WWJD, Bystander are you there?

Posted by: Clay Feb 9 2007, 07:40 PM

where in hunstville? which church?

Posted by: calvin Feb 9 2007, 07:44 PM

My mother told me about it last night. It is a Sunday church that converted to Sabbath worship after studying the 10 Commandment book Danny authored. Sorry Clay don't remember the name of the church.

I thought this was a church that converted? Why would it be at the academy??

And, any chance this will be broadcasted live tonight or tomorrow?

The pastor started a church school. Sometime later an SDA gave him a book written by Danny Shelton and Shelly Quinn. As a result of reading that book, the pastor and his wife became SDA's.

As it turns out, God can use a sinner like Danny Shelton to do his work. Who'd a thunk that?

God will use anyone to spread his message. Some people unwittingly share the gospel. Therefore, God will use you, Danny, Linda, me, and whosoever will or whatever to spread the gospel.

Clay, best leave the light saber at home. It may keep your suit jacket from draping properly.

I do hope you go, though. Perhaps you could ask Danny to introduce you to wwjd and Bystander. I did note that neither of them were listed on today's "Members On Line" list. glenetta was listed but eye witness was not (is "she" still banned?) Wonder if either of the guys will visit tonight now that the program is over.

I only caught CA's closing prayer. He didn't mention BSDA by name but he sure did speak of the trials 3abn has gone through this year. It was quite sad.

I had already mentioned this to my husband too - about not being here today and noting that they are not on now (hard to do a rally and post at the same time, ya know) and wondering if they will take time tonight after the meeting is over to come around and do some beeezy work here. We will have to watch...of course, they can always read without signing in! So at least they will know their "missed".

That was never at issue. The Bible is filled with flawed vessels through which God worked. However, that did not mean they escaped the consequences of their not so godly decisions and actions.

When people have strong convictions they do more than just talk. All I see here is a lot of chitter chatter and no action. That's no being very proactive, is it? You can talk till the cows come home but that doesn't change anything. The way I see it, all the accusations about 3ABN flying around here are a load of crap. If you really believe in something, you step up to the plate and take action. I don't see anything like that happening here. Tiresome you are indeed.

I agree 100%. I am not a betting person but would have felt very safe in wagering that Clay would some how not attend the rally, much less approach The team with any of his concerns. When I read that he just might attend and blah blah, I knew he was blowing smoke. Perfect opportunity since he feels so strongly about Danny and the rest to address some of his concerns face to face. But I knew it wouldn't happen. That is the cowards way out.

If all this talk isn't just talk, you people would be doing something. Such grave concern and no action isn't very impressive or convincing. All I see here is a bunch of lazy armchair critics cutting down people who at the very least are DOING God's work.

Apparently we are doing something, at least it's gotten Danny's attention, likely more than any hit in the face. Much gets done by talking, little gets done by confrontation.

How many hours did you and bystander take to think up this lame reverse psychology angle?

Lemme give you a hint for next time... if you really felt Danny was guilty of anything and that things werent moving fast enough you'd refer to those who were supposed to be like minded in the first person plural... not the second...

God is willing to forgive and forget, just as he did David's grievous sins. Later in the Bible He spoke about how beloved David was and didn't mention his sins. Why? Because David put aside pride, realized the devastating nature of his sins, asked for forgiveness and made things as right as he could (he couldn't bring Bathsheba's husband back to life). David didn't just bow down and say "Please forgive me", he truly repented and made amends. Just like Manassa did.

Things must be made as right as is humanly possible. Duane and the other alleged victims deserve this.

Just this evening, I also referenced the story of David to another friend on here. I couldn't sleep the other night, got up, read several chapters in the bible about David. I kept thinking thru each story but God called David a man after his own heart!" and it caused me to think what that really meant again; it was that David felt and showed true remorse (eventually), saw how messed up he was, ran to God and would not stop learning in his journey - he was not so full of constant ego that he didn't learn from his mistakes (yes, the ones he willingly and knowingly committed). I always like the analogy of while riding upwards in an elevator, even if you fell down inside, you are still moving up, all you had to do was get up after each time you fall. We all sin, but what do we learn? Do we grow each time? Do we see how we get no where, no peace, only create more pain as we make those kind of choices? Or do we sink lower, not letting go of it, determined to hang on to the sin (ego, self-righteousness, pride, etc) and therefore we choose to harden ourselves, in essence pushing ourselves farther away from God. David learned, the hard way, but he still learned. Those around him saw his struggles and watched him run to God each time. One other thing, because of David's yo-yo-ing, he could relate to just about any situation, he "got it", and I am thankful he put it all down in the Psalms! David's life is evidence to me of a God that has a type of patience and love that is amazing. He was not happy with David, but seem to know he would finally "get it".
