondering if Jorgen VanBraun had updated the story. I just found this upadate (I'm still digging in the archives here).

Sister, since it has been nearly a year since this was posted, is there yet another update? Is it safe for Jorgen to write again and give us the latest in the televangelist saga?

Posted by: sister May 28 2007, 06:35 PM

> QUOTE(Grith @ May 28 2007, 05:02 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ bum
>
> After reading part of The Televangelist again, I was wondering if Jorgen VanBraun had updated the story. I just found this upadate (I'm still digging in the archives here).
>
> Sister, since it has been nearly a year since this was posted, is there yet another update? Is it safe for Jorgen to write again and give us the latest in the televangelist saga?

I have not spoken with Jorgen lately, but with the current climate of suits from Danny Shelton, it is imparative that his identity remains hidden. Jorgen has managed to fly under Danny's radar for a long time and must continue to do so. I do know that the last time we spoke he was extremely busy with a number of projects and has had no time to continue the saga of the Televangelist. I will contact him and inquire if there are any updates in the works.

Posted by: watchbird May 29 2007, 06:08 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ May 28 2007, 08:35 PM) ☐
>
> I have not spoken with Jorgen lately, but with the current climate of suits from Danny Shelton, it is imparative that his identity remains hidden. Jorgen has managed to fly under Danny's radar for a long time and must continue to do so. I do know that the last time we spoke he was extremely busy with a number of projects and has had no time to continue the saga of the Televangelist. I will contact him and inquire if there are any updates in the works.

I agree with Sister on the bolded sentences above. I will go a bit further and state that I think that it would be inappropriate to ask Sister and/or Jorgen to make any more updates to The Televangelist at this time. When the project began, it was the only way to get the story before the unknowledgeable public (especially church administrators) in a way that would cause them to question what lay behind the facade of "The Televangelist". The environment has changed now. The stories have been told and are available for public perusal on this and other websites.... and church administrators know a lot more than what they are admitting). Those stories that have not yet been told, for the most part, must not be made public until existing lawsuits (both those we know about and those that may be in existance but are unknown to us as well as any that may yet materialize) are settled.

The Wise man said, "There is a time to speak and a time to keep silence". I will add, there is a time when one can be most helpful by stepping forward and telling what one knows.... and there is a time when one can be most helpful by patiently waiting while the stories unfold and work themselves out.

While we are waiting, there is much that we can do in open dialogue about what has happened, what is happening, and what should (in our opinion) happen. It would be very interesting to be able to read more about things in Jorgan's AND Sister's inimitable writing style. But it might not be the most helpful at this point in time. Let's go for "helpful" rather than merely "interesting".

Posted by: Rosyroi May 29 2007, 07:13 PM

I am still rofl over the thought of Linda being a Terrorist.

Rosyroi rofl

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Reason For Divorce

Posted by: summertime May 29 2007, 05:01 PM

After hearing about the statements made by speakers from 3ABN about the talking by husband or wife on telephone or mail (to a member of the opposite sex) being grounds for divorce, I have been thinking about how this would read in the church manual. How many husbands or wives in the church would be running for the divorce courts in order to look for a new, younger mate. I know of a few myself right here in Missouri. Pretty soon stories might start coming out of our churches reminescent of 'The Young and the Restless'. How many vital young men have not looked at a comely woman and wondered about the prospects of being married to the pretty young thing.!!! WHen he gets into his 50's then it really becomes ridiculous.

IPB

Board Rules - Please Read Gallery Arcade Help Search Members Calendar

Welcome Guest (Log In | Register)

Proverbs-Praise

>

BlackSDA > General Fellowship > 3ABN

Latest Shouts In The Shoutbox -- View The Shoutbox Collapse

leehaw -- Hey Everybody!!
LeePaDee -- All afternoon... Hey
Clay -- hey Den
Denny -- afternoon all.
leehaw -- Nite Nite Sis! hug.gif
Seraphim7 -- Good nite fam
princessdi -- ahhh
MsHoly1 -- The one for the Princess!
MsHoly1 -- You must ask?
princessdi -- Which Concert?

Skin Default ☐ Shout Clear Smilies BBCodes

Refresh

19 Pages ☐ « < 2 3 4 5 6 > » Start new

☐ 3ABN Forum Options ☐

	Topic Title	Replies	Topic Starter	Views	Last Action
✓	Siegel, Bril Et. Al. The law Firm	6	Observer	418	28th May 2007 - 09:52 AM Last post by: Observer
✓	3abn Back On Skyangel/dish Network ☐ 1 2 up and running on Ch. 9710	23	mozart	1,034	27th May 2007 - 07:52 PM Last post by: FineArt
✓	Dannyscribes At Beliefnet Where the 3ABN apologists are posting now	5	Grith	447	27th May 2007 - 05:51 AM Last post by: watchbird
✓	The Televangelist ☐ 1 2 3 » 6 unedited orginal document in it's entirety	85	sister	4,676	23rd May 2007 - 02:57 PM Last post by: mozart
					23rd May 2007 -

✓	"the Televangelist" Revisited	9	watchbird	597	01:13 PM Last post by: GrammieTana
✓	Scripture For Today Does this apply to anyone?	7	Observer	345	20th May 2007 - 11:02 PM Last post by: Rosyroi
✓	The Judgment ☐ 1 2 3	39	Watchman	1,696	17th May 2007 - 07:24 PM Last post by: Rosyroi
✓	3abn Store Donations vs Fixed Prices?	6	runner4him	363	16th May 2007 - 07:54 PM Last post by: mozart
✓	The Danny Shelton Letters To Linda ☐ 1 2 3 » 6	89	calvin	3,159	15th May 2007 - 03:22 PM Last post by: Princess
✓	What He Said! (db On Commandment #7) ☐ 1 2 3 » 7 Doug B. on Adultery	91	maggiecttr	3,069	15th May 2007 - 11:05 AM Last post by: SandyColorado
✓	How Do Local Thompsonville Residents Feel About 3abn?... ☐ 1 2 3 4 and how does this affect their opinion of the SDA church?	49	watchbird	1,688	13th May 2007 - 10:46 PM Last post by: princessdi
✓	☐Save 3abn Website ☐ 1 2 3 » 28 site registered to Gailon Joy	411	inga	15,172	9th May 2007 - 11:09 PM Last post by: Fran
✓ ☐	Letter From Linda Shelton @ Www.lindashelton.org - Feb. '07 ☐ 1 2 3 » 14 Linda Shelton demands the evidence be made public	198	sonshineonme	7,836	8th May 2007 - 05:53 PM Last post by: mozart
✓	Statement - Alyssa Moore ☐ 1 2 3 » 10 Linda Shelton's daughter	144	source	7,559	7th May 2007 - 03:09 PM Last post by: Treniece
✓ ☐	3abn Presents "the Battle ..." Don't Miss It ☐ 1 2 3 » 5 Special program rerun times	65	watchbird	3,342	6th May 2007 - 10:52 PM Last post by: SoulEspresso

Enter Keywords [Search forum]

19 Pages ☐ « < 2 3 [✓ 4] 5 6 > » ☒ Start new

6 User(s) are browsing this forum (5 Guests and 0 Anonymous Users)

1 Members: PECAN CUTE

☐ New Replies
☐ No New Replies
☐ Hot Topic (New)
☐ Hot Topic (No New)
☐ Poll (New)
☐ Poll (No New)
☐ Locked Topic
☐ Moved Topic

|-- 3ABN [Go]

Order: Last Post Z-A Show All

Topics: All [Go]

☒ ☒

Lo-Fi Version Time is now: 2nd July 2007 - 09:02 AM

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Siegel, Bril Et. Al.

Posted by: Observer May 27 2007, 12:22 PM

Some have commented on the lawyers potentially involved in the lawsuit against Galion Joy and Bob Pickle. References have been made to 14 lawyers. The assumption is that big money has hired a mass of lawyers to beat GAJ and Bob Pickle to death.

I do not happen to think that such is reality. It is incomprehensible to me to believe that there are 14 lawyers working on this lawsuit. Such would be overkill, and a great waste of money. So, I thought that I would write a bit on what usually happens in as case like this. I intend to illustrate it with what is on the public record of the firm that has been retained to litigate.

Those of you who wish to review what this law firm says about itself may review www.sbgdf.com You will find that it lists 17 lawyers who work in its practice areas. In addition, you may assume that there are other, paralegals, and more who are on its staff.

You will see that this law firm concentrates in the areas of Corporate Practice, and Litigation.

In the area of Corporate Practice it generally works in Entrepreneurial, Mergers & Acquisitions, Corporate Finance & Taxation, Intellectual Property, Construction Law, Employment, Estates & Trusts, Land Use, Development & Financing, Condemnation & Tax Appeals, and ERISA.

In its second area, it generally practices in Class Actions & complex Litigation, ERISA, Land Use, Employment, Construction and General litigation.

It would be unreasonable to believe that all 17 of these lawyers would be involved in litigation issues related to 3-ABN.

In a typical law firm, two lawyers would be picked to give overall supervision to the development of a case for litigation. On might be in overall charge. But, often that firm would have a rule that two senior partners would have to agree on, and sign off on, every decision, paper and action that was taken. The reason for this is simple: Law firms do not want one partner, acting independently, to jeopardize the case and the law firm by either failing to do something, or by doing something wrong.

These two lawyers would then select others who would work on individual parts of the case. While in theory all 17 could be assigned parts that would likely not happen. It is probable that some of the 17 would have expertise in areas not related to the case.

E.g. I do not see that experts in construction law and litigation would be needed at this time. Neither do I see it necessary to use lawyers who specialize in Land Use.

Here are some of the areas in which Siegel et.al practice that I will suggest might be related to litigation involving 3-ABN: Mergers & Acquisitions—Think Amazing Facts, Tax law—think school board case, and other such issues that have been alleged, Intellectual Property—think trademarks and copyright, Employment—think issues regarding the employment of Linda, Possibly ERISA—think pension plans and more involving Linda. The individual areas would only be involved as they were related to litigation issues.

I am going to assume that Mr. Duffy is one of the senior people involved. He may be assumed to have expertise in General Litigation, and Mergers & Acquisitions. But, in the area of Intellectual Property I suspect that he would defer to Sherri Rohlf. In Employment, ERISA & Tax issues, I will suggest that he would defer to several others.

All in all, I will suggest that there are probably no more than 3 - 6 lawyers working on 3-ABN litigation at any one time. Yes, some may be called in to respond to an issue in their area. The power of a large law firm is not that they have 100 lawyers to work continuously on a case. It is that they have a number of specialists who can respond to specific issues that are raised, and that they have a number of paralegals who can do the grunt work and research.

As I see it, the current issues are: Litigation, Intellectual Property, and libel/defamation of character, all in an Internet environment.

People who want to know more about this firm's litigation history may access http://www.sbgdf.com/practice.html that will take you to icons that will tell a bit more about how this firm litigates and settles prior to trial.

In the case of the current litigation we have an unknown factor. The lawsuit was filed in a Federal Court in MA. Are any of the lawyers listed in this law firm licensed to practice in MA? I do not know. I only know, as has been pointed out by 3-ABN defenders, one must be licensed to practice law in a State. If Siegel et.al does not have lawyers licensed to practice in MA, they must retain an attorney licensed in MA. I have no knowledge in regard to this as the legal documents are sealed.

NOTE: I am generally speaking in general terms. I do not know what is going on with the current litigation. In what I say here, I am only making speculative assumptions.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 27 2007, 01:13 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 27 2007, 11:22 AM)
>
> NOTE: I am generally speaking in general terms. I do not know what is going on with the current litigation. In what I say here, I am only making speculative assumptions.

Naturally. But that does help those of us who don't have as much knowledge in the area to understand what's happening. Glad you put it up.

Posted by: Observer May 27 2007, 01:56 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 27 2007, 01:13 PM)
>
> Naturally. But that does help those of us who don't have as much knowledge in the area to understand what's happening. Glad you put it up.

In regard to law firms, a 17 member firm is not a large firm. That does not imply that they cannot do good work. My expectation is that they will do exceptional work. But, in saying so, that does not imply that they will never make a mistake. Even very good lawyers make mistakes. In litigation, each side attempts to push the other side into making mistakes.

One of that attributes of a good law firm, is that they recognize their limitations, and seek outside help when they need it.

I am going to assume that the current litigation filed against GAJ, and Bob Pickle, invovles the Internet--that is what is clear in the letter Mr. Duffy wrote to GAJ. While I may be wrong, I am also going to assume that this law firm does not have expertese in Internet law as it relates to Intelectual Property. Again, this is only speculation on my part, which may be wrong. If I am correct, I will expect them to retain an attorney who does have that expertese to help them llitigate this case.

I think that they will retain experts to assist them in any area in which they think they lack the required expertese.

Again, my saying so does not imply that I beleive that they will win their case. We will simply have to wait to see.

Posted by: Pickle May 27 2007, 07:18 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 27 2007, 12:22 PM)
>
> As I see it, the current issues are: Litigation, Intellectual Property, and libel/defamation of character, all in an Internet environment.
>
> ...
>
> In the case of the current litigation we have an unknown factor. The lawsuit was filed in a Federal Court in MA. Are any of the lawyers listed in this law firm licensed to practice in MA? I do not know. I only know, as has been pointed out by 3-ABN defenders, one must be licensed to practice law in a State. If Siegel et.al does not have lawyers licensed to practice in MA, they must retain an attorney licensed in MA. I have no knowledge in regard to this as the legal documents are sealed.
>
> NOTE: I am generally speaking in general terms. I do not know what is going on with the current litigation. In what I say here, I am only making speculative assumptions.

Of course, I am not going to comment about your speculations, whether they are right or wrong, but I did want to ask you a question: When Danny's allies ridiculed Attorney Laird Heal over the license question, would their comments have been considered libelous and defamatory?

Posted by: Fran May 27 2007, 09:28 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 27 2007, 08:18 PM)
>
> Of course, I am not going to comment about your speculations, whether they are right or wrong, but I did want to ask you a question: When Danny's allies ridiculed Attorney Laird Heal over the license question, would their comments have been considered libelous and defamatory?

My Opinion: YES!

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 27 2007, 10:33 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ Apr 26 2007, 09:07 PM)
>
> If your whole scenerio was accurate then at the very least he would be guilty of stupidity. I would think any competant lawyer would have checked the status of the activation before driving from Mass to Southern IL

> QUOTE(Eirene @ Apr 26 2007, 07:49 AM)
>
> That's pretty simple Bob and really the answer doesn't affect the outcome. In order for a license to be valid in a state, it has to be kept active. That is a matter of keeping up the fees every year etc. Laird didn't. Frans statement that said it was the fault of of the state may in part, be accurate but that is a moot point on this picture. Here is the part being left out. He knew he had not been re-instated before he left Mass. If he intended to be honest and forthcoming why wouldn't he have notified the court before proceedings and ask for a continuance because he had not been re-instated? Unless he intended to try and get by with it, why drive all the way to Southern IL for nothing? And why answer to the affirmative when asked if he was licensed to practice in Il? No, don't say well he did have a license. A license doesn't count in a state if it is inactive and he knew it was still inactive. All of this "he was working on it" doesn't get it. You and Gailon are using a play on words to smokescreen the act itself.

> QUOTE(Eirene @ Apr 25 2007, 08:36 PM)
>
> That sounds like a nice little spin all packaged up. One thing is wrong with that. When the judge ask if he was licensed to practice in Il he said YES YOUR HONOR! No matter how you spin it he lied. Had he not been exposed, proceedings would have went on as planned with no one the wiser.
> Are you honestly trying to say that he drove all the way from Mass, a long long trip, and Linda drove from springfield, knowing that he wouldn't be able to accomplish anything because he was going to have to admit to the judge he didn't have his license yet? rofl Please, he thought he could get a way with it but failed miserably.

Posted by: Observer May 28 2007, 09:52 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 27 2007, 06:18 PM)
>
> Of course, I am not going to comment about your speculations, whether they are right or wrong, but I did want to ask you a question: When Danny's allies ridiculed Attorney Laird Heal over the license question, would their comments have been considered libelous and defamatory?

Bob, your question has interest in a court of law. By tying it to a specific situation any answer that I would give lies closer to the practice of law than I want to go.

In any case, I do not have the legal expertese to respond to your question. I do not know.

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ 3abn Back On Skyangel/dish Network

Posted by: mozart May 23 2007, 02:24 PM

Got this email from Flo Cunningham/3ABN today:

Check Dish Network and/or Sky Angel channel #9710 and let me know if you can now bring in 3ABN.

Time for us to write all those letters about how much we miss Linda and Barbara Kerr's cooking progs.

Posted by: Pickle May 23 2007, 03:55 PM

I can't seem to find anything about 9710 on either DishNetwork or SkyAngel's websites. Maybe they are a little slow updating their websites.

Anyone confirm reception?

Posted by: Pickle May 23 2007, 04:22 PM

Of course, someone at Dish Network could be mistaken, but here is what their online support is saying:

> QUOTE(Dish Network)
>
> I apologize for the inconvenience, we do not have this channel.

After posting for him the announcement at http://www.3abn.org/announcements.cfm, he replied:

> QUOTE(Dish Network)
>
> Please give me two minutes to check this information for you.

And then he responded with the following:

> QUOTE(Dish Network)
>
> Thank you for your patience.
>
> I apologize for the inconvenience, we do not have any channel an or channel number 9710 is available with us.

It appears to me that they are saying that they don't have a channel number 9710. When asked about this he said:

> QUOTE(Dish Network)
>
> Yes, we as Dish Network do not have 9710 channel listed.

It could be his lists aren't updated yet. So I asked him how often his lists get updated:

> QUOTE(Dish Network)
>
> Well, whenever there is any change in programming we get the information immediately.
>
> But we haven't received any information on this channel.

http://www.dbstalk.com/showthread.php?p=936217#post936217 shows certain data being uplinked a week or two ago.

http://www.dbstalk.com/showpost.php?p=936417&postcount=31 suggests that 3ABN could be seen on 9710 as early as May 10. But this was apparently based on a guess, not on any official announcement from Dish.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 23 2007, 05:52 PM

hug.gif (please, please, please, please)

The thought of Linda Shelton and Barbara Kerr comming back to 3ABN to do cooking programs again.

Rosyroi

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 23 2007, 12:24 PM)
>
> Got this email from Flo Cunningham/3ABN today:
>
> Check Dish Network and/or Sky Angel channel #9710 and let me know if you can now bring in 3ABN.
>
> Time for us to write all those letters about how much we miss Linda and Barbara Kerr's cooking progs.

Posted by: gardener May 23 2007, 07:04 PM

Yes, it is on Dish 9710. Don't know about Skyangel.

Posted by: FineArt May 23 2007, 07:32 PM

Yes it is on. I was just watching it. It is on the station right after SAFE. They are beginning the "Spring Campmeeting". I just tuned in while the beg o thon was going on and Danny and Walt are going over the 3ABN board they are so proud of that has been with them for over 20 years. then we have apologies for being just sinners like moses and David but that God could use them in spite of themselves....if not then they would not be blessed and be gone. Satan was attacking them for he was angry because they were spreading the undiluted truth that "counterfiets the counter feit" [whatever] and on and on. and on .....Melody came on to sing and i turned it off. There is going to be camp meeting i guess through the week end.

I remember a year ago or so when Danny had his whole family on and it was a musical. sining the old favorites and family favorites....Danny introduced the members one by one and when he came to one of his brothers, D said "this is the quiet one, he never speaks up...." After the intoduction, the brother said, "how can anyone speak...your always talking." I think of that everytime he has the mike and that is what was going on.

The room was full where the cameras were focused. I pray God will Bless.

Posted by: Noahswife May 23 2007, 08:08 PM

Yep confirming here my parents report getting it on skyangel and happy campers they are.

Suggested they let me know if they saw Brandy around.

Posted by: mozart May 23 2007, 08:13 PM

yes it's on. i checked before i started this thread. we have skyangel and moses said it would come in on either dish or skyangel receivers.

> QUOTE(gardener @ May 23 2007, 07:04 PM)
>
> Yes, it is on Dish 9710. Don't know about Skyangel.

Posted by: maggiecttr May 23 2007, 08:33 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 23 2007, 10:08 PM)
>
> Suggested they let me know if they saw Brandy around.

I have been wondering that myself....WHERE IS BRANDY? I noticed several weeks ago that hers was the voice reading verses of scripture during a "bumper" (between-programs) moment. After that, nada. Anyone know what's up?

Blessings,
maggie c.

Posted by: beartrap May 23 2007, 09:21 PM

I assume that Brandy will be in town for campmeeting as her daughter was visiting my kids last night in T'ville where they all go to school together every day.

Posted by: IMM May 24 2007, 10:02 AM

A relative just called to tell me that 3ABN is back on their SkyAngel dish on 9710.

Posted by: summertime May 26 2007, 09:00 AM

> QUOTE(IMM @ May 24 2007, 11:02 AM)
>
> A relative just called to tell me that 3ABN is back on their SkyAngel dish on 9710.

From the beginning, when Sky Angel first dropped eABN, I seem to remember that Sky Angel had said that 3ABN might be granted space for 'special events'. Is Spring Campmeeting a special event? Will 3ABN stay on 9710 after Campmeeting or will that spot be saved for other people's special events? I am waiting to see what happens in the future. How can we get confirmation from Sky Angel for the future of 3ABN being regularly on 9710?

Posted by: Noahswife May 26 2007, 09:32 AM

> QUOTE(summertime @ May 26 2007, 10:00 AM)
>
> From the beginning, when Sky Angel first dropped eABN, I seem to remember that Sky Angel had said that 3ABN might be granted space for 'special events'. Is Spring Campmeeting a special event? Will 3ABN stay on 9710 after Campmeeting or will that spot be saved for other people's special events? I am waiting to see what happens in the future. How can we get confirmation from Sky Angel for the future of 3ABN being regularly on 9710?

Summertime,

I think that is an excellent question and one I too have been wondering about. I just got back from my parent's home and they are glued to the tv rather than attending sabbath services at their local church.

Has anyone listened or taped all the campmeeting programing? One would think that DS or someone would be making this a major announcement if they were back for good rather than for just this special event. Would that not be a reason for asking for more $$$$? (My parents are so thankful I am sure they like many will be opening up their limited checkbooks this weekend.) Or to show how God is using DS and 3abn to reach so many despite all the trials Satan has put Danny and 3abn through recently as the result of all those terrible, lying, rumoring people on the internet?

BTW, I did see Brandy was there last night so those close to 3abn don't seem to have their facts always straight either. Imagine the rumors that might or could have caused.

nw
C"i"

Posted by: Fran May 26 2007, 11:23 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 26 2007, 10:32 AM)

> Summertime,
>
> I think that is an excellent question and one I too have been wondering about. I just got back from my parent's home and they are glued to the TV rather than attending sabbath services at their local church.
>
> Has anyone listened or taped all the campmeeting programing? One would think that DS or someone would be making this a major announcement if they were back for good rather than for just this special event. Would that not be a reason for asking for more $$$$? (My parents are so thankful I am sure they like many will be opening up their limited checkbooks this weekend.) Or to show how God is using DS and 3abn to reach so many despite all the trials Satan has put Danny and 3abn through recently as the result of all those terrible, lying, rumoring people on the Internet?
>
> BTW, I did see Brandy was there last night so those close to 3abn don't seem to have their facts always straight either. Imagine the rumors that might or could have caused.
>
> nw
> C"i"

They are on. Ultra Conservative. The make up artist has used a putty knife to scrape make up off of the women, even Mollie, Melody & Tammy!. I did not recognize Mollie! I did recognize her voice. She said she had been throwing up, but hadn't thrown up today! Then in the middle of her Sabbath School lesson, she put her hand over her mouth. I closed my eyes not knowing what would happen, but she continued to talk. Was I glad! I hope she is OK by now. There is NOTHING worse than throwing up! It takes everything out of me. She has my sympathy.

How long has Mollie worked for 3ABN? She said she became a Seventh-day Adventist only in 1999.

Programming has changed. I see some good improvements. Most of the changes have been good. Not enough to make me change my mind and send money though.

The message I am receiving, in my thoughts only, is that they are saved by grace and are repentant and forgiven.

They had a new (to me) marriage counselors. They talked about marital intimacy. Lusting in your heart is grounds for your spouse to divorce you! Hum...

They all were very clear that they are Seventh-day Adventists. There are definite changes over the past month or so. They are still really proud of what "they" have done.

Over all I see some positive things going on if they are real and lasting. I still believe management needs to see a permanent change and not just temporary.

Posted by: t999 May 26 2007, 11:47 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 26 2007, 10:32 AM)
>
> Summertime,
>
> I think that is an excellent question and one I too have been wondering about. I just got back from my parent's home and they are glued to the tv rather than attending sabbath services at their local church.
>
> Has anyone listened or taped all the campmeeting programing? One would think that DS or someone would be making this a major announcement if they were back for good rather than for just this special event. Would that not be a reason for asking for more $$$$? (My parents are so thankful I am sure they like many > will be opening up their limited checkbooks this weekend.) Or to show how God is using DS and 3abn to reach so many despite all the trials Satan has put Danny and 3abn through recently as the result of all those terrible, lying, rumoring people on the internet?

>
> BTW, I did see Brandy was there last night so those close to 3abn don't seem to have their facts always straight either. Imagine the rumors that might or could have caused.
>
> nw
> C"i"

Posted by: Rosyroi May 26 2007, 01:57 PM

welc t999 to BlackSDA forum. Hoping to hear your thoughts soon. Have a wonderful Sabbath.

Rosyroi

Posted by: Fran May 26 2007, 09:09 PM

I guess I spoke too soon! Tonight I was watching and the makeup is back on. Tammy still had a clean face though.

The music was good. Tammy sang her husbands favorite song. It was about an old man that was longing for home. It was a touching song. It made me homesick for heaven. It was a moving song.

Jennifer sang "I bowed on my knees and cried Holy." One of my old time favorites. When I first heard the song, I decided I had to have that song! I looked for it in every hymnal I could find. I searched for years and never let it leave my mind.

Years later, one Sabbath, we were listening to an Adventist station on the radio. Someone sang that song. Over 29 years had passed. I grabbed the phone and called them to find out the proper name. I had been looking for "I want to see Jesus!" That was my hearts desire so many years ago and still desires today, after so many years.

Jennifer sang it so well! Thank you Jennifer!

The other ladies name could be Patty/i La Forge. I am not sure of the correct name or spelling, but when she and a gentleman sang "I've Just Seen Jesus, I Tell You He's Alive" new hope filled my heart. Sometimes life gets in the way and I forget that Jesus IS alive!

John Lomacang came out to sing after that, and I felt sorry for him. That song was such a sermon! Years ago John Lomacang sang with a young lady and they sang "He's more Wonderful" and it was and is a powerful song. Another couple of the Heritage Singers also sang that song. It is a very powerful song.

I have pictures of John with the Heritage Singers from way back when! They came to town, and by default, we were forced to go for the kids! My oldest daughter was in "Love" with him! They even have autographs by him and Becky Trueblood. I have been to many concerts! We have lived everywhere and have had many occasions to hear and see them sing.

Once we went to a Spanish gathering in New Jersey. We heard them sing and then we heard a Spanish sermon about Samson. There was a translator for all us that were English speaking, but Spanish challenged! The preacher was speaking very frankly and the translator couldn't say what the fellow said. He was very embarrassed. The speaker stopped and asked why he was so tongue tied and said what he had said in English. Laughter rang out all over! It was a sexual comment. +It was so funny! I am not sure if John was there or not. Will have to look at my pics.

I did receive an spiritual blessing from many today, but I have to say, the change is probably not long lasting. Did the make up go off for the conservative believers to have a revived new heart in their wallets for 3ABN? I do hope I am wrong.

Posted by: mozart May 26 2007, 10:20 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 26 2007, 10:23 AM)
>
> How long has Mollie worked for 3ABN? If i am not mistaken, mollie has been there practically since the beginning. i think she was danny's first and only secretary until linda was forced to leave, then mollie got "a promotion".
> she was not an adventist, she was pentecostal. her husband hal was a pentacostal pastor.
> She said she became a Seventh-day Adventist only in 1999.

Posted by: steffan May 26 2007, 11:28 PM

> QUOTE(summertime @ May 26 2007, 10:00 AM)
>
> From the beginning, when Sky Angel first dropped eABN, I seem to remember that Sky Angel had said that 3ABN might be granted space for 'special events'. Is Spring Campmeeting a special event? Will 3ABN stay on 9710 after Campmeeting or will that spot be saved for other people's special events? I am waiting to see what happens in the future. How can we get confirmation from Sky Angel for the future of 3ABN being regularly on 9710?

3abn is back on, on a regular basis. Danny has announced it several times that they are on 9710 and dish network now. Dish will be a huge new audience.

No mollie hasn't been there from the beginning. She has been there between 10 and 12 years. Also her promotion had nothing to do with Linda leaving. Linda was vice president not General Manager as mollie is.

Posted by: mozart May 26 2007, 11:57 PM

ok steffan, so who was GM when Linda was there and what did they get promoted to when she left?

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 26 2007, 10:28 PM)
>
> 3abn is back on, on a regular basis. Danny has announced it several times that they are on 9710 and dish network now. Dish will be a huge new audience.
> No mollie hasn't been there from the beginning. She has been there between 10 and 12 years. Also her promotion had nothing to do with Linda leaving. Linda was vice president not General Manager as mollie is.

Posted by: summertime May 27 2007, 09:57 AM

> QUOTE(steffan @ May 26 2007, 11:28 PM)
>
> 3abn is back on, on a regular basis. Danny has announced it several times that they are on 9710 and dish network now. Dish will be a huge new audience.
> No mollie hasn't been there from the beginning. She has been there between 10 and 12 years. Also her promotion had nothing to do with Linda leaving. Linda was vice president not General Manager as mollie is.

Steffan, if you are right and they are on for good,and if the 'merger' between Amazing Facts and 3ABN comes to fruition, then I pray that the combination will mean the saving of many souls for Christ. How I feel about Danny (and others) admitting their wrongs and quit hiding behind a veil of sin has not changed, but the realization that many souls can be saved for Christ is far more important---Let Danny (and others) pay for their deceit and lying in God's time. Maybe our prayers should be that Danny and others will admit and look for forgiveness, and all of us can find our way to heaven. As for me and my house, I only want the best for Jesus. And if that means the restoration of 3ABN on Sky Angel permanently then I pray that it is true.

PS. I will still be watching the Hope Channel and Safe TV for blessings from God.

Posted by: mozart May 27 2007, 01:03 PM

I totally agree and would like to add that in "my ideal Christian" world............
ALL representatives who work at 3ABN and have maligned others should make amends with those dear souls, on the "airwaves". This includes DB since he was involved in the "love fest" on the live program where they all said how much they loved and supported one another "and always will". Is their love so conditional that it does not include linda, barbara, darrel, johann, GJ and BP?
In any situation there is wrongdoing on both sides, but the ones who put it out there on a worldwide Christian television network are the ones who should make arrangements for amends and restoration, "on air", on that network!! that would be the best thing they could do. Having an "on air" apology and forgiveness program would be the most amazing example of Christianity 3ABN has ever expressed. They don't have to get into any details or diatribes or mushy, teary hug fests. They just need to sincerely admit, "I was wrong in the way I treated you and in the conclusions I jumped to. I made a lot of mistakes and handled things badly and I apologise and ask your forgiveness." Then the other person, in turn, should say the same things. That would only take 5 or 10 min. It would please God which is invaluable and it would be do more for healing 3ABN and all of us than anything else they could do.
It would also be 1000 times better PR than all the money in the world can buy. Known sin has to be repented of. There is no way around that. If pride stands in their way, they will regret it.
Housecleaning would still need to be done, but restorations and apologies should come first.
The hearts and souls of people are much more valuable than the financial problems even tho' those need to be dealt with. Both sides need to remember they are representatives of Christ!!!!
Can any of them step up to that high of a standard?
Maybe I'm a fool for Christ, but I have hope and love for my brethren and I hate all of this.
I want to love and trust again.
I want to see Linda back on the porch and Barbara back in the kitchen.
Cynics will say "Dream On" and I will.

> QUOTE(summertime @ May 27 2007, 09:57 AM)
>
> Steffan, if you are right and they are on for good,and if the 'merger' between Amazing Facts and 3ABN comes to fruition, then I pray that the combination will mean the saving of many souls for Christ. How I feel about Danny (and others) admitting their wrongs and quit hiding behind a veil of sin has not changed, > but the realization that many souls can be saved for Christ is far more important---Let Danny (and others) pay for their deceit and lying in God's time. Maybe our prayers should be that Danny and others will admit and look for forgiveness, and all of us can find our way to heaven. As for me and my house, I only want the best for Jesus. And if that means the restoration of 3ABN on Sky Angel permanently then I pray that it is true.

Posted by: summertime May 27 2007, 05:06 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 27 2007, 02:03 PM)
>
> I totally agree and would like to add that in "my ideal Christian" world............
> ALL representatives who work at 3ABN and have maligned others should make amends with those dear souls, on the "airwaves". This includes DB since he was involved in the "love fest" on the live program where they all said how much they loved and supported one another "and always will". Is their love so conditional that it does not include linda, barbara, darrel, johann, GJ and BP?
> In any situation there is wrongdoing on both sides, but the ones who put it out there on a worldwide Christian television network are the ones who should make arrangements for amends and restoration, "on air", on that network!! that would be the best thing they could do. Having an "on air" apology and forgiveness program would be the most amazing example of Christianity 3ABN has ever expressed. They don't have to get into any details or diatribes or mushy, teary hug fests. They just need to sincerely admit, "I was wrong in the way I treated you and in the conclusions I jumped to. I made a lot of mistakes and handled things badly and I apologise and ask your forgiveness." Then the other person, in turn, should say the same things. That would only take 5 or 10 min. It would please God which is invaluable and it would be do more for healing 3ABN and all of us than anything else they could do.
> It would also be 1000 times better PR than all the money in the world can buy. Known sin has to be repented of. There is no way around that. If pride stands in their way, they will regret it.
> Housecleaning would still need to be done, but restorations and apologies should come first.
> The hearts and souls of people are much more valuable than the financial problems even tho' those need to be dealt with. Both sides need to remember they are representatives of Christ!!!!
> Can any of them step up to that high of a standard?
> Maybe I'm a fool for Christ, but I have hope and love for my brethren and I hate all of this.
> I want to love and trust again.
> I want to see Linda back on the porch and Barbara back in the kitchen.
> Cynics will say "Dream On" and I will.

ozart, I agree with you 100 percent. However, until that time comes, this panel should stand firm for ecognizing the wrongs that have never been made right. But until then, I will pray for the work to go orward. However that may be--- even though my choice is never to watch anything that is produced at or by ABN, if it is the Lord's will that it be back on Sky Angel, then I hope that the name and face of Christ will be isible to those who do watch it. Danny's life does not portray the life of a Christian but if those who do watch an look past that and learn the truth from the honest people who do speak on 3ABN,--then I think that God's ame can still be honored. 'summertime'

Posted by: FineArt May 27 2007, 07:52 PM

---We so very often get in the way of God. Man has his own ways and inspired council is laid aside,
I wanted to post the " 5 minute miracle" but didn't want to take it out of context...the following is so true,
I need my heart softened. I need to remember this quote , over and over again....so many times.
Patience is not my long suit.

Supplement to the Christian Experience and Views - of Ellen G. White------PG- 39,40

I saw that the remnant were not prepared for what is coming upon the earth. Stupidity, like the lethargy, seemed to hang upon the minds of most of those who profess to believe that we are having the last message. My accompanying angel cried out with awful solemnity, "Get ready! get ready! get ready! for the fierce anger of the Lord is soon to come. His wrath is to be poured out unmixed with mercy, and ye are not ready. Rend the heart, and not the garment. A great work must be done for the remnant. They are, many of them, dwelling upon little trials." Said the angel, "Legions of evil angels are around you, and are trying to press in their awful darkness, that ye may be ensnared and taken. Ye suffer your mind to be diverted too readily from the work of preparation, and the all-important truths for these last days. And ye dwell upon little trials, and go into minute particulars of little difficulties to explain them to the satisfaction of this one or that." Conversation has been protracted for hours between the parties concerned, and not only has their time been wasted, but the servants of God are held to listen to them, when the hearts of both parties are unsubdued by grace. If pride and selfishness were laid aside, five minutes would remove most difficulties. Hours have been spent in justifying self, which has grieved angels, and displeased God. I saw that God will not wait and bow down and listen to long justifications, and he did not want his servants to do so, and precious time be wasted, that should be spent in showing transgressors the error of their ways, and pulling souls out of the fire.

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Dannyscribes At Beliefnet

Posted by: Grith May 26 2007, 05:52 PM

It seems the Dannyscribes have found yet another site to post at. Some folks calling themselves "donator", "sunbeam" and "FHB") has begun posting rebuttals to various accusations made against 3ABN, some of which I have never heard of, i.e., DS pays $2000 for a shirt. [Since I haven't gotten around to reading every thread here, I suppose that one may be here some place.] You can check it out http://www.beliefnet.com/boards/message_list.asp?pageID=2&discussionID=567513&messages_per_page=4 and http://www.beliefnet.com/boards/message_list.asp?boardID=4554&discussionID=566453 Some of the long time posters here may recognize some of those posting there.

Posted by: Noahswife May 26 2007, 06:35 PM

> QUOTE(Grith @ May 26 2007, 06:52 PM)
>
> It seems the Dannyscribes have found yet another site to post at. Some folks calling themselves "donator", "sunbeam" and "FHB") has begun posting rebuttals to various accusations made against 3ABN, some of which I have never heard of, i.e., DS pays $2000 for a shirt. [Since I haven't gotten around to reading every thread here, I suppose that one may be here some place.] You can check it out http://www.beliefnet.com/boards/message_list.asp?pageID=2&discussionID=567513&messages_per_page=4 and http://www.beliefnet.com/boards/message_list.asp?boardID=4554&discussionID=566453 Some of the long time posters here may recognize some of those posting there.

Didn't someone suggest that Aletheia was a moderator there? And Sunbeam could not possibly be related to Starbright could he/she? I was sent the link a couple days ago and after reading the discussion about the $2000 shirt, I rolled my eyes and left. I recommend they be allowed to primarily talk to themselves rather than posters from BSDA going there. They don't want real dialogue although where did Steffan go? He never did answer my question about whether he would be at camp meeting. I was going to ask if he wanted to get together for lunch on Sabbath.......

Posted by: ex3ABNemployee May 26 2007, 07:50 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 26 2007, 06:35 PM)
>
> Didn't someone suggest that Aletheia was a moderator there? And Sunbeam could not possibly be related to Starbright could he/she? I was sent the link a couple days ago and after reading the discussion about the $2000 shirt, I rolled my eyes and left. I recommend they be allowed to primarily talk to themselves rather than posters from BSDA going there. They don't want real dialogue although where did Steffan go? He never did answer my question about whether he would be at camp meeting. I was going to ask if he wanted to get together for lunch on Sabbath.......

I agree. Let them amuse each other over there. It's been so much more pleasant since they left.

Posted by: Pickle May 26 2007, 10:03 PM

I have a feeling Aletheia may do all right as a moderator. Wouldn't be the first time I've seen someone who has expressed strong opinions on a forum do all right when having to fill a moderator position that requires neutrality.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 26 2007, 11:05 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 26 2007, 08:03 PM)
>
> I have a feeling Aletheia may do all right as a moderator. Wouldn't be the first time I've seen someone who has expressed strong opinions on a forum do all right when having to fill a moderator position that requires neutrality.

I thought you did quite well standing up to the critics. Per usual of course.

Rosyroi

Posted by: watchbird May 27 2007, 05:51 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ May 27 2007, 12:03 AM)
>
> I have a feeling Aletheia may do all right as a moderator. Wouldn't be the first time I've seen someone who has expressed strong opinions on a forum do all right when having to fill a moderator position that requires neutrality.

I've never yet seen a forum where a moderator was required to be neutral. ALL moderators have a position... some take a broader view than others, but ALL, including Calvin, has a place where they draw the line. And we already know where Aletheia "draws the lines".

But... I agree with others, it's nice that they have their own "playground" now.... and even if BSDA and Save3abn seldom get mentioned, the very preposterousness of their defensive statements will arouse curiosity in some... and when they go looking they will find these forums.

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ The Televangelist

Posted by: sister Jul 7 2006, 03:44 PM

Since I have alluded to "The Televangelist" in a number of my threads, quoted portions of it in some of my posts and it has also been referred to by others; I am now posting it in it's entirety and without comment. It is an interesting read...

Sister

"The Televangelist"
By: Jorgen VanBraun
Copyright 2005

"The characters and events portray in the following story are fictional. Any resemblance to any real event or person, living or dead, is coincidental."

* * * * *

Introduction

Since the dawn of recorded history megalomaniacal men have identified and fostered the deepest communal fears of their fellow beings, presenting themselves as the one true answer to salvation. These men utilize certain tools that they all have in common to achieve and maintain control over, and the worship of their followers.

They identify their followers as a group, or a family that shares specific beliefs and practices that set them apart as unique. Those factors that are the primary differences between them and others make them superior. Often, the leader purports to have a direct connection to the culture's primary deity that is denied to all others. His words and actions carry the weight of divinity. Mistrust between the followers is encouraged. Questioning of the supreme leader is dealt with in the harshest manner available.

Those people who are not members of the group are portrayed as a threat to the group and to the individuals. Non-members are on the wrong side of the cosmic struggle between good and bad. What they say, what they write, everything about them must be viewed as an attempt to subvert, misdirect, and deceive the true believers. They are to look with suspicion on everyone other than their leader.

Whereas outsiders might taint the purity of the follower's beliefs, the leaders often work to build an isolated society where those aspects of life that might result in interaction with unbelievers are internalized. This sometimes involves conquest of territory, and generally results in the creation of boundaries. The leaders portray these boundaries as being there to keep evil out, but they are most often used to keep the believers in.

Control of, and involvement in the personal lives of the followers is common between these megalomaniacs. Monitoring and control of what they do and say is important. It is also important to make examples of those who disobey. It tends to bring the believers closer together, and promote fear in those who might think with some measure of independence.

Love and fear often walk hand in hand. The leader is projected as a benevolent father who has placed himself in a position of great personal sacrifice for the good of his followers. He is loved and revered as a true father to his people. Sometimes a father has to punish his children, but it will always be done in love and with deep regret. He must protect his family from the ravenous wolves circling those whom he loves, and from the insidious turncoats who lurk within.

Any criticism of the leader is portrayed as a broader attack on the group. It becomes the first wave of an apocalyptic devastation of the very fundamentals that make them who they are, in the minds of the believers.
Until a dramatic action takes place, the general public does not view most of these leaders as any serious threat. Emperor Napoleon of France brought much needed freedoms to the populace and, had the support of much of Europe until he brought it to its knees.

Adolph Hitler turned the failed German economy around and provided millions of jobs. He built a well disciplined society out of the anarchy resulting from World War One and the fall of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. As their savior, Hitler had the full support of the German people, and much of the world until his war of conquest became global, and his true intention shone through. His actions, both good and bad, were taken with the best intentions. He firmly believed that a global Third Reich was the only salvation of the world, yet the world he was trying to save turned on him with a vengeance. In the end, he felt that he had done no wrong.

Pol Pot closed the borders of Cambodia and launched an internal bloodbath almost unequaled in history. Using the "loving father who is cleansing and protecting his children" psychology, he decimated the population of his country. He believed that he was saving the true Cambodia by getting rid of all foreign influence, and eliminating those people who showed any sign of being tainted. He did not consider himself a monster, he was a savior.

Jim Jones was active in local and national politics and had the support of the governor of California, the Mayor of San Francisco, and even President Jimmy Carter. He was revered as a great humanitarian who stuck up for the rights of the underprivileged and campaigned tirelessly for those politicians who supported him. He believed that God was working through him for the salvation of humanity. Then, for their own good, he killed close to one thousand people in a single day.

The Baghwan Shree Rahjneesh built a cult in Oregon that consisted primarily of wealthy and highly educated people. He drove the leadership out of the town of Antelope walking the edge of the law, but using mostly legal means. He renamed the town Rahjneeshee Puram and created a new tightly controlled society. Thousands of people thrilled to the spiritual enlightenment he brought them, and were left destitute and homeless in his wake.

David Koresh was the heavy-handed father of the Branch Davidians. He preached an apocalyptic message in which he was the personification of God on earth. His word was indisputable. In the end, he self-fulfilled his prophecy, and his group went up in an apocalyptic blaze.

These are some of the better known examples of megalomania, and they all had a beginning and an end. They all believed in what they did, and did it with the best of intentions. Are there such characters currently rising in power? Are there well-intentioned, yet evil leaders that we are unwittingly following after?

The Televangelist Prologue:The Inquisition

A long time ago...
The accused cries out in anguish as he is being torn apart. The crowd roars its approval, and the torturer pulls the rack a little tighter. Joints pop and sinews crack, but their sound is drowned by screams of agony. The Inquisition has condemned another soul to death by torture. Some people are upset by today's spectacle, but men of God, men who God called to leadership, men through whom God communicates to the common people have declared they have evidence that this person has committed grievous acts against God and man and is thus deserving of a hideous death.

There are people high in civil and church government who question the methods, and even the veracity of the leaders of the Inquisition, but those who dare voice their questions soon find themselves shackled to a dungeon wall. No one from the lowliest serf to the Pope on his throne is safe from the tender mercies of the Inquisition.

In the beginning, the Church gave its tenuous blessing to the Inquisition and allowed its propagation. Then the Inquisition grew more powerful than the Church it was meant to support and became a menace. With no one daring to take them on, the Inquisitor's credibility with, and power over the people became absolute.

Now...
Five hundred years later, the world has moved on, and it is now the twenty-first century. Cries of anguish ring out as an accused soul is being ripped apart. The crowd roars its approval and the executioner pulls the rack a little tighter. It has been declared that there is evidence this person has committed grievous crimes against God and man. This time the rack is not a bloodstained wood structure, and the executioner doesn't wear a black hood. This time it is not the victim's body that is ripped apart; it is the soul. This time it is not the Inquisition who accuses, convicts, and executes the victim, but a televangelist. This time there is a different church.

The Televangelist Part 1:The Psychology

A young boy climbs up on a yard table behind the house. With a far way look in his eye, he holds a stick microphone to his mouth. Thousands of spectators packing the imaginary stadium are on their feet. They can't wait to hear the voice of their revered singer. Some forty-five years later, he smiles as the music comes to a close. He steps back as the audience applauds. The cameras continue to roll, sending their signal up to satellites and around the world as he steps up to the microphone and cries out, "Praise God!"

He tells the story of Moses, a lowly shepherd who went on to lead a nation because he followed God's calling. He tells how a humble carpenter (like Jesus) heard God's call and built a global television network even though he only had a high school diploma. He tells how previous to this, he was married to a wonderful singer and how they ministered in song week after week in churches across the country, and how their marriage ended in her tragic death by car accident. He tells how the television ministry started in a series of miracles that began with a minister of another faith donating thousands of dollars worth of television production equipment. He tells about the many sacrifices he and his family endure to keep this ministry going. He tells about the little old ladies who turn down their thermostats to save up more money to support this great work of God. He says, "You too can do great things for God. How? Well God asks, 'What do you have in your hand?'" The people have their pocket books in their hands.

When the meeting is over, he is whisked away to an airport where his private jet is warming up for the trip home. He strides past a well-stocked galley and settles into a leather recliner. Leaning back, he closes his eyes and smiles as his jet soars into the night sky.

Memory takes the televangelist back over the decades to the events that made the man. As a teen, he learned that people are very susceptible to quiet suggestion; that they tend to obsess. He could spot a young couple who seemed to be hopelessly in love. He would go to the boy and tell him that the girl had been seen in private places with other guys and everyone knew that she was being unfaithful. Then he went to the girl and said that her boyfriend thought she was a floozy. Almost invariably he could break them up and end up a confidant to both. This was power.

He thinks back on his first marriage. This was the foundation to his understanding of what makes people believe in, and financially support a ministry. Weekend after weekend he and his family performed music and spoke in churches across the country. He learned that by telling the people that God spoke to him and he listened and did God's bidding, he could grab the majority. He would then wrap up the fence-sitters with a couple of financial miracle stories demonstrating how he stepped out in faith and God followed through by rewarding him. He learned that by giving a story of a person who was impressed by God to give a specific amount that turned out to be exactly what was needed to keep his electricity on, or make a mortgage payment that he didn't have the money for, other people wanted to be that miracle person and many large checks would land in the offering plate. He learned that music, tears, and stories of personal anguish due to the devil's attacks dramatically increased support. He also learned to publicize any criticism of himself as criticism of God. If someone disagreed with him in any way, they were portrayed as attacking God's work. Creditors, people who had been left hanging in bad business deals, people whose marriages he had destroyed, and others were thus demonized. He learned that if he had reason to worry that someone knew too much about him, he could preempt anything that person might do by discrediting them. He could concoct a nasty story; usually sex based, and spread it around to their friends, family, church leaders, civic leaders, employers, potential employers, business associates and others. He also applied the label, "pathological liar" to them. Then, if that person ever exposed anything it was said to just be the revenge of an angry liar. Those early days were his real schooling.

The Televangelist Part 2:The Family

The televangelist enjoys reminiscing on the subject of his family. No one can say that his family is boring. Indeed, they are a very colorful group.

Many years ago the televangelist's Grandfather on his father's side suffered from paranoid schizophrenia. Thinking that his rooster had developed an attitude that would negatively affect the egg production of the chickens, he tied the rooster to a tree and beat it with a whip. A young boy was awed. On another occasion, he felt that his wife was out of line and needed to be put in her place, he stuck a fork in her head during a meal. A young boy was proud that his grandpa took charge so aggressively to defend his pride. His favorite grandchild, the one he spent the most time with and felt the closest to, would one day be the televangelist. Suffering from depression, two of his uncles committed suicide.

When his father was thirty-five years old he suffered a heart attack that resulted in serious physical debilitation. One aspect of this was an inability to function sexually. Shortly thereafter, his wife started a long-term relationship with her brother-in-law, the televangelist's uncle. Also on his father's side, an aunt took up with one of her nephews and moved to another state with him. One on his brothers, a pastor in the Church, had an affair with another brother's wife that resulted in that brother and his wife divorcing.

Another close relative has also enjoyed a little variety outside of her marriage. She has had some same-sex fun with other women, as well as a fling with a male cousin.

One of the televangelist's older brothers left the Church and went through seminary with another denomination. He became a pastor, and built a church and grade school. Within a few years accusations of child molestation began to haunt him. Several young boys from his grade school accused him of sexual abuse. The televangelist's mother begged the parents of these children to not press charges against her son. They agreed that if the pastor left the state, they wouldn't file charges and he left.

Safely in another state, the pastor took on another church. For several years his church thrived and he was considered a model pastor. Then he molested another boy. This time his mother was not there to jump to his defense, so he left that state in a hurry. He called his televangelist brother to ask for help. Given a good job offer, he moved to a location just across the state line from where the televangelist was located (the area from which he first had to flee) and went to work for his brother. He became the Director of the production facilities, and traveled the world with his brother as pianist at meetings, rallies, and other events.

The televangelist recalled the many evenings spent in strip clubs, and availing himself of the services of prostitutes during his first marriage. As he traveled to various cities producing music records for locals who fancied themselves gospel singers, he was able to enjoy the local street walkers. At home, a young girl from a related by marriage was also fair game for a little variety, as is a young girl associated with his second marriage.

The Televangelist Part 3:The Money

With a sigh of contentment, the televangelist makes his way to the galley for a bottle of apple juice and a jar of cashew nuts. Settling back into his seat, he folds a lacquered walnut table out of the wall. He opens his briefcase and takes out six thick envelopes and one packet wrapped up in aluminum foil. On his way out of this evening's meeting, a number of people came up and handed him checks. These he gave to his assistant to deal with. What he placed in his briefcase could be nothing but cash. He is not disappointed. Counting twice, he comes up with the same figure. The next day, his assistant will turn the checks over to the financial department. He asked the people who gave him this cash if they needed a receipt and they said no. He places the money back in the briefcase.

It is best that the paperwork demonstrate that the televangelist lives on a very low salary. The donors need to believe that their money is going strictly to further God's work. What they don't know won't hurt him. There are many ways other than salary for his ministry to provide for his earthly pleasures. He smiles over at his briefcase. He learned long ago that he could take large cash advances for various reasons and never return cash or receipts. Each day, when the mail comes in, certain people open it, count the donations, and send the money and the totals to his office. He goes over them and sends them on to the accounting department. The amount that arrives in accounting is often much less than the written totals... but then that could be because the people counting the money often make the mistake of counting donations that never happened.

On the televangelist's laptop computer is a half-written book. He has already written and published four.

They are all self-published and then he sells them to his ministry at a profit of twelve cents per book. His first book sold more than one million copies in just a few months. Of course as president of the ministry, he has them heavily advertised, many of them given away and the rest sold at a loss. In this manner he is able to control all aspects of the market.

The air pressure in the jet changes and the wall monitor shows that it is beginning its descent. Several years ago it was a relief that he was no longer forced to endure the inconvenience of commercial air travel, with the acquisition of a private jet. No longer does the televangelist have to go through security, and travel on a commercial schedule. He knows that the contributors, and the church that support his ministry, would not appreciate that this convenience is leased at a cost of $40,000.00 per month, so he has this expense placed in an anonymous account. In addition to the lease, the pilots cost $700.00 per day, and there are operational costs including gas and maintenance. Well, what the people don't know won't hurt him, and he truly deserves the extra conveniences. Vacations, personal visits, trips to ball games, and medical appointments no longer require a long drive. He now uses the jet for trips that would have required as little as two hours of driving.

Several years ago, a donor who had several jets of his own provided the funds to purchase a small jet. For several months the televangelist was happy with this, until shoulder rubbing with the jet set brought him to the realization that his jet was small and cheap. He flew people here and there meaning to impress them, and found that many of them had flown in much nicer private jets. His could only go one thousand miles on a tank of gas, which meant that he had to make an embarrassing fuel stop on coast-to-coast trips, and he couldn't fly trans-continental.

After a little research, the televangelist found the jet he now used

In the beginning when his ministry was still just a dream, the televangelist went to the pastor of a local church. This pastor was part of another denomination and had his church set up as a television production facility. The televangelist wanted to confer with him on how he should get started, and what kind of equipment he would need. They sat down and developed a plan whereby the pastor would say that he was donating his television equipment to the televangelist, who could then tell the members of his denomination a miracle story. He would say that a pastor of another faith had been impressed by God to donate all of his own television equipment to start this ministry. Of course the pastor kept his equipment, but the story did its job and the money started rolling in. This pastor's wife now serves as Operations Manager for the televangelist's ministry.

One of the first large donations was in the amount of $50,000.00 and the televangelist was able to use almost half of that to pay off some personal debts. This was, of course, in the best interest of the ministry because such distractions would only hold him back. Thus began a very profitable portion of his life.

As the years passed, financial directors came and went. One of them went under a dark cloud of scandal. It was discovered that he was diverting funds into his personal accounts, paying his bills with company checks, and walking away with enormous sums of money. To the surprise of those few people who knew what had happened, the televangelist chose to keep this story under wraps. The financial director was terminated, but not prosecuted. Nor was he required to pay anything back. Indeed, he was given a company vehicle as a gift.

Not long after this, The United States Postal Service discovered that a mail carrier was opening letters addressed to the ministry and taking cash donations. The televangelist went to the federal prosecutors and begged them to drop the case. He did not want it pursued.

In both of these situations, prosecution would have resulted in close scrutiny of the ministry's financial books.

The Televangelist Part 4:The Church

Arriving home, the televangelist starts thinking about his upcoming board meeting. The church that supports his ministry is made up of a World Conference, and various other levels of conferences, each falling under the other. The President of the Local Conference where his ministry is based is on his board of directors. This Conference president's parents both work for the televangelist. His personal assistant, his financial director, his chief legal advisor, and his facilities manager are all board members. Two of the board members, including the chairman, have programs that air on the television network. He has a new board member to whom he has just donated one million dollars, and appointed to head a new ethnic television network. He is comfortable that he owns the board.

Over twenty years ago the president of the World Conference asked the president of an association of lay workers for a recommendation on whether the church should support the televangelist. The recommendation came back that they should not, based on his very shady background. The church decided that they would give him their tenuous blessing in spite of the warnings.

The televangelist's TV network went up on satellite and became a regional service covering North America. His programs appealed primarily to the older, retired members of the church. These were the people who had money and were the most likely to make larger donations. They were also the people whose wills and trusts would soon come to fruition. His director of wills and trusts is very effective and takes in more money than the majority of the Church's organizations combined.

The Church started using the network to air its own events, and the televangelist's power in the Church grew. He interviewed various church leaders, highlighting their programs and projects and they grew to rely on him for promotion. He acquired key figures in the Church and gave them regular programs on the network. The Church was happy. As the televangelist's network grew to cover the entire world, so grew the Church's ability to reach the entire world through television.

Then a new president was elected to the World Conference. He believed that since the televangelist's network was essentially the face of the Church to the world, the Church should have some input into what was aired. He asked that a joint programming committee be formed, and that a certain Church Conference president be added to the board of directors. The televangelist was enraged. He immediately started calling various people saying that this World Conference president had put out a hit on his life. He said that unmarked black helicopters were hovering over his house performing surveillance. Stories were concocted and quickly spread regarding anyone who agreed with the Church's new position. Donations to the televangelist spiked. How dare anyone persecute the beloved leader? The World Conference president and many of his administration were politically ruined.

When the time came to vote for a new church administration, the televangelist called in favors, made threats, and laid out bribes. The results were pleasing. The new World Conference president and many of his administration made numerous "love fest" appearances on TV with the televangelist. They told him how much they appreciated him and his enormous contribution to the Church.

Everyone was terrified of the televangelist. They knew that with his global television platform he could, and would, destroy anyone who dared disagree with him in any way. The Church decided to launch its own television networks. As they came within one year of launch, the televangelist worked tirelessly to block them from their own churches. He fabricated ugly stories about them, and said that they were nothing but a mimic trying to reinvent the wheel. He was genuinely concerned about them.

When some of the televangelist's employees left and applied for employment with the Church's network, he contacted his attorney (who also did some work with the Church), the people he owned in the World Conference, and other influential personalities, and spread terrible stories about these employees trying to keep them from working for the Church. He called one of these employees who disagreed with him on a fundamental matter and said, "I know that you are trying to get work with the Church, and I won't let that happen because it will make you look right, and me look wrong."

One of the Church's most prominent evangelists said of the televangelist, "His network is the face of the Church to millions of people, and he is the face of his network."

The Televangelist Part 5:The Compound

The televangelist has a difficult time going to sleep. He is considering how best to utilize a recently acquired piece of property. His ministry now owns two-hundred acres of land. Many years ago he found that more power over his employees could be achieved through consolidating the various aspects of their personal lives and placing them under company control and observation.

At one time, the televangelist and most of his employees attended a local church about ten miles from his ministry headquarters. A problem developed. The pastor knew him too well, and many of the members were local people and family members who also knew too much about him. It occurred to him that if he had his own church, he could control all facets of it. He purchased an empty church building and asked his employees to attend there. Of course it wasn't mandatory, however...

The televangelist appointed the head of his pastoral department as pastor. He carefully handpicked the church board, the elders, and the various other positions, making sure that he was head elder and had a seat on the board. His presence at the meetings was all that was needed to keep control of the church's operation. After all, the entire leadership consisted of his employees.

Now his church needed the legitimacy of affiliation with the denomination. Pressure was applied in the right places and the televangelist's church was made an official church under the denomination's Local Conference. As the years went by, the televangelist had a new church building constructed on his ministry's property. A new pastor was acquired. One who as a singer, had music CDs to sell and appreciated the platform that a worldwide television network gave him. The ministry paid half of his salary, and the Church's Local Conference paid the other half. An associate pastor was hired, and the ministry paid all of his salary.

Now it was time to expand. Many of the televangelist's employees had children and he had grandchildren. A school building was constructed on ministry property. Staff and board members were once again hand selected. The school was placed under the denomination's church school curriculum to give it legitimacy. If a family was a member of the compound church, their children's tuition was free.

Staff housing was built on the ministry compound, and retirees was encouraged to have their own houses constructed on ministry property where they could stay until their death, one requirement being that they provide room and board for ministry guests.

The televangelist now owned the personal lives of his employees: church, school and housing. When church members went to their pastor regarding personal problems, the televangelist was informed. In school, the children were strongly indoctrinated in the idea that the televangelist was the supreme leader of Christianity under God among humanity. When marriages broke up, the televangelist decided who was right, and who was wrong based on how supportive each party was to himself and how useful his decision might be to future support. As personnel resigned and moved on, he decided what would go on their membership record as it was transferred to another church. He learned that knowledge is power. Everyone, from the lowliest employee to the World Conference president can be blackmailed or destroyed. If there are no skeletons in the closet, skeletons can be fabricated. The concept of "divide and conquer" was paramount to his power. Discredit those who might be a threat, and the threat goes away. Make people believe that the only person they can really trust is him, and all threats disappear.

Everyone wants to be a star and many of the performer types would like to produce a CD, but the cost is beyond the average person's budget. The televangelist has built a music production facility. From time to time he offers the incentive of having a free CD produced. For most, he dangles the prospect of a CD, like the proverbial carrot, and retains their loyalty. Close family members and friends are given "love gifts" of money, automobiles, and other things.

The televangelist smiles at the thought of how gullible people can be. Many new employees arrive with stars in their eyes. They are awed to be standing on holy ground. They look around and see the people who they see on TV. They are led into the studios where they see the sets for the various programs. Invariably they walk slowly up to the chair that the televangelist sits in during his talk show, and reverently touch it. It is almost like a dream that they are actually here, and this is where they will be working for God. A secretary comes out and says, "The boss would like to see you in his office." Their knees weaken. They are about to meet the televangelist face-to-face.

Walking down a blue-carpeted hallway, a new employee is led to a large oak door. The secretary lightly knocks and opens the door on an airy oak-paneled office. From behind a pile of paperwork, the televangelist glances over his reading glasses toward the door. His face lights up in a warm, welcoming smile. He nods a brief dismissal to the secretary and his new employee is now alone with God's messenger for the last days. He graciously asks the new employee to have seat on an overstuffed couch, and starts asking about this person's life. He invites the employee to eat lunch with him at a local restaurant. Over the meal, and for another thirty minutes, the televangelist asks brief questions and listens to the new employee.

Back in his office, the televangelist goes in for what will become his insurance on this employee's fidelity. He has asked the right questions, and listened carefully to everything that was said. He has deduced certain things about the employee's life from the conversation. Now he says, "God has just shown me some things about you." He gives a few generalities regarding some personal weaknesses. "The Holy Spirit is telling me that there are some problems... some secrets that you need to tell me about. You know that I already know what they are, but God is telling me that you need to confess them." Leaning forward, he takes the employee's hands in his own and continues, "What we talk about will stay between us and God." Tears slide down his cheeks as he prays that God's Spirit will fill this new employee with repentance, forgiveness and peace. Dark personal secrets are spilled. Dusty old skeletons rattle as they fall out of their closets. Painful memories are relived. A prayer of thanksgiving is intoned, tears are shed, and the meeting is adjourned.

Information gleaned from friends, relatives, co-workers, former employers, enemies, emails that are being monitored, church, and other sources is added to the file for future use.

This story has played out time and again, its conclusion being that when employees leave, they are told that if they say anything that would be detrimental to the televangelist or his ministry, their testimony will be discredited with the personal knowledge that the televangelist holds over them. The televangelist tells them, "I will be forced to protect God's ministry by revealing to the world your history and what kind of a character you are."

The employee leaves and starts contacting potential employers only to find that the televangelist has already been there warning them not to consider this person. Over the next few weekends the former employee continues going to church, but finds a cold shoulder. When approached, people who were close friends look nervously around and hurry away. The televangelist or his assistant informs these friends, associates, even family members outside the ministry that the former employee is a disgruntled pathological liar. He tells them that it would be best for them if they cut off all communication with this person.

Divide and conquer. The televangelist contacts the former employee and says, "Your friends have been coming to me and telling me everything that you say to them. They tell me that they are disappointed in you and the only reason any of them still speak with you is that they hope to bring you back to the Lord, and they want to keep me informed about what you are doing and saying. I also spoke with your family and they sympathized with me, and said that they are also very disappointed in you." Now the former employee doesn't know whom to trust.

Another method of dealing with an employee who needs to leave is demotion followed by tightened observation and heavy restrictions. Potential employers are contacted and told that this employee has performed badly, exhibited a poor attitude, and has personal problems that have resulted in demotion and possible termination. Following demotion, the employee starts contacting potential employers and finds that the doors are all closed.

The Televangelist Part 6:The Victims

The televangelist gets up and goes to his computer. The monitor casts a bluish glow on the face of the man who just switched on its power. The reflection in the monitor reveals a middle aged face peering intently over a pair of reading glasses. Opening up his email, the televangelist reads an email accusing him of wrong-doing. Baffled, he goes over it again. He leans back, his brow furrowed in concentration. What makes people think they have any moral standing to say that he has done any wrong? God called him to start this worldwide ministry, not them. Millions of people around the globe are blessed by him, not them. Many people have come into the Church through him, not them. Look how successful he is, as opposed to them. To thousands of people, he is God's vicar on earth, not them.

He writes back to his accuser explaining all of these things to her. He tells her that his conscience is pure; he does no wrong. He tells her that when he stands before God in judgment, it will be clear that everything he has done has a higher purpose. If others have suffered, they deserved it. If they were foolish enough to cross him, they were crossing God and it was inevitable that they should pay a steep price. If their suffering serves to advance or please him, they should be grateful for the privilege. Sometimes people must be sacrificed for the greater good of the greater person chosen by God for the greater cause.

The First Wife

In his late teens, the future televangelist married an older woman with several daughters from a previous marriage. Possessed with the idea that gospel music was his ticket to fame and power, he heard her sing in a church and was entranced with the possibilities that this beautiful voice presented. They were married and soon had a daughter. Within a few years, it became clear to the wife that her function was singer, cook, and housekeeper. Her husband frequented prostitutes and strip clubs. He also engaged in affairs with a variety of married women.

Her husband was a master of emotional abuse. If he hit her, she could show bruises, but how could she demonstrate to anyone the abuse that she suffered from this man? It was time to try getting out of this mess. She started planning her departure. She and her daughters would find a place to live and move out. It would be very difficult as her husband did not allow her access to money, but she could not stay. Then tragedy struck.

One day the wife and her youngest daughter were out for a drive when their vehicle was broadsided by another car. The wife was killed, and the young girl was thrown out of the vehicle and suffered a broken arm. Within a couple of weeks, the televangelist had his daughter on church stages singing. He told about the recent accident, pointing out her cast, and the money rolled in like never before.

The Bosses

Following a string of business failures that resulted in bankruptcy, the televangelist took his first wife and children to another state. He went to work for a building supply company owned by two men who had been in partnership for many years. Immediately he began planting the seeds of dissent in them. He hinted to each that the other was swindling money. As they grew to distrust each other he fostered this division with continued lies, misleading comments, and doctoring of documentation.

As his plan to split up the partnership progressed, he started an affair with the wife of one of the partners. Finally, with the partnership being dissolved, a marriage on the rocks and the business in disarray, the future televangelist left the state and moved back to his hometown. Upon his departure, the partners found that the televangelist had absconded with the supplies from their company to build a speculation house, sold it, and never paid them.

The Family

In starting the ministry, the televangelist brought several family members into the business. These included his mother, his sister, and a brother. His brother was appointed to the position of Vice President. Once the ministry was on its feet and going, the televangelist's brother and sister launched a television program that they co-hosted. This program's popularity quickly grew. Seeing that his own popularity was dropping, the televangelist took drastic measures to resolve the situation. He fired his brother, and in anger, his sister and mother resigned.

Now came the isolation part. The televangelist wasted no time in spreading rumors and calling his brother, mother, and sister pathological liars. The employees were forbidden from having any contact with them. Everyone was closely watched and people who showed any sympathy for the departed family members, or expressed concern for how they had been treated was dealt with in the harshest manner.

About this time, the televangelist contacted a cousin with whom he had been quite close over the years. This cousin and his wife were operating two very successful businesses that they had built from scratch. He told the cousin some miracle stories, explained how God was using this ministry to reach the world, and told him that he was needed to be second in command. The cousin and his wife discussed it and decided that God's work was the most important thing. They divested themselves of their businesses, moved to the location of the ministry, bought a house, and started work. Within a short time, the cousin discovered that he had been duped. He saw financial mismanagement on a gross level, illegal activities, abuse of the employees, and much more. He confronted the televangelist with this wrongdoing and was told, "God called me, not you. That is why I am sitting here, and you are on that side of the desk." He was told to repent and submit.

Several days a week, the cousin was attending an afternoon class at a local college. The televangelist had him taking this course for work. Now the televangelist called the cousin's wife and told her that her husband was disappearing from work for hours at a time and no one knew where he was. He suggested that the cousin might be having an affair and asked her not to say anything. He would find out what was going on and protect her. As soon as her husband got home from work, she told him what the televangelist had said. They called and confronted him with his lies. He said that he simply didn't remember that the cousin was taking classes.

Finally, given the ultimatum, quit or be fired, he resigned. Meanwhile, the televangelist began a vicious smear campaign against him. The family was further split by what was said. The televangelist said, "If you want proof that I am right and he is wrong, just look at the fact that I am still here and he is gone. God is blessing me, not him."

The Lady and the Sanctuary

The years went by, and countless lives were broken and destroyed; sacrificed on the alter of the televangelist's ministry. One day an elderly lady contacted the ministry. She had worked diligently to get the televangelist's TV network carried on the local cable companies, and now she had another idea. She wanted the ministry to have a small model of the Old Testament sanctuary.

After several months of trying, she was allowed to speak with the televangelist himself. She was awed to be conversing with this representative of God. She told him her idea and said that she would provide the finances to make it happen. Prior to taking her call, the televangelist asked a few questions and found that her husband was a very wealthy retired physician. Now he told her that God was impressing him that instead of a miniature model, they were to build a full scale replica of the sanctuary that would be used as a museum, and include a theatre. He assured her that God had spoken to her.

Now the televangelist showed her a piece of property that was across the street from his ministry headquarters and told her that this was the place where God wanted his sanctuary. This was an eighty-acre tract of land that was already for sale. She wrote him a check for the amount of the property and what he estimated it would cost to construct the museum.

Construction of the facility began and then was halted. Funds were diverted to build a school with a large gymnasium adjacent to the museum. A large pond was excavated, a road was built, and apartments were constructed. The museum building sat there, an empty shell.
Several years later, the televangelist decided to redirect plans for the sanctuary building and turn it into a large auditorium and church. The local school district had successfully sued for the ministry to pay property taxes. The court decided that as they were not a church, taxes must be paid.

The elderly lady called repeatedly, but the televangelist would not take, or return her calls. She finally spoke with someone else in the ministry and told her story. She had planned on spending several thousand dollars for a sanctuary model until the televangelist convinced her that God wanted her to fund the much larger project. The check that she wrote to the televangelist was their life savings. Now she was destitute. Her husband got a divorce, and her children scorned her. From time to time they called and told her that all of this was for nothing. A master con artist had swindled her. Where was the sanctuary museum he had promised? Hadn't God told the televangelist to build it? Hadn't God told him that she was to fund it?

Sometimes people must be sacrificed for the greater good of the greater person, and they should feel privileged to suffer thus.

The Wife

After his first wife died, the televangelist married a recently divorced young lady with two children: a girl and a boy. His new wife served as executive vice president of the ministry, and was in charge of production, programming, publishing, and radio. As her children grew into their teens, her son developed problems with violence and drugs. The televangelist told her that this was her son, not his. He said that he did not want the boy in his house, and that this situation would have to be dealt with by her alone. He would have nothing to do with the boy.

The child's situation worsened until a foreign doctor visited the ministry and said that he would be willing to take the boy back to his country and put him in rehab. The televangelist's wife took a friend of hers and went to visit her son in this overseas rehab for three days. While there, she was also with a very good friend who was retired from a lifetime of work in the Church. The gentleman had served as a pastor and conference official in many parts of the world for fifty years and was now working with the televangelist's ministry. His wife was suffering from cancer, and was undergoing treatment from the same physician who was treating the boy.

Upon returning home, the televangelist's wife walked into a nasty surprise. Her husband greeted her with an accusation of adultery with the doctor. He demanded that she cease all communication with him. Outraged, she at first ignored him. The situation escalated.

Her best friend, who was temporarily staying in one of the ministry's apartments, called the compound church's head pastor one night and told him that her room was infested with demons. She said that these demons had removed her garment bag from the closet and thrown it to the floor, creating a tear in the fabric. The televangelist was summoned and they performed an exorcism. In the process, the televangelist told her that this case of demonic activity was the result of his wife's philandering ways.

Early the next morning, unaware of the night's activities, the televangelist's wife was awakened and ordered down to the living room. There she found her best friend and the pastor. Her friend burst into tears and cried "Please, for your own salvation you have to confess!" They pressed her for several hours. The televangelist told her that if she did not submit and confess, her marriage was over, and her days in ministry were at an end. She protested that there were witnesses, including the friend who was present, that she could not have had an affair with this doctor. She had never been alone with him.

The televangelist suspended his wife, and she was forbidden from going to her office without supervision. Her computer was confiscated and searched for incriminating evidence. Monitoring and tracking devices were placed in her car and in the house. She was placed under constant surveillance. Her friends and closest followers at the ministry turned their backs on her, refusing to even speak with her. The employees were forbidden from speaking about this subject on pain of immediate termination. Day after day the televangelist came home and told his wife of the many church leaders, pastors, and other people he had called and told that she was in an adulterous affair. Night after night he was in her face for hours at a time, interrogating; demanding that she submit and confess. Night after night he was at her former best friend's apartment for hours at a time. Day after day he was on the telephone with this woman for hours at a time.

On the phone and by email the televangelist was telling everyone that he had ironclad proof of his wife's adultery. In fact he had none. All he had was evidence that she had spoken with him on the telephone. As the demands for evidence became stronger, he was forced to change his accusation from adultery to spiritual adultery. One person asked, "Spiritual adultery? What is that? Does this mean that she is having sexual relations with spirits?" The ministry was deluged with telephone calls, emails, and letters offering the televangelist their sympathies as he continued spreading the word. Several employees asked why the televangelist was pushing so hard to publicize the problem. They were placed under surveillance.

Finally, after several months of this, the televangelist's wife moved into a mobile home in a local trailer park. There she lived with her daughter. Night and day her home was watched. Vehicles parked outside and kept open surveillance over her. Early one morning, the phone rang, and it was her husband asking if he could come in and use her restroom. He was very tired from a long night of watching.

The televangelist's board of directors met on the weekend that his ministry held a large campmeeting event in his auditorium. On the first night of this campmeeting, the foreign doctor and the retired pastor who had been with the televangelist's wife when she visited her son in rehab were there. They planned on being available to answer questions of the board when they met. When these two men walked into the auditorium, a security team immediately surrounded them. The televangelist stood at the podium and said to the world, "There are devils right here in this room." He pointed to the two men. "They are the reason my wife is not here tonight." Tears ran down his cheeks. "They have cost her this ministry."

The televangelist choreographs singing and tears. He tells the audience that despite this terrible loss, his heart is entirely devoted to ministry. He is devastated, yet focused on the vision that God gave him. This campmeeting will bring in more money than any other in the ministry's history. The financial success of this event will prompt the televangelist to hold another campmeeting a few months later, attempting to ride the wave of emotional giving before it dries up.

After the meeting was over, the security team proceeded to escort the two visitors off the premises. A ministry attorney told them that if they set foot on the televangelist's property again, they would be arrested. The televangelist was a close friend and neighbor of the local sheriff, and phone calls had been made. The men said that they had traveled over six thousand miles to speak with the board and defend the televangelist's wife. They were told that this would not be possible, as they would not be allowed on the property.

The Church's foremost evangelist, who was speaking at this campmeeting, asked the doctor if they could speak. The pastor of the compound church grabbed the evangelist's arm and said, "That would not be a good idea. You should not speak with this doctor alone."

Next day, the board met. The televangelist's wife and anyone who might defend her were not allowed to be present. She was summarily fired.

Several days later, she contacted a ministry employee, and asked him to help her move some furniture from her husband's home to the mobile where she now lived. Without hesitation, he volunteered. Two days later he was fired. After forwarding an email to about fifteen people from the televangelist's wife that simply stated that there were some untrue rumors going around about her, he received a letter from the televangelist's attorney threatening civil litigation.

The Chairman of the televangelist's board, and the Church's foremost evangelist both said that the wife's guilt or innocence was no longer relevant. The network was the face of the Church to much of the world, and the televangelist was the face of the network. For the greater good of the Church, she needed to submit to the televangelist and sacrifice herself. Her reputation and her life had to be secondary to the televangelist's desires. Why couldn't she see this?

The wife moved to another town several hours away. She found a house and settled in with her daughter. Within a short time, her husband had established surveillance on her new home.

The televangelist filed for a "No Fault" divorce from a foreign country, and as soon as it was finalized, he put out the news that his wife had divorced him and that she had most likely married the foreign doctor in secret. Meanwhile, he was dating a young lady whom he had known since she was a child. He moved her in from another state and gave her a job. True, she was several years younger than his daughter, but he was now single and needed some young female company. Soon she was spending a lot of time at his house.

The months went by, and the televangelist tenaciously kept up surveillance and harassment on his ex-wife and those who supported her. He spread stories about the foreign doctor, insinuating that he had murdered his wife who died following a lung transplant not long before the current fiasco began. He spread stories about the foreign pastor who had stood up for his wife. He claimed that this pastor's wife had engaged in many extramarital affairs, and that the pastor was a pathological liar. He called him a "spiritual idiot." He threatened his ex-wife, the pastor, and many others with litigation if they tried to say anything that would expose him. He had vast financial and legal resources that could withstand years of legal battle, whereas they did not. Guilt and innocence aside, in the end he could ruin them financially.

Her reputation in tatters, viewed by the world as a whore, emotionally crushed, the televangelist's ex-wife tries to reestablish some semblance of a life. She knows that she will probably never have privacy again in her life. Every email and phone call is most likely monitored. Friends are afraid to speak openly with her knowing that they will have to face the wrath of the televangelist. Many of them have. They know that the contents of their conversations and emails tend to come back and haunt them. It happens over and over.

The ex-wife goes to church, where she is active in ministry. She is involved in abused women's issues, and is turning the devastation of the previous years into the foundation for a new life.

The Televangelist

Before shutting down his computer for the night, the televangelist sends out one last email: this one to his ex-wife. He tells her how much he loves and misses her. He tells her that he is sorry she had to go through this nightmare... it hasn't been easy for him either. He tells her that it had to be done. She had to be sacrificed for the greater good of the ministry. Her removal has resulted in an outpouring of sympathy for him that has brought in more money than at any other time in the ministry's history. He tells her that the departments she once managed are flourishing under their new director as they never did under her. "This is not meant to offend you." He tells her, "I am just helping you to understand why you had to go." He goes on to let her know that he has moved on with his personal life. He is happy with the new girlfriend, and he is now working out and building up his physique. "I wish this never had to happen, but I will always love you. Your X"

He shuts off the computer and walks back to bed. Gently raising the covers, he slides in, careful not to wake his new partner.

The Televangelist Part 7:The Conclusion

How does this story end? When does it end? That is largely up to you. The story of the televangelist has repeated itself over and over since the dawn of time. The names are different, the faces change, and the victims fade into the fog of memory. People cannot always choose whether or not they fall victim to the televangelist, but many choose to be bought. Many choose to ignore the crimes against humanity by justifying these problems away. They say, "It is for the greater good." When confronted by the world over his extermination camps, this was Adolph Hitler's response. Others say, "It is none of my business." Over the course of history, the most heinous atrocities have occurred largely because good people refused to act.

How many people have to be sacrificed on the alters of megalomania? How many lives must yet be destroyed? Will the "televangelists" in your life, in your church, in your community, on your television be allowed to continue their wave of human destruction in the name of good? Only individuals willing to take a stand for human rights and dignity can put a stop to this new inquisition. Only Church and civil leaders who are not willing to be bought or sold, who will stand firmly on principle can clean this stain out of the framework of the community.

Where do you stand?

* * * * *

Posted by: watchbird Jul 7 2006, 07:39 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 7 2006, 03:44 PM)
>
> Since I have alluded to "The Televangelist" in a number of my threads, quoted portions of it in some of my posts and it has also been referred to by others; I am now posting it in it's entirety and without comment. It is an interesting read...
>
> Sister

That's heavy, Sister. Really heavy.

Thank you for posting it, but....

I'm not sure if we were really ready for the whole thing at once. Maybe we needed more portions of it enclosed in some of your delightful packaging first. But.....

Maybe no matter how many more "small portions" of it we saw, maybe it would still be heavy whenever we saw it all at once.

It takes a lot of processing before we are even ready to ask questions.

But.....

Thank you again for posting it. Once again I am stunned with the impact of the whole. And to think, this narrative closed more than a year ago. We have had 14 more months of the saga enacted since the final words of this document. And the end is not yet.

Posted by: beartrap Jul 8 2006, 10:32 AM

Yes indeed, Watchbird,

Perhaps the time has come for a rewrite. Perhaps this time the author should seek to collaborate with Sister.

By the way, Sister, thanks for posting it. As you say, an interesting read.

Posted by: sister Jul 8 2006, 11:06 AM

> QUOTE(beartrap @ Jul 8 2006, 11:32 AM)
>
> Yes indeed, Watchbird,
>
> Perhaps the time has come for a rewrite. Perhaps this time the author should seek to collaborate with Sister.

> By the way, Sister, thanks for posting it. As you say, an interesting read.

Bear, good to have you back, everybody missed you!

Sounds like an interesting project to me... especially since both of us have reason to continue flying under Danny's radar. sofa1.gif If the author suggests the project to me I am open to a collaboration. For I truly believe that the pen is mightier than the sword. And in a serious war of words, Danny is is out of his league. box.gi It is time that Danny's victims are vindicated and he permanently retires from he scene. notworkir In the end revealing the Bullyboy's own actions will cause him to dig his own grave publically.

Posted by: watchbird Jul 8 2006, 12:41 PM

First off, Bear, another great big welc

Pull up a chair, sit a spell, and tell us what has happened in your world since we saw you last. tableta

> QUOTE(beartrap @ Jul 8 2006, 10:32 AM) ☐
>
> Yes indeed, Watchbird,
>
> Perhaps the time has come for a rewrite. Perhaps this time the author should seek to collaborate with Sister.
>
> By the way, Sister, thanks for posting it. As you say, an interesting read.

wouldn't say a "rewrite". It is an historical document and as such deserves to stand on its own. But it surely would be nice to have a sequel. That was essentially "prologue" plus "year 1". The past is past and doesn't need much rewriting except maybe for places where we have learned more about the past. But some of those chapters now are only preface to what has happened in "year 2". It would be good, I think, for those who know how things developed in those chapters to share them with us here.

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 8 2006, 11:06 AM) ☐
>
> Bear, good to have you back, everybody missed you!
>
> Sounds like an interesting project to me... especially since both of us have reason to continue flying under Danny's radar. sofa1.gif If the author suggests the project to me I am open to a collaboration. For I truly believe that the pen is mightier than the sword. And in a serious war of > words, Danny is is out of his league. box.gi It is time that Danny's victims are vindicated and he permanently retires from the scene. notworkir In the end revealing the Bullyboy's own actions will cause him to dig his own grave publically.

agree in principle. And surely there will come a day when someone, or some team, should take all of the arious strands of informtion and weave them into a publishable book. In the meantime, though, I hope we an get more daily expansions on the saga that began with The Televangelist, continued on through The nauthorized History, and now can be both fleshed out and brought up to date as we look at more recent evelopments in areas that have been introduced before. There are also areas that could use some closer xamination, expansion, and even analysis.

Posted by: sister Jul 8 2006, 04:00 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 8 2006, 01:41 PM) ☐
>
> First off, Bear, another great big welc
>
> Pull up a chair, sit a spell, and tell us what has happened in your world since we saw you last. tableta
>
> I wouldn't say a "rewrite". It is an historical document and as such deserves to stand on its own. But it surely would be nice to have a sequel. That was essentially "prologue" plus "year 1". The past is past and doesn't need much rewriting except maybe for places where we have learned more about the past. But some of those chapters now are only preface to what has happened in "year 2". It would be good, I think, for those who know how things developed in those chapters to share them with us here.
>
> I agree in principle. And surely there will come a day when someone, or some team, should take all of the various strands of informtion and weave them into a publishable book. In the meantime, though, I hope we can get more daily expansions on the saga that began with The Televangelist, continued on through The Unauthorized History, and now can be both fleshed out and brought up to date as we look at more recent developments in areas that have been introduced before. There are also areas that could use some closer examination, expansion, and even analysis.

can not speak for Bear or the author of "The Televangelist", but I do not think what was suggested was riting a book at this time. I think that you have jumped the gun a bit, watchbird.

Posted by: watchbird Jul 8 2006, 04:15 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 8 2006, 04:00 PM) ☐
>
> I can not speak for Bear or the author of "The Televangelist", but I do not think what was suggested was writing a book at this time. I think that you have jumped the gun a bit, watchbird.

Don't think so. I don't think I was saying anything about a book now. I was just making the point that I'd like chapter-like installments of whatever "revision" is done, rather than waiting for a whole revised document.

Posted by: Johann Jul 9 2006, 05:12 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 8 2006, 03:39 AM)
>
> That's heavy, Sister. Really heavy.
>
> ---
>
> Thank you again for posting it. Once again I am stunned with the impact of the whole. And to think, this narrative closed more than a year ago. We have had 14 more months of the saga enacted since the final words of this document. And the end is not yet.

Danny made the "mistake" shortly after this story was written, of admitting on a TV show that this was his story, and not the story of anyone else of the thousands of televangelists in the world. . . He claimed some of it was false!

Posted by: Clay Jul 9 2006, 05:14 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jul 9 2006, 06:12 AM)
>
> Danny made the "mistake" shortly after this story was written, of admitting on a TV show that this was his story, and not the story of anyone else of the thousands of televangelists in the world. . . He claimed some of it was false!

why would he admit to this being his story?

Posted by: Johann Jul 9 2006, 05:23 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jul 9 2006, 01:14 PM)
>
> why would he admit to this being his story?

I don't always comprehend how his mind works. I watched the 3ABN show when he made the complaint that someone had written his story with some mistakes in it. I suppose if someone had done this to me I'd ignored it, especially since no names were given.

Posted by: watchbird Jul 9 2006, 08:16 AM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jul 9 2006, 05:23 AM)
>
> I don't always comprehend how his mind works. I watched the 3ABN show when he made the complaint that someone had written his story with some mistakes in it. I suppose if someone had done this to me I'd ignored it, especially since no names were given.

There you go again, Johann, exibiting your skills as a "master of understatement". "his story with some mistakes in it" indeed. I think the actual words he used were pungent variants of "lies" and "liar", with his rant against it extending for a considerable length of time. He was so sure that he knew exactly who wrote it, and who had "dictated" it to the "author"

What I'd like to see you post here is one of the letters that Danny sent to you, and even one that he sent to Linda that she passed on to you (or was it sent to her with a carbon to you?--I forget that detail). It's true that a short excerpt from those have been posted to another thread, but since those were such short excerpts and the recipients were not identified, I don't think it would be considered double posting for you to put the whole letter(s) here.

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Jul 9 2006, 11:15 AM

Why is this stated at the beginning?

> QUOTE
>
> The characters and events portray in the following story are fictional. Any resemblance to any real event or person, living or dead, is coincidental.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jul 9 2006, 11:50 AM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 9 2006, 11:15 AM)
>
> Why is this stated at the beginning?

SOP

Standard Operating Practice, Daryl

This is an example:

http://books.guardian.co.uk/review/story/0,,1596971,00.html

Quote:

"In 1982, theatre director Michael Bogdanov is tried for pimping. In the same year, Anthony Thomas makes a drama-documentary about an incident in Saudi Arabia in which the central character is a thinly fictionalised version of himself. More recently, when Ken Loach makes a film about abuses in the care system, he concludes it with the caption : "This film is based on a true story but the characters and the names have been changed for legal reasons. Any resemblance to any person alive or dead is purely coincidental .'"

Posted by: watchbird Jul 9 2006, 12:04 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 9 2006, 11:15 AM)
>
> Why is this stated at the beginning?
>
> > QUOTE
> >
> > The characters and events portray in the following story are fictional. Any resemblance to any real event or person, living or dead, is coincidental.

While Pete mentions that this is SOP--and it is. In this case, the author was given "legal counsel" to include that line.

Actually, this is the only purely fictional line there is in it. Events are dramatized and even written in a fictionalized manner, but as you have seen (or will see) from Sister's comments on some of the things given in The Televangelist, what is said in The Televangelist gives a little "tip of the iceberg" look at very real experiences and attitudes.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jul 9 2006, 12:24 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 9 2006, 12:04 PM)
>
> While Pete mentions that this is SOP--and it is. In this case, the author was given "legal counsel" to include that line.
>
> Actually, this is the only purely fictional line there is in it. Events are dramatized and even written in a fictionalized manner, but as you have seen (or will see) from Sister's comments on some of the things given in The Televangelist, what is said in The Televangelist gives a little "tip of the iceberg" look at very real experiences and attitudes.

Watchbird, look again. I've got a diamond buried in that gravel.

http://books.guardian.co.uk/review/story/0,,1596971,00.html

"Prevented by legal agreement [gag order] from writing about her famous husband, Ivana Trump commissions a ghost-writer to write a novel about the break-up of her marriage ."

I hope to see SOP used again in the future by someone we know..

Posted by: watchbird Jul 9 2006, 12:37 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jul 9 2006, 12:24 PM)
>
> Watchbird, look again. I've got a diamond buried in that gravel.
>
> http://books.guardian.co.uk/review/story/0,,1596971,00.html
>
> "Prevented by legal agreement [gag order] from writing about her famous husband, Ivana Trump commissions a ghost-writer to write a novel about the break-up of her marriage ."
>
> I hope to see SOP used again in the future by someone we know..

oo And so you do. Thanks. I sure missed that one!

Posted by: summertime Jul 9 2006, 01:37 PM

[quote name='watchbird' date='Jul 9 2006, 09:16 AM' post='138317']
There you go again, Johann, exibiting your skills as a "master of understatement". "his story with some mistakes in it" indeed. I think the actual words he used were pungent variants of "lies" and "liar", with his rant against it extending for a considerable length of time. He was so sure that he knew exactly who wrote it, and who had "dictated" it to the "author"

Might Danny be surprised if he only knew---the weakest of the weak (and then some)

Posted by: sister Jul 9 2006, 02:09 PM

> QUOTE(Johann @ Jul 9 2006, 06:12 AM)
>
> Danny made the "mistake" shortly after this story was written, of admitting on a TV show that this was his story, and not the story of anyone else of the thousands of televangelists in the world. . . He claimed some of it was false!

Interesting how Danny keeps putting his foot in his mouth. So, based upon the first person witness of "The 3ABN Televangelist" it is his story and only some of it is false? Extrapolating upon that statement it means, by Danny's own admission, the majority of it is true. Any comments concerning the content of the document?

Johann, didn't Danny accuse you of being the author? I am sure there is more you can add to the story... Including email or letter documentation written by Danny himself?

Posted by: beartrap Jul 9 2006, 05:50 PM

rofl Johann said, "Who could be more foolish than the man who finds a critical anonymous book, and says to the whole world, 'Hey, this book is about me!'"

Posted by: Hersheys99 Jul 9 2006, 07:06 PM

> QUOTE
>
> rofl Johann said, "Who could be more foolish than the man who finds a critical anonymous book, and says to the whole world, 'Hey, this book is about me!'"

Yea that speaks volumes to me. Maybe Danny needs Clay's Sign!!

Posted by: watchbird Jul 9 2006, 08:13 PM

> QUOTE(beartrap @ Jul 9 2006, 05:50 PM)
>
> rofl Johann said, "Who could be more foolish than the man who finds a critical anonymous book, and says to the whole world, 'Hey, this book is about me!'"

Ho there, you still aren't quoting him accurately--or at least not completely. We need a more complete picture--along with a little sound effects and drama. Try it this way... (not a transcription, of course).

"Boo hoo sob (broken voice here), Someone has written this book full of lies and made it look as though it was all about me. But it's NOT (raise volume), it's NOT, I say! It's all just a pack of lies--and you know who is the father of lies. It's the devil hard at work to discredit this ministry. Ah, but I shall rise above it all. angel.gi Surely the Lord is blessing this ministry and nothing shall be allowed to stand in its way. This persecution will result in additional glory to His name (and additional offerings from your pocketbooks). I know you will continue to support me through this hour of trial and the indignities that the demon inspired writer of this document has inflicted upon me. Thank you, from the bottom of my heart. than Thank you.

> QUOTE(Hersheys99 @ Jul 9 2006, 07:06 PM)
>
> Yea that speaks volumes to me. Maybe Danny needs Clay's Sign!!

You mean the one that says "I'm stupid"?

Not on your life. At least not unless you add another line--"like a fox with a large bag standing guard at the hen house."

Hey....look back at the closing lines of part 6 of The Televangelist. Picture it if you will. Here is a man whose wife has just died--giving a concert with his daughter whose mother has just been killed in the same accident which left her a broken arm. It's been only two weeks. (How long does it take to grieve for your mom when you are 12 years old?) But "the show must go on". And the bravery of the little girl who holds up her cast for all to see when her father describes the wreck opens the pocketbooks wider than when there were three of them doing the "show".

And we expect to figure out what goes on in this man's head?

I don' t think so.

Posted by: beartrap Jul 9 2006, 08:55 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 9 2006, 09:13 PM)
>
> Ho there, you still aren't quoting him accurately--or at least not completely. We need a more complete picture--along with a little sound effects and drama. Try it this way... (not a transcription, of course).
>
> "Boo hoo sob (broken voice here), Someone has written this book full of lies and made it look as though it was all about me. But it's NOT (raise volume), it's NOT, I say! It's all just a pack of lies--and you know who is the father of lies. It's the devil hard at work to discredit this ministry. Ah, but I shall rise above it all. ☒ angel.gi Surely the Lord is blessing this ministry and nothing shall be allowed to stand in its way. This persecution will result in additional glory to His name (and additional offerings from your pocketbooks). I know you will continue to support me through this hour of trial and the indignities that the demon inspired writer of this document has inflicted upon me. Thank you, from the bottom of my heart. ☒ than Thank you.

☒ ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl

Posted by: Johann Jul 9 2006, 11:09 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 9 2006, 10:09 PM)
>
> Interesting how Danny keeps putting his foot in his mouth. So, based upon the first person witness of "The 3ABN Televangelist" it is his story and only some of it is false? Extrapolating upon that statement it means, by Danny's own admission, the majority of it is true. Any comments concerning the content of the document?
>
> Johann, didn't Danny accuse you of being the author? I am sure there is more you can add to the story... Including email or letter documentation written by Danny himself?

I have a number of e-mails from Danny where he accuses me of being the author of the Televangelist. Also where he threatens to take me to court. His "proof" that I wrote it is that the fictionalized author's name begins with J like in Johann

---

Posted by: Hersheys99 Jul 10 2006, 12:03 AM

> QUOTE
>
> Ho there, you still aren't quoting him accurately--or at least not completely. We need a more complete picture--along with a little sound effects and drama. Try it this way... (not a transcription, of course).

> "Boo hoo sob (broken voice here), Someone has written this book full of lies and made it look as though it was all about me. But it's NOT (raise volume), it's NOT, I say! It's all just a pack of lies--and you know who is the father of lies. It's the devil hard at work to discredit this ministry. Ah, but I shall rise above it all. ☒ angel.gi Surely the Lord is blessing this ministry and nothing shall be allowed to stand in its way. This persecution will result in additional glory to His name (and additional offerings from your pocketbooks). I know you will continue to support me through this hour of trial and the indignities that the demon inspired writer of this document has inflicted upon me. Thank you, from the bottom of my heart. ☒ than Thank you.

☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl You are cracking me up here but that is pretty close to what he said or the parts I aught anyways!

Posted by: Clay Jul 10 2006, 12:48 AM even if I thought it were about me, I would probably not say a word....

reminds me of this song:

> QUOTE
>
> You walked into the party like you were walking onto a yacht
> Your hat strategically dipped below one eye
> Your scarf it was apricot
> You had one eye in the mirror as you watched yourself gavotte
> And all the girls dreamed that they'd be your partner
> They'd be your partner, and...
>
> You're so vain, you probably think this song is about you
> You're so vain, I'll bet you think this song is about you
> Don't you? Don't You?
>
> You had me several years ago when I was still quite naive
> Well you said that we made such a pretty pair
> And that you would never leave
> But you gave away the things you loved and one of them was me
> I had some dreams, they were clouds in my coffee
> Clouds in my coffee, and...
>
> You're so vain, you probably think this song is about you
> You're so vain, I'll bet you think this song is about you > Don't you? Don't You? Don't You?
>
> I had some dreams they were clouds in my coffee
> Clouds in my coffee, and...
>
> You're so vain, you probably think this song is about you
> You're so vain, I'll bet you think this song is about you > Don't you? Don't You?
>
> Well I hear you went up to Saratoga and your horse naturally won
> Then you flew your lear jet up to Nova Scotia
> To see the total eclipse of the sun
> Well you're where you should be all the time

> And when you're not you're with
> Some underworld spy or the wife of a close friend
> Wife from a close friend, and...
>
> You're so vain, you probably think this song is about you
> You're so vain, I'll bet you think this song is about you > Don't you? Don't You? Don't you?
>
> You're so vain, you probably think this song is about you
> You're so vain, I'll bet you think this song is about you

Posted by: PaperTigers Jul 10 2006, 12:49 AM

☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl
Watchbird, maybe you should be his writer!!! That sounded so much like him...
☒ ☐ ☒ rofl

Posted by: Johann Jul 10 2006, 05:22 AM

> QUOTE(PaperTigers @ Jul 10 2006, 08:49 AM) ☐
>
> ☒ rofl ☒ ☒ rofl
> Watchbird, maybe you should be his writer!!! That sounded so much like him...
> ☒ ☐ ☒ rofl

second that motion.

Posted by: seraph|m Jul 10 2006, 08:29 AM

If the author was available for comment it would be nice to have him/her here for an interview. The "Adventist Events and Announcements" is just the place for it. I am sure Calvin would be glad to hear from the writer and could work something out. It's just a thought. ☐

Posted by: watchbird Jul 10 2006, 08:46 AM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ Jul 10 2006, 08:29 AM) ☐
>
> If the author was available for comment it would be nice to have him/her here for an interview. The "Adventist Events and Announcements" is just the place for it. I am sure Calvin would be glad to hear from the writer and could work something out. It's just a thought. ☐

Surely you do not think "the author" is unaware of what use is being made of his document on BSDA. For over a year now, "the author" has preferred to stay anonymous, always speaking of himself in the third person and keeping alive the mistique of anonymity. If or when he decides to reveal himself, I suspect that BSDA might be one of the first places he does so. But until then I think we would do best to allow a number of persons to comment on the document without playing any guessing games, even in the hidden recesses of our minds, as to who the author might be. If you bring your questions about it here where Sister posted it, I am sure that he will see them and will be making sure that someone gives the answers he would want given if he were answering in person.

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Jul 10 2006, 09:51 AM

Why can't he/she come and post here under an alias as sister and others are doing? I ask as I would rather hear from this person directly, rather than through somebody else.

Posted by: Clay Jul 10 2006, 10:06 AM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 10 2006, 10:51 AM)
>
> Why can't he/she come and post here under an alias as sister and others are doing? I ask as I would rather hear from this person directly, rather than through somebody else.

there is no indication that he or she isn't already.... they very well be posting under an alias....

Posted by: seraph|m Jul 10 2006, 10:08 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 10 2006, 10:46 AM)
>
> Surely you do not think "the author" is unaware of what use is being made of his document on BSDA. For over a year now, "the author" has preferred to stay anonymous, always speaking of himself in the third person and keeping alive the mistique of anonymity. If or when he decides to reveal himself, I suspect that BSDA might be one of the first places he does so. But until then I think we would do best to allow a number of persons to comment on the document without playing any guessing games, even in the hidden recesses of our minds, as to who the author might be. If you bring your questions about it here where Sister posted it, I am sure that he will see them and will be making sure that someone gives the answers he would want given if he were answering in person.

Actually, I am not suggesting that "the author" reveal himself. Calvin and the person in question can work out the details regarding how he might answer questions here, if he were inclined to do so. As I said, it's just a thought.

Posted by: watchbird Jul 10 2006, 10:13 AM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ Jul 10 2006, 10:08 AM)
>
> Actually, I am not suggesting that "the author" reveal himself. Calvin and the person in question can work out the details regarding how he might answer questions here, if he were inclined to do so. As I said, it's just a thought.

Perhaps he might not want to reveal himself to Calvin either. If he were inclined to do so, he could sign on as "the author" and answer questions so long as they kept coming. I fail to see any reason for having a "formal interview" with him.

Posted by: sister Jul 10 2006, 10:16 AM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 10 2006, 10:51 AM)
>
> Why can't he/she come and post here under an alias as sister and others are doing? I ask as I would rather hear from this person directly, rather than through somebody else.

Daryl, perhaps because the author is already a member here and has been posting on these threads and elsewhere and to admit to being the author of "The Televangelist" could cause the author difficulity at this time. It is safer for this person to continue to fly under the radar for the present. As it is for me. Ask your questions on this thread and you will receive answers, there are others who can give answers, who have the same information as the author. Or individuals that can varify specific sections of the documents. For example there are sections of "The Televangelist" that Johann can personally varify, for he is one of the characters included in the story. There are sections that Beartrap can varify from his position at 3ABN and as a former member of the Shelton family. There are sections that I can varify. Or perhaps Brother Sam, Papertigers, Hersheys99 or others. If any or none of us is the author of "The Televangelist" is not important at this time; only that we can varify the truth of the story...

Posted by: seraph|m Jul 10 2006, 10:26 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 10 2006, 12:13 PM)
>
> Perhaps he might not want to reveal himself to Calvin either. If he were inclined to do so, he could sign on as "the author" and answer questions so long as they kept coming. I fail to see any reason for having a "formal interview" with him.

I do not recall stating what the author may want to do as it relates to revealing himself to Calvin or a "need" for an interview at all... But, see it as you wish

---

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Jul 10 2006, 04:29 PM

Was permission needed to post this here?

> QUOTE
>
> "The Televangelist"
> By: Jorgen VanBraun
> Copyright 2005

I ask on account of "Copyright 2005" below the name.

Posted by: Clay Jul 10 2006, 04:48 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 10 2006, 05:29 PM)

> Was permission needed to post this here?
> I ask on account of "Copyright 2005" below the name.

we have not received correspondence asking us to remove it.... my hunch is that the author of this story is among us and doesn't have a problem with it being posted..... if they do, they will contact the owner personally I am sure....

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jul 10 2006, 06:23 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 10 2006, 04:29 PM) ☐
>
> Was permission needed to post this here?
> I ask on account of "Copyright 2005" below the name.

Regarding:

Jorgen Van Braun

When you rearrange the letters in Jorgen Van Braun, they spell:

Ran Vegan Job, Run!

Could this be a clue?

☒ rofl

Posted by: PaperTigers Jul 10 2006, 07:23 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jul 10 2006, 08:23 PM) ☐
>
> Regarding:
>
> Jorgen Van Braun
>
> When you rearrange the letters in Jorgen Van Braun, they spell:
>
> Ran Vegan Job, Run!
>
> Could this be a clue?
>
> ☒ rofl

☒ rofl ☒ ☐
too much!! i LOVE it!!

Posted by: beartrap Jul 10 2006, 07:38 PM

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Jul 10 2006, 07:23 PM) ☐
>
> Regarding:
>
> Jorgen Van Braun
>
> When you rearrange the letters in Jorgen Van Braun, they spell:
>
> Ran Vegan Job, Run!
>
> Could this be a clue?
>
> ☒ rofl

☒ ☒ rofl I'm sure Mr. Van Braun is sitting behind a computer right now, somewhere in this vast BSDA world, splitting his sides over that one!

Posted by: statrei Jul 10 2006, 07:56 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 10 2006, 06:29 PM) ☐
>
> Was permission needed to post this here?
> I ask on account of "Copyright 2005" below the name.

Fair use, Daryl. In many cases the Copyright law only requires that the copyright be displayed. It would be illegal to post it without the copyright.

Posted by: watchbird Jul 11 2006, 09:32 AM

This thread begins with:

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 7 2006, 03:44 PM) ☐
>
> Since I have alluded to "The Televangelist" in a number of my threads, quoted portions of it in some of my posts and it has also been referred to by others; I am now posting it in it's entirety and without comment. It is an interesting read...
>
> Sister
>
> "The Televangelist"
> By: Jorgen VanBraun
> Copyright 2005

I'm wondering if we are ready yet to entertain serious questions on specific portions of the document. (Notice that I said "entertain serious questions" rather than "seriously entertain questions". I "pay attention"--I know " this ain't Sabbath School".) ☐

If so, then I would like to refer us to a paragraph about Danny's plane and the use he makes of them which you can find as the fourth paragraph under "Part 3:The Money).

> QUOTE
>
> The air pressure in the jet changes and the wall monitor shows that it is beginning its descent. Several years ago it was a relief that he was no longer forced to endure the inconvenience of commercial air travel, with the acquisition of a private jet. No longer does the televangelist have to go through security, and travel on a commercial schedule. He knows that the contributors, and the church that support his ministry, would not appreciate that this convenience is leased at a cost of $40,000.00 per month, so he has this expense placed in an anonymous account. In addition to the lease, the pilots cost $700.00 per day, and there are operational costs including gas and maintenance. Well, what the people don't know won't hurt him, and he truly deserves the extra conveniences. Vacations, personal visits, trips to ball games, and medical appointments no longer require a long drive. He now uses the jet for trips that would have required as little as two hours of driving.

I think that Sister may have referred to this elsewhere so that there were a few comments on the planes in the history series, but I think it would be well to have this brought to our attention and discussed again here where it can be seen in the context of the document as a whole.

And I would also like to hear more of the details behind those that were generalized in thiis paragraph, as well as examples of how the plane has been used since this was written. If anyone has current information, it would be interesting to know how the prices that were given in this paragraph have been affected by recent fuel prices. And also, has this affected the use that Danny makes of the plane since these increases? And if so, how?

Another question that I'm wondering about is whether or not there is any calculation done as to the amount of funds that can be expected to be taken in from a specific location before deciding whether or not to use the plane to meet that appointment.

Posted by: Clay Jul 11 2006, 10:01 AM good questions... the operating expenses have to be more because fuel costs more...

Posted by: seraph|m Jul 11 2006, 10:34 AM

☒ sn

Posted by: Observer Jul 11 2006, 05:30 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 10 2006, 03:29 PM)
>
> Was permission needed to post this here?
> I ask on account of "Copyright 2005" below the name.

In order to have a copyright enforced, it must be registered with the copyright office, at least as copyright applies to the United States. If the copyright originated in another country, there are different aspects of this question.

If the copyright has been registered, it is a simple matter to determine who registered it. If it has not been registered, it cannot be enforced in a U. S. court.

This document has been so freely distributed, with the implied permission of the claimed copyright owner, that it may be assumed that it has entered the public domain. If so, there cannot be any copyright enforcement.

Posted by: Clay Jul 11 2006, 05:55 PM

> QUOTE(Observer @ Jul 11 2006, 05:30 PM)
>
> In order to have a copyright enforced, it must be registered with the copyright office, at least as copyright applies to the United States. If the copyright originated in another country, there are different aspects of this question.
>
> If the copyright has been registered, it is a simple matter to determine who registered it. If it has not been registered, it cannot be enforced in a U. S. court.
>
> This document has been so freely distributed, with the implied permission of the claimed copyright owner, that it may be assumed that it has entered the public domain. If so, there cannot be any copyright enforcement.

thank you for the clarification....

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Jul 11 2006, 06:39 PM

Therefore, that means anybody can post it anywhere without first obtaining permission?

Posted by: Clay Jul 11 2006, 06:44 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 11 2006, 06:39 PM)
>
> Therefore, that means anybody can post it anywhere without first obtaining permission?

probably Daryl.... go ahead and post it in your forum... we won't mind.... oh and we won't tell either....

Posted by: statrei Jul 11 2006, 07:20 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Jul 11 2006, 08:39 PM)
>
> Therefore, that means anybody can post it anywhere without first obtaining permission?

The worst that could happen is that somebody would ask you to remove it.

Posted by: sister Jul 14 2006, 01:15 PM

It is interesting to see sections of "The Televangelist" varified in the letter of Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. It also makes it possible to fill in the names that have been left out in this document.

Posted by: watchbird Jul 14 2006, 04:48 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 14 2006, 01:15 PM)
>
> It is interesting to see sections of "The Televangelist" varified in the letter of Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. It also makes it possible to fill in the names that have been left out in this document.

Will we soon start seeing some of these things woven together in your own delightful narrative style?

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Jul 14 2006, 07:39 PM

Amen to that watchbird!

Posted by: watchbird Jul 18 2006, 06:31 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 14 2006, 01:15 PM)
>
> It is interesting to see sections of "The Televangelist" varified in the letter of Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. It also makes it possible to fill in the names that have been left out in this document.

As Sister notes above, there is a synergistic relationship between the AA letter and The Televangelist, as the document provides context for the letter, and the letter supplies names and details for some sections of the document. So seeing that the pinned section has been changed to include only those items that are being recommended for distribution, I'm wondering if The Televangelist document ought to be included there as well, where it will not only be available for those who wish to make a full packet of information, but also will be easy access for those coming to BSDA who want a condensed introduction before wading through all the dialogues.

Posted by: no_cults Jul 19 2006, 07:55 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 18 2006, 06:31 AM)
>
> As Sister notes above, there is a synergistic relationship between the AA letter and The Televangelist, as the document provides context for the letter, and the letter supplies names and details for some sections of the document. So seeing that the pinned section has been changed to include only those items that are being recommended for distribution, I'm wondering if The Televangelist document ought to be included there as well, where it will not only be available for those who wish to make a full packet of information, but also will be easy access for those coming to BSDA who want a condensed introduction before wading through all the dialogues.

If anyone would have that "packet" of information then I would like to have it.
Is there a way to send this information via private e-mails?

Thanks

Posted by: watchbird Jul 19 2006, 08:29 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 18 2006, 06:31 AM)
>
> As Sister notes above, there is a synergistic relationship between the AA letter and The Televangelist, as the document provides context for the letter, and the letter supplies names and details for some sections of the document. So seeing that the pinned section has been changed to include only those items that are being recommended for distribution, I'm wondering if The Televangelist document ought to be included there as well, where it will not only be available for those who wish to make a full packet of information, but also will be easy access for those coming to BSDA who want a condensed introduction before wading through all the dialogues.

> QUOTE(no_cults @ Jul 19 2006, 07:55 AM)
>
> If anyone would have that "packet" of information then I would like to have it.
> Is there a way to send this information via private e-mails?
>
> Thanks

Notice the line I have put in bold. There is no ready-made "packet" of information. Each who wishes to send something out will have to assemble their own "packet".

The easiest way to send information from here by email is to simply use the regular "block and copy" functions of your computer, and copy each item you wish to use over into a file on your computer, or directly into your email document.

You will also find much narrative material in the series of threads called "An Unauthorized History of 3ABN" that will give you background and context for things said in the three documents already mentioned. This was originally one long thread, but was cut into ten chapters for ease of access to the various parts. They are not in order. But you would be well advised to look through the menu pages for them and read them in chapter order. Then you can copy out the most cogent posts so you can access them later on your own computer.

Enjoy.

Posted by: no_cults Jul 19 2006, 09:49 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jul 19 2006, 09:29 AM)
>
> Notice the line I have put in bold. There is no ready-made "packet" of information. Each who wishes to send something out will have to assemble their own "packet".
>
> The easiest way to send information from here by email is to simply use the regular "block and copy" functions of your computer, and copy each item you wish to use over into a file on your computer, or directly into your email document.
>
> You will also find much narrative material in the series of threads called "An Unauthorized History of 3ABN" that will give you background and context for things said in the three documents already mentioned. This was originally one long thread, but was cut into ten chapters for ease of access to the various parts. They are not in order. But you would be well advised to look through the menu pages for them and read them in chapter order. Then you can copy out the most cogent posts so you can access them later on your own computer.

> Enjoy.

understand that there is no "packet" now. I guess I was just being lazy nd was wondering when and if someone put together this information if t might be available for lazy people like me.

his information needs to get out. Without a lot of people speaking out n Folkenberg - no doubt he would still be in charge. Remember the avid Dennis affair?

The pen is mightier than the sword"

hanks

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Jul 19 2006, 08:38 PM

Perhaps a suggested contents of a packet could be posted here or in a new topic created for such a purpose?

Posted by: inga Jul 19 2006, 09:02 PM

I'm glad to see the chapters of "An Unauthorized History" pinned.

What I'd now like to see is the whole "Unauthorized History" as a document that can be distributed, just like the "Televangelist" and Dr. Abrahamsen's letter. Even if it's just pinned in this forum, it makes it easier for busy people to get the big picture.

I'd also like to see "The Televangelist" document "pinned."

That would most of the solid information in an easily found spot.

Posted by: watchbird Aug 4 2006, 02:18 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Jul 14 2006, 01:15 PM)
>
> It is interesting to see sections of "The Televangelist" varified in the letter of Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. It also makes it possible to fill in the names that have been left out in this document.

t is also an important document in that it widens our focus from the laser beam that we often turn on Linda o the wide floodlight that illuminates the whole spectrum of problem areas both past and recent past. There ave been significant developments since May of 2005 when it was written and first distributed. But since nderstanding history is critical to understanding the present and projecting into the future, this is indeed a ery unique and valuable document that serves as an outline into which one can fit the bits and pieces cattered thoughout the threads of BSDA 3ABN forum.

t claims to be a work of fiction. As we have pointed out before, that is the only strictly untrue statement in it. o if you are new to these topics, do begin at the beginning of this one, it will put a lot of things in their roper perspective and relationship.

Posted by: Clay Aug 10 2006, 08:35 AM found this on Maritime posted by watchbird.... interesting disclosures.....

> QUOTE
>
> I have copied over the following from BSDA:
>
> NEWS FLASH
>
> I have just received the following document from the author of "The Televangelist", Jorgen VanBraun.
>
> I will make the following comments before you read this post: This situation is currently taking place at the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists. The truth of the statements within the narrative has been verified by a reliable independent source who chooses to remain anonymous at this time. Send a copy of this document to your entire email list. Get the message out to the church at large. It is time for this "shadow man", who uses his vast wealth to sway the decisions of the church, to be revealed. Why does he continue to back Danny Shelton?
>
> Not only this "shadow man" needs to be revealed, but the names of all church leaders who are taking part in the decision of what is to be done about both this man and everyone connected with the 3ABN cesspool should be revealed to the church. I hear a lot against anonymity on this board. Why don't we hear the same hue and cry raised over the cloak of anonymity behind which our leaders are put into office and the cloak of anonymity which hangs tight over the doors of their actions and non-actions regarding the abominadable things which are going on in our church at the present time ... and I am NOT speaking merely of those things connected with the "Shelton Gang" ... which contains a lot more people than those who have the last name of "Shelton". I am speaking of other sex offenders, EEOC violations, and abuse of position and power right within the denominational structure...where appeals for justice are ignored, victims are "paid off" under the counter, and violators remain unrevealed and still in power. This needs to come to a screeching halt before church members get to the end of their patience and turn everything they know over to public "watchdog" organizations who will spare the SDA church no more than what they have "spared" the Catholic church from the bright and withering seachlight of both print and web research and analysis.
>
> Quote:
> Okay People, time to name names. 100 pts a name, except the victim, this brave girl has suffered enough. Let us all pray for her protection, Danny knows who she is and there is no way to predict what he would be willing to do to try and stop her testimony.
>
> The Contributor
> Jorgen VanBraun
>
> Along the hallowed halls of the headquarters of the World Conference of the Church, the atmosphere is hushed, yet alive with activity.
>
> Lest there be any doubt in anyone's mind, let's start the identification process right here. This is the World Headquarters of the SDA church located in Silver Spring, Maryland, USA.
>
> Quote:
> Pastors, administrators, visitors, people from every part of the globe are here conducting the business of the Church. Also here today is a robust, energetic man from the central west. Today the Contributor, the Church's wealthiest donor, will be meeting with a number of top leaders.
>
> Garwin McNeilus. Though I wonder about the validity of him being the "wealthiest donor", since there are others of the McNeilus clan who are also involved in the same projects that he supports, and taking it in another direction, I have also heard others refered to as the "wealthiest"... though without the stigma of overt attempts to control the business of our church such as has been attributed to Garwin... by many more than one source, some in an accusatory way and some in a bragging way, depending on their relationship to the man.

Quote:
Over the years the Contributor's donations to the Church have totaled more millions of dollars than we can imagine, and everyone here is anxious to take a larger piece of the pie. The World Missions department has always come out on top.

Particularly what is called "Global Mission" projects. Which, btw, has become somewhat of a "playground" for the McNeilus clan.... "something to do" to occupy their time since they have "sold" their business and can live luxuriously without having the daily toil that most of us have. Denzil, for example, not only leads out in Global Mission trips, but also is allowed to baptize the converts, even though he is not a minister and never has been one.

Quote:
Today the Contributor has something weighing on his mind. His close friend and associate, the Televangelist, has a dark cloud hanging over his head.

The Televangelist, of course, is Danny Shelton.

Quote:
He has been exposed through various mediums for the charlatan that he is. His many years of lies and manipulation are catching up with him. Now, a young woman has produced documented proof that she was repeatedly sexually assaulted by the Televangelist during his second marriage. This documentation has been sent to many of the leaders in the Church, and the time has come that they can no longer turn a blind eye.

A copy of this signed document has been sent to Daryl, along with the formal request that it not be placed on any internet forum, whether completely public or restricted to authorized subscribers such as this one... and also that her name not be posted any such place. The copy sent to GC headquarters has a notarized signature on it. The restrictions as to who may receive a copy by private email are described as "pastors and church leaders". These are then free to discuss it privately with those whom they judge will handle the information both kindly and judiciously. Readers here who think they fall into one of these categories, yet have not received a copy, may communicate with Daryl privately.

Quote:
The man who was once their poster child, and was considered the face of the Church by the Church's foremost evangelist, is now becoming a liability. If they continue to support him, and allow that he is the face of the church, this newest scandal of his will bring them down with him. The Contributor knows this, and has determined that he will force the Church into compliance with the Televangelist.

Sitting in the spacious office of the President of the World Conference, the Contributor bluntly tells the President that if the Church takes any action against the Televangelist, or does anything that would damage, or undermine him, the Church will not receive another penny of his money for World Missions.

Again, the Contributor is Garwin McNeilus, and the President is Jan Paulson, himself.

Quote:
Considering that the World Missions budget comes primarily from the Contributor, the President knows that the Church will be rocked to its foundations by the loss of this man's money.

Question: HOW does he "know" this. Has he no faith that God will supply all our needs? Has he not heard how God thinks about those who attempt to "buy the Holy Spirit... and the power they think they have by doing so?

Quote:
What will he do? What will the Church do?

Reports are that his first reaction was to say that the church's hands were tied so they could do nothing to > cut the ties that bind the church to 3ABN and Danny Shelton. Other reports seem to indicate that this is not the bottom line but that others are pushing for action. At any rate... here is something the church at large can do.... raise up in a mighty tsunami that insists not only on cutting the ties and bringing the Shelton gang to justice (including recovering as many of the assets as possible that Danny has stolen from the donation box) but also will clean out those persons in GC headquarters who do not move to clean out other messes on all levels of conference management.

>
> Quote:
> Back at the compound, the Televangelist leans back in a large couch. His eyes drift over to where a new step-daughter is playing and his lips curl in a slight smile. He reaches over and pats his new wife on the thigh, as he watches the little girl play. Memory takes him back over the years to another step-daughter.
>
> What will the Church do? This question remains unanswered. The decision has yet to be made.

Posted by: Nuggie Aug 10 2006, 09:27 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Aug 10 2006, 08:35 AM) ☐
>
> found this on Maritime posted by watchbird.... interesting disclosures.....

Good gracious...just when I thought things couldn't get worse... ☐

Posted by: JustTana Aug 10 2006, 02:19 PM

Hello Johann,

I'm new to this forum but I am glad to see that you are also on at the moment. Is what I am reading true to your knowledge? If so, what part is Don Schneider playing in this drama? Is he involved to the extent that Paulsen is? My sister knows him personally and will be glad to get in touch with him to ask him what, if anything, he intends to do about this sorry affair. Also, what is your take on what Danny will do? Will he just shut down 3ABN out of hand or will he allow the changes to be made which we are calling for. And if he tries to shut it down, do you believe, as I do, that God will take over and do what we all want to see?

Thanks for hearing me.

Posted by: watchbird Aug 10 2006, 02:52 PM

> QUOTE(Nuggie @ Aug 10 2006, 09:27 AM) ☐
>
> Good gracious...just when I thought things couldn't get worse... ☐

☒ hug.gif There, there, Nuggie, don't despair..... Things can always get worse.

Bring your blanky...... join me behind the sofa ☒ ☒ sofa1.gif

.... Let's "stay tuned" to HOPETV .... ☒ TVsnack.

Posted by: PaperTigers Aug 10 2006, 03:00 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Aug 10 2006, 03:52 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ hug.gif There, there, Nuggie, don't despair..... Things can always get worse.
>
> Bring your blanky...... join me behind the sofa ☒ (☒ sofa1.gif
>
> .... Let's "stay tuned" to HOPETV .... ☒ TVsnack.

can i join you guys behind the sofa?? ☒ (☒ sofa1.gif

i'm not sure i can handle much more drama this week!

Posted by: Nuggie Aug 10 2006, 03:07 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Aug 10 2006, 03:52 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ hug.gif There, there, Nuggie, don't despair..... Things can always get worse.
>
> Bring your blanky...... join me behind the sofa ☒ (☒ sofa1.gif
>
> .... Let's "stay tuned" to HOPETV .... ☒ TVsnack.

Thanks, watchbird... ☒ sig ...this soap opera is making me ☐ ....

Posted by: princessdi Aug 10 2006, 03:56 PM

Man!!! I have been saying all along, GC needs to distane themselves before it is too late. Just the association with Danny will do much damaged, but that they wre "paid" to overlook many trangressions will be devastating. Nobody will care if we are a cult or not. What little positive reputation we have will be gone. The Remnant? Please!!!

Posted by: watchbird Aug 10 2006, 04:00 PM

> QUOTE(Nuggie @ Aug 10 2006, 03:07 PM) ☐
>
> Thanks, watchbird... ☒ sig ...this soap opera is making me ☐ ....

Ah ha! Strike up the band ... a few lines from "The rain in Spain" should do it .... ☒ band.gif ....

All togeher now ... "She's got it ..... she's got it .... I really think she's got it ......"

Yup, no doubt about it .... when you get those symptoms, you have defintely"got it" ....
What's "it"? Why that it isn't really a soap opera at all..... for if it was you could turn off the TV, put it out of mind and feel no pressure to do anything about it.

But when you know it's real, then the more you know the greater obligation you feel to do something..... and that, coupled with the seeming impossiblity of accomplishing anything, can indeed make one feel ☐

Posted by: summertime Aug 10 2006, 04:57 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ Jul 10 2006, 12:48 AM) ☐
>
> even if I thought it were about me, I would probably not say a word....

I really think that the author of "the Televangelist" is a real lady--who may hae been hurt to the breaking point and still maintains her wish to be a lady. Who knows for sure?

Posted by: sister Aug 10 2006, 06:17 PM

> QUOTE(summertime @ Aug 10 2006, 05:57 PM) ☐
>
> I really think that the author of "the Televangelist" is a real lady--who may hae been hurt to the breaking point and still maintains her wish to be a lady. Who knows for sure?

I know for sure, sorry summertime, "she" is not the author. Neither am I "she". Lets just say the author is safely flying under the radar. And I am sure that this is not the last that we will hear from Jorgen VanBraun. In a way he is similar to Charlie from Charlie's Angels: no one evers sees Charlie, they only hear his voice and no one ever sees Jorgen, they only read his testimony...

Posted by: PaperTigers Aug 10 2006, 06:26 PM

> QUOTE(sister @ Aug 10 2006, 07:17 PM) ☐
>
> I know for sure, sorry summertime, "she" is not the author. Neither am I "she". Lets just say the author is safely flying under the radar. And I am sure that this is not the last that we will hear from Jorgen VanBraun. In a way he is similar to Charlie from Charlie's Angels: no one evers sees Charlie, they only hear his voice and no one ever sees Jorgen, they only read his testimony...

Amen sister, and I for one am very thankful for all that Jorgen has been able to say, and hope that the writings keep coming...
very enlightening

Posted by: watchbird Aug 10 2006, 06:48 PM

> QUOTE(PaperTigers @ Aug 10 2006, 03:00 PM) ☐
>
> can i join you guys behind the sofa?? ☒ (☒ sofa1.gif
>
> i'm not sure i can handle much more drama this week!

Of course..... any time, PT..... ☒ hug.gif .... It's real cozy back here..... ☒ sofa1.gif

---

Posted by: tall73 Aug 12 2006, 07:36 PM

I have no idea if this is true, but might pursue the letter option. That along with the Illinois document on the tax issue would be the strongest pieces of evidence to me yet, simply because they are official, and could be seen as such by most outsiders (especially one sitting on a state website).

Incidentally, is the person pursuing legal options? I would hope so. In which case this would definitely get into the realm of public documents.

If it is true it just pushed the whole thing to first class scandal status with a strong case for child molestation.

A man who gets a quickie divorce in guam and is scandalized by questions of "biblical grounds" isn't going to make a blip on NBC, etc. But someone who continually marries women with children and now is accused of molestation, along with the financial info, is bound to be a hit.

On another note however, people could have far worse playgrounds than mission work.

Posted by: inga Aug 14 2006, 04:57 PM

☒ h Seems to me that this topic ought to be "pinned" because too many folks coming on here miss it, and the story line is confirmed by independent posters in the rest of the threads.

Posted by: princessdi Aug 14 2006, 07:19 PM

A televangelist who gets a quickie divorce, etc. will get a bullet on NBC, CBS, ABC, FOX, CNN. We forget the media love to bring down a telelvangelist. It was years before they left Benny Hinn alone. Now add the rest and you just made the news at 5, 6 anad 11.

> QUOTE(tall73 @ Aug 12 2006, 05:36 PM)
>
> I have no idea if this is true, but might pursue the letter option. That along with the Illinois document on the tax issue would be the strongest pieces of evidence to me yet, simply because they are official, and could be seen as such by most outsiders (especially one sitting on a state website).
>
> Incidentally, is the person pursuing legal options? I would hope so. In which case this would definitely get into the realm of public documents.
>
> If it is true it just pushed the whole thing to first class scandal status with a strong case for child molestation.
>
> A man who gets a quickie divorce in guam and is scandalized by questions of "biblical grounds" isn't going to make a blip on NBC, etc. But someone who continually marries women with children and now is accused of molestation, along with the financial info, is bound to be a hit.
>
> On another note however, people could have far worse playgrounds than mission work.

Posted by: Clay Aug 14 2006, 07:32 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ Aug 14 2006, 04:57 PM)
>
> h Seems to me that this topic ought to be "pinned" because too many folks coming on here miss it, > and the story line is confirmed by independent posters in the rest of the threads.
>

just bump it up when you see it drifting towards the bottom....

bum

Posted by: watchbird Aug 14 2006, 07:51 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Aug 14 2006, 07:19 PM)
>
> A televangelist who gets a quickie divorce, etc. will get a bullet on NBC, CBS, ABC, FOX, CNN. We forget the media love to bring down a telelvangelist. It was years before they left Benny Hinn alone. Now add the > rest and you just made the news at 5, 6 anad 11.

nd don't forget "60 minutes" and the various Evangelical Watchdog organizations. This is one mess that the hurch is NOT going to "sweep under the rug". And even the carpet is going out on the line for a good eating. If we won't clean our own house .... OK .... there are commercial cleaners that would simply ove the job.

.... ☒ TVsnack.

Posted by: inga Aug 20 2006, 04:31 PM

☒ TVsnack.

Posted by: watchbird Aug 25 2006, 03:49 PM

For the benefit of those just joining us, here is the document which is being discussed in another thread. So if you came to this end point first, I'd recommend going back to the menu, and first of all reading the document in its entirety. It was, as I've said elsewhere, the most successful of the various efforts to get leaders to take a serious look and ask questions about what was written. It is also interesting to note that it was Danny himself who gave it world-wide publicity and called attention to it by applying it to himself and calling it all "lies".

Yet elsewhere on this site, there is evidence that what is contained in the "fictionalized" account are bundles of truths.

Posted by: justme Aug 31 2006, 07:41 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Aug 25 2006, 05:49 PM) ☐
>
> For the benefit of those just joining us, here is the document which is being discussed in another thread. So if you came to this end point first, I'd recommend going back to the menu, and first of all reading the document in its entirety. It was, as I've said elsewhere, the most successful of the various efforts to get leaders to take a serious look and ask questions about what was written. It is also interesting to note that it was Danny himself who gave it world-wide publicity and called attention to it by applying it to himself and calling it all "lies".
>
> Yet elsewhere on this site, there is evidence that what is contained in the "fictionalized" account are bundles of truths.

f he call it a lie, I'm evenmore inclined to believe it.
t is too important to ignore, especially in the light of developments soon to be made known. Until then, let's ll pray for those being "held captive" under it's power, who's hearts are in the right place, awaitng a time to e delivered.

ntil then, here it is again:

The Televangelist"
y: Jorgen VanBraun
opyright 2005

Don't need to repeat this again in its entirety. Go to the first page/first post of this thread to read it.

Posted by: watchbird Jan 31 2007, 12:34 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Aug 25 2006, 04:49 PM)
>
> For the benefit of those just joining us, here is the document which is being discussed in another thread. So if you came to this end point first, I'd recommend going back to the menu, and first of all reading the document in its entirety. It was, as I've said elsewhere, the most successful of the various efforts to get leaders to take a serious look and ask questions about what was written. It is also interesting to note that it was Danny himself who gave it world-wide publicity and called attention to it by applying it to himself and calling it all "lies".
>
> Yet elsewhere on this site, there is evidence that what is contained in the "fictionalized" account are bundles of truths.

..... bum ....

Time to bring this forward again, I think. The document in its entirety is posted as post #1 in this thread. http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128 to go directly to it.

Keep in mind that the only line of fiction is found on the title page where it claims that what is written is fiction. Parts of the rest may be told in a "fictionalized" manner... but the facts are all ... sadly to say.... true. Keep in mind also that it was written at a specific point in time.... May 2005, just before General Conference Session July of 2005. So obviously the story has moved on from that point, but this is especially valuable for background information.

And as you read elsewhere in this site, you will be able to recognize the stories as they are retold by other participants or eyewitnesses... very often with names included. So by comparing what is said in this document with those other posts, the pieces fit together a little better.

Posted by: franklyamazed Jan 31 2007, 10:47 PM

Power corrupts. Absolute power corrupts absolutely. But if you add a certain paranoid mental conditon, you get corruption gone crazy.

It leaves me... frankly amazed

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 1 2007, 07:03 PM

> QUOTE(franklyamazed @ Jan 31 2007, 11:47 PM)
>
> Power corrupts. Absolute power corrupts absolutely. But if you add a certain paranoid mental conditon, you get corruption gone crazy.
>
> It leaves me... frankly amazed

Haven't heard this version before...but I like it!

Posted by: watchbird May 22 2007, 08:36 PM

..... bum .... Once more... for the convenience of those recently joining us.... I'll bring this to thefront page of the menu, the easier to find it. As I said earlier.....

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Jan 31 2007, 02:34 PM)
>
> . . . The document in its entirety is posted as post #1 in this thread. http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128 to go directly to it.
>
> Keep in mind that the only line of fiction is found on the title page where it claims that what is written is fiction. Parts of the rest may be told in a "fictionalized" manner... but the facts are all ... sadly to say.... true. Keep in mind also that it was written at a specific point in time.... May 2005, just before General Conference Session July of 2005. So obviously the story has moved on from that point, but this is especially valuable for background information.
>
> And as you read elsewhere in this site, you will be able to recognize the stories as they are retold by other participants or eyewitnesses... very often with names included. So by comparing what is said in this document with those other posts, the pieces fit together a little better.

.... TVsnack. ....

Posted by: beartrap May 22 2007, 09:08 PM

> QUOTE(franklyamazed @ Jan 31 2007, 09:47 PM)
>
> Power corrupts. Absolute power corrupts absolutely. But if you add a certain paranoid mental conditon, you get corruption gone crazy.
>
> It leaves me... frankly amazed

Only one who is already absolutely corrupt will seek or accept absolute power.

Posted by: sister May 22 2007, 09:20 PM

> QUOTE(beartrap @ May 22 2007, 10:08 PM)
>
> Only one who is already absolutely corrupt will seek or accept absolute power.

So true, Bear. Do you remember the song from circa 1985 by Tears to Fears, Everybody Wants to Rule the World? Do you remember the lyrics:

Welcome to your life
Theres no turning back
Even while we sleep
We will find you
Acting on your best behaviour
Turn your back on mother nature
Everybody wants to rule the world

Its my own design
Its my own remorse
Help me to decide
Help me make the most
Of freedom and of pleasure
Nothing ever lasts forever
Everybody wants to rule the world

Theres a room where the light wont find you
Holding hands while the walls come tumbling down
When they do Ill be right behind you

So glad weve almost made it
So sad they had to fade it
Everybody wants to rule the world

I cant stand this indecision
Married with a lack of vision
Everybody wants to rule the world
Say that youll never never never never need it
One headline why believe it ?
Everybody wants to rule the world

All for freedom and for pleasure
Nothing ever lasts forever
Everybody wants to rule the world

Does it remind you of anyone we know... Maybe it could be the Televangelist's new theme song?

Posted by: mozart May 23 2007, 02:57 PM

Just a "FYI". the group's name is Tears For Fears.

> QUOTE(sister @ May 22 2007, 09:20 PM) ☐
>
> So true, Bear. Do you remember the song from circa 1985 by Tears to Fears, Everybody Wants to Rule the World? Do you remember the lyrics:

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ "the Televangelist" Revisited

Posted by: watchbird Feb 13 2007, 07:46 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 13 2007, 01:07 AM)
>
> Just look in http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128 what it says about their poor mother. I hope I get a chance to stand in court and testify to the terrible lies that are there.

Thank you wwjd for bringing "http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128" document to our attention again. It's been so long since it had been mentioned that the thread bearing its name had slipped clear over on page 4 of the menu. I'm sure there are many of our newbies... and maybe some who by now have settled in as "old timers" who have never read the document.

Since it was written for the express purpose of raising questions in people's minds as to what the real stories were behind the allusions and short vignettes in the document.... and since the writer put the disclaimer about it being "fiction" for the express purpose of protecting himself legally.... I think it would be quite in line with his purpose for it to be brought to court so the truth behind the allusions would be fully revealed. And since you would have to reveal your own identity in order to "stand in court and testify"..... the process should indeed be very interesting and revealling as to who is telling the truth and who is trying to hide truth under piles of obfuscation and/or sink it in the bottom of the muddy mucky flood swollen debris laden waters of "de Nile".

There are, as you know, no names attached to the persons in http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128. So for starters you would have to admit that there is enough truth in the document so as to assign individuals to the stories told or alluded to there. A rather interesting position to be in, I would think.

At any rate.... since it has been posted once in its entirity on this forum, I cannot reproduce it in full again.... but click on the name, "http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128", anywhere in this post and you will be taken directly to the document.

For those who would like some help in attaching names to some of the persons portrayed.... or are interested in more of some of the stories alluded to.... I would strongly suggest going to the http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9938&view=findpost&p=151004 post in "The Unauthorized 3abn History Threads" thread, which is pinned at the top of the 3abn menu. Read down the list of post descriptions and click on the url given to find some of the vignettes from http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128 expanded, and in some cases identifications made.

Thank you again, wwjd, for calling this to our attention once more.

Posted by: wwjd Feb 13 2007, 11:47 AM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Feb 13 2007, 07:46 AM)

> Thank you wwjd for bringing

.. It has already been noted, some time ago, that someone (maybe it was you) said the only fiction about the elevangelist, is the first page that says it is fiction.(again already noted so it won't do any good to change hat now.)

!.Watchbird Did you know Tommy Sr. & Goldie personally?

}.If you didn't (and I am betting on that one) you already exposed your source, last night, as Linda. Linda :nows that her mother - in-law was not guilty of was written and how terrible to do that to one who is not :ven here to defend themselves. Furthermore Linda never knew or even met Tommy Sr..He had passed away ong before she became a part of the family.

I. The author or whoever fed the author must be all mixed up or is spinning lies to attack the family. Case in ›oint.....(this is not verbatim) The father couldn't function sexually because of a massive heart attack at the ıge of 35. Truth, The shelton parents had another child born the next year. Oh and don't worry, spinners, hat childs DNA matches the rest of the family.

i. Again, the father is deceased. He is not here to defend himself. If he was, he would be crushed with ıumiliation and angered that something so personal about himself would end up in a trash book and the nternet. Even more terrible that it is a lie.

Vatchbird, The facts prove the above lie. There are many more but, with just even one lie proven, should you eally encourage people to read it? Most of us don't believe in reading trashy novels. Maybe you feel lifferently.

Posted by: ex3ABNemployee Feb 13 2007, 11:58 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 13 2007, 11:47 AM)
>
> Watchbird, The facts prove the above lie. There are many more but, with just even one lie proven, should you really encourage people to read it? Most of us don't believe in reading trashy novels. Maybe you feel differently.

didn't know you could prove a lie.

Posted by: Ralph Feb 13 2007, 12:12 PM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 13 2007, 10:47 AM)
>
> Watchbird, The facts prove the above lie. There are many more but, with just even one lie proven, should you really encourage people to read it? Most of us don't believe in reading trashy novels. Maybe you feel differently.

)id you read it?

Posted by: watchbird Feb 13 2007, 12:50 PM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 13 2007, 12:47 PM)
>
> 1. It has already been noted, some time ago, that someone (maybe it was you) said the only fiction about the televangelist, is the first page that says it is fiction.(again already noted so it won't do any good to change that now.)

Yes. That was me. Than you for noting that.... and pointing it out to others.

> QUOTE
>
> Watchbird, The facts prove the above lie. There are many more but, with just even one lie proven, should you really encourage people to read it? Most of us don't believe in reading trashy novels. Maybe you feel differently.

I don't read trashy novels. I don't recommend trashy novels. You have built no confidence in me such that I would take your word above those from whom I heard the stories alluded to in The Televangelist.... most of them way before I saw them in the document.... please notice the plural pronoun.... "those".

Give it up.... with me at least you hold no credibility. Whether you are ignorant, deceptive, or so completely self-deceived so you actually believe all you say, is, at this point in time, of little or no interest to me.

Posted by: wwjd Feb 13 2007, 04:44 PM

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Feb 13 2007, 12:50 PM)
>
> Yes. That was me. Than you for noting that.... and pointing it out to others.
> I don't read trashy novels. I don't recommend trashy novels. You have built no confidence in me such that I would take your word above those from whom I heard the stories alluded to in The Televangelist.... most of them way before I saw them in the document.... please notice the plural pronoun.... "those".
> Give it up.... with me at least you hold no credibility. Whether you are ignorant, deceptive, or so completely self-deceived so you actually believe all you say, is, at this point in time, of little or no interest to me.

Right back attcha. There is at least 1 major difference here. I knew Tommy & Goldie personally for almost 50 years. I ate at their home, I visited them when they were sick, and I watched how christ showed through all of their physical and financial struggles through the years.

Did you?
Did Linda?
The answer to both is a resounding NO. So for you to believe what "someone" told you (who never even met Tommy I might add) speaks for your character and your obvious, anger, bitterness and jealousy towards the Shelton's and 3ABN. When someone willingly chooses dirt & lies over truth there is nothing more to say. I knew them, you didn't. I knew them. Linda didn't know Tommy and even though in the family, she didn't really know Goldie at all. When you overlook these facts you have no, credibility, no validity, and are proving that you are here, only, to hurt and tear down.

Posted by: watchbird Feb 13 2007, 04:52 PM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 13 2007, 05:44 PM)
>
> Right back attcha. There is at least 1 major difference here. I knew Tommy & Goldie personally for almost 50 years. I ate at their home, I visited them when they were sick, and I watched how christ showed through all of their physical and financial struggles through the years.
>
> Did you?
> Did Linda?
> The answer to both is a resounding NO. So for you to believe what "someone" told you (who never even met Tommy I might add) speaks for your character and your obvious, anger, bitterness and jealousy towards the Shelton's and 3ABN. When someone willingly chooses dirt & lies over truth there is nothing more to say. I knew them, you didn't. I knew them. Linda didn't know Tommy and even though in the family, she didn't really know Goldie at all. When you overlook these facts you have no, credibility, no validity, and are proving that you are here, only, to hurt and tear down.

What are we doing? Playing "battleship"?...... ...... Whatever.... "no hits". Try again... or be smart enough to give it up. You ain't hittin me... and I ain't playin your game......... and you have neither gained credibility with your attacks .... nor have you muddied my reputation.... 'cause I've been around this barn enough times so I'm a known quality by my friends.... and that is all that counts in my book...... in which you don't even have a page..........

So go ahead... play your game of chase your own tail.... I hope it brings you some sense of accomplishment.... just don't bite down too hard if you catch it..... .....

....

Posted by: watchbird May 22 2007, 08:48 PM

While this is only an introductory thread to The Televangelist document itself, I thought it would be well to bring it forward again, as well as the thread containing the document. It was wwjd who called it to our attention in another thread and caused me to create this one to point to it. Now that Joyce has mentioned something in it again, I thought it was time once more to pull it to the front page to make it more easily accessible. The included paragraphs from the opening post, will serve to introduce both this thread and The Televangelist document itself.

Take your time with it... it is not a simple document.

> QUOTE(watchbird @ Feb 13 2007, 09:46 AM)
>
> Thank you wwjd for bringing "http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128" document to our attention again. It's been so long since it had been mentioned that the thread bearing its name had slipped clear over on page 4 of the menu. I'm sure there are many of our newbies... and maybe some who by now have settled in as "old timers" who have never read the document.
>
> Since it was written for the express purpose of raising questions in people's minds as to what the real stories were behind the allusions and short vignettes in the document.... and since the writer put the disclaimer about it being "fiction" for the express purpose of protecting himself legally.... I think it would be quite in line with his purpose for it to be brought to court so the truth behind the allusions would be fully revealed. And since you would have to reveal your own identity in order to "stand in court and testify"..... the process should indeed be very interesting and revealling as to who is telling the truth and who is trying to hide truth under piles of obfuscation and/or sink it in the bottom of the muddy mucky flood swollen debris laden waters of "de Nile".

> There are, as you know, no names attached to the persons in http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128. So for starters you would have to admit that there is enough truth in the document so as to assign individuals to the stories told or alluded to there. A rather interesting position to be in, I would think.
>
> At any rate.... since it has been posted once in its entirity on this forum, I cannot reproduce it in full again.... but click on the name, "http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128", anywhere in this post and you will be taken directly to the document.
>
> For those who would like some help in attaching names to some of the persons portrayed.... or are interested in more of some of the stories alluded to.... I would strongly suggest going to the http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9938&view=findpost&p=151004 post in "The Unauthorized 3abn History Threads" thread, which is pinned at the top of the 3abn menu. Read down the list of post descriptions and click on the url given to find some of the vignettes from http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128 expanded, and in some cases identifications made.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 22 2007, 09:30 PM

It was interesting reading to say the least....

☒ sn

Posted by: GrammieTana May 23 2007, 01:13 PM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ May 22 2007, 11:30 PM) ☐
>
> It was interesting reading to say the least....
>
> ☒ sn

’es, it was interesting reading to say the least. When my sister, who knows Danny personally, read it she was truck by how clearly it explained a lot of things she had noticed about Danny many years before Linda was in he picture. ☐

3T

Powered by Invision Power Board (http://www.invisionboard.com)
© Invision Power Services (http://www.invisionpower.com)

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Scripture For Today

Posted by: Observer May 15 2007, 07:48 AM

Job 12:2 "Doubtless you are the peopole who know everything, and when you die, wisdom will vanish."
THE CLEAR WORD

I assume that everyone will applly this to others. I simply find it interesting.

Posted by: hollybygolly May 15 2007, 08:43 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 15 2007, 08:48 AM)
>
> Job 12:2 "Doubtless you are the peopole who know everything, and when you die, wisdom will vanish."
> THE CLEAR WORD
> I assume that everyone will applly this to others. I simply find it interesting.

Seems like anytime I try to point my finger at others, I need to just point back at myself. But there are those I know that this verse would apply to, too.

Posted by: Clay May 15 2007, 08:52 AM

> QUOTE(Observer @ May 15 2007, 08:48 AM)
>
> Job 12:2 "Doubtless you are the peopole who know everything, and when you die, wisdom will vanish."
> THE CLEAR WORD
> I assume that everyone will applly this to others. I simply find it interesting.

The Clear Word aint all that clear.... I prefer this translation and a few added verses for context....

Job 12:1-5 CEV

> QUOTE
>
> Job said to his friends: (2) You think you are so great, with all the answers. (3) But I know as much as you do, and so does everyone else. (4) I have always lived right, and God answered my prayers; now friends make fun of me. (5) It's easy to condemn those who are suffering, when you have no troubles.

or this one a little better from The Message Bible

> QUOTE
>
> Job answered:
>
> "I'm sure you speak for all the experts, > and when you die there'll be no one left to tell us how to live.

> But don't forget that I also have a brain—
> I don't intend to play second fiddle to you.
> It doesn't take an expert to know these things.
>
> 4-6 "I'm ridiculed by my friends:
> 'So that's the man who had conversations with God!'
> Ridiculed without mercy:
> 'Look at the man who never did wrong!'
> It's easy for the well-to-do to point their fingers in blame, > for the well-fixed to pour scorn on the strugglers.

ow as to who I apply it to.... hmmm no one in particular... though it is a often a mistake to make ronouncements about a person when you have not walked a mile in their shoes...

Posted by: hollybygolly May 15 2007, 08:55 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 15 2007, 09:52 AM) ☐
>
> The Clear Word aint all that clear.... I prefer this translation and a few added verses for context....
>
> Job 12:1-5 CEV
>
> or this one a little better from The Message Bible
> Now as to who I apply it to.... hmmm no one in particular... though it is a often a mistake to make pronouncements about a person when you have not walked a mile in their shoes...

Posted by: YogusBearus May 15 2007, 09:20 AM

[quote name='Clay' date='May 15 2007, 09:52 AM' post='195631']
The Clear Word aint all that clear.... I prefer this translation and a few added verses for context....
/quote]

Agreed. Take your pick from any of a dozen real bibles and you will be way ahead.

-bear

Posted by: mozart May 15 2007, 02:52 PM

TY Observer, I'm so glad you did this. For several days now I have been convicted of some verses and I wanted to share them but didn't know how to make the thread applicable to those of us discussing the 3ABN issues. So, here's the scripture I want to share for us:

---

1 Tim. 6:20-21 & 2Tim. 2:22-26

Tim. 6:20-21
O Timothy! Guard what was committed to your trust, avoiding the profane and vane babblings nd contradictions of what is falsely called knowledge by professing it, some have strayed oncerning the faith. Grace be with you."

2Tim. 2:22-26
Flee from youthful lusts; but pursue righteousness, faith, love, and peace with those who call on the Lord out of a pure heart. But refuse foolish and ignorant questionings, knowing that they generate strife.
The Lord's servant must not quarrel, but be gentle towards all, able to teach, patient, in gentleness and humility correcting those who are in opposition: perhaps God may give them repentance leading to a full knowledge of the truth, and they may come to their senses and escape the devil's snare, having been taken captive by him to do his will.

Be blessed, Mo

Posted by: Fran May 15 2007, 04:52 PM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 15 2007, 09:52 AM)
>
> The Clear Word aint all that clear.... I prefer this translation and a few added verses for context....
>
> Job 12:1-5 CEV
>
> or this one a little better from The Message Bible
> Now as to who I apply it to.... hmmm no one in particular... though it is a often a mistake to make pronouncements about a person when you have not walked a mile in their shoes...

Clay;

Thank you, Clay, for the clarification.

There is no one I can apply the text too. I have never met a person who knows everything; only one that claim they do. There was one in my family that proclaimed all the time, "I am the most perfect human being in the Universe." NOT! rofl

I am sure that everyone reading my posts has already figured out I don't know everything. I already have that one figured out! rofl

---

Posted by: Rosyroi May 20 2007, 11:02 PM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 15 2007, 03:52 PM)
>
> Clay;
>
> Thank you, Clay, for the clarification.
>
> There is no one I can apply the text too. I have never met a person who knows everything; only one that claim they do. There was one in my family that proclaimed all the time, "I am the most perfect human being in the Universe." NOT! rofl
>
> I am sure that everyone reading my posts has already figured out I don't know everything. I already have that one figured out! rofl

Y'all took them werds rat outta my mouth.

Rosyroi

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ The Judgment

Posted by: Watchman Feb 10 2007, 08:41 AM

Matt 12:36
"But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment,For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."
John 5:22
"For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed ALL judgment unto the Son."
"Matt. 5:37
"But let your communication be, Yea, yea;Nay,nay; for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."
Acts 5:38,39
"And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone:for if this counsel or this work be of men , it will come to nought: But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight AGAINST God."
1Sam 16:7
"for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

I do not know who is or who is not guilty in this 3abn dilemma. The only ones I know for sure that ARE guilty are the ones who are posting and permitting the posting of these disgraceful websites that are defaming the work of God. The scripture commands us NOT to go to court with unbelievers, and tells us it is better to be defrauded (1 Cor. 6). This is because the cause of God was not to be put to shame before unbelievers. The internet reaches worldwide. How great will be the judgment of God against YOU for this. God knows how to righteously judge, and He knows how to discipline people. He does not need you. Woe unto you all.

Posted by: Clay Feb 10 2007, 08:48 AM

thank you for your comments, welcome to BSDA. I see this is your first post since joining.....

> QUOTE
>
> 2Tim 2:23 But refuse the foolish and uninstructed questionings, knowing that they generate quarrels.

you have a good day.....

Posted by: seraph|m Feb 10 2007, 09:00 AM

> QUOTE(Watchman @ Feb 10 2007, 09:41 AM)
>
> ...Woe unto you...

I too welcome you to BlackSDA

Eze 3:18 When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked [man] shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.
Eze 3:19 Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul.
Eze 3:20 Again, When a righteous [man] doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumblingblock before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

Eze 3:21 Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous [man], that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou hast delivered thy soul.

And, suggest the following - Physician heal thyself.

happysabl

Posted by: Clay Feb 10 2007, 09:04 AM

I am asking all of our experienced members to join me in welcoming Watchman and help bring her up to speed as to how we do things here.... She is new and probably means well, but at this point is under-informed.... Let's try to make her stay a pleasant one (read between the lines, that means no blasting her out of the water)..... thank you family....

Posted by: Green Cochoa Feb 10 2007, 09:06 AM

> QUOTE
>
> LUKE
> 18:1 And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint;
> 18:2 Saying, There was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man:
> 18:3 And there was a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary.
> 18:4 And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man;
> 18:5 Yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.
> 18:6 And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith.

Hmmm.... can we say, persistence pays? Jesus seems to be commending this woman for going so determinedly to the judge.

> QUOTE
>
> JOHN (Jesus' words)
> 7:24 Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

Do you suppose He is saying we should never judge? Or simply that we should judge well...

> QUOTE
>
> JOHN (Jesus' words)
> 8:15 Ye judge after the flesh; I judge no man.
> 8:16 And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.
> 8:17 It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.

Now, if "ALL judgment" is committed to the Son, and if the Son says "I judge no man," we have an apparent discrepancy. Since God does not lie, the discrepancy must lie in our own assumptions. Best to be careful in interpreting these issues, that we speak not from the abundance of our ignorance, knowing that our wisdom is foolishness with God.

Welcome to the forum! I always appreciate those who find relevant scriptures to support their views. And, yes, I believe we should remember that our every word is noted in the record books of Heaven.

God bless!

Posted by: Clay Feb 10 2007, 09:13 AM

Thank you Greenie for exercising patience while you rightly divided the word.....

Posted by: vanburton Feb 10 2007, 09:33 AM

Since this thread has thus far largely consisted of Bible quotations, I figured to add a couple of more.

"Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."
Matthew 7:20

The plural form of fruit is used here in context of "their".

Galatians 5:22 begins, "But the fruit (singular) of the Spirit is . . ."

If one fruit is missing, could it be that all the others are made of none effect (the "if one commandment is broken, all are broken" principle)?

Posted by: Clay Feb 10 2007, 09:40 AM

> QUOTE(vanburton @ Feb 10 2007, 09:33 AM)
>
> Since this thread has thus far largely consisted of Bible quotations, I figured to add a couple of more.
>
> "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."
> Matthew 7:20
>
> The plural form of fruit is used here in context of "their".
>
> Galatians 5:22 begins, "But the fruit (singular) of the Spirit is . . ."
>
> If one fruit is missing, could it be that all the others are made of none effect (the "if one commandment is broken, all are broken" principle)?

Interesting question Vanburton..... and welcome to BSDA.....

Posted by: PaperTigers Feb 10 2007, 10:19 AM

welcome.gif

vanburton & Watchman pull up a seat ☒ tableta you'll soon find out this is a pretty awesome group of people!

Posted by: Watchman Feb 10 2007, 10:39 AM

Isa. 47:3,10 "Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen: I will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man. For thou hast trusted in thy wickedness: thou has said, None seeth me, Thy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath perverted thee; and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else beside me."
Rev. 3:18, 19 "I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see. As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore and repent."
1 Peter 2:17 "Honour ALL men. Love the brotherhood. FEAR GOD. Honour the king."
Phil. 2:2-5, 14, 15 "Fulfill ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind. Leet nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind LET EACH ESTEEM OTHER BETTER THAN THEMSELVES. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus....Do all things without murmurings and disputings; That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world."
Matt. 7:1-3 "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again. And why beholdest thou the mote which is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?"
Romans 2:23,24 "Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law, dishonourest thou God? For the NAME of GOD is blasphemed among the Gentiles, THROUGH YOU.'
Rev. 2:5 "Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent."
Isa. 65:5 "Which say, Stand by thyself, come not near to me: for I am HOLIER THAN THOU. These are a smoke in my nose, a fire that burneth all the day."
Prov. 6:12,14-16,19 "A naughty person, a wicked man, walketh with a froward mouth. Frowardness is in his heart, he deviseth mischief continually; he soweth discord. Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall he be broken without remedy. These six things doth the Lord HATE: yea, seven are an ABOMINATION unto Him....HE THAT SOWETH DISCORD AMONG BRETHREN."
There is Someone higher than the GC to consider.
Gen. 16:13
"Thou God seest me."

Posted by: Clay Feb 10 2007, 11:28 AM

thank you for those passages Watchman.... I suppose you have something to say? I am trying to hear it but you are quoting scripture... out of context btw, but we can deal with that later...

Would you be kind enough to unpack your latest post and explain how you feel it is applicable? thanks and have a blessed sabbath...

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Feb 10 2007, 11:57 AM

Watchman, if you've not done so I would encourage you to wade through the pinned areas as well as spending a few days simply reading the topics here before you jump into the deep end of the pool. Sharks do abound

Richard

Posted by: Panama_Pete Feb 10 2007, 12:43 PM

> QUOTE(Watchman @ Feb 10 2007, 08:41 AM)
>
> I do not know who is or who is not guilty in this 3abn dilemma. The only ones I know for sure that ARE guilty are the ones who are posting and permitting the posting of these disgraceful websites that are defaming the work of God. The scripture commands us NOT to go to court with unbelievers, and tells us it is better to be defrauded (1 Cor. 6). This is because the cause of God was not to be put to shame before unbelievers. The internet reaches worldwide. How great will be the judgment of God against YOU for this. God knows how to righteously judge, and He knows how to discipline people. He does not need you. Woe unto you all.

Watchman,

Welcome to BlackSDA.

I look forward to reading your posts in the future. Consider Richard Sherwin's suggestion that you read the pinned items at the top of the 3ABN section.

You said, "I do not know...." Therefore, it is important for us to be kind and considerate to you as you continue your journey into understanding the issues involved.

Once again, welcome to BlackSDA.

Best Wishes,

Pete

> QUOTE(vanburton @ Feb 10 2007, 09:33 AM)
>
> Since this thread has thus far largely consisted of Bible quotations, I figured to add a couple of more.
>
> "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."
> Matthew 7:20
>
> The plural form of fruit is used here in context of "their".
>
> Galatians 5:22 begins, "But the fruit (singular) of the Spirit is . . ."
>
> If one fruit is missing, could it be that all the others are made of none effect (the "if one commandment is broken, all are broken" principle)?

Wecome to BSDA, Vanburton.

Best Wishes,

Pete.

Posted by: Noahswife Feb 10 2007, 03:50 PM

Welcome Watchman and Vanburton.

I hope that today your Sabbath experience has resulted in a renewed closeness with your Creator.

I recommend that you look around at different topics other than just the 3ABN area and get to know the people here. I do not believe it is possible to have an informed opinion or to be able to participate in a meaningful and informed way about what is posted here without doing that together with reading what has already been posted.

You should feel free to ask sincere and informed questions of any of the posters and I recommend that you consider doing so via PMs until you are familiar with what has previously been discussed. If you do not know how to use that function since you are new here, ask an Admin and they will show you how.

I suggest that you use the PM method at first because many questions that you will/should have are already answered in these posts.

I am here because I have been extended that privilege and appreciate the administration's allowing each of us the right to express our opinion in an assertive but preferably non aggressive way.

I believe that attacking another individual's relationship with God is never acceptable behavior no matter how different their opinion may be than your own. In my opinion doing so dressed in the armor of anonymity that this forum provides you is the behavior of a coward.

So please feel free to join us in open and informed discussions. Please feel free to use the "I" word in expressing opinions. I have had to learn to do that. It is a style of communication that works better than telling people they are wrong and closing down all communication.

nw

Posted by: Bystander Feb 10 2007, 04:05 PM

I believe that attacking another individual's relationship with God is never acceptable behavior no matter how different their opinion may be than your own. In my opinion doing so dressed in the armor of anonymity that this forum provides you is the behavior of a coward.

nw

Nicely put nw. Welcome watchman and vanburton. The only thing I could add would be that it is not right to attack another individuals relationship with God...UNLESS... It is Danny Shelton and many other 3abn personal. You will find here, That is the exception to the rule..Oh and one more thing...They will tell you repeatedly to go back and read the threads from the beginning so you will be intelligent enough to comment on these issues.

edited for content.....

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 10 2007, 04:51 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 10 2007, 03:05 PM)
>
> I believe that attacking another individual's relationship with God is never acceptable behavior no matter how different their opinion may be than your own. In my opinion doing so dressed in the armor of anonymity that this forum provides you is the behavior of a coward.
>
> nw
> Nicely put nw. Welcome watchman and vanburton. The only thing I could add would be that it is not right to attack another individuals relationship with God...UNLESS... It is Danny Shelton and many other 3abn personal. You will find here, That is the exception to the rule..Oh and one more thing...They will tell you repeatedly to go back and read the threads from the beginning so you will be intelligent enough to comment on these issues.

Hi Bystander,

I understand how you might feel sensitive to the point of making your somewhat mean-spirited remark above but it is sad that you would feel the need to use it on newbies.

vanburton pointed out last month some wonderful information in EGW's writings about our duty to reprove sin. I will post those paragraphs here for Watchman to read so she will see why some of us have a burden to reveal the truth about certain matters.

Duty to Reprove Sin

I have been shown that God here illustrates how He regards sin among those who profess to be His commandment-keeping people. Those whom He has specially honored with witnessing the remarkable exhibitions of His power, as did ancient Israel, and who will even then venture to disregard His express directions, will be subjects of His wrath. He would teach His people that disobedience and sin are exceedingly offensive to Him and are not to be lightly regarded. He shows us that when His people are found in sin they should at once take decided measures to put that sin from them, that His frown may not rest upon them all. But if the sins of the people are passed over by those in responsible positions, His frown will be upon them, and the people of God, as a body, will be held responsible for those sins. In His dealings with His people in the past the Lord shows the necessity of purifying the church from wrongs. One sinner may diffuse darkness that will exclude the light of God from the entire congregation. When the people realize that darkness is settling upon them, and they do not know the cause, they should seek God earnestly, in great humility and self-abasement, until the wrongs which grieve His Spirit are searched out and put away. {3T 265.1}

The prejudice which has arisen against us because we have reproved the wrongs that God has shown me existed, and the cry that has been raised of harshness and severity, are unjust. God bids us speak, and we will not be silent. If wrongs are apparent among His people, and if the servants of God pass on indifferent to them, they virtually sustain and justify the sinner, and are alike guilty and will just as surely receive the displeasure of God; for they will be made responsible for the sins of the guilty. In vision I have been pointed to many instances where the displeasure of God has been incurred by a neglect on the part of His servants to deal with the wrongs and sins existing among them. Those who have excused these wrongs have been thought by the people to be very amiable and lovely in disposition, simply because they shunned to discharge a plain Scriptural duty. The task was not agreeable to their feelings; therefore they avoided it. {3T 265.2}

The spirit of hatred which has existed with some because the wrongs among God's people have been reproved has brought blindness and a fearful deception upon their own souls, making it impossible for them to discriminate between right and wrong. They have put out their own spiritual eyesight. They may witness wrongs, but they do not feel as did Joshua and humble themselves because the danger of souls is felt by them. {3T 266.1}

The true people of God, who have the spirit of the work of the Lord and the salvation of souls at heart, will ever view sin in its real, sinful character. They will always be on the side of faithful and plain dealing with sins which easily beset the people of God. Especially in the closing work for the church, in the sealing time of the one hundred and forty-four thousand who are to stand without fault before the throne of God, will they feel most deeply the wrongs of God's professed people. This is forcibly set forth by the prophet's illustration of the last work under the figure of the men each having a slaughter weapon in his hand. One man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn by his side. "And the Lord said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof." {3T 266.2}

Who are standing in the counsel of God at this time? Is it those who virtually excuse wrongs among the professed people of God and who murmur in their hearts, if not openly, against those who would reprove sin? Is it those who take their stand against them and sympathize with those who commit wrong? No, indeed! Unless they repent, and leave the work of Satan in oppressing those who have the burden of the work and in holding up the hands of sinners in Zion, they will never receive the mark of God's sealing approval. They will fall in the general destruction of the wicked, represented by the work of the five men bearing slaughter weapons. Mark this point with care: Those who receive the pure mark of truth, wrought in them by the power of the Holy Ghost, represented by a mark by the man in linen, are those "that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done" in the church. Their love for purity and the honor and glory of God is such, and they have so clear a view of the exceeding sinfulness of sin, that they are represented as being in agony, even sighing and crying. Read the ninth chapter of Ezekiel. {3T 267.1}

But the general slaughter of all those who do not thus see the wide contrast between sin and righteousness, and do not feel as those do who stand in the counsel of God and receive the mark, is described in the order to the five men with slaughter weapons: "Go ye after him through the city, and smite: let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity: slay utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women: but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and begin at My sanctuary." {3T 267.2}

Posted by: Bystander Feb 10 2007, 05:18 PM

I seriously doubt that she meant to trash people all over the internet

Eg is the one who said to never ever gossip about another period. She goes on to say you can't know what's true if you didn't see it with your own eyes.

edited for content....

Posted by: erik Feb 10 2007, 05:24 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 10 2007, 02:05 PM)
>
> I believe that attacking another individual's relationship with God is never acceptable behavior no matter how different their opinion may be than your own. In my opinion doing so dressed in the armor of anonymity that this forum provides you is the behavior of a coward.
>
> nw
> Nicely put nw. Welcome watchman and vanburton. The only thing I could add would be that it is not right to attack another individuals relationship with God...UNLESS... It is Danny Shelton and many other 3abn personal. You will find here, That is the exception to the rule..Oh and one more thing...They will tell you repeatedly to go back and read the threads from the beginning so you will be intelligent enough to comment on these issues.

Bystander

A few yes or no questions for you?

if you care to answer them.

1. Is it attacking or building up a persons relationship with God, to look the other way if they are in open sin? Yes or no.

2. Is it building up of ones relationship with God to us lawyers to settle disputes with others believers? yes or no.

Erik

2.

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 10 2007, 03:18 PM) ☐
>
> I seriously doubt that she meant to trash people all over the internet
>
> Eg is the one who said to never ever gossip about another period. She goes on to say you can't know what's true if you didn't see it with your own eyes.

how about provide the cites for your qoutes, please?

erik

Posted by: Ralph Feb 10 2007, 05:53 PM

> QUOTE(Richard Sherwin @ Feb 10 2007, 10:57 AM) ☐
>
> Watchman, if you've not done so I would encourage you to wade through the pinned areas as well as spending a few days simply reading the topics here before you jump into the deep end of the pool. Sharks do abound ☐
>
> Richard

I agree, Richard. It is an excellent idea to read the pinned articles first. Probably what has helped me steer my way through muddied waters was to go back and read http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128 (Just click the name and it will take you to the article.) I first read it on May 20, 2005. The first time I read it, I found it to be an interesting fable, but over the months, as more pieces of information come in, I find that it Jorgen VanBraun's article very close to reality.

Posted by: husbandoftheyear Feb 10 2007, 06:29 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 10 2007, 06:18 PM) ☐
>
> Eg is the one who said to never ever gossip about another period. She goes on to say you can't know what's true if you didn't see it with your own eyes.

Agreed. But the way I understand your posts, you only receive information from others. By your own admittance, BTW.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 10 2007, 10:21 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Feb 10 2007, 04:18 PM) ☐
>
> I seriously doubt that she meant to trash people all over the internet

> Eg is the one who said to never ever gossip about another period. She goes on to say you can't know what's true if you didn't see it with your own eyes.
>
> edited for content....

ystander, can you tell me how working to bring out truth is "trash"ing people all over the internet?

Vhat you refer to as gossip is not what I find here. There are people here who have seen it with their own yes - past and present employees of 3abn such as sister, paper tigers, husbandoftheyear and panama_pete or example. There are also the statements/testimonies of the alleged victims of pastoral sexual abuse. Two r three witnesses is what the Bible tells us is needed. We have that.

n Sister White's statements I find a clear message that sin is to be dealt with or else we share in the unishment.

Posted by: princessdi Feb 11 2007, 01:11 AM

Now see everyone was being so nice, until Bystnader ruined it....quoti.ng scriptures?.....Ye shall know them by their fruits.............tsk, tsk, tsk, Bystander........Everyone else, Good job!

BTW, Welcome Watchman and Vanburton!!! I hope you will both stay and check out the rest of our site. The forums, and particularly Live Chat and game arcade!

Posted by: Watchman Feb 11 2007, 02:33 AM

The real point of the scriptures which I quoted have been overlooked. But then, I should not be surprised. 1 Cor. 2:14 "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. " I have not come on this site to enter into clever debates or wordplays. Rather, the character of God and worth of souls is my concern. I have been reading these posts for weeks. The reason I do not know who is right or wrong is because I am not God or the judge. One only need to consider God's people from Biblical times to realize that nothing has changed that much. However, the issue here is the BROADCASTING ALL OVER THE INTERNATIONAL INTERNET OF THIS INFORMATION. Two wrongs do not make one right. And even if people are right, as someone once said-"often when people are in the right they sin the most. " It is fine to quote Ellen White. But she would NOT endorse what is taking place here. As Jesus said to the woman taken in adultery, John 8:7 "he that is without sin among you let him first cast a stone." How much time are you spending in fasting and prayer over this? I have been. The words we speak exert a powerful influence. Matt 18:6,7 "But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea. Woe unto the world because of offences for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh." Do you have any idea of the baleful influence this site has on people outside of the faith reading this for the first time? Or on those weak in the faith and struggling along? Do you REALLY want on your conscience the loss of their eternal life? I would not want to answer to God for that. Rebuking perceived sin is one thing, SPREADING THIS TYPE OF THING LIKE WILDFIRE IN THE PUBLIC FORUM is not pleasing or helping God. Is He desperate? To explain further. God does not need our money. We give to His cause because it is a privilege to be co-workers with Him. It is really a test of our selfish natures. All the gold and silver are His, with the cattle on a thousand hills. Can anyone actually think God cannot finish the work without their money? Ludicrous. Likewise, God does NOT NEED HELP in solving the 3abn dilemma. He is the fountain of wisdom. What is going on here, apparently unknowingly to the folks in this forum is a test of everyone's character, not just the 3abn folks. Would you believe that people are already leaving the Adventist faith and being turned away from joining it, by your website? A poem by Will Carlton to ponder. BOYS FLYING KITES HAUL IN THEIR WHITE WINGED BIRDS
BUT YOU CAN'T DO THAT WHEN YOU'RE FLYING WORDS
CAREFUL WITH FIRE IS GOOD ADVICE WE KNOW
CAREFUL WITH WORDS IS TEN TIMES DOUBLY SO THOUGHTS UNEXPRESSED MAY SOMETIMES FALL BACK DEAD
BUT ONLY GOD CAN KILL THEM ONCE THEY'RE SAID
God be with you is my prayer for the influence you are casting for eternity on this website.

Posted by: wwjd Feb 11 2007, 02:57 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ Feb 10 2007, 10:21 PM)
>
> Bystander, can you tell me how working to bring out truth is "trash"ing people all over the internet?
>
> What you refer to as gossip is not what I find here. There are people here who have seen it with their own eyes - past and present employees of 3abn such as sister, paper tigers, husbandoftheyear and panama_pete for example. There are also the statements/testimonies of the alleged victims of pastoral sexual abuse. Two or three witnesses is what the Bible tells us is needed. We have that.
>
> In Sister White's statements I find a clear message that sin is to be dealt with or else we share in the punishment.

I would like to answer this, If bystander chooses to answer at a later time, he can....
So you are saying that hoty, paper tigers, pete, saw with their own eyes...what? Danny embezzling funds? the financial dept doctoring books? that he was seeing Brandi on the side? they saw him doing anything illegal? They saw him being abusive to Linda? Those are most of the allegations I can think of on Danny, so, what did they see? This is the problem. They might not like him or like the way he handled something but they didn't like Linda either, maybe more so. That does not give them the privilege to say they "saw" these accusations taking place and it doesn not give you or anyone else the right to say they were witnesses to anything when they weren't. Maybe I should say they were not witnesses to anything relevant to these accusations.
While I am talking I will give you my opinion on Danny. The worst fault that Danny had was giving his exwife her way constantly. He built her up constantly, he bragged on her constantly to the point of making some gag, and he waited on her all the time. Those were faults that bothered a lot of people because they felt that she more than took advantage of it and it contributed to an ego problem. just my opinion

---

Posted by: Green Cochoa Feb 11 2007, 03:20 AM

> QUOTE(Watchman @ Feb 11 2007, 02:33 AM)
>
> [SNIP
> I have been reading these posts for weeks. The reason I do not know who is right or wrong is because I am not God or the judge. One only need to consider God's people from Biblical times to realize that nothing has changed that much. However, the issue here is the BROADCASTING ALL OVER THE INTERNATIONAL INTERNET OF THIS INFORMATION. Two wrongs do not make one right. And even if people are right, as someone once said-"often when people are in the right they sin the most. " It is fine to quote Ellen White. But she would NOT endorse what is taking place here. As Jesus said to the woman taken in adultery, John 8:7 "he that is without sin among you let him first cast a stone." How much time are you spending in fasting and prayer over this? I have been. [SNIP]

With all due respect, Watchman, you have just touched on something which causes me to speak. I am a witness to a particular situation relevant to such a call for fasting and prayer as you have asked for here. The call was sent out to a number of people, and found its way to 3ABN as well. Apparently, DS did not appreciate the call for fasting and prayer, as it accompanied the idea that 3ABN was experiencing difficulties and going through some changes. In response, DS threatened legal action against the sender of that call to prayer message. May such not become your experience as well.

Of course, Danny has often broadcasted his gaffes on INTERNATIONAL TELEVISION AND INTERNET, which I would estimate to have at least ten thousand times as much exposure as does this website. On the other hand, Danny has been advertising this website, too, so he has promoted its exposure a little.

Posted by: wwjd Feb 11 2007, 03:20 AM

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Feb 10 2007, 05:53 PM) ☐
>
> I agree, Richard. It is an excellent idea to read the pinned articles first. Probably what has helped me steer my way through muddied waters was to go back and read http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9823&view=findpost&p=138128 (Just click the name and it will take you to the article.) I first read it on May 20, 2005. The first time I read it, I found it to be an interesting fable, but over the months, as more pieces of information come in, I find that it Jorgen VanBraun's article very close to reality.

question, where you do think jorgen got the intimate seeds of information even though twisted beyond recognition? Had to be Danny or Linda. Honestly even if I didn't know anything about these people, the televangelist is one of the most ludicrous pieces of work I have ever read. When you know some of the people being described it is beyond ludicrous and actually turns into incredible lies. Just one example. I knew Goldie and Tommy Shelton Sr. my whole life. They were 2 of the most wonderful sincere god fearing christians that I have ever known. In early years when times were hard Tommy Sr did play in the night clubs of the time simply to put food on the table. He didn't make enough in his trucking business to support the family full time. One thing I can tell you for a fact, even when he wasn't a christian he was one of the most moral men I ever knew. He did his job and came home. He never smoked, he never drank and he never "caroused." Contrary to what I read on here, he never ever took the children with him. When he became an Adventist christian it just amplified all the wonderful traits that he had already.
Goldie had a hard time raising children in near poverty and things only got worse after Tom had his massive, disabling hear tattack at the age of 35. In order to put food on the table, she worked at painting houses inside, cleaning houses, working in a baker for minimum wage, working in a restaurant and at 49 years old after Tom's death she even mowed some lawns!! She loved her family and was as faithful of a christian woman as anyone I ever knew. She played the piano at the adventist church for over 50 years!!! and that included when all 5 of her children were young and growing up. She was always there for their church services or any evangelistic meetings. She loved her church with a vengence and she loved her husband and family the same.
Tears rolled down my face when I read on THE TELEVANGELIST That she was unfaithful to her husband because he was sick. What a terrible terrible lie. All the years that I knew her, what people thought of her was of the utmost importance. She never ever wanted to be a stumbling block in any way to anybody. Her reputation was unsullied up until she died in 99. If she were alive to know what had been written about her, I don't know if she would have ever recovered from such a lie told on the internet, of all things. Whoever gave the author of this piece of trash, those terrible lies, as well as many others, will account before God one day.
I said all that to say this: I gave an example of just one terrible lie in that book. How many others are there? This one had not even a seed of truth. How many others are just as blatant. Please please do not get your information from that piece of filth. IT ISN'T TRUE.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Feb 11 2007, 10:49 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 11 2007, 02:57 AM) ☐
>
> So you are saying that hoty, paper tigers, pete, saw with their own eyes...what? Danny embezzling funds? the financial dept doctoring books? that he was seeing Brandi on the side? they saw him doing anything illegal? They saw him being abusive to Linda? Those are most of the allegations I can think of on Danny, so, what did they see?

Dear Newbies reading this,

Keep in mind that this is a hypothetical retort. The posters named above, including myself, have not stated that they watched the financial department books being doctored or followed Brandy and Danny around the countryside to see people together, as could be inferred by the above post. The post appears to be sarcastic conjecture relating imagined events being supplied by the poster, WWJD.

This retort is of the type known as reductio ad absurdum. However, in this case, WWJD seems to muddy the waters a bit in an attempt to impose such an argument.

In addition, I spell her name "Brandy" with a y, not i, because I believe that to be the correct spelling.

Pete

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Feb 11 2007, 11:22 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 11 2007, 01:57 AM)
>
> I would like to answer this, If bystander chooses to answer at a later time, he can....
> So you are saying that hoty, paper tigers, pete, saw with their own eyes...what? Danny embezzling funds? the financial dept doctoring books? that he was seeing Brandi on the side? they saw him doing anything illegal? They saw him being abusive to Linda? Those are most of the allegations I can think of on Danny, so, what did they see? This is the problem. They might not like him or like the way he handled something but they didn't like Linda either, maybe more so. That does not give them the privilege to say they "saw" these accusations taking place and it doesn not give you or anyone else the right to say they were witnesses to anything when they weren't. Maybe I should say they were not witnesses to anything relevant to these accusations.
> While I am talking I will give you my opinion on Danny. The worst fault that Danny had was giving his exwife her way constantly. He built her up constantly, he bragged on her constantly to the point of making some gag, and he waited on her all the time. Those were faults that bothered a lot of people because they felt that she more than took advantage of it and it contributed to an ego problem. just my opinion

Thank you for your opinion on the part of my post regarding past and present employees. I don't think it speaks to why I invoked past and present employees as first hand witnesses but it is interesting nonetheless. I look forward to a response from Bystander as well.

Your opinion on Danny's worst fault is quite interesting.

What is your opinion on the statements/testimonies we have as evidence from the alleged victims of pastoral sexual abuse?

PB

Posted by: erik Feb 11 2007, 11:27 AM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 11 2007, 01:20 AM)
>
> question, where you do think jorgen got the intimate seeds of information even though twisted beyond recognition? Had to be Danny or Linda. Honestly even if I didn't know anything about these people, the televangelist is one of the most ludicrous pieces of work I have ever read. When you know some of the people being described it is beyond ludicrous and actually turns into incredible lies. Just one example. I knew Goldie and Tommy Shelton Sr. my whole life. They were 2 of the most wonderful sincere god fearing christians that I have ever known. In early years when times were hard Tommy Sr did play in the night clubs of the time simply to put food on the table. He didn't make enough in his trucking business to > support the family full time. One thing I can tell you for a fact, even when he wasn't a christian he was one of the most moral men I ever knew. He did his job and came home. He never smoked, he never drank and he never "caroused." Contrary to what I read on here, he never ever took the children with him. When he became an Adventist christian it just amplified all the wonderful traits that he had already.

> Goldie had a hard time raising children in near poverty and things only got worse after Tom had his massive, disabling hear tattack at the age of 35. In order to put food on the table, she worked at painting houses inside, cleaning houses, working in a baker for minimum wage, working in a restaurant and at 49 years old after Tom's death she even mowed some lawns!! She loved her family and was as faithful of a christian woman as anyone I ever knew. She played the piano at the adventist church for over 50 years!!! and that included when all 5 of her children were young and growing up. She was always there for their church services or any evangelistic meetings. She loved her church with a vengence and she loved her husband and family the same.
> Tears rolled down my face when I read on THE TELEVANGELIST That she was unfaithful to her husband because he was sick. What a terrible terrible lie. All the years that I knew her, what people thought of her was of the utmost importance. She never ever wanted to be a stumbling block in any way to anybody. Her reputation was unsullied up until she died in 99. If she were alive to know what had been written about her, I don't know if she would have ever recovered from such a lie told on the internet, of all things. Whoever gave the author of this piece of trash, those terrible lies, as well as many others, will account before God one day.
> I said all that to say this: I gave an example of just one terrible lie in that book. How many others are there? This one had not even a seed of truth. How many others are just as blatant. Please please do not get your information from that piece of filth. IT ISN'T TRUE.

VWJd,

am glad to hear that danny and tommy parents were better people then what has been presentted, ust so questions that come to mind how did tommy wander so far from his solid upbringing, and why is he ıot a SDA like his mother was?

just told Watchman in different post that i will to for discussion sake say everything about danny and 3 abn s gossip, But charges against Tommy are Well past would be need to by DA to sit grand jury down and look ıt bring formal charges against Tommy, so it goes to reason that if the secular legal world could do that that he church should be willing to do the same. So lets put the charges agaisnt Tommy to rest by proving them vrong or by at least giving some reason why seven different men would bring the same story forward?

\Lso since you are in the know way is Tommy not any SDA?

:rik

Posted by: Ralph Feb 11 2007, 12:46 PM

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 11 2007, 02:20 AM) ☐
>
> question, where you do think jorgen got the intimate seeds of information even though twisted beyond recognition?
> ...
> IT ISN'T TRUE.

‹eep talkin'. I'm listening.

Posted by: seraph|m Mar 16 2007, 04:43 PM

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Feb 11 2007, 01:46 PM)
>
> Keep talkin'. I'm listening.

Still listening...

Posted by: Grith May 8 2007, 08:35 PM

> QUOTE(Watchman @ Feb 10 2007, 10:41 AM)
>
> I do not know who is or who is not guilty in this 3abn dilemma. The only ones I know for sure that ARE guilty are the ones who are posting and permitting the posting of these disgraceful websites that are defaming the work of God. The scripture commands us NOT to go to court with unbelievers, and tells us it is better to be defrauded (1 Cor. 6). This is because the cause of God was not to be put to shame before unbelievers. The internet reaches worldwide. How great will be the judgment of God against YOU for this. God knows how to righteously judge, and He knows how to discipline people. He does not need you. Woe unto you all.

Though I lurked and read for some time before I joined BSDA, I'm still reading through the many topics here, and just came across this one. Watchman came charging in here posting about not going to court with unbelievers. I found her comments very interesting in light of the lawsuits that have been filed since then and just which side it was that filed them.

It made me think of a saying that a roommate of mine years ago was fond of saying: It takes one to know one. Oh, and it's scriptural, too.

> QUOTE
>
> Therefore thou art inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things. Romans 2:1

So no one misunderstands me, I do not see BSDA as sitting in judgment on the 3abn fiasco, but I see a number of people who seem to enjoy sitting in judgment of BSDA and those who post here.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 9 2007, 11:57 AM

Grith,

One of the interesting thing about this is that a lot of newbies coming in here read some heated discussions and think that the denizens of BlackSDA leaped grandly to conclusions. I read on here intently on a couple of occasions before joining a few months later, and it just isn't so.

The reason so many long-time members of BlackSDA believe the way they do about 3ABN is that many of them have had months if not years to digest the information presented here in the pinned threads. I remember the initial posts expressing doubt from people who have adamant opinions now.

Given enough information and documentation, an honest person will come to only one conclusion: the house at 3ABN needs a cleaning.

Soul

Posted by: Johann May 14 2007, 02:44 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 9 2007, 07:57 PM)
>
> Grith,
>
> One of the interesting thing about this is that a lot of newbies coming in here read some heated discussions and think that the denizens of BlackSDA leaped grandly to conclusions. I read on here intently on a couple of occasions before joining a few months later, and it just isn't so.
>
> The reason so many long-time members of BlackSDA believe the way they do about 3ABN is that many of them have had months if not years to digest the information presented here in the pinned threads. I remember the initial posts expressing doubt from people who have adamant opinions now.
>
> Given enough information and documentation, an honest person will come to only one conclusion: the house at 3ABN needs a cleaning.
>
> Soul

Posted by: Rosyroi May 14 2007, 03:11 PM

> QUOTE(SoulEspresso @ May 9 2007, 10:57 AM)
>
> Grith,
>
> One of the interesting thing about this is that a lot of newbies coming in here read some heated discussions and think that the denizens of BlackSDA leaped grandly to conclusions. I read on here intently on a couple of occasions before joining a few months later, and it just isn't so.
>
> The reason so many long-time members of BlackSDA believe the way they do about 3ABN is that many of them have had months if not years to digest the information presented here in the pinned threads. I remember the initial posts expressing doubt from people who have adamant opinions now.
>
> Given enough information and documentation, an honest person will come to only one conclusion: the house at 3ABN needs a cleaning.
>
> Soul

I agree Soul.
I was reading probably a month before I began posting; and then very carefully. I realized early on that I was in deep waters swimming with the sharks without a lifejacket. Soon after I began posting I noticed the Dannyscribes began posting their rude anti-christ-like behavior condemming everyone posting in here.(they may have been in before but they might have received orders to up the harrassment) But of course those Dannyscribes became part of BSDA until they crossed the line and had to leave either temporarily or permanently. Someone needs to let Danny know that when he gives the scripts to the Dannyscribes they need to get rid of all those words they love to use to downgrade others posting like 'evil surmising' and 'deliberate lies' and other silly words. Tsk Tsk...
JMO
back to my corner continuing reading learning daily

Rosyroi

Posted by: runner4him May 14 2007, 07:54 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 14 2007, 03:11 PM)
>
> I agree Soul.
> I was reading probably a month before I began posting; and then very carefully. I realized early on that I was in deep waters swimming with the sharks without a lifejacket. Soon after I began posting I noticed the Dannyscribes began posting their rude anti-christ-like behavior condemming everyone posting in here. (they may have been in before but they might have received orders to up the harrassment) But of course those Dannyscribes became part of BSDA until they crossed the line and had to leave either temporarily or permanently. Someone needs to let Danny know that when he gives the scripts to the Dannyscribes they need to get rid of all those words they love to use to downgrade others posting like 'evil surmising' and 'deliberate lies' and other silly words. Tsk Tsk...
> JMO
> back to my corner continuing reading learning daily
>
> Rosyroi

You took the words right out of my mouth about the deep waters with the sharks. I was really surprised to see the way they attack...doesn't DS know reactions like that only raise more red flags? It tells us so much....As we behold Him we become changed. We are a reflection of whom we serve. I think any honest Newbie who comes here seeking for truth will find enough information to allow them to make a determination about what is really going on at 3abn. In my opinion they will conclude that a house cleaning is in order.

Posted by: mozart May 15 2007, 01:55 PM

I agree. The folks here are bright and knowledgable and I wouldn't call the rest of us dummies. We are smart enough to add two and two anyways.
Seems the approach and attitude of the "guilty ones" is the same as the folks that come in here like sharks. Attack to destroy and defame one's character, Attack to shut people up & Attack to interrupt discussions. They seem to have only one method. Since that method is the same one they used on Linda, and so many others, it's only logical to follow the pattern and see that they only know one method of dealing with those who don't blindly or submissively "do as they're told".
They always accuse others of wanting to destroy DS & 3ABN when it's clear by their actions that they are the destroyers. They all act the same so what are we suppose to conclude?

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 14 2007, 06:54 PM)
>
> You took the words right out of my mouth about the deep waters with the sharks. I was really surprised to see the way they attack...doesn't DS know reactions like that only raise more red flags? It tells us so much....As we behold Him we become changed. We are a reflection of whom we serve. I think any honest Newbie who comes here seeking for truth will find enough information to allow them to make a determination about what is really going on at 3abn. In my opinion they will conclude that a house cleaning is in order.

Posted by: Johann May 17 2007, 07:29 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 15 2007, 09:55 PM)
>
> I agree. The folks here are bright and knowledgable and I wouldn't call the rest of us dummies. We are smart enough to add two and two anyways.
> Seems the approach and attitude of the "guilty ones" is the same as the folks that come in here like sharks. Attack to destroy and defame one's character, Attack to shut people up & Attack to interrupt discussions. They seem to have only one method. Since that method is the same one they used on Linda, and so many others, it's only logical to follow the pattern and see that they only know one method of dealing with those who don't blindly "do as their told".
> They always accuse others of wanting to destroy DS & 3ABN when it's clear by their actions that they are the destroyers. They all act the same so what are we suppose to conclude?

What are you to do, Mozart, when a human and his wealth replaces the divine that brings eternal life to mortals? What is the Biblical term for what replaces Christ?

Posted by: mozart May 17 2007, 12:31 PM

Interesting point Johann. Who was it that wrote "The AntiChrist Agenda"???

> QUOTE(Johann @ May 17 2007, 07:29 AM)
>
> What are you to do, Mozart, when a human and his wealth replaces the divine that brings eternal life to mortals? What is the Biblical term for what replaces Christ?

Posted by: Rosyroi May 17 2007, 07:24 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 17 2007, 10:31 AM)
>
> Interesting point Johann. Who was it that wrote "The AntiChrist Agenda"???

Hmmm... now where is a tongue in cheek emoticon when you need one?

Rosroi

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ 3abn Store

Posted by: runner4him May 16 2007, 09:19 AM

I am wondering.........if you go to the 3abn website and click on books, you will find the set of Uncle Arthur's Bible Stories sold for a donation of only $99 with no charge for shipping. This concerns me (I am a former Colporter) that the drastically reduced price of these particular books will take away sales from Colporters and Review and Pacific Press (the website states they come from the Phillipines). I called and asked about the listed price which states "$99 - donation". I was told "it is a fixed price"....you cannot give a lower amount...."it is fixed". How can 3abn be selling our books so cheap and how can they claim it is a donation when it is a fixed price? Wondering how do they reconcile all this on the books? Maybe someone out there can add some light on this. I started a new thread since I was not sure where to put this.

Posted by: Observer May 16 2007, 09:49 AM

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 16 2007, 09:19 AM)
>
> I am wondering.........if you go to the 3abn website and click on books, you will find the set of Uncle Arthur's Bible Stories sold for a donation of only $99 with no charge for shipping. This concerns me (I am a former Colporter) that the drastically reduced price of these particular books will take away sales from Colporters and Review and Pacific Press (the website states they come from the Phillipines). I called and asked about the listed price which states "$99 - donation". I was told "it is a fixed price"....you cannot give a lower amount...."it is fixed". How can 3abn be selling our books so cheap and how can they claim it is a donation when it is a fixed price? Wondering how do they reconcile all this on the books? Maybe someone out there can add some light on this. I started a new thread since I was not sure where to put this.

Here are my thoughts on the above:

1) If the price is fixed, 3-ABN, depending on IL law, may be required to return to the State of IL, sales tqxes on all such.

2) If the price is fixed, it is not a donation, and is probably not deductable on one's tax returns. In any case, tax deductable reciepts should only be issued for what is not "fair market value." I recently paid a charitable organization $70.00. I recieved this week a tax deductable reciept. It stated that after the deduction for services recieved, my allowable Federal tax deduction was $42.00. I.e. They had determined that for my $70.00, I had recieved benefits worth $28.00. So only $42.00 was deductable.

3) As some know, and others do not, the books sold by colpourters are published and sold outside of the United States for less than they are sold in the U.S. If you have a contact in that country, that person may very well be able to purchase those books at that discounted rated. All they have to do then is to ship them to the U.S. where they can be sold for a lower amount.

However, there is a problem with this. In order to legally do so, those shipments to the United States may be re quired to be labled as commercial shipments, with payments of custom duties, if required. In addition, the owner of the trademark/copyright, in the United States may have the legal right to restrict their entry into the U.S. In such a case they will not be allowed entry without such a release.

3) Shipments that enter the U.S. by other means, and/or without proper labeling as commercial shipments may be subject to consfication and/or criminal/civil sanctions.

NOTE: I am not trained in legal matters. I have no expertese in customs issues and the entery of goods to the United States for either personal or commercial purposes. I want to be very clear than I do not intend to imply that any books/goods sold by 3-ABN, or anyone associated with 3-ABN have entered the United States by any illegal means, or by any scheme intended to evade the payment of required customs duties, or to violate trademark/customs duties. Neither do I intend to imply that there is any irregularity in the sale of these items in the United States, or that any reciepts issued do not comply with laws that related to such reciepts, or that any who reicieve such reciepts use then in any irregular/illegal manner. Persons who are interested in such matters should seek the advice of competent legal advisors.

Posted by: Truly Blonde May 16 2007, 10:37 AM

Is it possible that these books could be on sale?

We all know that the ABC has sales where they offer things at reduced prices. It is also possible that they need to sell some of their inventory. I don't know what coulporters sell their books for but every book no matter who sells it would have a mark up for a profit.

When you buy things at a store there is a mark up. At the end of year sales things can be marked down as much as 75% and the stores are still making a profit.

If 3abn was having a financial problem it would make sense to sell off inventory cheaply while still making a profit (a smaller profit then usual) for two reasons, 1. reduces inventory, and 2 helps the cash flow.

jmo

Posted by: LaurenceD May 16 2007, 10:48 AM

Here's a guideline for Illinois sales tax exemption, for Not-for-profit organizations, for both buying and selling. As you read the entire document, keep in mind whether the organization

---

> If your organization is a not for profit charitable, religious, educational, cultural or arts organization it may be able to get an exemption from Illinois sales tax for some or all of the things your organization buys and sells. The following are answers to some of the basic questions about how the application process works and what an exemption can do for your organization.
>
> What must a charitable organization prove to the Department of Revenue?
> • The organization has no stock or shareholders;
> • The organization earns no profit, but instead gets the majority of its operating funds from public and private charity;
> • The organization provides no gain or profit to any person connected with it. All of the organization's funds must be used for its mission;
> • The organization offers its benefits to everyone who needs and applies for them; and
> • There are no obstacles in the way of those who need the services offered by the organization. For example, residency requirements and membership fees may be obstacles in the way of those who need your organization's services.
>
> http://www.clccrul.org/templates/UserFiles/Documents/salestax.pdf

Some organizations, such as 3abn, have provided some case law...
http://www.revenue.state.il.us/LegalInformation/Hearings/st/ST07-7.pdf

What I started to say above is keep in mind whether the organization is by law charitable, and whether or not it operates with a view to profit.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 16 2007, 10:49 AM

I don't want to add misinformation, but I seem to remember hearing that these books were donated to 3abn some time ago and then spoken of again fairly recently as still being available. When they were spoken of recently, I believe it was discussed that they are not made of the same quality materials as the same books printed here in the US.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 16 2007, 06:51 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 16 2007, 09:49 AM)
>
> I don't want to add misinformation, but I seem to remember hearing that these books were donated to 3abn some time ago and then spoken of again fairly recently as still being available. When they were spoken of recently, I believe it was discussed that they are not made of the same quality materials as the same books printed here in the US.

I agree with you. Seems like I heard that also.

Rosyroi

Posted by: mozart May 16 2007, 07:54 PM

on a 3abn live prog, DS said that a large quantity of these books had been donated to 3abn. he showed them and talked about them and said they would be selling them for only $99. i never got the "for a donation of $XX.XX " that Christian Ministries do. how can it be a donation if it is a fixed price?
they all do it tho'. so i guess it has to be legal.

> QUOTE(runner4him @ May 16 2007, 09:19 AM)
>
> I am wondering.........if you go to the 3abn website and click on books, you will find the set of Uncle Arthur's Bible Stories sold for a donation of only $99 with no charge for shipping. This concerns me (I am a former Colporter) that the drastically reduced price of these particular books will take away sales from Colporters and Review and Pacific Press (the website states they come from the Phillipines). I called and asked about the listed price which states "$99 - donation". I was told "it is a fixed price"....you cannot give a lower amount...."it is fixed". How can 3abn be selling our books so cheap and how can they claim it is a donation when it is a fixed price? Wondering how do they reconcile all this on the books? Maybe someone out there can add some light on this. I started a new thread since I was not sure where to put this.

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ The Danny Shelton Letters To Linda

Posted by: calvin Mar 18 2007, 12:08 PM

These private emails that Linda is making public do little to vindicate her. To the casual observer of this very messy and public divorce, these letters raise more questions in this he said/she said drama. Linda comes across as the one who as not moved on after three years that is wearing old and tired for many people.

In reading these emails from Danny on save3abn, the one consistence thing throughout is Danny's concern and believe that his wife was spending far too much time on the phone with the Dr. For you insiders, you say this is all a smoke screen, a convenience excuse to rid of his wife, doesn't appear that way. So was Linda spending hours a day on the phone, and why? Was she being discreet or openly taunting her husband? When you know something is a hot button with your spouse to the point that it could jeopardize your marriage and your job, after warning by several people around you, why would you continue to do it?

I think Linda would have done better by taking the high road, moving on with her life, her ministry if that is what she wants to do. Let others bash around this story. Now she comes across as another bitter, revengeful ex-wife.

Posted by: Pickle Mar 18 2007, 12:21 PM

One question, Calvin, is whether Linda is the one who has made these emails public. That site has explicitly marked some of them as not coming from her.

You've asked some good questions: How long was she talking on the phone, and why?

John Lomacang, Walt, Hal, and Danny have all claimed that they can prove the length, frequency, and/or content of these phone calls, and yet they refuse to do so.

Still, the questions remain. I asked a BSDA'er yesterday (not in PM) why Linda didn't just stop if her husband wanted her to stop. She said that a mother will do anything for her child.

But one thing is clear: Danny had no grounds for divorce, and even Walt claims that a year after the crisis, he still had no evidence that Linda had committed adultery.

How long and how frequent were those phone calls, and what was the content of those conversations, and to whom were they all made? I'd like to know that myself.

Posted by: mozart Mar 18 2007, 01:10 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 18 2007, 11:21 AM) ☐
>
> One question, Calvin, is whether Linda is the one who has made these emails public. That site has explicitly marked some of them as not coming from her.
>
> You've asked some good questions: How long was she talking on the phone, and why?
>
> John Lomacang, Walt, Hal, and Danny have all claimed that they can prove the length, frequency, and/or content of these phone calls, and yet they refuse to do so.

> Still, the questions remain. I asked a BSDA'er yesterday (not in PM) why Linda didn't just stop if her husband wanted her to stop. She said that a mother will do anything for her child.
>
> But one thing is clear: Danny had no grounds for divorce, and even Walt claims that a year after the crisis, he still had no evidence that Linda had committed adultery.
>
> How long and how frequent were those phone calls, and what was the content of those conversations, and to whom were they all made? I'd like to know that myself.

t's seems easy to assume that the evidence they claim to have on Linda is probably very questionable as to roving their cause and also questionable in the legal means in which it was obtained.
-->and to Calvin<--- i'm not sure why you criticize Linda assessing she is carrying on after 3yrs. when the anny hasn't shut up to this day. Also, the poor girl was coerced (sp) into a gag order or walk out empty anded. All the while 3abn airtime was being used to tell the world not of the 3 angels message but f the sordid accusations and assumptions that a bitter, controlling husband has toward his ex-vife. how can you peg Linda this way and not Danny. She seems from all i have observed to have taken the igh road as far as the public is concerned and was quiet and still is pretty quiet about the whole thing. these mails from him to her don't sound like a man with all his wits about him. he is mocking and egging her on to eact to him. sounds to me like he is trying his best to make her blow so he can say: "see, see how she is". hese are not the actions of a stable or Christian man. how long would you expect yourself to keep quiet when anny is shouting out to the whole world what a terrible person you are on his own sattelite station! what latform does Linda have calvin? i think your assessment is being very unfair.

Posted by: Noahswife Mar 18 2007, 01:23 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 18 2007, 02:10 PM) ☐
>
> these emails from him to her don't sound like a man with all his wits about him. he is mocking and egging her on to react to him. sounds to me like he is trying his best to make her blow so he can say: "see, see how she is". these are not the actions of a stable or Christian man.

r.

☒ TVsnack.

☒ P

Posted by: calvin Mar 18 2007, 01:46 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 18 2007, 01:10 PM) ☐
>
> it's seems easy to assume that the evidence they claim to have on Linda is probably very questionable as to proving their cause and also questionable in the legal means in which it was obtained.
> --->and to Calvin<--- i'm not sure why you criticize Linda assessing she is carrying on after 3yrs. when the Danny hasn't shut up to this day. Also, the poor girl was coerced (sp) into a gag order or walk out empty handed. All the while 3abn airtime was being used to tell the world not of the 3 angels message but of the sordid accusations and assumptions that a bitter, controlling husband has toward his ex-wife. how can you peg Linda this way and not Danny. She seems from all i have observed to have taken the high road as far as the public is concerned and was quiet and still is pretty quiet about the whole thing. these emails from him to her don't sound like a man with all his wits about him. he is mocking and egging her on to react to him. sounds to me like he is trying his best to make her blow so he > can say: "see, see how she is". these are not the actions of a stable or Christian man. how long would you expect yourself to keep quiet when Danny is shouting out to the whole world what a terrible person you are on his own sattelite station! what platform does Linda have calvin? i think your assessment is being very unfair.

seriously question whether this bashing of Linda by Danny is still continuing. Danny when on for 40 minutes ast month on live 3abn about the lies being told about him, but made no mention of Linda,. No mention of inda on 3abn website, no mention of Linda in 3abn World magazine (my sister-law is on the cover, BTW). he public does not see any Linda bashing, as least not anymore.... and please don't tell me Danny is pending time staying one step ahead of Linda making contacts to keep her from working, he has remarried nd moved on, time for Lind to do the same.

Posted by: princessdi Mar 18 2007, 02:01 PM

Calvin, if you consider the date on at least the email posted here>>>>>http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=12943&st=0 You will find that it is well after the time Linda has signed the gag order, and once again only Danny's side. He has plenty of time and opportunity to "set the stage" as he pleases. He said showed concnern in this email. Once again this email is sent, when Linda cannot respond. I doubt she would authorize the release of such a one sided account. This is why you have to look beyond the surface. And once again, I owuld have to ask where Danny was for Linda to hae these huge amounts of time for the phone, trips, allt aht he claims? Nobody else is aksing that question,a nd nobody has yet to answer.

Posted by: Jnana15 Mar 18 2007, 02:11 PM

[quote] name='calvin' date='Mar 18 2007, 02:46 PM' post='186215'
I seriously question whether this bashing of Linda by Danny is still continuing. Danny when on for 40 minutes last month on live 3abn about the lies being told about him, but made no mention of Linda,. No mention of Linda on 3abn website, no mention of Linda in 3abn World magazine (my sister-law is on the cover, BTW). The public does not see any Linda bashing, as least not anymore.... and please don't tell me Danny is spending time staying one step ahead of Linda making contacts to keep her from working, he has remarried and moved on, time for Lind to do the same.[quote]

Ouch! ☒ sofa1.gif

☒ kidd

Posted by: Daryl Fawcett Mar 18 2007, 03:43 PM

Calvin,

Are you saying that we should cease these discussions about Danny, Linda, Tommy, 3ABN, etc. and let them all get on with their lives?

Posted by: Clay Mar 18 2007, 03:54 PM

IMO the letters DO NOT make Linda look bad... to me it shows that Danny was not handling his business.... for if he was Linda would not have been spending lots of time on the phone with a person trying to get help for her son or processing that information..... Had he Danny been the husband he should have been, he would have been that listening ear.... Then he had the nerve to get ticked cause his wife was spending time on the phone.....

He should have stepped up and been a man.... instead of parading around with his short self trying to be emperor of all he surveyed, he should have attempted to do all he could humanly do for his stepson.....

So for me it shows that Danny came up short...... then wanted to blame Linda......

Posted by: Bystander Mar 18 2007, 04:08 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Mar 18 2007, 11:08 AM)
>
> These private emails that Linda is making public do little to vindicate her. To the casual observer of this very messy and public divorce, these letters raise more questions in this he said/she said drama. Linda comes across as the one who as not moved on after three years that is wearing old and tired for many people.
>
> In reading these emails from Danny on save3abn, the one consistence thing throughout is Danny's concern and believe that his wife was spending far too much time on the phone with the Dr. For you insiders, you say this is all a smoke screen, a convenience excuse to rid of his wife, doesn't appear that way. So was Linda spending hours a day on the phone, and why? Was she being discreet or openly taunting her husband? When you know something is a hot button with your spouse to the point that it could jeopardize your marriage and your job, after warning by several people around you, why would you continue to do it?
>
> I think Linda would have done better by taking the high road, moving on with her life, her ministry if that is what she wants to do. Let others bash around this story. Now she comes across as another bitter, revengeful ex-wife.

Calvin you nailed it. Not to mention, that these emails only confirm DS's statements all along.
1. He did not want to get a rid of a wife he dearly loved. Proven by the fact of his email to her of sept, months after the divorce where he calls her Doll, and tells her that it is still not too late for their marriage or her ministry at 3abn.
If he was looking for a way to dump her why on earth would he still be offering reconciliation that long after the divorce?

2. The emails prove that he believed 100% that LS was being unfaithful with the Doc. The frustration, anger and hurt show through.

3.The ongoing exchange of emails to Johann and the doc and LS does not point, at all, to a man who was looking for excuses to get rid of his wife. Quite the opposite. They prove that he was fighting tooth and nail to keep her and to get her out of this relationship.

4. The emails that warn her that she is being watched is completely opposite of someone wanting to "set up" their spouse. Had he wanted excuses to dump her, he would have never told her she was being watched. Anyone can see he was just desperately trying to get her away from the Doc.

5. The big hoopla here over the chocolate covered poop originated from her reference of the Doc being chocolate cake to her. Again, confirmed in the emails.

I feel like I am living in the twilight zone. While you all are going on about poop, the emails posted to go against Ds, actually exonerate him!!! No one would keep fighting like that for their wife if they didn't love her and only wanted to get rid of her. How could not see those emails as confirmation that DS was telling the truth all along?

Posted by: Clay Mar 18 2007, 04:10 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 18 2007, 05:08 PM) ☐
>
> Calvin you nailed it. Not to mention, that these emails only confirm DS's statements all along.
> 1. He did not want to get a rid of a wife he dearly loved. Proven by the fact of his email to her of sept, months after the divorce where he calls her Doll, and tells her that it is still not too late for their marriage or her ministry at 3abn.
> If he was looking for a way to dump her why on earth would he still be offering reconciliation that long after the divorce?
>
> 2. The emails prove that he believed 100% that LS was being unfaithful with the Doc. The frustration, anger and hurt show through.
>
> 3.The ongoing exchange of emails to Johann and the doc and LS does not point, at all, to a man who was looking for excuses to get rid of his wife. Quite the opposite. They prove that he was fighting tooth and nail to keep her and to get her out of this relationship.
>
> 4. The emails that warn her that she is being watched is completely opposite of someone wanting to "set up" their spouse. Had he wanted excuses to dump her, he would have never told her she was being watched. Anyone can see he was just desperately trying to get her away from the Doc.
>
> 5. The big hoopla here over the chocolate covered poop originated from her reference of the Doc being chocolate cake to her. Again, confirmed in the emails.
>
> I feel like I am living in the twilight zone. While you all are going on about poop, the emails posted to go against Ds, actually exonerate him!!! No one would keep fighting like that for their wife if they didn't love her and only wanted to get rid of her. How could not see those emails as confirmation that DS was telling the truth all along?

again you are entitled to your opinion.... even when you are wrong..... and full of.... propaganda..... for the record... Calvin can read it and come to that conclusion, I disagree with his conclusion and have shared my opinion from what I have read in those letters.... you however Bystander are simply wrong...

Posted by: calvin Mar 18 2007, 04:34 PM

> QUOTE(Daryl Fawcett @ Mar 18 2007, 03:43 PM) ☐
>
> Calvin,
>
> Are you saying that we should cease these discussions about Danny, Linda, Tommy, 3ABN, etc. and let them all get on with their lives?

Well Darryl, let me say that if we stopped the discussion on BSDA today, I would not miss it or complain. But it is not really about want I think is interesting to discussion. We rarely close topics here, but let them die a nature death for lack of interest, so the same will apply wit 3abn....and occasionally I will take off my administrator hat and chime in.

Posted by: sonshineonme Mar 18 2007, 04:53 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 18 2007, 03:08 PM) ☐
>
> Calvin you nailed it.

> I feel like I am living in the twilight zone.....How could not see those emails as confirmation that DS was telling the truth all along?

☒ notworkir

'ou should feel like you are in the twilight zone. Exonerate him? ARE YOU KIDDING? You appear to be mixed ıp. You can't save DS from his own words. He is who he is. But, no doubt you will continue, and my guess is it' will get worse before it get's better.

t is clear, however, that he has to come up with some kind of spin on these since they are out.... it is highly ınlikely he will ever admit to any wrong he has done, so his only other option is to get even more creative to nake it all look OK. I would expect nothing more or less from him. He's in pretty deep, and it's not hidden behind the scenes' any more. Nothing like the real deal!

☒ notworkir

Posted by: Pickle Mar 18 2007, 04:58 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Mar 18 2007, 02:46 PM) ☐
>
> I seriously question whether this bashing of Linda by Danny is still continuing. Danny when on for 40 minutes last month on live 3abn about the lies being told about him, but made no mention of Linda,. No mention of Linda on 3abn website, no mention of Linda in 3abn World magazine (my sister-law is on the cover, BTW). The public does not see any Linda bashing, as least not anymore.... and please don't tell me Danny is spending time staying one step ahead of Linda making contacts to keep her from working, he has remarried and moved on, time for Lind to do the same.

:alvin,

personally heard Danny in that 40 minutes on the Feb. 15, 2007, broadcast say that the "little group" was :onspiring to put 3ABN under the control of Linda. There may have been other insinuations too, but that is ›ne I remember.

\lso on Dec. 31, Larry Ewing bashed Tommy's predecessor, which would have to be Linda.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Mar 18 2007, 05:45 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Mar 18 2007, 03:01 PM) ☐
>
> Calvin, if you consider the date on at least the email posted here>>>>>http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=12943&st=0 You will find that it is well after the time Linda has signed the gag order, and once again only Danny's side. He has plenty of time and opportunity to "set the stage" as he pleases. He said showed concnern in this email. Once again this email is sent, when Linda cannot respond. I doubt she would authorize the release of such a one sided account. This is why you have to look beyond the surface. And once again, I owuld have to ask where Danny was for Linda to hae these huge amounts of time for the phone, trips, allt aht he claims? Nobody else is aksing that question,a nd nobody has yet to answer.

IA.

Personally after reading the letter - and seeing the date - I see a man that is "settin up" stuff for his view to look "better".....

The fact remains that if the man wanted Linda back he wouldn't have "remarried" in less than 2 years and he wouldn't have been "dating" that quick....

JMO

☒ sn

Posted by: sonshineonme Mar 18 2007, 05:49 PM

> QUOTE(PrincessDrRe @ Mar 18 2007, 04:45 PM) ☐
>
> IA.
>
> Personally after reading the letter - and seeing the date - I see a man that is "settin up" stuff for his view to look "better".....
>
> The fact remains that if the man wanted Linda back he wouldn't have "remarried" in less than 2 years and he wouldn't have been "dating" that quick....
>
> JMO
>
> ☒ sn

☐
You too have a keen eye...
Your a smart cookie. ☒

Posted by: Noahswife Mar 18 2007, 06:18 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Mar 18 2007, 06:34 PM) ☐
>
> Well Darryl, let me say that if we stopped the discussion on BSDA today, I would not miss it or complain. But it is not really about want I think is interesting to discussion. We rarely close topics here, but let them die a nature death for lack of interest, so the same will apply wit 3abn....and occasionally I will take off my administrator hat and chime in.

Calvin,

I know that one positive result of allowing the 3abn topic to continue is that many more people will come to BSDA that might never have heard about it otherwise and that many of those people, like myself, will be here posting long after the topic is of any interest because of the friendships and all the rest BSDA has to offer.

nw
C"i"

Posted by: princessdi Mar 18 2007, 07:03 PM

I'm sorry, BS, but an email dated almost a year after Linda signs gag order and Danny himself has initiatea quickie Guam divorce, just aint' workin' for me. These are still Danny's words, which are contrary to his own actions. All day long actions speak louder than words. Those actions being:

1) A gag order to ensure Linda's silence - If she was indeed guilty why does she have to keep quiet while he tells everybody who will listen?
2) A quickie Guam dvorce
3) The almost immediate appearqance and courtship with Brandi
4) The equally quicke wedding to Brandi before the ink was dry after winning the case when Linda contested the Guam divorce(It is Linda who looks more like someone wanting their marriage since she contested the divorce, BTJM)

Now, BS I keep telling you at least in my case it is Danny's actions which condemn him in my eyes. His actions are not the one of a man who dearly loved his wife or wanted his married. However, they are the actions of a man who wanted out, and "found" an "excuse". Twist a few facts, and Voila!! Once again,I amasking.....where was Danny when Linda had ALL this time to be on the phone, travel, etc. Where was Danny when she was seeing about he son? Why would she even need to reach outside of he marriage for support? It is these unanswered questions and Danny's actions that have brought me to the conclusions that I have now. Now, about Linda, I don't know. I gues when and if the time comes we will see about that. However, Whilst Danny has ensured that he would be the only one talking, then he is the only one to ask.

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 18 2007, 03:08 PM)
>
> I feel like I am living in the twilight zone. While you all are going on about poop, the emails posted to go against Ds, actually exonerate him!!! No one would keep fighting like that for their wife if they didn't love her and only wanted to get rid of her. How could not see those emails as confirmation that DS was telling the truth all along?

Posted by: calvin Mar 18 2007, 07:13 PM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Mar 18 2007, 06:18 PM)
>
> Calvin,
>
> I know that one positive result of allowing the 3abn topic to continue is that many more people will come to BSDA that might never have heard about it otherwise and that many of those people, like myself, will be here posting long after the topic is of any interest because of the friendships and all the rest BSDA has to offer.
>
> nw
> C"i"

That's right NW and I am glad you rest of the 3abn enthusiast found your way here.

Posted by: Ralph Mar 18 2007, 07:40 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 18 2007, 04:58 PM)
>
> Calvin,
>
> I personally heard Danny in that 40 minutes on the Feb. 15, 2007, broadcast say that the "little group" was conspiring to put 3ABN under the control of Linda. There may have been other insinuations too, but that is one I remember.
>
> Also on Dec. 31, Larry Ewing bashed Tommy's predecessor, which would have to be Linda.

I believe Danny was very careful not to name any names although the insinuation was there.

> QUOTE
>
> They want to replace the board with their own people and put it into the very hands of the person who had to leave this ministry because of things that didn't comply with the ministry. and had to be let go so that's just not a that's just not an option.

If he spoke differently in the original airing, please let me know.

Posted by: sonshineonme Mar 18 2007, 07:46 PM

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Mar 18 2007, 06:40 PM)
>
> I believe Danny was very careful not to name any names although the insinuation was there.
>
> If he spoke differently in the original airing, please let me know.

We would do well to learn from those that have been fooled by their version of truth. BS/DS and groupies are about fooling and distracting you into seeing things from the view they want seen - this has little to do with helping you to see truth - "their truth" has nothing to do with the facts of the matter - their goal appears to convince the gullable public to see things the most convenient way for them.

Is the hand quicker then the eye??

Posted by: Jvat Mar 18 2007, 08:21 PM

When I read Danny's letters to Linda, I am sorry but all I see is a man wanting to control his wife. I keep asking why is it that he makes absolutely no mention of Nathan in these e-mails? Why? Was he not concerned in the slightest bit? Sorry I see no trace of a man wanting his wife back because he loved her.

Posted by: sonshineonme Mar 18 2007, 08:24 PM

> QUOTE(Jvat @ Mar 18 2007, 07:21 PM)
>
> When I read Danny's letters to Linda, I am sorry but all I see is a man wanting to control his wife. I keep asking why is it that he makes absolutely no mention of Nathan in these e-mails? Why? Was he not concerned in the slightest bit? Sorry I see no trace of a man wanting his wife back because he loved her.

Keen eyes I say....all about us...

Posted by: princessdi Mar 18 2007, 09:12 PM

Well, you have to take into consideration that Danny and his supporters are maintaining that Linda is behind everything be said against him and 3ABN so far. They believe her to be the source of all if not most of the info getting out, or at least they want for it to look as if she is. So when he refers to a small group, he means a small group "encouraged" and "manipulated" by Linda.

> QUOTE(Ralph @ Mar 18 2007, 06:40 PM)
>
> I believe Danny was very careful not to name any names although the insinuation was there.
>
> If he spoke differently in the original airing, please let me know.

Posted by: awesumtenor Mar 18 2007, 09:45 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Mar 18 2007, 11:12 PM)
>
> Well, you have to take into consideration that Danny and his supporters are maintaining that Linda is behind everything be said against him and 3ABN so far. They believe her to be the source of all if not most of the info getting out, or at least they want for it to look as if she is. So when he refers to a small group, he means a small group "encouraged" and "manipulated" by Linda.

I dont know that they actually believe Linda to be the source of the info... they do, however, want the casual observer to believe that she is... whether she actually is or not...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: princessdi Mar 18 2007, 09:57 PM

I am not that sure they believe it either. I think they are playing a game with the comditions of the gag order. Making Danny look, once again, like the kind, gnereous long soffering, now ex-husband.

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ Mar 18 2007, 08:45 PM)
>
> I dont know that they actually believe Linda to be the source of the info... they do, however, want the casual observer to believe that she is... whether she actually is or not...

> In His service,
> Mr. J

Posted by: from-the-pew Mar 19 2007, 06:27 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Mar 18 2007, 11:57 PM) ☐
>
> Making Danny look, once again, like the kind, gnereous long soffering, now ex-husband.

☒ notworkir

'he Emails make me wonder if he was always like that during the marriage? And if he was.... wow.... My ;ympathies to the wives. I couldn't live like that - at least, not happily.

Posted by: Johann Mar 19 2007, 07:07 AM

> QUOTE(from-the-pew @ Mar 19 2007, 02:27 PM) ☐
>
> ☒ notworkir
>
> The Emails make me wonder if he was always like that during the marriage? And if he was.... wow.... My sympathies to the wives. I couldn't live like that.

3ut still some people insist they know exactly how loving and kind Danny is without ever experiencing how it s to be his wife.

'es, I got it from Linda, and yet I did not quite understand it until my wife explained it to me. She talked to .inda. They went on walks together, they went into the woods picking blueberries together.

must admit that Irmgard ignored it when Linda said to her, "Don't tell Johann!" From Linda's experience no nan would understand a number of the things she had to suffer. Those spinning around Danny as the center of the whole universe, understand nothing of what she suffered.

'hen people like you see it immediately. There is something in a Divine relationship they may never have experienced.

was reminded of this through a conversation I had with a member who is forced to associate with a distant :hurch rather than their local church. Even though a couple of pastors have dealt with the problem and :oncluded that a female church member had done what was correct and in accordance with our church nanual, certain males insist that she has lied. Why? It seems evident that this is because she is a woman, ind in cases like this you must trust the man, even if this case does not deal with sexual morals. So the case s splitting a church.

I do not have this in writing, bur I recall clearly that at the beginning Danny maintained that people would believe he was telling the truth, and not Linda - because she is a woman. And he also maintained that this is why he would have no problem divorcing Linda.

Do you females on this board feel that males have a patent on truth?

Posted by: Aletheia Mar 19 2007, 09:03 AM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 18 2007, 01:21 PM)
>
> One question, Calvin, is whether Linda is the one who has made these emails public. That site has explicitly marked some of them as not coming from her.

Pickle, please.

Has she protested or complained that you are publishing them, or asked you to remove them???

Are you all working with her, and vice versa, or not?

Any way you cut it they came from Linda. They were private e-mails between the two of them. Watchbird already posted they were forwarded to her, and Johann has too. No one could have got them without her giving them to them. I say that because it's rather hard to believe those who are supporting her stole them from her,, especially as no one has claimed that to this day.

Anyway you look at it, it seems she was bringing a whole lot of people in between her and her husband behind his back. You don't see her doing it openly as no one elses name are in the headers...

That doesn't seem to me, to show a whole lot of concern or respect, to say the least..

Posted by: princessdi Mar 19 2007, 09:14 AM

Pickle, please.

Has she protested or complained that you are publishing them, or asked you to remove them???

Did Danny? It would be a lot different if we had an email from him espressing his displeasure but we, don't. We know why Linda is Silent, Why is he, He's been talking all this time.

Are you all working with her, and vice versa, or not?

Are you all working with Danny? Don't ask questions you are not willing to answer.....honestly answer.
Any way you cut it they came from Linda. They were private e-mails between the two of them. Watchbird already posted they were forwarded to her, and Johann has too. No one could have got them without her giving them to them. I say that because it's rather hard to believe those who are supporting her stole them from her,, especially as no one has claimed that to this day.

She(Linda) is not the only one who had copies of these emails...remember there were two of them in the conversation, one, however, under s gag order..........You act as if they left Danny's possesion once he sent them....... Not to mention a fe bcc's along the way. You know the folks filling' you in really ought to do a better job

Anyway you look at it, it seems she was bringing a whole lot of people in between her and her husband behind his back. You don't see her doing it openly as no one elses name are in the headers...

That doesn't seem to me, to show a whole lot of concern or respect, to say the least..

Posted by: justme Mar 19 2007, 09:42 AM

I, too have questions.

Where was Danny's "stopwatch", I.E. the one he used to time Linda's phone calls, where as the concern when he was spending long hours in person, not on t he phone, with Brenda, at midnight and beyond, at the church?

Where was all his concern about what looks good and what doesn't look good all those years, late at night, when he was in Alyssa's bedroom?

(To say nothing of the 7 other women who have spoken out.)

I do notice that Danny's emails sound more "manipulating and taunting than sorrowful". Already his method is to try to "belittle" his so-called "competition". Danny refused for years to offer help to Nathan. What happened to the theme of "mending hearts and broken people"? He could have started at home. Any truly understanding Christian husband "who has done his homework" and who has given the occupants of his own home the 'feeding and the nurture" he should have, will continue to support his wife and her son, rather than casting them aside and creating a void for someone else to fill. His conscience was full of condemnation for him to ignore her needs and hurl huge stones at her. All this was done after he had already decided to get rid of her. Carefully planned and carried out. It came as a shock to Linda, who knew by now that Brenda, Mollie, and Kay had betrayed her. All this email stuff is window dressing after the fact designed to say, "See I did try to get her back". He has found out that he cannot un-ring a bell.

Linda absolutely has to clear her name. You cannot throw gasoline on a flower, light it, and then expect it to flourish again. Fortunately, her roots are deep in Jesus, so she will survive.

There have been other ministries where someone has had to be forgiven. And they have asked and have made a comeback. But Linda doesn't deserve the condemnation, the penalty, nor a plea bargain. She was / is not guilty as charged. Sure, it would be easier to let it go, but your name is never cleared, ever. Danny threw the fuel, lit the match, and burned her very bad. The very least he could do is to apologize for that much, guilty or not. He certainly does expect everyone to "forget" his weaknesses even without confessing or repenting. Has he done the right thing?

For Linda to "move on" and let it go, is to admit guilt. Personally, I would never do that myself, never!

Danny has NOT moved on. He is more scared right now, than he has ever been since the investigation into his first wife's death. And all this came about because he has thumbed his nose at all his viewers. All he cares about is Danny. He admits that Brandy has been "after hin for 17 years" and that flatters him. He expects Linda to ignore that as well. And just because some friendly Pharisees in the local conference have "OKed" his remarriage he assumes he's "home free".

Danny has a way of generating more questions every time he draws a breath.

Linda, better than anyone els,e knows that these emails are heartless attempts to manipulate her as he always has. Look at all the little catch phrases he still uses with her. Because they worked before, ... but now her eyes are opened.

Do you honestly believe that if all this were totally reversed that Danny would be ignoring the slander and defamation if it were hurled at him? Not on your life, he wouldn't. The reason he can no longer come up with any darts to hurl at Linda is because his quiver is empty. But it still quivers. He.got caught lying on every one of them.

Dannys bashing IS[b] continuing without adding anything new because he has not apologized for the bells he has already set to ringing across the world. So long as he permits his lies to continue to circulate he is continuing to attack Linda. He has set into motion a steam roller that continues to roll out of control. he set it into motion and he is doing nothing to control it's damage. Now he's concerned that it may roll around and come back on him, as wll he should. And it's still rolling towards Linda. I don't think she should ignore it.

Around the time Linda was fired I called 2ABN and suggested that they develop a program for people with drug problems. They did, but was to late for Nathan, and an insult for Linda. For them to ACT as if they had always cared about young people with drug issues ... what joke in timing.

Danny has not gotten on with his life as I see it. His life needs to ga way back and clean up things with God. DAnny seems to forget that there is a law of "cause and effect", and that for evey man, what he sows he reaps, God is not mocked.

Put yourself in Linda's shoes, feel the blisters? the pinching? the burns?

How can you go into a new ministry until you can hold your head above reproach???

Posted by: Noahswife Mar 19 2007, 09:47 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Mar 19 2007, 11:03 AM)
>
> You don't see her doing it openly as no one elses name are in the headers...

Aletheia, how in the world would you possibly know that?

Did you not tell me in another post when I asked you if you knew something that, and I quote, "Certainly I know, otherwise I wouldn't say anything"?
http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=12418&view=findpost&p=186235

nw
C"i"

Posted by: from-the-pew Mar 19 2007, 10:28 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Mar 19 2007, 11:47 AM)
>
> Aletheia, how in the world would you possibly know that?
>
> Did you not tell me in another post when I asked you if you knew something that, and I quote, "Certainly I know, otherwise I wouldn't say anything"?
> http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=12418&view=findpost&p=186235
>
> nw
> C"i"

Apparently she's not aware of "BCC" (blind carbon copy)

Posted by: princessdi Mar 19 2007, 11:45 AM

I tried to tell her............

> QUOTE(from-the-pew @ Mar 19 2007, 09:28 AM)
>
> Apparently she's not aware of "BCC" (blind carbon copy)

Posted by: from-the-pew Mar 19 2007, 11:48 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Mar 19 2007, 12:45 PM)
>
> I tried to tell her............

What else is there to do?

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Mar 19 2007, 03:07 PM

justme,

While there are a few things in your post that I have not personally verified, I have to strongly commend you on a beautifully stated overview of the core problems in this 3abn saga!

Well done, brother!

PB

Posted by: Truly Blonde Mar 19 2007, 08:29 PM

I have been following all of this with a heart so full of saddness it seems like it just might break apart. We have a ministry that started out I believe with the right intentions, to take the end time message to the world so Jesus could return. It was started by human beings who wanted to carry out God's commision to take this gospel to all the world. Somehow, and maybe it is because Satan knows us so well he was able to use good people for his own decietful purpose. As I see it, Danny, from reading everyones posts both pro Linda and pro Danny wanted what Lucifer wanted in heaven, to be like the Most High. He lost site of his role in taking the gospel to the whole world and wanted to be God..

When that happened he decided he needed a new younger wife who wouldn't try to take his place in the spotlight. He needed to make sure that Linda would take the fall. I received one of those letters from 3abn telling us all how Linda had chosen another path. I felt really sorry for Danny.

I was directed to blacksda and my whole perspective changed. I now believe that Linda did take the fall. That she was pushed out of 3abn and also out of her marriage.

Be that as it may. I agree with Calvin that life goes on. Danny is now married to Brandi and you can't change that. I believe Danny did not have bible grounds to marry Brandi but it is done. All of this however is their own PRIVATE business. It is not our business!!!

When save 3abn first was put up it answered a lot of my questions. I think there is a real mess at 3abn. and what was posted pertained to 3abn. When the e-mails started being posted I was appalled. Who in there right mind would post such personal and private matters. It has no bearing on the ministry of 3abn. It doesn't matter if Linda is providing these e-mails or if Danny is providing them or if their friends are providing them. The fact that they are seeing the light of day tells me that the people who started 3abn have lost all sight of what this ministry was all about. When I saw the direction save 3abn was going with the personal e-mails I quit reading. I do not want to know what personal and private things were said between Danny and Linda and to their friends. This has nothing to do with the ministry of 3abn,except to say, are these the people we want to represent our church? It should matter not at all to us whether or not the property settlement is fair or if they are going to court over it. It should not matter to us if Linda feels cheated out of her ministry or if Danny feels it is rightfully HIS ministry.

What should concern us is that this ministry has been for 20 years the flagship of our church, even though it is an independent minisrty. We should be concerned about the direction this minsirty is taking. Is it still spreading the gospel as the Seventh-Day Adventist church sees it? Laurence brought up the thought about the three angeles messages. Can we as Adventitst's support this ministry as it now stands? Can our church support this ministry and it's leaders the way things are now? With all the talk of the financial situation and the way the contributions of the members in the pews is being handled and the constant begging for contributions. If what I have read here is true there is a lot of dishonesty in leaders of this ministry. There is cover up. If this is the flag ship of our church should there be even ONE non-adventist working at 3abn? Should our coference leaders be supporting this ministry?

I know they let Tommy retire so as to try to get us to forget about his actions. But this doesn't make his actions go away. I do wonder if anything can be done to bring this to the attentions of the authorities. Maybe Duane something is being done by you or the other victims, I don't know but I do know that all the spin doesn't make it a lie and it needs to be dealt with. Victims are still victims no matter what the age and to make out that it didn't happen is a lie.

If what is being siad is true, Linda was a part of the financial misdealings and also allowed Tommy to work at 3abn or if not allow is the wrong term, continued on in her position in spite of Tommy. I know people here say Danny was in total control and makes all the decisions. If that is so everyone still has the choice to vote with there feet. I for one cannot see how all these board members and John L. can continue to support Danny. I guess the need for fame outweighs what is right

I for one do not want to see 3abn brought down. I do believe it needs a good cleaning out Danny needs to step down as does Mollie and Hal and Shelly and also the whole board needs to go. It needs to start all over again with new people. Not with Linda, she is as much a part of the problem as Danny. I don't know how this can be done. Maybe the GC needs to buy 3abn.

I think both Danny and Linda need to think about moving on. Start new ministries if that is what God is calling them to do. If this keeps on, the mud slinging and rants and the lies and the spin I do believe 3abn will be brought down and it won't be pretty and it won't be nice and it will be messy and it will do so much harm to our church we may just look at it and ask was it worth sticking our head in the sand and refusing to see the handwriting on the wall? Hoping if we did nothing it would all go away. Wheather we like it or not people are reading save3abn in droves and it will have an effect. They are reading blacksda and the other sites and they are forming oppinons. Danny and Linda may not like the results but they will not change peoples minds.

I will not contribute to any ministry that Danny or Linda Shelton are connected with until there is some sign that there has been a confession and a true repentance and a conversion and returning to God. I will continue to pray that this will happen and that the Holy Spirit might still work a work in their hearts.

Posted by: Bystander Mar 19 2007, 09:55 PM

[quote name='justme' date='Mar 19 2007, 08:42 AM' post='186368']
I, too have questions.

MMM I don't see any questions, just allegations and bashing

Where was Danny's "stopwatch", I.E. the one he used to time Linda's phone calls, where as the concern when he was spending long hours in person, not on t he phone, with Brenda, at midnight and beyond, at the church?

Accusing DS and Brenda Walsh

Where was all his concern about what looks good and what doesn't look good all those years, late at night, when he was in Alyssa's bedroom?

stating as fact that you know DS was in alyssa's bedroom

(To say nothing of the 7 other women who have spoken out.)

Accusing him of having something to do with 7 women who no one has ever heard about or identitified.

Danny refused for years to offer help to Nathan. All this was done after he had already decided to get rid of her

Ok more statements given as fact

Danny has NOT moved on. He is more scared right now, than he has ever been since the investigation into his first wife's death.

Accusing DS of Murder!!

He admits that Brandy has been "after hin for 17 years" and that flatters him.

Wow, all when he maintaines that he hasn't laid eyes on Brandi since she was a little girl with her family in his recording studio. Exactly opposite of your statement

Do you honestly believe that if all this were totally reversed that Danny would be ignoring the slander and defamation if it were hurled at him?

It is reversed, and he isn't ignoring it.

He.got caught lying on every one of them.

statement that he is a liar

So long as he permits his lies to continue to circulate he is continuing to attack Linda.

Liar again.

Around the time Linda was fired I called 2ABN and suggested that they develop a program for people with drug problems. They did, but was to late for Nathan, and an insult for Linda. For them to ACT as if they had always cared about young people with drug issues ... what joke in timing.

Linda was in charge of production and programming, not DS. It would have been up to her to do programs with drug issues.

Well, I must say ,your post is absolutely a beautiful example (actually it will be evidence) of what constitues slander/defamation of character and liable suits. The way that you stated these accusations as facts ,will make the charges brought against you fall into place as slick as water off of a ducks back. Thank you for making a job like this, so much, easier.

Posted by: calvin Mar 19 2007, 10:21 PM

Trudy Blonde, you have expressed some thoughts that I was trying to express, but have did it better. I won't quote you whole post because it is so long. These letters where never intended to be made public. Now Linda has joined right in with the rest of us, in the mud slinging still after 3 years of the divorce.

Granted she has every right to do so. But just because she can, the gag order has been lifted, does not mean she has too. BTW, Linda may not have given explicit authority to post the letters but I do believe she have implied authority, I believe she knows the letter are there.

When I showed some folks from my church the letters on save3abn, there question was, Why are these people airing their dirty laundry? It did nothing to exonerate Linda, as least that is the way they saw it. Look, most people are not going to wade through 16,,000+ post here or everything on save3abn to form an opinion.

Yeah Linda, I know you where wronged, stuff happens. Many people go through messy divorces
But it is 3 years later now, I say get over it.

Posted by: Pickle Mar 20 2007, 08:02 AM

My thought, Calvin, is that even if she asked that they not be posted, they still might get posted.

> QUOTE(Truly Blonde @ Mar 19 2007, 09:29 PM)
>
> It should matter not at all to us whether or not the property settlement is fair or if they are going to court over it.

There is one point you may not have considered.

The only way to look at the books of 3ABN is to involve the courts. The courts are involved in regard to the property settlement.

Book deals are an issue regarding the alleged corruption at 3ABN. Book deals have an impact on the property settlement.

Thus, the property settlement can be a way to discover and resolve some of the problems at 3ABN.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Mar 20 2007, 10:07 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Mar 18 2007, 07:18 PM)
>
> I know that one positive result of allowing the 3abn topic to continue is that many more people will come to BSDA that might never have heard about it otherwise and that many of those people, like myself, will be here posting long after the topic is of any interest because of the friendships and all the rest BSDA has to offer.

than

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ Mar 19 2007, 10:03 AM)
>
> ....Anyway you look at it, it seems she was bringing a whole lot of people in between her and her husband behind his back. You don't see her doing it openly as no one elses name are in the headers...
>
> That doesn't seem to me, to show a whole lot of concern or respect, to say the least..

You mean like the people Danny brought in when Linda was on gag orders? Spin away!!!
Also.....I know YOU of all people are not speaking on "CONCERN OR RESPECT"..... as you have no

"CONCERN OR RESPECT" for victims (past or present) of sexual molestation/abuse? How then, can YOU speak on "CONCERN OR RESPECT"

> QUOTE(Truly Blonde @ Mar 19 2007, 09:29 PM)
>
> ..... I agree with Calvin that life goes on. Danny is now married to Brandi and you can't change that. I believe Danny did not have bible grounds to marry Brandi but it is done. All of this however is their own PRIVATE business. It is not our business!!!

It becomes our business when THEY come into our churches, when they ship me books without me giving them an address (I got that 10 Commandments book without even asking for it in the mail), when they tell me that they are "right" and I am "wrong" for my actions.

It becomes my business when any child is in danger.

It becomes my business!

Posted by: Bystander Mar 29 2007, 09:12 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Mar 19 2007, 09:21 PM)
>
> Trudy Blonde, you have expressed some thoughts that I was trying to express, but have did it better. I won't quote you whole post because it is so long. These letters where never intended to be made public. Now Linda has joined right in with the rest of us, in the mud slinging still after 3 years of the divorce. Granted she has every right to do so. But just because she can, the gag order has been lifted, does not mean she has too. BTW, Linda may not have given explicit authority to post the letters but I do believe she have implied authority, I believe she knows the letter are there.
>
> When I showed some folks from my church the letters on save3abn, there question was, Why are these people airing their dirty laundry? It did nothing to exonerate Linda, as least that is the way they saw it. Look, most people are not going to wade through 16,,000+ post here or everything on save3abn to form an opinion.
>
> Yeah Linda, I know you where wronged, stuff happens. Many people go through messy divorces
> But it is 3 years later now, I say get over it.

For all of those that believe DS used the doc as an excuse to "get rid" of Linda. For all those that don't believe she made numerous trips to norway when Nathan only went once. For all those that think the "dishrag" statement came from DS.

Paragraphs from email from DS to LS Feb o5

May says you are telling her things about me and Brandy. First of all you don't know, anything about what me and Brandy are or are not doing. And secondly, if I wanted to have a girlfriend now whether it would be a Brandy or a Jane Doe, it would be none of your business as you have now refused for over a year to let this Norwegian man go. You have refused all counsel that told you he must go, yet you and he still travel together and stay in each other's homes for up to two weeks at a time. I told you a long time ago that I can document all your travel schedule and I have. May says you told her that you have only been to Norway once and that was a year ago January. I told her that if she wasn't mistaken then you told her a big lie as I can document all your trips there. Surely she got that part of your conversation mixed up. I don't think you would think everyone is such simpleton's that we don't know the truth about your solo trips to Europe.

Anyway, we've been. divorced for nearly eight months and we all know that I have biblical grounds. If I want to date someone else I am free to do it. You dated this man for months while we were married. That is called sin, anyway you want to cut it.

You shouldn't worry anyway. Remember, you told me that the only thing I would ever get compared to you was "An old used dirty dish rag".

Danny Shelton

Posted by: princessdi Mar 29 2007, 09:17 PM

This was part of the email lready posted, right? I might be mistaken, is this a portion of another email?

Posted by: Pickle Mar 29 2007, 09:29 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 29 2007, 09:12 PM)
>
> For all of those that believe DS used the doc as an excuse to "get rid" of Linda. For all those that don't believe she made numerous trips to norway when Nathan only went once. For all those that think the "dishrag" statement came from DS.

Bystander, I think you may be distorting the facts. Linda made only one trip to Norway prior to the divorce. Correct? And when she went and left, Nathan was already there and remained there.

Danny saying that Linda said that about a dishrag, that really doesn't prove anything, anymore than Linda saying she's innocent proves anything. But if you can quote an email from Linda saying something about a dishrag, that is pretty credible. Or if you can quote Danny saying that he had no proof of Linda committing adultery, that is pretty credible.

Posted by: Lee Mar 29 2007, 09:46 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 29 2007, 10:29 PM)
>
> Bystander, I think you may be distorting the facts. Linda made only one trip to Norway prior to the divorce. Correct? And when she went and left, Nathan was already there and remained there.
>
> Danny saying that Linda said that about a dishrag, that really doesn't prove anything, anymore than Linda saying she's innocent proves anything. But if you can quote an email from Linda saying something about a dishrag, that is pretty credible. Or if you can quote Danny saying that he had no proof of Linda committing adultery, that is pretty credible.

Excuse me Pickle, these ARE the facts. This IS the proof.

Posted by: Bystander Mar 29 2007, 09:48 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 29 2007, 08:29 PM)
>
> Bystander, I think you may be distorting the facts. Linda made only one trip to Norway prior to the > divorce. Correct? And when she went and left, Nathan was already there and remained there.

>
> Danny saying that Linda said that about a dishrag, that really doesn't prove anything, anymore than Linda saying she's innocent proves anything. But if you can quote an email from Linda saying something about a dishrag, that is pretty credible. Or if you can quote Danny saying that he had no proof of Linda committing adultery, that is pretty credible.

ook at the date of the email. We weren't talking about prior to the divorce. If they were strictly on a roffesional basis becase of Nathan then why did she make numerous visits (1 almost immediatly following he divorce) to Norway and why did they travel together and stay at each others home. C'mon, even you an't spin that into being appropriate behaviour.

Posted by: mozart Mar 29 2007, 09:54 PM

> QUOTE(Jvat @ Mar 18 2007, 08:21 PM) ☐
>
> When I read Danny's letters to Linda, I am sorry but all I see is a man wanting to control his wife. I keep asking why is it that he makes absolutely no mention of Nathan in these e-mails? Why? Was he not concerned in the slightest bit? Sorry I see no trace of a man wanting his wife back because he loved her.

totally agree. I think he wrote these emails just to torment and mock her and to cover himself seeing the all-out that was coming. these are not the words of a loving, mature or Christian man. these are the words of disturbed person. i am very worried about his mental health. i read a posting from a woman, don't emember where, but she said she had been interviewed by DS before she had knowledge of all this. she said f she had known then what she knows now, she never would have agreed to the interview. she made, IMO, a ery astute observation. she said DS is a narcissis. he can never see or admit that he is wrong. he is an actor n his own life. it saddens me to think that this is most likely the case.

Posted by: princessdi Mar 29 2007, 09:59 PM

No, this is a one way email in which Danny is telling thinks as he sees them. We don't what Linda said or if she said anything in response. Danny a year later sticking to his sotry, that i don't buy in the first place, is not froof. Now show me where Linda acknoedges what he says to be true,a nd we got. proof.

And just one more point of clarification. I thought that ths "dish rag" comment was aimed at Linda. but not necessarily said by Danny, warning that she would not be replaced by an old dish rag, but a beauty queen, if she didn't change her ways. Did I misunderstand?

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 29 2007, 08:46 PM) ☐
>
> Excuse me Pickle, these ARE the facts. This IS the proof.

Posted by: Lee Mar 29 2007, 09:59 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 29 2007, 10:54 PM) ☐

> I totally agree. I think he wrote these emails just to torment and mock her and to cover himself seeing the fall-out that was coming. these are not the words of a loving, mature or Christian man. these are the words of a disturbed person. i am very worried about his mental health. i read a posting from a woman, don't remember where, but she said she had been interviewed by DS before she had knowledge of all this. she said if she had known then what she knows now, she never would have agreed to the interview. she made, IMO, a very astute observation. she said DS is a narcissis. he can never see or admit that he is wrong. he is an actor in his own life. it saddens me to think that this is most likely the case.

Danny is a "narcissis?" Who was the woman--a flower gardener? ☒ rofl

---

Posted by: princessdi Mar 29 2007, 10:02 PM

BS, you know we need more that your word and an email from Danny to believe that, right?

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 29 2007, 08:48 PM) ☐
>
> Look at the date of the email. We weren't talking about prior to the divorce. If they were strictly on a proffesional basis becase of Nathan then why did she make numerous visits (1 almost immediatly following the divorce) to Norway and why did they travel together and stay at each others home. C'mon, even you can't spin that into being appropriate behaviour.

Posted by: Noahswife Mar 29 2007, 10:20 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ Mar 29 2007, 10:17 PM) ☐
>
> This was part of the email lready posted, right? I might be mistaken, is this a portion of another email?

Yes Di,

The unedited email of this date is posted at the Save3abn.com website.

http://www.save3abn.com/danny-shelton-demise-of-marriage-pile-of-what-07.htm

What is interesting is that bystander has left out some of the, let's say, less tasteful aspects of this email.

Posted by: Hawk Mar 29 2007, 10:23 PM

Ahhhh! as always, the BS/WWJD so beautifuly represent the wonderful love of Jesus ala 3ABN. They so accurately represent what the true Shelton/3ABN love for you and Linda is. As they so lovingly seek to regain that lost sheep, as they so dilligently seek to find that lost coin, as they turn the other cheek, as they, say "father forgive them...".... are they Jesus to you? Do WWJD/BS make you want what they have? Are they the shining example of 3ABN/Jesus/Shelton love that you want? Do want want to be BS/WWJD? They are 3ABN/the Shelton family to you.

Do you see Christ's love and yearning for Linda in BS/WWJD? Do you see Jesus' love and yearning for you in BS/WWJD? Do you see "What Would Jesus Do" in them? If what WWJD represents is the real "JESUS" would you love and worship that Jesus?

BS/WWJD is the true and accurate 3ABN/Shelton family. They are the true 3ABN Jesus to the world.

Posted by: princessdi Mar 29 2007, 10:26 PM

Thanks NW, but wasn't it also posted here, or maybe the link? Didn't somebody post this email to prove something about Danny? I might be wrong. I said from the beginning, he should had his midlife crisis and bought a sports car to go with his new hair. Now he got this here mess almsot thres syears later.

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ Mar 29 2007, 08:20 PM)
>
> Yes Di,
>
> The unedited email of this date is posted at the Save3abn.com website.
>
> http://www.save3abn.com/danny-shelton-demise-of-marriage-pile-of-what-07.htm

---

Posted by: mozart Mar 29 2007, 10:31 PM

> QUOTE(calvin @ Mar 19 2007, 10:21 PM)
>
> Trudy Blonde, you have expressed some thoughts that I was trying to express, but have did it better. I won't quote you whole post because it is so long. These letters where never intended to be made public. Now Linda has joined right in with the rest of us, in the mud slinging still after 3 years of the divorce. Granted she has every right to do so. But just because she can, the gag order has been lifted, does not mean she has too. BTW, Linda may not have given explicit authority to post the letters but I do believe she have implied authority, I believe she knows the letter are there.
>
> When I showed some folks from my church the letters on save3abn, there question was, Why are these people airing their dirty laundry? It did nothing to exonerate Linda, as least that is the way they saw it. Look, most people are not going to wade through 16,,000+ post here or everything on save3abn to form an opinion.
>
> Yeah Linda, I know you where wronged, stuff happens. Many people go through messy divorces
> But it is 3 years later now, I say get over it.

Calvin, i think that you should remember that linda isn't the only issue here. in this thread, yes, but not in the whole rhelm of things. there are many issues and many wrongdoings and the guilty parties at 3abn have hidden behind the ministry. they won't show anything to prove their case. they say all of us who speak out are evil. (i have personal emails from walt thompson to prove that.) there are people at 3abn whose thinking is corrupt and they won't change so they have to be removed and replaced.
you tell linda to "get over it" as if she was involved in a petty quarrel; "a messy divorce". true, many people go through messy divorces but they don't get aired on a one-sided, worldwide television station! this has ruined the last 3yrs. of her life and it will follow her for a long time. it's important that she defend herself now that she finally can. how would you feel if you were muzzled and someone spent 3yrs. trying to destroy your life? she has a "scarlet letter" on her and it's vital that DS be forced to prove his accusations against her and if he can't, he needs to be punished for his lies. they have done a tremendous amount of damage to her as a person. i think DS knows he has no such proof and knows he's done things illegally and he knows as long as he keeps things hidden, linda suffers and he buys more time for himself. those 5 people mentioned earlier...they have made some huge mistakes and should not be running 3abn. if linda is found innocent, the world should be told. that's the bottom line.

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 29 2007, 09:59 PM)

> Danny is a "narcissis?" Who was the woman--a flower gardener? ☒ rofl

k so i can't spell. you know what i meant. hahahaha

Posted by: Bystander Mar 29 2007, 10:42 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 29 2007, 09:31 PM) ☐
>
> Calvin, i think that you should remember that linda isn't the only issue here. in this thread, yes, but not in the whole rhelm of things. there are many issues and many wrongdoings and the guilty parties at 3abn have hidden behind the ministry. they won't show anything to prove their case. they say all of us who speak out are evil. (i have personal emails from walt thompson to prove that.) there are people at 3abn whose thinking is corrupt and they won't change so they have to be removed and replaced.

nozart, why don't you post those emails from Dr. walt and let the rest of us see where he says those who speak out" are evil. I sincerely doubt that is what he said. In reality he probably said those who are preading lies and slander are evil. If you have not eyewitnessed said allegations but still state the allegation s fact and it hurts characters, ministries and God's work, then that would be a correct statement.

Posted by: Johann Mar 29 2007, 11:08 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 30 2007, 05:12 AM) ☐
>
> For all of those that believe DS used the doc as an excuse to "get rid" of Linda. For all those that don't believe she made numerous trips to norway when Nathan only went once.

wonder where Bystander has his information from, but I have met Nathan on more than one trip to Norway.

s I have indicated several times before, if your truth is as much of a spin as what I have heard from the ABN spiritual leader, pastor John Lomacang, then you are in a sad association. If I was you, I would not ase my salvation on his words. Let Jesus be your example. He loves you and died for your sins. If you nerely seek revenge you might get hurt yourself.

Posted by: sonshineonme Mar 29 2007, 11:22 PM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 29 2007, 08:48 PM) ☐
>
> We weren't talking about prior to the divorce. If they were strictly on a proffesional basis becase of Nathan then why did she make numerous visits (1 almost immediatly following the divorce) to Norway and why did they travel together and stay at each others home....

S, would you please lay out the timeline for these "numerous" trips she took to norway?
would appreicate that, thank you.

Posted by: Skyhook Mar 29 2007, 11:44 PM

> QUOTE(Lee @ Mar 29 2007, 10:59 PM)
>
> Danny is a "narcissis?" Who was the woman--a flower gardener? rofl

Mozart, I think you got it right!

From Medline Plus:

Narcissistic Personality Disorder is a condition characterized by an inflated sense of self-importance and an extreme preoccupation with one's self.

The cause of this disorder is unknown. Narcisstic personality disorder usually begins by early adulthood and is marked by disregard for the feelings of others, grandiosity, obsessive self-interest and the pursuit of primarily selfish goals.

A person with narcissistic disorder:

Reacts to criticism with feelings of rage, shame, or humiliation
Takes advantage of others to acheive own goals
Has feelings of self-importance
Exaggerates achievements and talents
Is preoccupied with fantasies of success, power, beauty, intelligence, or ideal love
Has unreasonable expectations of favorable treatment
Requires constant attention and admiration
Lacks empathy

Complications: Relationship and family problems
Alcohol or other drug dependence

Posted by: mozart Mar 30 2007, 12:00 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 29 2007, 10:42 PM)
>
> mozart, why don't you post those emails from Dr. walt and let the rest of us see where he says those who "speak out" are evil. I sincerely doubt that is what he said. In reality he probably said those who are spreading lies and slander are evil. If you have not eyewitnessed said allegations but still state the allegation as fact and it hurts characters, ministries and God's work, then that would be a correct statement.

i did paraphrase what he said but i don't think i misinterpreted it. i will not post my personal emails, but for your edification, this is his exact quote, "Let me begin by saying that the things being posted on the Internet denigrating Danny and the administration and board of 3abn are evil. Nothing posted there is in any way representative of the God I know and serve." he said this to me without any knowledge at all of anything about me except that i thought danny should step down from 3abn to spare the ministry from having to suffer through this fiasco. so you interpret it your way, to yourself, please.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Mar 30 2007, 12:20 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 29 2007, 10:48 PM)
>
> Look at the date of the email. We weren't talking about prior to the divorce. If they were strictly on a proffesional basis becase of Nathan then why did she make numerous visits (1 almost immediatly following the divorce) to Norway and why did they travel together and stay at each others home. C'mon, even you can't spin that into being appropriate behaviour.

Please explain the logic of this post-divorce mentality.

WWJD said:

> QUOTE(wwjd @ Feb 11 2007, 02:43 AM)
>
> Yes Brandi did have grounds. Her husband was unfaithful.
> I hope I have answered your questions to your satisfaction

If the above statement by WWJD is true, then:

Danny got a divorce in 2004
Brandy got a divorce in 2004
Linda got a divorce in 2004

However, it's only Linda's post-divorce behavior that has Bystander saying that "you can't spin that into being appropriate behavior."

But, everything Danny and Brandy did after their own divorces that same year is appropriate behavior, by the same standard?

I guess I'm missing the logic here because it seems to me that if post-divorce behavior is indicative of something important, we must include the post-divorce behavior of all three parties, not just of Linda Shelton. Somebody here seems justified in applying a totally separate set of rules to Linda Shelton's post-divorce life than they apply to everyone else's life that existed in the same post-divorce situation. That makes no logical sense.

Posted by: mozart Mar 30 2007, 12:49 AM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Mar 29 2007, 11:44 PM)
>
> Mozart, I think you got it right!
>
> From Medline Plus:

> Narcissistic Personality Disorder is a condition characterized by an inflated sense of self-importance and an extreme preoccupation with one's self.
>
> The cause of this disorder is unknown. Narcisstic personality disorder usually begins by early adulthood and is marked by disregard for the feelings of others, grandiosity, obsessive self-interest and the pursuit of primarily selfish goals.
>
> A person with narcissistic disorder:
>
> Reacts to criticism with feelings of rage, shame, or humiliation
> Takes advantage of others to acheive own goals
> Has feelings of self-importance
> Exaggerates achievements and talents
> Is preoccupied with fantasies of success, power, beauty, intelligence, or ideal love
> Has unreasonable expectations of favorable treatment
> Requires constant attention and admiration
> Lacks empathy
>
> Complications: Relationship and family problems
> Alcohol or other drug dependence

hank you for clarifying this skyhook. than i appreciate your research. so i guess it's spelled narcissist.

ny bad; i forgot the "t" what BS fails to be able to comprehend is that i, along with many, many others, truly are for danny and want him to be well. we want him to be healed. defending him is like defending an lcoholic. it doesn't help the alcoholic at all. from now on i think i will just ignore his (BS) post even when it oncerns me. if anyone else wants to ask a question, however, i'd be happy to answer. it would be wise to emember the words of 2 Timothy 3: 1-9: "But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: For nen will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to arents, unthankful, unholy, unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers f good, traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, having a form of odliness but denying its power. And from such people turn away! For of this sort are those who creep into ouseholds and make captives of gullible women loaded down with sins, led away by various lust, always earning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. Now as Jannes and Jambres resisted oses, so do these also resist the truth; men of corrupt minds, disapproved concerning the faith; ut they will progress no further, for their folly will be manifest to all, as theirs also was." 2 Timothy :14,15: "But as for you, continue in the things which you have learned and been assured of, knowing from vhom you have learned them, and that from childhood you have known the Holy Scriptures, which are able o make you wise to salvation through faith in Christ Jesus."

> QUOTE(Panama_Pete @ Mar 30 2007, 12:20 AM)
>
> Please explain the logic of this post-divorce mentality.
>
> WWJD said:
> If the above statement by WWJD is true, then:
>
> Danny got a divorce in 2004
> Brandy got a divorce in 2004
> Linda got a divorce in 2004
>
> However, it's only Linda's post-divorce behavior that has Bystander saying that "you can't spin that into being appropriate behavior."
>
> But, everything Danny and Brandy did after their own divorces that same year is appropriate behavior, by the same standard?
>
> I guess I'm missing the logic here because it seems to me that if post-divorce behavior is indicative of something important, we must include the post-divorce behavior of all three parties, not just of Linda

> Shelton. Somebody here seems justified in applying a totally separate set of rules to Linda Shelton's post-divorce life than they apply to everyone else's life that existed in the same post-divorce situation. That makes no logical sense.

ou're sharp as a tack petey boy

Posted by: Bystander Mar 30 2007, 01:10 AM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ Mar 29 2007, 10:44 PM)
>
> Mozart, I think you got it right!
>
> From Medline Plus:
>
> Narcissistic Personality Disorder is a condition characterized by an inflated sense of self-importance and an extreme preoccupation with one's self.
>
> The cause of this disorder is unknown. Narcisstic personality disorder usually begins by early adulthood and is marked by disregard for the feelings of others, grandiosity, obsessive self-interest and the pursuit of primarily selfish goals.
>
> A person with narcissistic disorder:
>
> Reacts to criticism with feelings of rage, shame, or humiliation
> Takes advantage of others to acheive own goals
> Has feelings of self-importance
> Exaggerates achievements and talents
> Is preoccupied with fantasies of success, power, beauty, intelligence, or ideal love
> Has unreasonable expectations of favorable treatment
> Requires constant attention and admiration
> Lacks empathy
>
> Complications: Relationship and family problems
> Alcohol or other drug dependence hat is amazing. That describes Gailon Joy to a tee. Pickle would also fit several of those.

Posted by: Hawk Mar 30 2007, 01:14 AM

Indeed Pete is sharp. Does the BS/WWJD care to elaborate on the quantity of time that Linda spent on the phone with Dr. Abrahamsen during the months of March, April and May of 2004 as compared to the time that Danny spent in person and on the phone with Brenda Walsh during that same time period?

How about Brandy? Did Linda move across the street from Dr. Abrahamsen after the divorce, and live on property provided by 3ABN acrosss the street from someone she "was not" having a "thing" with? Did Linda live in IL and Dr. Abrahamsen thousands of miles away in Norway? While Danny lived across the street from Brandy for much of that time? In a house provided by 3ABN? LOL!!!!!!!!!!!!! Y'uns are funny.

Oh! What about the "evidence" of the trips to Europe... after the divorce? Where did that "evidence" come from? A travel agency owned by a friend/donor of Danny's? Is that legal? Well, if the "evidence" is "produced" I suppose that it will be tracked and we will find out.

Posted by: sister Mar 30 2007, 04:26 AM

> QUOTE(Bystander @ Mar 29 2007, 10:12 PM)
>
> For all of those that believe DS used the doc as an excuse to "get rid" of Linda. For all those that don't believe she made numerous trips to norway when Nathan only went once. For all those that think the "dishrag" statement came from DS.
>
> Paragraphs from email from DS to LS Feb o5
>
> May says you are telling her things about me and Brandy. First of all you don't know, anything about what me and Brandy are or are not doing. And secondly, if I wanted to have a girlfriend now whether it would be a Brandy or a Jane Doe, it would be none of your business as you have now refused for over a year to let this Norwegian man go. You have refused all counsel that told you he must go, yet you and he still travel together and stay in each other's homes for up to two weeks at a time. I told you a long time ago that I can document all your travel schedule and I have. May says you told her that you have only been to Norway once and that was a year ago January. I told her that if she wasn't mistaken then you told her a big lie as I can document all your trips there. Surely she got that part of your conversation mixed up. I don't think you would think everyone is such simpleton's that we don't know the truth about your solo trips to Europe.
>
> Anyway, we've been. divorced for nearly eight months and we all know that I have biblical grounds. If I want to date someone else I am free to do it. You dated this man for months while we were married. That is called sin, anyway you want to cut it.
>
> You shouldn't worry anyway. Remember, you told me that the only thing I would ever get compared to you was "An old used dirty dish rag".
>
> Danny Shelton

Okay, Bystander, I read the above and there is no proof, as usual. Show the evidence of the trips to Norway that took place while Linda was married to Danny. There was only one. The burden of proof is on your side now. You claim evidence, were are the receipts, ticket stubs, etc. All I see it a statement by Danny, no proof. Bring on the evidence so we call all see it. Or is this just another attempt by you to justify Danny's behavior?

Sister

Posted by: Johann Mar 30 2007, 05:59 AM

> QUOTE(sister @ Mar 30 2007, 12:26 PM)
>
> Okay, Bystander, I read the above and there is no proof, as usual. Show the evidence of the trips to Norway that took place while Linda was married to Danny. There was only one. The burden of proof is on your side now. You claim evidence, were are the receipts, ticket stubs, etc. All I see it a statement by Danny, no proof. Bring on the evidence so we call all see it. Or is this just another attempt by you to justify Danny's behavior?
>
> Sister

I can verify what Sister is stating here is true, not because I was told, but because I was there. Irmgard and I were in constant contact with Dr. Arild Abrahamsen. It would have been impossible for Linda to visit him in Norway without us knowing, and he could not have gone to America without us knowing it either. He could not have been at his clinic in Norway and in America at the same time.

Danny Shelton did not think of this possibility when he and Brenda made up stories, and to impress board members and other gullible people they insist on having ticket stubs, phone cards, etc.

I must admit that within a few days my admiration of Danny Shelton dropped to zero when I discovered how he behaved when he got caught in a lie. If only he had tried to apologize or in other ways rectify his evil behaviour, we would never be discussing this here today.

God still loves a repentant sinner, but the haughty are an abomination.

Posted by: Pickle Mar 30 2007, 06:56 AM

> QUOTE(mozart @ Mar 30 2007, 12:00 AM) ☐
>
> i did paraphrase what he said but i don't think i misinterpreted it. i will not post my personal emails, but for your edification, this is his exact quote, "Let me begin by saying that the things being posted on the Internet denigrating Danny and the administration and board of 3abn are evil. Nothing posted there is in any way representative of the God I know and serve."

Poor choice of words on Walt's part? He thinks emails written by himself and Danny are evil, and not representative of God?

Posted by: Clay Mar 30 2007, 09:20 AM

Hawk... quite insightful.... thanks for sharing that.... you made some excellent points...

Posted by: mozart Mar 30 2007, 02:38 PM

> QUOTE(Pickle @ Mar 30 2007, 05:56 AM) ☐
>
> Poor choice of words on Walt's part? He thinks emails written by himself and Danny are evil, and not representative of God?

that's exactly what i wrote him back and said.

Posted by: Grith May 8 2007, 09:35 PM

When Linda disappeared from 3abn, I was mystified. Then I began hearing things about adultery. A friend told me that it was Brenda that had spilled the beans about it. I saw that program where Danny was so upset and asked Mark Finely to pray. I wasn't sure what to think. I began doing a little research and visited some message boards, but decided that I didn't really want to find out more. I didn't really want anything to do with the mess. I just assumed at the time that it was as Danny said. However, the phrase "spiritual adultery" did raise my eyebrows. That was no grounds for divorce.

When we moved a couple of years ago, we pulled up our dish and gave it to the church (where the parts still sits scattered around) thinking we would soon replace it. It didn't happen due to unforseen circumstances. I didn't think much about 3abn or the divorce until I received an email from a friend in Florida who had attended a rally there. She told me that Danny had introduced his new wife of 3 days on stage and so unsettled everyone that he didn't appear for the afternoon program! My thoughts at that time began to turn in Linda's favor. Danny had accused Linda of adultery, yet who was it that had remarried? Not Linda.

I didn't spend much time thinking about it until just a few short months ago. I sat down at my computer one afternoon and thought, Now what would I like to search for? I typed two words in Google and hit enter. Those two words brought up a blog that mentioned 3abn so I opened it and found a link for save3abn.com and for BSDA. The two words I typed in were "adventist" and "apostasy."

I went to save3abn and began to read. I read until I was too tired to read more that night and went to bed. I got up the next day and began reading again. When it came to the emails from Danny to Linda, I quickly realized one thing: my experience immediately recognized his words as those of an abuser. The things he wrote, and the manner in which he wrote them are the work of a man who will emotionally and psychologically batter another person in order to maintain control over them. You can never win with such a person. It was at that point that I came over to Linda's side. I wondered how Linda had ever lived with him for 20 years.

Someone here said that it was time for her to "get over it." I doubt that person has ever been turned into mush by the deliberately belittling, searing, cruel words of someone who professes to love you, but uses words in such a demeaning manner. I think I can even understand why she would not stop those emails from being posted. People (those in the pews) have seen one side of DS, the studio Danny, but they haven't seen the home Danny, the behind-the-scenes Danny. For Linda it may be a kind of catharsis to have them posted.

It wasn't just the emails to Linda that showed Danny as abusive, but those to Johann, and others. DS is a man who needs to surrender himself to God and let Him have control of his life. If he will do that, he will no longer have the need to build himself up by belittling and degrading others. He will seek forgiveness of those he has wronged. People will begin to respect him. We need to keep praying that God will be able to reach his heart and change him.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 8 2007, 09:44 PM

> QUOTE(Grith @ May 8 2007, 07:35 PM)
>
> When Linda disappeared from 3abn, I was mystified. Then I began hearing things about adultery. A friend told me that it was Brenda that had spilled the beans about it. I saw that program where Danny was so upset and asked Mark Finely to pray. I wasn't sure what to think. I began doing a little research and visited some message boards, but decided that I didn't really want to find out more. I didn't really want anything to do with the mess. I just assumed at the time that it was as Danny said. However, the phrase "spiritual adultery" did raise my eyebrows. That was no grounds for divorce.
>
> When we moved a couple of years ago, we pulled up our dish and gave it to the church (where the parts still sits scattered around) thinking we would soon replace it. It didn't happen due to unforseen circumstances. I didn't think much about 3abn or the divorce until I received an email from a friend in Florida who had attended a rally there. She told me that Danny had introduced his new wife of 3 days on stage and so unsettled everyone that he didn't appear for the afternoon program! My thoughts at that time began to turn in Linda's favor. Danny had accused Linda of adultery, yet who was it that had remarried? Not Linda.
>

> I didn't spend much time thinking about it until just a few short months ago. I sat down at my computer one afternoon and thought, Now what would I like to search for? I typed two words in Google and hit enter. Those two words brought up a blog that mentioned 3abn so I opened it and found a link for save3abn.com and for BSDA. The two words I typed in were "adventist" and "apostasy."
>
> I went to save3abn and began to read. I read until I was too tired to read more that night and went to bed. I got up the next day and began reading again. When it came to the emails from Danny to Linda, I quickly realized one thing: my experience immediately recognized his words as those of an abuser. The things he wrote, and the manner in which he wrote them are the work of a man who will emotionally and psychologically batter another person in order to maintain control over them. You can never win with such a person. It was at that point that I came over to Linda's side. I wondered how Linda had ever lived with him for 20 years.
>
> Someone here said that it was time for her to "get over it." I doubt that person has ever been turned into mush by the deliberately belittling, searing, cruel words of someone who professes to love you, but uses > words in such a demeaning manner. I think I can even understand why she would not stop those emails from being posted. People (those in the pews) have seen one side of DS, the studio Danny, but they haven't seen the home Danny, the behind-the-scenes Danny. For Linda it may be a kind of catharsis to have them posted.

>
> It wasn't just the emails to Linda that showed Danny as abusive, but those to Johann, and others. DS is a man who needs to surrender himself to God and let Him have control of his life. If he will do that, he will no longer have the need to build himself up by belittling and degrading others. He will seek forgiveness of those he has wronged. People will begin to respect him. We need to keep praying that God will be able to reach his heart and change him.

Grith
Thank you so much for your powerful testimony. You are adding another layer to the 3ABN situation.
Rosyroi

Posted by: roxe May 8 2007, 10:45 PM

very powerful, Grith... so glad you shared... God Bless...

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 13 2007, 10:42 AM

> QUOTE(Grith @ May 8 2007, 10:35 PM)
>
> ....It wasn't just the emails to Linda that showed Danny as abusive, but those to Johann, and others. DS is a man who needs to surrender himself to God and let Him have control of his life. If he will do that, he will no longer have the need to build himself up by belittling and degrading others. He will seek forgiveness of those he has wronged. People will begin to respect him. We need to keep praying that God will be able to reach his heart and change him.

Welcome....

We keep saying it - and this is the truth! Actions speak louder than words....

Posted by: Noahswife May 13 2007, 11:22 AM

> QUOTE(Grith @ May 8 2007, 10:35 PM)
>
> When Linda disappeared from 3abn, I was mystified. Then I began hearing things about adultery. A friend told me that it was Brenda that had spilled the beans about it. I saw that program where Danny was so upset and asked Mark Finely to pray. I wasn't sure what to think. I began doing a little research and visited some message boards, but decided that I didn't really want to find out more. I didn't really want anything to do with the mess. I just assumed at the time that it was as Danny said. However, the phrase "spiritual adultery" did raise my eyebrows. That was no grounds for divorce.
>
> When we moved a couple of years ago, we pulled up our dish and gave it to the church (where the parts still sits scattered around) thinking we would soon replace it. It didn't happen due to unforseen circumstances. I didn't think much about 3abn or the divorce until I received an email from a friend in Florida who had attended a rally there. She told me that Danny had introduced his new wife of 3 days on stage and so unsettled everyone that he didn't appear for the afternoon program! My thoughts at that time began to turn in Linda's favor. Danny had accused Linda of adultery, yet who was it that had remarried? Not Linda.

> I didn't spend much time thinking about it until just a few short months ago. I sat down at my computer one afternoon and thought, Now what would I like to search for? I typed two words in Google and hit enter. Those two words brought up a blog that mentioned 3abn so I opened it and found a link for save3abn.com and for BSDA. The two words I typed in were "adventist" and "apostasy."
>
> I went to save3abn and began to read. I read until I was too tired to read more that night and went to bed. I got up the next day and began reading again. When it came to the emails from Danny to Linda, I quickly realized one thing: my experience immediately recognized his words as those of an abuser. The things he wrote, and the manner in which he wrote them are the work of a man who will emotionally and psychologically batter another person in order to maintain control over them. You can never win with such a person. It was at that point that I came over to Linda's side. I wondered how Linda had ever lived with him for 20 years.
>
> Someone here said that it was time for her to "get over it." I doubt that person has ever been turned into mush by the deliberately belittling, searing, cruel words of someone who professes to love you, but uses words in such a demeaning manner. I think I can even understand why she would not stop those emails from being posted. People (those in the pews) have seen one side of DS, the studio Danny, but they haven't seen the home Danny, the behind-the-scenes Danny. For Linda it may be a kind of catharsis to have them posted.
>
> It wasn't just the emails to Linda that showed Danny as abusive, but those to Johann, and others. DS is a man who needs to surrender himself to God and let Him have control of his life. If he will do that, he will no longer have the need to build himself up by belittling and degrading others. He will seek forgiveness of those he has wronged. People will begin to respect him. We need to keep praying that God will be able to reach his heart and change him.

rith h irst of all welcome to BSDA.....

econd, I don't know how I missed this post but thank you for it. Please PM me if you do not want me to print t and hand it out to friends and family who do not understand what I personally feel about the DS/LS ituation.......

hird, don't be surprised if one or another of us keeps bumping this to the top because although we will liscuss various issues on numerous topics from litigation to thompsonville......this speaks to the heart of veryone that has ever been emotionally abused or knows someone who has been. You clearly get it ven if some that post here do not....

w
"i"

Posted by: Jnana15 May 13 2007, 11:54 AM

> QUOTE(Noahswife @ May 13 2007, 12:22 PM)
>
> Grith h
>
> First of all welcome to BSDA.....
>
> Second, I don't know how I missed this post but thank you for it. Please PM me if you do not want me to print it and hand it out to friends and family who do not understand what I personally feel about the DS/LS situation.......

> Third, don't be surprised if one or another of us keeps bumping this to the top because although we will discuss various issues on numerous topics from litigation to thompsonville......this speaks to the heart of everyone that has ever been emotionally abused or knows someone who has been. You clearly get it even if some that post here do not....
>
> nw
> C"i"

W, thank you for offering to keep bumping this to the top, I know that I need to keep reading it. I don't now how I missed Girth's post either. I have been truly blessed by her post on the DS/LS situation.

Posted by: Eirene May 13 2007, 12:35 PM

> QUOTE(Grith @ May 8 2007, 10:35 PM)
>
> It wasn't just the emails to Linda that showed Danny as abusive, but those to Johann, and others. DS is a man who needs to surrender himself to God and let Him have control of his life. If he will do that, he will no longer have the need to build himself up by belittling and degrading others. He will seek forgiveness of those he has wronged. People will begin to respect him. We need to keep praying that God will be able to reach his heart and change him.

o Grith, because you read emails from Danny at the most stressful, hurtful and heart breaking time of his ife, you have convicted him as an abuser and now, because you think it, it has become a fact.
gather you don't know DS personally? Do you know Linda personally? If not then you didn't witness their narriage of 20 years. How unfair of you to judge and convict someone over a few emails during a terrible ime.
f you really knew/believed/felt (I won't get into that now because it isn't the point) that your husband was aving an affair and you had begged, pleaded and talked until you were blue, and he refused to give up the relationship" what kind of emails would you have sent to him and those supporting him in what he was loing?
do know them personally. I did see their marriage up close for many years. Linda was "catered" to, spoiled, uilt up far too much, and was given way too much power at the ministry which ultimately contributed to her lownfall. She was put on a pedestal and got her way about most things. If Danny should be faulted at all, it vould be in exerting too little control over what seemed to be an "out of control" person. There was never ver any kind of abuse, physical, mental or otherwise.
low Grith, what will show your true colors will be, if, you go ahead and stick with your own judgement and pinions from what you read, or listen to someone who watched and experienced that marriage first hand. s far as his remarriage. It was 2 years after the divorce and he "knows" as do others involved in that ituation, whether he had grounds to remarry. Right now the general public knows less than nothing about he "true" details. If your point was more that Linda didn't marry the Doctor, has it occured to anyone that it night not have been for lack of want on her side but ,maybe, a refusal on his part?

Posted by: Eirene May 13 2007, 12:48 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 8 2007, 10:44 PM)
>
> Grith

> Thank you so much for your powerful testimony. You are adding another layer to the 3ABN situation.
> Rosyroi

osyroi, Do you have any idea how ridiculous your comment is. Another layer?
rom what I read Grith doesn't know Danny personally much less counseled or even talked with him at ength. Does Grith have such a degree in counseling and if so, what kind of counselor would make such a udgement over some emails sent during such a horrible time and without ever talking to the person?
ost everyone here have jumped all over John L about counseling Linda face to face saying he wasn't a "real" ounselor. It has been said that Mark F could not have actually "counseled" with her over the phone. That sn't real counseling.
ut now, because it is convenient for you to do so, let's listen to someone who doesn't know the parties, has ever talked to Danny and whom, I would guess, doesn't have credentials to even make that sort of udgment.
fter all that, let's then say that Grith is adding another "layer" to 3abn. How does an outsider with just nother random opinion add another layer to 3abn?
ust another prime example of how you and others are willing to swallow anything that is fed to you egardless of who does the feeding, and, with nothing whatsoever to back it up except their opinions and the pinions of others in the same boat.

Posted by: awesumtenor May 13 2007, 01:46 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 02:48 PM) ☐
>
> Rosyroi, Do you have any idea how ridiculous your comment is. Another layer?

o you have any idea how unnecessary this comment is? Rosyroi is entitled to her opinion of Grith's omments as you are entitled to yours. If you disagree, then disagree... but if one were to call your opinions idiculous, you'd be whining to an admin... do unto others as you would have them do unto you...

> QUOTE
>
> From what I read Grith doesn't know Danny personally much less counseled or even talked with him at length.

y her own admission, neither does Cindy... yet you have no problem accepting what she says.

> QUOTE
>
> Does Grith have such a degree in counseling and if so, what kind of counselor would make such a judgement over some emails sent during such a horrible time and without ever talking to the person?

he same question can be asked of the conclusions you so readily jump to regarding Gailon or Pickle or Linda r whoever else is on your radar for the day...

> QUOTE
>
> Most everyone here have jumped all over John L about counseling Linda face to face saying he wasn't a "real" counselor. It has been said that Mark F could not have actually "counseled" with her over the phone. That isn't real counseling.

Those things were not said by "most everyone; they were said by the participants in these threads who have the education and professional experience to know what is and what is not counseling.

> QUOTE
>
> But now, because it is convenient for you to do so, let's listen to someone who doesn't know the parties, has never talked to Danny and whom, I would guess, doesn't have credentials to even make that sort of judgment.

Again, by her own admission, Cindy is in the number of people who fit the above categorization... yet you not only listen to what she says, you continue to defend it as incontrovertible truth, the absence of objective verification notwithstanding.

So weighed in the same balance you try to weigh others... you are found wanting.

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: Jnana15 May 13 2007, 02:12 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 01:35 PM) ☐
>
> So Grith, because you read emails from Danny at the most stressful, hurtful and heart breaking time of his life, you have convicted him as an abuser and now, because you think it, it has become a fact.
> I gather you don't know DS personally? Do you know Linda personally? If not then you didn't witness their marriage of 20 years. How unfair of you to judge and convict someone over a few emails during a terrible time.
> If you really knew/believed/felt (I won't get into that now because it isn't the point) that your husband was having an affair and you had begged, pleaded and talked until you were blue, and he refused to give up the "relationship" what kind of emails would you have sent to him and those supporting him in what he was doing?
> I do know them personally. I did see their marriage up close for many years. Linda was "catered" to, spoiled, built up far too much, and was given way too much power at the ministry which ultimately contributed to her downfall. She was put on a pedestal and got her way about most things. If Danny should be faulted at all, it would be in exerting too little control over what seemed to be an "out of control" person. There was never ever any kind of abuse, physical, mental or otherwise.
> Now Grith, what will show your true colors will be, if, you go ahead and stick with your own judgement and opinions from what you read, or listen to someone who watched and experienced that marriage first hand.
> As far as his remarriage. It was 2 years after the divorce and he "knows" as do others involved in that situation, whether he had grounds to remarry. Right now the general public knows less than nothing about the "true" details. If your point was more that Linda didn't marry the Doctor, has it occured to anyone that it might not have been for lack of want on her side but ,maybe, a refusal on his part?

Should have known you were lurking around the corner waiting to ☒ blc . Somewhere in the bible it says the we (women) are like broken cisterns. Maybe Danny was treating her like the "Queen" of his house should be treated since he clams to counter-act the counter-fit (did I say this right?). JMO. You weren't living in the house with them. You were only a "Bystander".

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 13 2007, 02:24 PM

Eirene,

Each of us filters things through the template of our own life experience. It is what gives us each our own unique perspectives. One who has been burned by a stove usually learns to recognize that when there is fire present or the burners are orange, the stove is hot. A person who has been abused has learned, through personal lessons in the school of hard knocks, to recognize the traits or tone of an abuser.

If Girth's experience has caused her to have the opinion that Danny's words are that of an abusive person, it is her opinion, her deduction, and it is inappropriate to belittle her for that. If you don't agree with her personal assessment, the kind and appropriate way to counter is to state your own opinion from your own frame of reference.

Posted by: princessdi May 13 2007, 03:07 PM

Mad props for that one Gurl!

> QUOTE(Jnana15 @ May 13 2007, 12:12 PM)
>
> Should have known you were lurking around the corner waiting to blc. Somewhere in the bible it says the we (women) are like broken cisterns. Maybe Danny was treating her like the "Queen" of his house should be treated since he clams to counter-act the counter-fit (did I say this right?). JMO. You weren't living in the house with them. You were only a "Bystander".

Posted by: Skyhook May 13 2007, 06:01 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 13 2007, 03:24 PM)
>
> Eirene,
>
> A person who has been abused has learned, through personal lessons in the school of hard knocks, to recognize the traits or tone of an abuser.
>
> If Girth's experience has caused her to have the opinion that Danny's words are that of an abusive person, it is her opinion, her deduction, and it is inappropriate to belittle her for that. If you don't agree with her personal assessment, the kind and appropriate way to counter is to state your own opinion from your own frame of reference.

It has been often stated by professionals who deal with the abused and the abusers, that they can spot one another and connect as strangers even in a crowd. There seems to be a certain chemistry or certain "vibes" that are perceived on an unconscious level. I don't think it is at all surprising that Grith who has had personal experience with an abuser would recognize from the emails the kinds of things being said by Danny. I believe that those professionals with experience can also fairly quickly note the characteristics being displayed by an abuser by thier attitude and by thier words. The same with those who have a pattern of being abused.

I believe that there has been enough first hand information from Danny and from those who know and work with him past and present to get a pretty accurate picture of his character. I dare say a trained psychologist could make an assessment just based on information on Bsda that would coincide fairly closely with a face to face assessment and testing such as MMPI, etc. But JMHO

Posted by: Grith May 13 2007, 08:16 PM

Eirene,
"I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity." (Acts 8:23)

Your stress hormones must be over the top which can lead to ill health, including heart disease. Further, you cannot possibly hope to gain the respect of most people here when you throw out wild accusations about those you disagree with. If you'll put down the ☐ and take off the ☒, stop ☐, your opinions will be better received even by those who disagree with you.

Posted by: Eirene May 13 2007, 08:55 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 13 2007, 03:24 PM) ☐
>
> Eirene,
>
> Each of us filters things through the template of our own life experience. It is what gives us each our own unique perspectives. One who has been burned by a stove usually learns to recognize that when there is fire present or the burners are orange, the stove is hot. A person who has been abused has learned, through personal lessons in the school of hard knocks, to recognize the traits or tone of an abuser.
>
> If Girth's experience has caused her to have the opinion that Danny's words are that of an abusive person, it is her opinion, her deduction, and it is inappropriate to belittle her for that. If you don't agree with her personal assessment, the kind and appropriate way to counter is to state your own opinion from your own frame of reference.

I didn't state my opinions period. I stated facts. Spin all you want but there is something terribly wrong here when you take Jane Doe's opinion over an eyewitness. That pretty much confirms you don't want truth, you want to sling mud.

> QUOTE(Jnana15 @ May 13 2007, 03:12 PM) ☐

> Should have known you were lurking around the corner waiting to blc. Somewhere in the bible it says the we (women) are like broken cisterns. Maybe Danny was treating her like the "Oueen" of his house should be treated since he clams to counter-act the counter-fit (did I say this right?). JMO. You weren't living in the house with them. You were only a "Bystander".

close bystander at that...which I believe is more than you were?

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 13 2007, 02:46 PM)
>
> Do you have any idea how unnecessary this comment is? Rosyroi is entitled to her opinion of Grith's comments as you are entitled to yours. If you disagree, then disagree... but if one were to call your opinions ridiculous, you'd be whining to an admin... do unto others as you would have them do unto you...
>
> By her own admission, neither does Cindy... yet you have no problem accepting what she says.
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

nmm you really are obsessed with Cindy aren't you? You know what they say. There is a fine line between ove and hate....

Posted by: awesumtenor May 13 2007, 09:12 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 10:55 PM)
>
> mmm you really are obsessed with Cindy aren't you? You know what they say. There is a fine line between love and hate....

s I told you before... my name is not Mandingo...

n His service,
r. J

Posted by: Rosyroi May 13 2007, 10:24 PM

edited for content

edited for contet

edited for content

edited for content

rofl edited for content

well... arent we supposed to be nice to those who despise and abuse us?

Rosyroi

editing again for content after finding out we lost Eirene and Alethia due to the choices they made.

Have a happy life for the two of you. You were warned several times. You ignored the warnings. It was your choice. NOT Admin.

Rosyroi

Posted by: Jnana15 May 13 2007, 10:25 PM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 13 2007, 09:55 PM)
>
> A close bystander at that...which I believe is more than you were?

Edited big time! I just noticed that Eirene is GONE!

Posted by: FineArt May 14 2007, 08:16 PM

Sometimes, knowing somone personally isn't necessary. just watching them walk to the mike with arrogance is enough. And when the mouth opens and words are spoken .....Mount Everest ego/pride appears. If this happens just once or for only one year.....your assumption might be wrong, but over many years......you could be on to something. Body language can even speak louder than words.

a personal observation. I have no PDQ or MRI or ASAP after my name.....just watching and listening to 3ABN.

Posted by: PrincessDrRe May 14 2007, 09:17 PM

Ooooooooo EDITED FOR THE BYE-BYE OF THE ONE I WUZ RESPONDING TO

Yall carry on now!

sn

Posted by: Skyhook May 14 2007, 10:49 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 14 2007, 09:16 PM)

> Sometimes, knowing somone personally isn't necessary. just watching them walk to the mike with arrogance is enough. And when the mouth opens and words are spoken .....Mount Everest ego/pride appears. If this happens just once or for only one year.....your assumption might be wrong, but over many years......you could be on to something. Body language can even speak louder than words.
>
> a personal observation. I have no PDQ or MRI or ASAP after my name.....just watching and listening to 3ABN.

FineArt, I totally agree with you. There is often a first impression that we get about people on a visceral level that gives us accurate information about the person. As you say, it can sometimes fool us. But when we get confirmation from people who know and work with/for them we can be pretty confidant about our perceptions. . Some people are more sensitive to these kinds of impression than others, and we shouldn't automatically dismiss those first impressions. There have been some research done on this. The book "Blink" by Malcom Gladwell describes some of it. It is worth reading if one is interested in those things.
The opposite can be also true. People can be completely misled by the visual picture ones gets from a person. Gladwell points out that perhaps one of our worst presidents was elected because he looked so presidential. (Warren Harding)

Posted by: Princess May 15 2007, 03:22 PM

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ What He Said! (db On Commandment #7)

Posted by: maggiecttr May 7 2007, 03:25 PM

Being pretty new here, I'm not sure if I should've made this a New Topic or just put it in under another thread, but here goes (Moderators: Please move this to another thread if warranted.)

I taped most of the Ten Commandments Weekend (live presentation) on Sabbath, and just today got a chance to watch most of it. I was half-listening to Doug Batchelor's presentation on the 7th Commandment regarding adultery when the screen went black, then came back on again showing some flowers and music, then returned to the live feed. So I missed whatever he had said as a lead-in to the following interesting comments/observations he was making. But as I listened, I pricked up my ears...the scenario being presented seemed somehow...familiar. Herewith is the transcribed portion (I rewound the tape a dozen times to catch it the best I could):

(Doug, looking kind-of "worked up"):
"I'm going to be straight with you---do you want me to be straight with you? They're married; they know what the Bible says about the obligations; they made a promise in the sight of God. But they don't want to be with the person they are married to, so what they do is, they try to make that person as miserable as possible, and they drive them away. And, sometimes, the way they do that is by using intimacy as a reward and punishment device. They almost want to see of they can drive the person to an affair so they're then justified in divorcing and they can be the one that's innocent and the other one's guilty. IS THIS STRAIGHT ENOUGH FOR YOU?! (emphasis Doug's) I mean -- you know-- I've seen all the games that people play...Paul recognized that-- that's why he said, 'Do not defraud one another; you are one flesh" and --well--I won't get into that yet...I better pace myself.."

So...since this coincidentally(?) sounds a lot like what I've read (via 3abn itself and on the boards concerning the Danny-Linda divorce) maybe DB hasn't burried his head in the sand, and we may be hearing more from him one of these days. A girl can hope!

Comments?
Maggie

Posted by: LaurenceD May 7 2007, 03:58 PM

Very perceptive, maggiecttr

I know men like that. A couple months ago, I put it like this:

> A good man doesn't force a woman back in her shell, deny her what she needs most (friends), then punish her for telling a white lie. She knows the hell she'll have to face once again if she's open and honest about everything that causes her sick, sick, jealous, dyspetic husband to explode.
>
> http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?showtopic=12180

Not only do I know men like that, but I know how their women react to being treated. They'll get yelled at, and in big trouble, because the man is so quick to judge, the women can't do anything right, and so when he yells, "where you been?" she knows she has to answer very carefully, even though she lost her keys (which means more anger) and was at the grocery store for more than 15 minutes. So she says something like, "I decided to stop by and get you something special" which is a white lie.

His anger is then deflated and they live together in peace for one more day. Like survival.

EDIT NOTE: corrected the link so it works...called "Letter to Calvin"

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 04:02 PM

Welcome Maggie! I really want you to do get outta my head! Why ws I thinking the same thing, while watching this at my parents house of Sabbath?

Posted by: seraph|m May 7 2007, 04:48 PM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 7 2007, 06:58 PM) ☐
>
> Very perceptive, maggiecttr
>
> "I decided to stop by and get you something special" which is a white lie.

I can appreciate your points and agree, for the most part. Please bear in mind the "white" lie you refer to is a lie. There is no such thing.

Posted by: Skyhook May 7 2007, 05:03 PM

My only question about Doug's remarks is he implying that Linda was witholding intimacy, and trying to drive the other person away, or was Danny? His remarks could be interpreted either way according to one's presuppositions. I hope he meant what we think he meant. If so, that is a very good development, and Doug has a good sense of irony and justice. Isn't there a saying that says something about "bearding the lion in his den?"
But if Danny understood it the way we hope Doug meant it, that would seem to me to put the merger in jeapordy if it has not been actually consumated already.

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 05:12 PM

I think we all spend too much time together here in the day! Whew!!! I am going to have to start charging rent for the space folks is taking in my head! LOL!!!

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 7 2007, 03:03 PM) ☐
>
> My only question about Doug's remarks is he implying that Linda was witholding intimacy, and trying to drive the other person away, or was Danny? His remarks could be interpreted either way according to one's presuppositions. I hope he meant what we think he meant. If so, that is a very good development, and Doug has a good sense of irony and justice. Isn't there a saying that says something about "bearding the lion in his den?"
> But if Danny understood it the way we hope Doug meant it, that would seem to me to put the merger in jeapordy if it has not been actually consumated already.

Posted by: lurker May 7 2007, 05:20 PM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 7 2007, 05:03 PM) ☐

> My only question about Doug's remarks is he implying that Linda was witholding intimacy, and trying to drive the other person away, or was Danny? His remarks could be interpreted either way according to one's presuppositions. I hope he meant what we think he meant. If so, that is a very good development, and Doug has a good sense of irony and justice. Isn't there a saying that says something about "bearding the lion in his den?"
> But if Danny understood it the way we hope Doug meant it, that would seem to me to put the merger in jeapordy if it has not been actually consumated already.

If the man gets itchy um.. feet, that is often his excuse for running around because no one can prove him wrong. The wife is accused of being "cold", frigid, not meeting his needs. How many times "the other women" is told this. How many women feel sorry for him until they become the new wife who knows she is not sexless but finds that since she is no longer a challenge, he is out looking for new conquests.

I know it can happen but I would be very cautious about accepting the word of one who has a lot of people saying that he has a history of being, shall we say, dissatisfied.

Posted by: Jnana15 May 7 2007, 05:54 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 7 2007, 05:02 PM)
>
> Welcome Maggie! I really want you to do get outta my head! Why ws I thinking the same thing, while watching this at my parents house of Sabbath?

Great mind think alike.

Posted by: seraph|m May 7 2007, 06:02 PM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 7 2007, 08:03 PM)
>
> My only question about Doug's remarks is he implying that Linda was witholding intimacy, and trying to drive the other person away, or was Danny? His remarks could be interpreted either way according to one's presuppositions. I hope he meant what we think he meant. If so, that is a very good development, and Doug has a good sense of irony and justice. Isn't there a saying that says something about "bearding the lion in his den?"
> But if Danny understood it the way we hope Doug meant it, that would seem to me to put the merger in jeapordy if it has not been actually consumated already.

"consummated", not sure I care for the sound of that...

My impression, based on the comments noted by Eld. DB, is that he seems to be acknowledging that LS was being pushed away, so that DS could make the accusations he did against her and thus, call himself justifying the actions he took. BTJM

Posted by: Skyhook May 7 2007, 07:33 PM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 7 2007, 07:02 PM)
>
> "consummated", not sure I care for the sound of that...
>
> My impression, based on the comments noted by Eld. DB, is that he seems to be acknowledging that LS was being pushed away, so that DS could make the accusations he did against her and thus, call himself justifying the actions he took. BTJM

If that is true, and I hope your are right, then it seems to me that the only way the merger would happen (if it hasn't already been legally accomplished) is if Danny has already lost his power to control events and people at 3abn. Why would Doug say that right in front of Danny and the cameras if they are the "good buddies" that they tried to portray on April 19th?

Posted by: Rosyroi May 7 2007, 09:07 PM

> QUOTE
>
> (Doug, looking kind-of "worked up"):
> "I'm going to be straight with you---do you want me to be straight with you? They're married; they know what the Bible says about the obligations; they made a promise in the sight of God. But they don't want to be with the person they are married to, so what they do is, they try to make that person as miserable as possible, and they drive them away. And, sometimes, the way they do that is by using intimacy as a reward and punishment device. They almost want to see of they can drive the person to an affair so they're then justified in divorcing and they can be the one that's innocent and the other one's guilty. IS THIS STRAIGHT ENOUGH FOR YOU?! (emphasis Doug's) I mean -- you know-- I've seen all the games that people play...Paul recognized that-- that's why he said, 'Do not defraud one another; you are one flesh" and --well--I won't get into that yet...I better pace myself.."

I am speechless. Thank you Maggie.

Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 09:24 PM

Has anybody noticed that nobosy asks Danny what he thinks about anything. He an only go on at 3ABN, When NAD wanted somebody to talk about it they asked DB, and so did everybody else. According to NAD the boards are exploring the possiblity.

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 7 2007, 05:33 PM)
>
> If that is true, and I hope your are right, then it seems to me that the only way the merger would happen (if it hasn't already been legally accomplished) is if Danny has already lost his power to control events and people at 3abn. Why would Doug say that right in front of Danny and the cameras if they are the "good buddies" that they tried to portray on April 19th?

Posted by: mozart May 7 2007, 10:18 PM

well, now, let's back the truck up a bit. or maybe the tape up a bit.
maggie, would you do me a favor and look at that tape one more time and tell me if you heard DB talking about "how long is too long to talk to someone of the opposite sex on the telephone"? i'm quite sure he mentioned this and said anything over 15min. is too long. now, correct me if i'm wrong, which i trust you guys to do, but isn't that one of danny's lines? i heard db talking about the issue of the trouble one can get into if they spend too much time alone talking to someone of the opposite sex. unless it was another sermon he did on the same topic on the same day, i'm sure i heard him say these things. he said it would always lead to intimacy, so for married people it was very dangerous. i think he even said something about counceling women in the church. that if a woman in the church comes to the preacher, i.e., that there should be another person present or they should call in a woman in the church to speak to her. something like that.
i had the opposite take on this.

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 7 2007, 08:07 PM) ☐
>
> I am speechless. Thank you Maggie.
>
> Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi May 7 2007, 11:10 PM

Well, now, I remember him saying somethinglike he asked his son how many women friends did he remember him(db) having, and the answer w as none. He also said that his office has a Window in it. for counseling sessions with women. I don't rmember the phone call time limit, but I was a bit distracted with my little nephews. it is also possible that it could have been DB's line all the time and DS counveniently used it to his advantage.

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 7 2007, 09:18 PM) ☐
>
> well, now, let's back the truck up a bit. or maybe the tape up a bit.
> maggie, would you do me a favor and look at that tape one more time and tell me if you heard DB talking about "how long is too long to talk to someone of the opposite sex on the telephone"? i'm quite sure he mentioned this and said anything over 15min. is too long. now, correct me if i'm wrong, which i trust you guys to do, but isn't that one of danny's lines? i heard db talking about the issue of the trouble one can get into if they spend too much time alone talking to someone of the opposite sex. unless it was another sermon he did on the same topic on the same day, i'm sure i heard him say these things. he said it would always lead to intimacy, so for married people it was very dangerous. i think he even said something about counceling women in the church. that if a woman in the church comes to the preacher, i.e., that there should be another person present or they should call in a woman in the church to speak to her. something like that.
> i had the opposite take on this.

Posted by: Aletheia May 8 2007, 03:03 AM

> QUOTE(Skyhook @ May 7 2007, 07:03 PM) ☐
>
> My only question about Doug's remarks is he implying that Linda was witholding intimacy, and trying to drive the other person away, or was Danny? His remarks could be interpreted either way according to > one's presuppositions. I hope he meant what we think he meant. If so, that is a very good development, and Doug has a good sense of irony and justice. Isn't there a saying that says something about "bearding the lion in his den?"

> But if Danny understood it the way we hope Doug meant it, that would seem to me to put the merger in jeapordy if it has not been actually consumated already.

Vhat? only two choices? either he was talking about Danny or he was talking about Linda? What if he was ust straight out proclaiming biblical and godly principles, and teaching about the seventh commandment, and t was to and for all?

adly, the one "implying" , and claiming it was about Danny and Linda, and even surmising, that he was earding the lion in his den, and that this may mean the merger is in jepardy, is you...

nd worse, others are adding to it already...

nd really, the only question here is why write this? What is your motive and intent?

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 8 2007, 12:18 AM)
>
> well, now, let's back the truck up a bit. or maybe the tape up a bit.
> maggie, would you do me a favor and look at that tape one more time and tell me if you heard DB talking about "how long is too long to talk to someone of the opposite sex on the telephone"? i'm quite sure he mentioned this and said anything over 15min. is too long. now, correct me if i'm wrong, which i trust you guys to do, but isn't that one of danny's lines? i heard db talking about the issue of the trouble one can get into if they spend too much time alone talking to someone of the opposite sex. unless it was another sermon he did on the same topic on the same day, i'm sure i heard him say these things. he said it would always lead to intimacy, so for married people it was very dangerous.

heard nothing resembling this in his words this past weekend.

> QUOTE
>
> i think he even said something about counceling women in the church. that if a woman in the church comes to the preacher, i.e., that there should be another person present or they should call in a woman in the church to speak to her. something like that.
> i had the opposite take on this.

es that's correct, I heard that too, I believe he mentioned having women councelors on staff, he also rought up even avoiding the appearance of evil or impropriety.

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 8 2007, 09:07 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 03:03 AM) ☐
>
> And really, the only question here is why write this? What is your motive and intent?

Have you asked yourself this lately?

The intent of this board is, as far as I can tell, what it's always been: to find out the truth. We withheld judgment until we saw some evidence, and so far only one side has. The evidence, the documentation, the original papers and e-mails say (drum roll ....) change 3ABN's leadership!

But I do agree with Aletheia in one way. These comments, taken in isolation, don't mean anything. The proof is in the pudding, for me.

Posted by: maggiecttr May 8 2007, 12:03 PM

> QUOTE(mozart @ May 8 2007, 12:18 AM) ☐
>
> well, now, let's back the truck up a bit. or maybe the tape up a bit.
> maggie, would you do me a favor and look at that tape one more time and tell me if you heard DB talking about "how long is too long to talk to someone of the opposite sex on the telephone"? i'm quite sure he mentioned this and said anything over 15min. is too long. now, correct me if i'm wrong, which i trust you guys to do, but isn't that one of danny's lines?

I need to put in some time on my exercise bike now, so will put in the tape & see if he said this. I don't think he did, because I was "especially" listening to see if he mentioned being on the phone with the opposite sex, as John Lomacang did during his sermon last year during the first Ten Commandments Weekend. I do recall him talking about how he doesn't have women friends & has a window in his office, etc.

I'll be back as soon as I can,
Maggie

Posted by: maggiecttr May 8 2007, 12:54 PM

> QUOTE(maggiecttr @ May 8 2007, 02:03 PM) ☐
>
> I need to put in some time on my exercise bike now, so will put in the tape & see if he said this. I don't think he did, because I was "especially" listening to see if he mentioned being on the phone with the opposite sex, as John Lomacang did during his sermon last year during the first Ten Commandments Weekend. I do recall him talking about how he doesn't have women friends & has a window in his office, etc.
>
> I'll be back as soon as I can,
> Maggie

OK--I'm back. Nope, nothing about being on the phone with someone of the opposite sex UNLESS that was said during the 2.05 minutes that the feed was blacked out & nature photos/music was inserted by 3abn. (That "blackout" occurred immediately before the part I quoted/transcribed.)

Blessings,
maggie

Posted by: shinejoy May 8 2007, 01:14 PM

you lnow there must be some men that don't have self worth if they can't trust there wifes talking to the opposite sex good grief my husband works in a place where there is woman all over the place and i trust him he even has some friends which don't threaten are relationship abit i have men friends that i talk to which he trust me too. i think Danny doesn't trust himself so he can't trust Linda.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 8 2007, 01:25 PM

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 8 2007, 12:14 PM)
>
> you lnow there must be some men that don't have self worth if they can't trust there wifes talking to the opposite sex good grief my husband works in a place where there is woman all over the place and i trust him he even has some friends which don't threaten are relationship abit i have men friends that i talk to which he trust me too. i think Danny doesn't trust himself so he can't trust Linda.

Shinejoy I agree with your post. The idea is absurb to me about Linda talking 'too much' with another man just because she is concerned and worried about her son. Who knows mabe she was talking with Nathan possibly half or mabe three fourths of the time on the telephone.

My understanding from another post, my memory may be defective, it seems that JL also 'counceled Linda against talking too much on the telephone with the Dr. that it is hurting the ministry.

My opinion is he was getting his orders from Danny for the (electronics degree style) 'counceling' to (NOT with) Linda.

Yes this has been discussed elsewhere.
edited for spelling and content

Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 01:34 PM

In a way I see what he is saying. These days you don't know the motives of anyone. In this way the appearance of evil takes on a little different meaning. I can't say taht I disagree with him on this. I know pastor who basically "fell" by relaxing just he precautions to which DB was referring. I don t' think it is so much that you make sure the situation can please everyone, some folks minds are in the gutter 24/7, there is no way to please them, but as a protection.

Posted by: FineArt May 8 2007, 03:04 PM

I was hoping Doug would clarify what is meant by "spiritual adultry". this expression blows my mind. Recently, members of a neighboring SDA church were married, they claimed "spiritual adultry" on the part of the groom. If this subject is not addressed...corrected, it will become "the way to go" and take the silence/refrain from taking a stand..... to make it acceptable.

Of course, that would have put Doug between a rock and a hard place but i always thought that is what ministers are suppose to do.....stand for the truth though the heavens fall.

God bless

Posted by: SoulEspresso May 8 2007, 04:36 PM

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 8 2007, 03:04 PM)
>
> ... but i always thought that is what ministers are suppose to do.....stand for the truth though the heavens fall.

This church has a terrible habit of shooting people who are just trying to be helpful. It makes it harder to take a stand, but that's no excuse.

Perhaps Doug B could use some encouraging letters, too.

Posted by: seraph|m May 8 2007, 04:49 PM

This, from where I stand, is where the rubber meets the road and is well worth repeating:

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 8 2007, 04:14 PM)
>
> ...i think Danny doesn't trust himself so he can't trust Linda.

Knows he can not be trusted, thus did not/does not trust...

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 04:51 PM

"Spiritual adultery" is only commited against God. It is what the COI were doing each time they went to worshipping ht eidols of their neighbors. It does not apply to a marriage. Period. Danny just applied it here,a nd it worked, becausel, of course every word that proceedeth out of his mouth is bible. In all the "counseling" sessions talked about with Linda, even with the electronics specialist, they told her to stop talking to the Dr. OR ELSE it would lead to something more, but they never came up with that something more.

> QUOTE(FineArt @ May 8 2007, 02:04 PM)
>
> I was hoping Doug would clarify what is meant by "spiritual adultry". this expression blows my mind. Recently, members of a neighboring SDA church were married, they claimed "spiritual adultry" on the part of the groom. If this subject is not addressed...corrected, it will become "the way to go" and take the silence/refrain from taking a stand..... to make it acceptable.
>
> Of course, that would have put Doug between a rock and a hard place but i always thought that is what ministers are suppose to do.....stand for the truth though the heavens fall.
> God bless

Posted by: Skyhook May 8 2007, 04:55 PM

> QUOTE(maggiecttr @ May 8 2007, 01:54 PM)
>
> OK--I'm back. Nope, nothing about being on the phone with someone of the opposite sex UNLESS that was said during the 2.05 minutes that the feed was blacked out & nature photos/music was inserted by 3abn. (That "blackout" occurred immediately before the part I quoted/transcribed.)
>
> Blessings,
> maggie

This has probably been covered before, but in Danny's case, from what I understand, it was his percieved loss of control over Linda that drove him up the wall. She was bieng influenced by someone with an intelligence and wisdom quite a bit beyond Danny's and that was a big threat to him. For someone who appears to be narcisstic and is said by those who have worked with him to be a control freak, it would be unforgivable for the wife to look to anyone else for counsel, especially having to do with his own family.

Posted by: inga May 8 2007, 06:34 PM

> QUOTE(maggiecttr @ May 7 2007, 04:25 PM)
>
> (Doug, looking kind-of "worked up"):
> "I'm going to be straight with you---do you want me to be straight with you? They're married; they know what the Bible says about the obligations; they made a promise in the sight of God. But they don't want to be with the person they are married to, so what they do is, they try to make that person as miserable as possible, and they drive them away. And, sometimes, the way they do that is by using intimacy as a reward and punishment device. They almost want to see of they can drive the person to an affair so they're then justified in divorcing and they can be the one that's innocent and the other one's guilty. IS THIS STRAIGHT ENOUGH FOR YOU?! (emphasis Doug's) I mean -- you know-- I've seen all the games that people play...Paul recognized that-- that's why he said, 'Do not defraud one another; you are one flesh" and --well--I won't get into that yet...I better pace myself.."
> Maggie

Maggie, thanks for this.

Since women are infamous (i.e. often accused) of "withholding intimacy" (i.e. sex), Doug would be referring to Linda, if he is referring to one of the Sheltons. In that case, he's part of Danny's big cover-up machine. (So sad for Doug.)

Other remarks about 'women friends' and talking on the phone would substantiate that.

IOW, Doug is solidly behind Danny in the husband vs wife issue.

Now, what's in Doug's past life that makes him identify so strongly with Danny? (After all, he wasn't there, so knows nothing firsth-hand. A minister of the gospel and/or counselor has no business making judgments from hearing only one side of the story.)

Does anyone know how many wives Doug has had, if any, besides his current one?

Posted by: from-the-pew May 8 2007, 08:05 PM

> QUOTE(inga @ May 8 2007, 07:34 PM)
>
> Does anyone know how many wives Doug has had, if any, besides his current one?

I've only heard mention of one.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 8 2007, 08:10 PM

> QUOTE(from-the-pew @ May 8 2007, 07:05 PM)
>
> I've only heard mention of one.

I believe two wifes. One divorce.

Posted by: from-the-pew May 8 2007, 08:31 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 8 2007, 09:10 PM)
>
> I believe two wifes. One divorce.

Exactly. The question, as I understood it, was how many wives prior to the current one. The previous wife was mother to three of his five children, including Micah, who died in a freak accident a few years back.

Posted by: sonshineonme May 8 2007, 08:38 PM

> QUOTE(from-the-pew @ May 8 2007, 07:31 PM)
>
> Exactly. The question, as I understood it, was how many wives prior to the current one. The previous wife was mother to three of his children, including Micah, who died in a freak accident a few years back.

You are correct..that was the question. I just stated the whole.
I did not know that Karen was not the mom of those boys.
It was very said when Micah died. I think that was only 3 years or so.
I have often waited to hear Doug talk about remarriage/divorce, etc, knowing he had a prior wife. From what I have heard him say in the past, he is somewhat gracious, basically showing "he's been there", and not just a black and white situation...of course, I guess you can justify anything, if you want to badly enough. I am not black and white on the situation, so, this is why I have paid attention to his "way" of talking about it.

Posted by: from-the-pew May 8 2007, 08:51 PM

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 8 2007, 09:38 PM)
>
> You are correct..that was the question. I just stated the whole.
> I did not know that Karen was not the mom of those boys.
> It was very said when Micah died. I think that was only 3 years or so.
> I have often waited to hear Doug talk about remarriage/divorce, etc, knowing he had a prior wife. From what I have heard him say in the past, he is somewhat gracious, basically showing "he's been there", and not just a black and white situation...of course, I guess you can justify anything, if you want to badly enough. I am not black and white on the situation, so, this is why I have paid attention to his "way" of talking about it.

Regarding Micah, taken from the PUC Alumni paper. (This article doesn't mention Stephen and Nathan, Doug and Karen's boys.)

> QUOTE
>
> Micah Batchelor, Att. '96-'98, died on April 30, 2001, as the result of a construction accident in Covelo, Calif. He was born November 4, 1977, in Fort Bragg, Calif. His father, Doug Batchelor, is an evangelist with Amazing Facts evangelistic ministry. Even though he was busy in his own construction business, Micah took time out to be a participant in a major evangelistic series which his father conducted in Manila, Philippines, in 1999. He is survived by his father, Doug, and stepmother, Karen Batchelor; a brother, Daniel; and a sister, Regarding Doug and the issue at hand - he is not naive, look where he grew up! (a child of show business). I don't know how much he really knows or not. People writing him will not change his mind, I don't think. He will have to find out things on his own. We must be patient with him, and see how things transpire. He is human! So I'm not counting on anything. But I am praying for truth, no matter what that may be.

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 09:04 PM

Where is that derned smiley when I need it?!

> QUOTE(sonshineonme @ May 8 2007, 06:10 PM)
>
> I believe two wifes. One divorce.

Posted by: Rosyroi May 8 2007, 09:08 PM

> QUOTE(from-the-pew @ May 8 2007, 06:31 PM)
>
> Exactly. The question, as I understood it, was how many wives prior to the current one. The previous wife was mother to three of his five children, including Micah, who died in a freak accident a few years back.

Guess I misssed something. My mother told me Doug had been married before but when I read his book the pages about his first wife must have been torn out.

Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 09:28 PM

Ok, so I can understand they murried young even incaptible, believe it or not, but do they all toss the first wives and erase them from history?

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 8 2007, 07:08 PM) ☐
>
> Guess I misssed something. My mother told me Doug had been married before but when I read his book the pages about his first wife must have been torn out.
> Rosyroi

Posted by: sonshineonme May 8 2007, 09:39 PM

> QUOTE(from-the-pew @ May 8 2007, 07:51 PM) ☐
>
> Regarding Micah, taken from the PUC Alumni paper. (This article doesn't mention Stephen and Nathan, Doug and Karen's boys.)

It just didn't seem that long ago already.
I was told he had divorced his first wife, if I am wrong, someone please correct me.
I wondered why Micahs mother was not mentioned, unles she was no longer alive then?? Not sure.

Posted by: Grith May 8 2007, 09:43 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 8 2007, 11:08 PM) ☐
>
> Guess I misssed something. My mother told me Doug had been married before but when I read his book the pages about his first wife must have been torn out.
> Rosyroi

When Micah died, I looked up his obituary on the internet. One Cal. paper gave both his parents names. Both of DB's wives (former and current) are named Karen. The first Karen had a different last name, so it seems obvious she is remarried.

Posted by: Skyhook May 8 2007, 10:08 PM

I think it would be wise to not jump to any conclusions about DB and his relationship to DS and 3abn. There is more than enough first hand experience, evidence and information to give a fairly accurate picture of the kind of person Danny Shelton is. I don't think we can say the same about Doug. We need to take care that we not start condemning him. As as has been pointed out, this is a big deal for the church. Whatever happens can and will reflect on the church. I have no doubt that there is an unseen struggle going on in the background. Satan would like nothing better than to cause as much damage as he can to the 3abn ministry--and he is successfully using DS and the others to cause it to happen.

If he can drag DB and Amazing Facts into it and neutralize them too, he will. My hope and prayers are that God will take control of the affairs at 3abn. It could be that He does this using DB and AF. It may be that the outcome is still uncertain.

Someone compared this to Kellogg and the Alfa and Omega of deception as described by EGW. It doesn't seem to fit, but she did say it would be of a "startling nature." At any rate, we already know that this is a very divisive issue and could get worse. People who I have talked to who know anything at all about what is going on tend to have strong feelings about it one way or the other.

Sorry if I sound preachy. JMHO.

Posted by: roxe May 8 2007, 10:36 PM

> QUOTE(Rosyroi @ May 8 2007, 08:08 PM) ☐
>
> Guess I misssed something. My mother told me Doug had been married before but when I read his book the pages about his first wife must have been torn out.
> Rosyroi

during the years of my membership at Doug's church, i lost count of how many children we were introduced to... all older than the boys from the first marriage... nothing was ever said about who, what, why, when or where.

seems there was a lot more going on in that cave than Bible reading ☒

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 10:55 PM

See now, I got some revelations about DB tonight. I got some questions. Now let me say this, I know this stuff is in his past and have little value to my opinion of him, but realize that they do influence his own views today. He and JL used to partipciate with this weekly round table discussion with some ministers of other denoms and they made a dynamite team. I was proud of both of them. Now, like Danny, I beleive Doug to have some race issues,(jes being real. Youare hard pressed to find black people in his audience now., and he wnts to move his church where they are virutally non existent, not a coincedence by any stretch of the imagination. God is not through with any of us yet.), and I don't agree with him 100% of the time, but I can listen to him, understand him. I by no means think him incapable or unworthy of itting at the helm of a merged 3ABN/AF. As I said, God is not through with any of us yet.

So now his parents were in show business? and I heard him talk about it, but when exactly did he go to eh countains to be a hermit? He ain't that old, so when did he have all them children? Just a little history here.

> QUOTE(roxe @ May 8 2007, 08:36 PM) ☐
>
> during the years of my membership at Doug's church, i lost count of how many children we were introduced to... all older than the boys from the first marriage... nothing was ever said about who, what, why, when or where.
>
> seems there was a lot more going on in that cave than Bible reading ☒

Posted by: Rosyroi May 8 2007, 11:07 PM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 8 2007, 08:55 PM) ☐
>
> See now, I got some revelations about DB tonight. I got some questions. Now let me say this, I know this stuff is in his past and have little value to my opinion of him, but realize that they do influence his own views today. He and JL used to partipciate with this weekly round table discussion with some ministers of other denoms and they made a dynamite team. I was proud of both of them. Now, like Danny, I beleive Doug to have some race issues,(jes being real. Youare hard pressed to find black people in his audience now., and he wnts to move his church where they are virutally non existent, not a coincedence by any stretch of the imagination. God is not through with any of us yet.), and I don't agree with him 100% of the time, but I can listen to him, understand him. I by no means think him incapable or unworthy of itting at the helm of a merged 3ABN/AF. As I said, God is not through with any of us yet.
>
> So now his parents were in show business? and I heard him talk about it, but when exactly did he go to eh countains to be a hermit? He ain't that old, so when did he have all them children? Just a little history here.

Doug wrote a book called The Richest Caveman. His father was a Billionaire and his mother was a song writer. my memory is not very clear at this time but I believe he was in his late teens when he found his cave.He found a Bible in the cave. You could probably find the book at any local ABC Book center. I found mine at a local yard sale. I gave it away to someone else to read.
Someone else can probably give you a more detailed account.
Rosyroi

Posted by: princessdi May 8 2007, 11:11 PM

Wow! Thanks Rosy!

Posted by: Skyhook May 9 2007, 12:47 AM

At campmeeting DB shared that he had taken his youngest children to see his father who was on his death bed. When he got to the gated mansion in Florida and called in who he was, the latest in a series young "beauty queen" types had moved in with his dad. She refused to allow them in to visit. He left without seeing his father, and soon after that his dad died. Just before he died his dad married the young lady. He never heard from lawyers or anyone after his father died. He was the only surviving blood related family. People told him that he would have a very good case to contest a will that left everything to the young lady and excluded him. His response was that there is nothing that he needs that lots of money can give him. He has seen what money does to people. Being around his mother and her hollywood star friends, and his father's mega bucks, he saw enough of that kind of life. That was what I heard him say at campmeeting a few years ago.

Posted by: princessdi May 9 2007, 12:57 AM

Wow!! I'm really learning today! thanks Skyhook! What a testimony!

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 01:13 AM

> QUOTE(roxe @ May 8 2007, 11:36 PM)
>
> during the years of my membership at Doug's church, i lost count of how many children we were introduced to... all older than the boys from the first marriage... nothing was ever said about who, what, why, when or where.
>
> seems there was a lot more going on in that cave than Bible reading

You lost count? That seems like a rude and ridiculous comment considering everyone knows he had 4 children with his first wife and 2 with his second. Are you having a hard time counting to 6? Actually 5 now that his one son was killed in an large equipment accident.
Again, I fail to see the relevance to any of this.

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 01:29 AM

> QUOTE(princessdi @ May 8 2007, 11:55 PM)
>
> See now, I got some revelations about DB tonight. I got some questions. Now let me say this, I know this stuff is in his past and have little value to my opinion of him, but realize that they do influence his own views today. He and JL used to partipciate with this weekly round table discussion with some ministers of other denoms and they made a dynamite team. I was proud of both of them. Now, like Danny, I beleive Doug to have some race issues,(jes being real. Youare hard pressed to find black people in his audience now., and he wnts to move his church where they are virutally non existent, not a coincedence by any stretch of the imagination. God is not through with any of us yet.), and I don't agree with him 100% of the time, but I can listen to him, understand him. I by no means think him incapable or unworthy of itting at the helm of a merged 3ABN/AF. As I said, God is not through with any of us yet.
>
> So now his parents were in show business? and I heard him talk about it, but when exactly did he go to eh countains to be a hermit? He ain't that old, so when did he have all them children? Just a little history here.

Danny and Doug have race issues? That's a first. It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.
Let's see, a man of color is head of production, a man of color is the pastor of the T'ville Church, several women of color have worked and do work there (I have seen one on an interview), the Aikens do programming, T Marshall preaches, Wintley Phipps sings, preaches, has done interviews and sits on the board, there are lots of singers of color, Mrs. Lomacang works in the radio department....And all of this in a town that doesn't have one african american resident except for those who are employed at 3abn. mmm...I am failing to see a race issue.
So if Doug wanted to move his church or AF where black people were non existent (your allegation) then all he would have to do is move to T'ville.

Posted by: from-the-pew May 9 2007, 06:43 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 02:13 AM)
>
> You lost count? That seems like a rude and ridiculous comment considering everyone knows he had 4 children with his first wife and 2 with his second. Are you having a hard time counting to 6? Actually 5 now > that his one son was killed in an large equipment accident.

> Again, I fail to see the relevance to any of this.

o, I beg to differ. Never, ever have I heard 6. He and his first wife had 2 sons and a daughter. He and his urrent have 2 sons. Yes, I remember Daniel & Micah running around - I'm not a lot older than them. During he Millenium of Prophecy, he mentioned that he had 5 children, and that had recently tragically lost one of hem. Just because one died, doesn't mean that he will suddenly remove him from the list.

s for his story, you can view it here: http://www.amazingfacts.org/about_us/pastor_doug.asp (this was ecorded before his father died.)

newer version of his testimony ttp://www.dougbatchelor.com/MyTestimony/tabid/60/Default.aspx nd he lived alone in the cave.

Posted by: LaurenceD May 9 2007, 07:10 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia)
>
> It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.

oes anyone know how local Thompsonville residents really feel about 3abn?

t sounds like the community's negative perception of the compound was based on 3abn trying to get out of aying it's fair share of taxes, not racial issues. The judge put it this way: In a letter attached to the 2000 ear application, the Village of Thompsonville adamantly (emphasis in original attachment) opposed the equested exemption. The Board of Review of Franklin County, the Cave township supervisor, and the Cave ownship Board had a similar reaction.

Posted by: Clay May 9 2007, 08:08 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 02:29 AM)
>
> Danny and Doug have race issues? That's a first. It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.
> Let's see, a man of color is head of production, a man of color is the pastor of the T'ville Church, several women of color have worked and do work there (I have seen one on an interview), the Aikens do programming, T Marshall preaches, Wintley Phipps sings, preaches, has done interviews and sits on the board, there are lots of singers of color, Mrs. Lomacang works in the radio department....And all of this in a town that doesn't have one african american resident except for those who are employed at 3abn. mmm...I am failing to see a race issue.
> So if Doug wanted to move his church or AF where black people were non existent (your allegation) then all he would have to do is move to T'ville.

ecause you haven't heard it means it must not be true right? Interesting indeed....

Using that logic we can conclude that slavemasters did not have color problems.... after all they had black people cooking their food, black people working in their fields, black people driving them around, and black people in their beds either as bed warmers or something else.... thanks Cindy for enlightening me....

Posted by: awesumtenor May 9 2007, 08:42 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 9 2007, 10:08 AM)
>
> because you haven't heard it means it must not be true right? Interesting indeed....
>
> Using that logic we can conclude that slavemasters did not have color problems.... after all they had black people cooking their food, black people working in their fields, black people driving them around, and black people in their beds either as bed warmers or something else.... thanks Cindy for enlightening me....

Or, to put it in the words of Mr. Pascoe, my uber-bigoted 9th grade ancient and medieval history teacher... " I have nothing against nigras; I think everybody should own a few..."

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: watchbird May 9 2007, 08:51 AM

> QUOTE(LaurenceD @ May 9 2007, 09:10 AM)
>
> Does anyone know how local Thompsonville residents really feel about 3abn?
>
> It sounds like the community's negative perception of the compound was based on 3abn trying to get out of paying it's fair share of taxes, not racial issues. The judge put it this way: In a letter attached to the 2000 year application, the Village of Thompsonville adamantly (emphasis in original attachment) opposed the requested exemption. The Board of Review of Franklin County, the Cave township supervisor, and the Cave Township Board had a similar reaction.

The problems between Thompsonville residents and 3abn go back a lot farther and are much more widespread than merely the property tax issues.

Duane Clem, PJMusic, Beartrap, and others on BSDA who are or have been residents of T'ville could give a lot of first hand testimony from the community side of things. But before you do try to contact them privately...."do your homework" right here on the board to see what they have already said.

You'll need the search function and patience... but here is one http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9766&view=findpost&p=129307

Dig, dig, dig..... ...... and keep digging....

Posted by: HUGGINS130 May 9 2007, 09:05 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 02:29 AM)
>
> Danny and Doug have race issues? That's a first. It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.
> Let's see, a man of color is head of production, a man of color is the pastor of the T'ville Church, several women of color have worked and do work there (I have seen one on an interview), the Aikens do programming, T Marshall preaches, Wintley Phipps sings, preaches, has done interviews and sits on the board, there are lots of singers of color, Mrs. Lomacang works in the radio department....And all of this in a town that doesn't have one african american resident except for those who are employed at 3abn.
> mmm...I am failing to see a race issue.
> So if Doug wanted to move his church or AF where black people were non existent (your allegation) then all he would have to do is move to T'ville.

I bet the only color that D. Shelton and D. Batchelor are worried about is $$$$$ nuff said!!

Posted by: Aletheia May 9 2007, 09:15 AM

> QUOTE(Clay @ May 9 2007, 10:08 AM)
>
> because you haven't heard it means it must not be true right? Interesting indeed....
>
> Using that logic we can conclude that slavemasters did not have color problems.... after all they had black people cooking their food, black people working in their fields, black people driving them around, and black people in their beds either as bed warmers or something else.... thanks Cindy for enlightening me....

You seem to have serious issues, and they just keeps coming up and clouding your view. My opinion and I'm sticking to it.

What I did see this past weekend were brethren of every hue and color, and the huge participation of the Black Churches in Chicago, and I heard the call to end the divisions based on color in the Churches, and the amens all around me.

The truth is, you can always find what you seek Clay.. Some are always borrowing trouble.

For myself, and I know I am not alone, I am seeking a better place and I know if we can't live together in the here and now, we won't be living together in heaven or the new earth.

We are called to be apart from the world, and God's people are one family, and need to start behaving like it.

> QUOTE(watchbird @ May 9 2007, 10:51 AM)
>
> The problems between Thompsonville residents and 3abn go back a lot farther and are much more widespread than merely the property tax issues.
>
> Duane Clem, PJMusic, Beartrap, and others on BSDA who are or have been residents of T'ville could give a lot of first hand testimony from the community side of things. But before you do try to contact them privately...."do your homework" right here on the board to see what they have already said.
>
> You'll need the search function and patience... but here is one

> http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=9766&view=findpost&p=129307
>
> Dig, dig, dig..... ...... and keep digging....

\nd if you only consult those who have an axe to grind, you know what you will find before even looking, so vhy bother???

> QUOTE(HUGGINS130 @ May 9 2007, 11:05 AM)
>
> I bet the only color that D. Shelton and D. Batchelor are worried about is $$$$$ nuff said!!

'hat's just downright ugly.

Posted by: HUGGINS130 May 9 2007, 09:22 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 10:15 AM)
>
> You seem to have serious issues, and they just keeps coming up and clouding your view. My opinion and I'm sticking to it.
>
> What I did see this past weekend were brethren of every hue and color, and the huge participation of the Black Churches in Chicago, and I heard the call to end the divisions based on color in the Churches, and the amens all around me.
>
> The truth is, you can always find what you seek Clay.. Some are always borrowing trouble.
>
> For myself, and I know I am not alone, I am seeking a better place and I know if we can't live together in the here and now, we won't be living together in heaven or the new earth.
>
> We are called to be apart from the world, and God's people are one family, and need to start behaving like it.
> And if you only consult those who have an axe to grind, you know what you will find before even looking, so why bother???
> That's just downright ugly.

ind ugly gets exposure too!!! Moving on as the saying goes you can fool some of the people some of the ime, but you can't fool all of the people all the time...
'he truth is Danny and Doug have race issues... they want every class of individuals $ that they can get, ind it doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure that out!!! Ministry is so washed up today it ain't even unny...it's about money and less about Christ! If it wasn't about money, then why do they need so much?

Posted by: Clay May 9 2007, 09:42 AM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 10:15 AM)
>
> You seem to have serious issues, and they just keeps coming up and clouding your view. My opinion and I'm sticking to it.

> What I did see this past weekend were brethren of every hue and color, and the huge participation of the Black Churches in Chicago, and I heard the call to end the divisions based on color in the Churches, and the amens all around me.
>
> The truth is, you can always find what you seek Clay.. Some are always borrowing trouble.
>
> For myself, and I know I am not alone, I am seeking a better place and I know if we can't live together in the here and now, we won't be living together in heaven or the new earth.
>
> We are called to be apart from the world, and God's people are one family, and need to start behaving like it.
> And if you only consult those who have an axe to grind, you know what you will find before even looking, so why bother???
> That's just downright ugly.

ny issues are no more serious than your issues... likewise they do not cloud my view anymore than yours :loud your view.... do you really want to go there? I mean really....

\s for what you saw in Chi-town..... that is a whole different horse.... and I suspect that it is easy for those vho have power and have little to lose to talk about uniting and being one.... do your homework..... it is ›asier said than implemented....

Posted by: YogusBearus May 9 2007, 10:21 AM

> QUOTE(HUGGINS130 @ May 9 2007, 09:22 AM)
>
> and ugly gets exposure too!!! Moving on as the saying goes you can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all the time...
> The truth is Danny and Doug have race issues... they want every class of individuals $ that they can get, and it doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure that out!!! Ministry is so washed up today it ain't even funny...it's about money and less about Christ! If it wasn't about money, then why do they need so much?

Nhat he said! When you boil it down, all you will have left is how can these "ministries" get their hand in your ›ocket. That is a unfortunate universal truth that includes all the players in this mess.

bear

Posted by: Clay May 9 2007, 10:26 AM

> QUOTE(YogusBearus @ May 9 2007, 11:21 AM)
>
> What he said! When you boil it down, all you will have left is how can these "ministries" get their hand in your pocket. That is a unfortunate universal truth that includes all the players in this mess.
>
> -bear

ı friend of mine (methodist minister in fact) once said,

> QUOTE
>
> if the gospel you are preaching includes asking for money.... it aint the gospel....

and to that I agree...

Posted by: princessdi May 9 2007, 11:48 AM

Please Gurl, this is beyond your understanding. Don't even try it. I am not going to answer you because you still would not understand,

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 12:29 AM)
>
> Danny and Doug have race issues? That's a first. It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.
> Let's see, a man of color is head of production, a man of color is the pastor of the T'ville Church, several women of color have worked and do work there (I have seen one on an interview), the Aikens do programming, T Marshall preaches, Wintley Phipps sings, preaches, has done interviews and sits on the board, there are lots of singers of color, Mrs. Lomacang works in the radio department....And all of this in a town that doesn't have one african american resident except for those who are employed at 3abn.
> mmm...I am failing to see a race issue.
> So if Doug wanted to move his church or AF where black people were non existent (your allegation) then all he would have to do is move to T'ville.

Posted by: princessdi May 9 2007, 11:59 AM

Ok?!!!

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 9 2007, 07:42 AM)
>
> Or, to put it in the words of Mr. Pascoe, my uber-bigoted 9th grade ancient and medieval history teacher...
> " I have nothing against nigras; I think everybody should own a few..."
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 9 2007, 12:52 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 8 2007, 11:29 PM)
>
> Danny and Doug have race issues? That's a first. It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.
> Let's see, a man of color is head of production, a man of color is the pastor of the T'ville Church, several women of color have worked and do work there (I have seen one on an interview), the Aikens do programming, T Marshall preaches, Wintley Phipps sings, preaches, has done interviews and sits on the board, there are lots of singers of color, Mrs. Lomacang works in the radio department....And all of this in a town that doesn't have one african american resident except for those who are employed at 3abn.
> mmm...I am failing to see a race issue.

> So if Doug wanted to move his church or AF where black people were non existent (your allegation) then all he would have to do is move to T'ville.

:indy,
'here is no KKK chapter in T'ville. It is over in Benton. Bystander once charged the very same thing and IOTY set the record straight http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?
;=&showtopic=12650&view=findpost&p=181347. There hasn't been a rally there since the '90s and most of he non-white 3abn employees live in other towns.

)uane further clarified the issue about T'ville feelings towards 3abn ıttp://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=12650&view=findpost&p=181390.

}abn has bent over backwards to give the appearance of racial tolerance. However, sometimes what Danny ;ays makes it look more like he and others at 3abn are bending over backwards to be racially condescending. will share with you a case in point.

lear the end of the first hour of the TCW programming, after Danny had told his fat jokes about Melody and ennifer LaMountain having trouble squeezing by each other at the stage entrance, and while he was ntroducing the song he, Melody and CA Murray were about to sing together, he launched into an anecdote ıbout the history of the trio. Seems that back in New York, when Danny had just met CA, he was informed hat he, CA and Melody were supposed to sing together. Danny was worried about it since he didn't know if :A could sing so he went to ask advice of another 3abn leader. To the Chicago TCW audience, Danny said "I lon't know if this is politically correct or not, but Mollie Steenson told me 'He's black, he can sing' ". I don't :now how many in the auditorium were amused.

\dding this to the other condescending things Danny has said at rallies held in black churches, one might ›egin to think that pehaps a course in proper race relations might be in order for some of the 3abn eadership.

Posted by: seraph|m May 9 2007, 01:02 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 04:29 AM)
>
> Danny and Doug have race issues? That's a first. It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.

:s not the Shelton clan (family) from Tville? If so, then it would stand to reason that there nay be some association, being from that community, with those who are, let us say less :han accepting towards other ethnic groups.

=ood for thought:

Nhen a person, of any ethnic group, is working "for or with" someone that does not mean :hat they do not see that ethnic group as beneath them. Consider, how many "people of :olor", as you put it, are anything but employed, in one capacity or another, by the 5heltons? Just a thought...

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 9 2007, 03:52 PM)
>
> Cindy,
> There is no KKK chapter in T'ville. It is over in Benton. Bystander once charged the very same thing and HOTY set the record straight http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?
> s=&showtopic=12650&view=findpost&p=181347. There hasn't been a rally there since the '90s and most of the non-white 3abn employees live in other towns.
>
> Duane further clarified the issue about T'ville feelings towards 3abn > http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?s=&showtopic=12650&view=findpost&p=181390.

> ...
>
> Adding this to the other condescending things Danny has said at rallies held in black churches, one might begin to think that pehaps a course in proper race relations might be in order for some of the 3abn leadership.

'B, it looks like we posted within a min of each other.

Yes, it seem they could benefit from some "cultural diversity training". But would it matter? I mean loesn't scripture mention "As a man thinketh in his heart" and also, "Out of the abundance of the heart the nouth speaketh? Anybody can "learn to say the right things" but it's what is in the heart that matters to God. Apparently these folks are missing that small detail.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 9 2007, 01:03 PM

Regarding Doug Batchelor's first marriage, when he did an evangelistic series at our church way back in the late 80s I recall him having two sons and a daughter. A few years after this series, I heard from a close friend that Doug's wife had chosen to be with another man, not in the spiritual adultery manner but in the real adultery manner, which gave Doug biblical grounds to remarry. I don't know who divorced who.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 9 2007, 01:16 PM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 9 2007, 11:02 AM)
>
> Is not the Shelton clan (family) from Tville? If so, then it would stand to reason that there may be some association, being from that community, with those who are, let us say less than accepting towards other ethnic groups.
>
> Food for thought:
>
> When a person, of any ethnic group, is working "for or with" someone that does not mean that they do not see that ethnic group as beneath them. Consider, how many "people of color", as you put it, are anything but employed, in one capacity or another, by the Sheltons? Just a thought...
> PB, it looks like we posted within a min of each other.
>
> Yes, it seem they could benefit from some "cultural diversity training". But would it matter? I mean doesn't scripture mention "As a man thinketh in his heart" and also, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh? Anybody can "learn to say the right things" but it's what is in the heart that matters to God. Apparently these folks are missing that small detail.

ìera, completely agree with you. That small detail, that change in the abundance of the heart needs to come from he right Teacher. If we don't see each other in the same way that Jesus sees each of us we will never truly)e one. There will always be something that makes us feel superior or inferior to those around us. Does the .ord love any of us differently due to our color, our weight, our I.Q., our education, our social status, or our ;ins, etc.? Does He love you any less or more than He loves Danny or me or Aletheia? Does he love those in eadership more than those living in Thompsonville who some classify as racist? Nope, He died equally and :ompletely for every person on Planet Earth.

Posted by: seraph|m May 9 2007, 01:52 PM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 9 2007, 04:16 PM)
>
> Sera,
> I completely agree with you. That small detail, that change in the abundance of the heart needs to come from the right Teacher. If we don't see each other in the same way that Jesus sees each of us we will never truly be one. There will always be something that makes us feel superior or inferior to those around us. Does the Lord love any of us differently due to our color, our weight, our I.Q., our education, our social status, or our sins, etc.? Does He love you any less or more than He loves Danny or me or Aletheia? Does he love those in leadership more than those living in Thompsonville who some classify as racist? Nope, He died equally and completely for every person on Planet Earth.

Amen

Posted by: mozart May 9 2007, 04:07 PM

> QUOTE(maggiecttr @ May 8 2007, 11:54 AM)
>
> OK--I'm back. Nope, nothing about being on the phone with someone of the opposite sex UNLESS that was said during the 2.05 minutes that the feed was blacked out & nature photos/music was inserted by 3abn. (That "blackout" occurred immediately before the part I quoted/transcribed.)
>
> Blessings,
> maggie

ok, well that must have been another sermon within those two days. i wasn't sure but it might have been worked into the sabbath school lesson or a sermon they showed after the TCW. i do know that i heard him say that however i wan't paying that close attn. to the whole TCW. just had it on from time to time. none the less, he did say it. i am sure of that. just don't know exactly when.

Thanks maggie than

> QUOTE(shinejoy @ May 8 2007, 12:14 PM)
>
> you lnow there must be some men that don't have self worth if they can't trust there wifes talking to the opposite sex good grief my husband works in a place where there is woman all over the place and i trust him he even has some friends which don't threaten are relationship abit i have men friends that i talk to which he trust me too. i think Danny doesn't trust himself so he can't trust Linda.

true in all cases where ppl are paranoid about cheating and their own strengths and weaknesses. these folks have control issues. lack of control and the need to control.
i've had friends of the opposite sex for decades. if i wanted them in that manner, i'd have married them. but i married the love of my life and i don't expect anything to change in that sitchiachun.

Posted by: mozart May 9 2007, 04:47 PM

The race issues go both ways folks. this way<---&---> this way. when i lived in northern NM, one thing seemed clear to me. the Mexicans don't like the Indians, and the Indians don't like the Mexicans and neither of them like the Caucasians. There's no point in discussing this in an accusatory fashion. let's either be constructive lest we insult one another and ourselves with our generalities.

I like this: QUOTE FROM pb
I completely agree with you. That small detail, that change in the abundance of the heart needs to come from the right Teacher. If we don't see each other in the same way that Jesus sees each of us we will never truly be one. There will always be something that makes us feel superior or inferior to those around us. Does the Lord love any of us differently due to our color, our weight, our I.Q., our education, our social status, or our sins, etc.? Does He love you any less or more than He loves Danny or me or Aletheia? Does he love those in leadership more than those living in Thompsonville who some classify as racist? Nope, He died equally and completely for every person on Planet Earth.

Posted by: shinejoy May 9 2007, 07:06 PM

i agree with you mozart how sad we have this kind of problem.

Posted by: Fran May 9 2007, 10:39 PM

> QUOTE(awesumtenor @ May 9 2007, 09:42 AM)
>
> Or, to put it in the words of Mr. Pascoe, my uber-bigoted 9th grade ancient and medieval history teacher...
> " I have nothing against nigras; I think everybody should own a few..."
>
> In His service,
> Mr. J

Your post made me rally laugh because it brought to my mind the first time I ever heard the "N" word!

My mother was a saint, mind you. Years ago, I would ride the bus with her. It never mattered to her, but if the seats were full, she and I stood to allow others to sit! Mama always said, "You never know if that person is an angel or not. You must always treat them with respect."

She was talking about "ALL" people. We gave our seats to Whites, Blacks, or Hispanics. It was what Jesus would do! I remember that to this day.

I was 14 before I ever heard the "N" word and someone called me that saying I was a "N" just like the other person was that I had served.

My first job was as a Soda Jerk. The neighborhood Pharmacist hired all of us at one time or another. My turn came. My first screw up was I did not know how to cook a hamburger! I thought that man would never stop screaming at me! (I was a Vegetarian)

Off I went, back to the counter and a really nice black boy came in for a strawberry soda. I asked him about the weather and made small talk while I got down the soda glass and started making the soda. When I finished it, I put the straw in, put the long spoon in the glass, put some napkins on the counter, and told him I hoped I had made it OK.

Armageddon hit! I thought my boss was going to kill that nice boy! Then I changed my mind; he was going to kill me for sure! After about 45 minutes of listening to him get angrier and angrier, he fired my, how can I say this, "posterior"!

I will tell my age over this, but I went home crying! I learned that "N's" had to drink out of different water fountains; That they were always served to go; that their lips were to never touch the stores dishes that served white people!

I have never to this day learned as much as I did that day. Well, I went back home and start by asking mama what a "N" was! Oh boy! Mama grabbed me by the ear and washed my mouth out with soap, and she told me I was to NEVER say that word ever again. I was to have respect and call them "colored folks"! rofl I never heard that before either! Boy was I confused! I finally explained to mama what happened. She fell on her knees right there with me and asked God and me to forgive her for punishing me before I told her everything.

The lessons my mama taught me were profound! I wish I had never learned what the local pharmacist taught me that day. However, Mama beat him to the draw. She taught me from an earlier age that God is no respecter of persons. Every human is a child of God's and we should treat them as such.

Am I prejudiced? Yes, I "do not" trust men who have never had a mustache or a beard, but all of the sudden starts growing one, but after a few months cuts it off. Ask me! They are hiding something behind that facial hair! I am not talking about Danny or Doug. They have had mustaches for years, but look out if it is new! "You just mark my words," my mama would say! rofl

---

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered May 10 2007, 12:28 AM

Fran,
The only thing about your beautiful testimony that I would question is why on earth your mama would send you out into the world during that awful time without a few words of preparation. Surely she knew you would come into contact with those small minded folks who would never serve a strawberry soda to a person of color.

Posted by: Fran May 10 2007, 01:29 AM

> QUOTE(PeacefullyBewildered @ May 10 2007, 01:28 AM)
>
> Fran,
> The only thing about your beautiful testimony that I would question is why on earth your mama would send you out into the world during that awful time without a few words of preparation. Surely she knew you would come into contact with those small minded folks who would never serve a strawberry soda to a person of color.

My mama never met a small minded person. I am serious! She never had to prepare me. I went to a SDA church school. There were no people of any color but light brown or peach color. It was never mentioned in Sabbath School or church. We never traveled.

I lived in lots of Adventist foster homes. I learned enough from them to last a lifetime. I just never learned anything about different colors of people that were any different from me. I noticed it yes, but I saw them through mama's eyes! My mama only saw good in everyone, even that pharmacist! She put him on her prayer list and she went and prayed with him! That is what mama taught me. Many years later, I found out he was 100% German. This is another stero type.

It was other Adventist's that gave me the education I did not need! If I felt mama was slighted in some way, she never saw it that way. She would say, "They need our prayers and I already forgave them. That is what Jesus does."

I cannot say this acorn fell from that tree! I forgive, but it takes me time! With mama, there was no time from hurt to forgiveness. If there was, she never spoke it.

This woman come home, caught her husband in bed with two women, only to walk into the bedroom at the opportune time. My dad pulled a gun and shot the gun until it was empty. Not one shot hit her. My Dad was drunk. However, I believe God protected her.

The church "Rescued" her and all seven of her children. She had to do ironing to put food on the table for 8. I will say again. My mother was a saint. We never heard on evil word about our father. She forgave him way back then. She prayed for him.

He never came around or gave mama child support. Mama never complained one time. My father had a stroke at age 89. I asked her if she wanted to go see him and she did. Now this is my mom!

There was pumpkin pie on his tray that Thanksgiving Day. He was on a feeding tube but the nurse said if we diluted the filling with milk and made it liquid he could sip it out of a spoon or straw. My mama asked him if he would like for her to fix him some pie. He blinked twice for yes. She mixed it in milk and made it thin, stuck the straw into the mixture put her finger over the top of the straw and fed him that pumpkin milk!

Before she left, she asked him if she could pray for him. He blinked yes. She told him she had long since forgiven him for any of his actions and for him to be at peace, She prayed the most beautiful prayer I have ever heard right there for a man she had not seen in over 30 years.

Another thing I remember as a child was when a homeless man knocked on the door and said he was hungry. Our diet consisted of a bowl of beans and each of us had a pickle. There was only enough for 8 bowls of beans, but maama came in and took down another bowl. She told us the story of Jesus feeding the 4000 and the 5000 while everyone contributed 3 spoons full of beans into that bowl. Them we sliced our pickles into 9 pieces. Everyone gave 1 slice for this man. Then everyone had 8 slices of pickle.

She delivered the food to the gentleman and prayed for our food and she thanked God for sending this man and providing for his needs and providing for our needs. We all went to bed full! Many other nights we were not full.

My mother was the best example of Jesus I have ever known. There were no mean people, only bad responses. She says it is all in the attitude. She taught us to try to have the attitude of Jesus. I learned her lessons, but I fall far short of living up to her life or Jesus' life.

Posted by: Aletheia May 10 2007, 07:27 AM

> QUOTE(Fran @ May 10 2007, 03:29 AM)
>
> My mama never met a small minded person. I am serious! She never had to prepare me. I went to a SDA church school. There were no people of any color but light brown or peach color. It was never mentioned in Sabbath School or church. We never traveled.
>
> I lived in lots of Adventist foster homes. I learned enough from them to last a lifetime. I just never learned anything about different colors of people that were any different from me. I noticed it yes, but I saw them through mama's eyes! My mama only saw good in everyone, even that pharmacist! She put him on her prayer list and she went and prayed with him! That is what mama taught me. Many years later, I found out he was 100% German. This is another stero type.
>
> It was other Adventist's that gave me the education I did not need! If I felt mama was slighted in some way, she never saw it that way. She would say, "They need our prayers and I already forgave them. That is what Jesus does."
>
> I cannot say this acorn fell from that tree! I forgive, but it takes me time! With mama, there was no time from hurt to forgiveness. If there was, she never spoke it.
>
> This woman come home, caught her husband in bed with two women, only to walk into the bedroom at the opportune time. My dad pulled a gun and shot the gun until it was empty. Not one shot hit her. My Dad was drunk. However, I believe God protected her.

> The church "Rescued" her and all seven of her children. She had to do ironing to put food on the table for 8. I will say again. My mother was a saint. We never heard on evil word about our father. She forgave him way back then. She prayed for him.
>
> He never came around or gave mama child support. Mama never complained one time. My father had a stroke at age 89. I asked her if she wanted to go see him and she did. Now this is my mom!
>
> There was pumpkin pie on his tray that Thanksgiving Day. He was on a feeding tube but the nurse said if we diluted the filling with milk and made it liquid he could sip it out of a spoon or straw. My mama asked him if he would like for her to fix him some pie. He blinked twice for yes. She mixed it in milk and made it thin, stuck the straw into the mixture put her finger over the top of the straw and fed him that pumpkin milk!
>
> Before she left, she asked him if she could pray for him. He blinked yes. She told him she had long since forgiven him for any of his actions and for him to be at peace, She prayed the most beautiful prayer I have ever heard right there for a man she had not seen in over 30 years.
>
> Another thing I remember as a child was when a homeless man knocked on the door and said he was hungry. Our diet consisted of a bowl of beans and each of us had a pickle. There was only enough for 8 bowls of beans, but maama came in and took down another bowl. She told us the story of Jesus feeding the 4000 and the 5000 while everyone contributed 3 spoons full of beans into that bowl. Them we sliced our pickles into 9 pieces. Everyone gave 1 slice for this man. Then everyone had 8 slices of pickle.
>
> She delivered the food to the gentleman and prayed for our food and she thanked God for sending this man and providing for his needs and providing for our needs. We all went to bed full! Many other nights we were not full.
>
> My mother was the best example of Jesus I have ever known. There were no mean people, only bad responses. She says it is all in the attitude. She taught us to try to have the attitude of Jesus. I learned her lessons, but I fall far short of living up to her life or Jesus' life.

ran,

t is putting it mildly to say we disagree on much in this forum, but here in this post we are in total greement. You have been tremendously blessed. I too have a very special Mama, one who became also my ister in the lord and one of my dearest friends as I grew older.

our story and testimony touched me, and brought me to tears. Thank you for sharing about your Mama.

ho can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies....Strength and honour are her clothing; and he shall rejoice in time to come. She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of indness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children rise up, and call her blessed... Prov 31

lessings

Posted by: Noahswife May 10 2007, 05:46 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 10 2007, 09:27 AM)
>
> Fran,

> It is putting it mildly to say we disagree on much in this forum, but here in this post we are in total agreement. You have been tremendously blessed. I too have a very special Mama, one who became also my sister in the lord and one of my dearest friends as I grew older.
>
> Your story and testimony touched me, and brought me to tears. Thank you for sharing about your Mama.
>
> Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies....Strength and honour are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come. She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness. She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children arise up, and call her blessed... Prov 31
> Blessings

ran, I agree with Aletheia that your story touched me today and thank you for sharing it.

indy, I know that although many of us here disagree vehemently and often I think we have more in common vith each other than we usually remember.

ince we are off topic at the moment and because I think women supporting each other is something we orget about way too often (and the very reason I found BSDA when i heard about a woman I did not even now and the scenario raised many red flags for me), I want to share something a friend that was recently iagnosed with breast cancer sent me today:

o my sisters in the Lord...
> There comes a time in every woman's life when she has to take a close look at herself. Not at her ircumstance, not at what she did, not how unfair life is, or at who made you do it. She has to just look at erself.
> Have you ever admired a woman who has been through changes in her life? Or have you made up in your nind that she is just messed up. Before you make this mistake, take a closer look. A woman who has ndured the most unusual life is someone of wisdom, someone who has been chosen by God to go through hings that have made her stronger.
> Think of all the great women in the Bible: Mary Magdalene, Ruth and Naomi, the woman with an issue of lood, and Esther, to name a few. Mary was a very uneasy woman. But by the time Jesus was done with her, he was His closest follower. Esther was unfortunate in marrying an abusive man, but by the time God was lone with her, she had married one of the wealthiest men in the land!
> Women are so quick to beat the next one down instead of trying to hold her up. Before you wonder, What's up with her?" ask yourself, "What's up with me?" That woman could be my mother, sister, aunt, in-aw, stepmother, niece, grandmother, great-grandmother, neighbor, friend, or co-worker, etc. That woman ould be ME.
>
> Women are the carriers of life, not the channels of death. Let's build and encourage each other, as did Ruth nd Naomi.

> Encourage and love, forgive and forget, and trust that the woman that receives this will be touched in some vay!

hanks for letting me share my 2 cents today.....

w

Posted by: andithomas1 May 10 2007, 06:01 PM

Fran,
I logged in just to say how blessed you were to have a great mother. She was a great example of how a Christian should be. I don't normally post in this part of BSDA, but I was blessed by what you posted about your mother and was reminded that "our attitude determines our altitude".

Posted by: calvin May 10 2007, 10:53 PM

> QUOTE(Aletheia @ May 9 2007, 02:29 AM)
>
> Danny and Doug have race issues? That's a first. It is my understanding that the reason that the little town of T'vill is not friendly about 3abn is because they have hired many african americans as well as hispanics. In a community where there is still a KKK that would make sense.
> Let's see, a man of color is head of production, a man of color is the pastor of the T'ville Church, several women of color have worked and do work there (I have seen one on an interview), the Aikens do programming, T Marshall preaches, Wintley Phipps sings, preaches, has done interviews and sits on the board, there are lots of singers of color, Mrs. Lomacang works in the radio department....And all of this in a town that doesn't have one african american resident except for those who are employed at 3abn.
> mmm...I am failing to see a race issue.
> So if Doug wanted to move his church or AF where black people were non existent (your allegation) then all he would have to do is move to T'ville.

I agree Cindy, you are stating the oblivious with your examples. Don't know why folks are giving you the 3rd degree over this. I don't dismiss everything you say as spin, there is enough of that on both sides. Are they watching the same 3abn that I am watching? He also does road shows in Black churches. He does not have to do any of this, Black folks are not his primary financial supports.

My brother Curtis Eakins and I have only had one brief conversation about this whole 3abn ordeal. It is just not a subject of priority to us, we have more things of interest to talk about. Curtis did mention without me asking that Danny does not see color or maybe better term was does not consider color in personal decisions. So i have my first hand information from somebody I have know all by life, a man that I trust, a person of intregity and someone I respect, and close enough to 3abn that would know. Not to mention the evidence that I can see with my own eyes.

Posted by: Eirene May 11 2007, 12:01 AM

> QUOTE(seraph|m @ May 9 2007, 02:02 PM)
>
> Is not the Shelton clan (family) from Tville? If so, then it would stand to reason that there may be some association, being from that community, with those who are, let us say less than accepting towards other ethnic groups.
>
> Food for thought:
>
> When a person, of any ethnic group, is working "for or with" someone that does not mean that they do not see that ethnic group as beneath them. Consider, how many "people of color", as you put it, are anything but employed, in one capacity or another, by the Sheltons? Just a thought...
> PB, it looks like we posted within a min of each other.
>
> Yes, it seem they could benefit from some "cultural diversity training". But would it matter? I mean doesn't scripture mention "As a man thinketh in his heart" and also, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh? Anybody can "learn to say the right things" but it's what is in the heart that matters to God. Apparently these folks are missing that small detail.

No Sera, the Sheltons are not from Tville but from the same county. The fact that t'ville doesn't have a chapter of kkk is a moot point because the whole county is geared that way. There are chapters in the county but they certainly don't publicize it in any way. If, as you suggest, the Shelton's looked upon people of color the way most of the county does, they would have never employed them in the first place much less put them in leadership positions. Then there is the fact that they all socialize away from the work place quite often.

You need to read the first hand information that Calvin gave. He is correct.

Posted by: ex3ABNemployee May 11 2007, 12:18 AM

> QUOTE(Eirene @ May 11 2007, 12:01 AM) ☐
>
> The fact that t'ville doesn't have a chapter of kkk is a moot point because the whole county is geared that way.

Assumptive and uninformed.

There are bigots in Franklin County, as there are everywhere, but the "whole county" is NOT "geared that way."

Posted by: princessdi May 11 2007, 12:01 PM

Just four letters Eirene-------EEOC. If Danny, or any company wants to stay out of trouble with them, the they need to at least fill the quota............as 3ABN has done quite nicely. In Fact, GC did an excellent job of quota filling at the last session by appointing a black woman, sorry two.

