

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ We Should Start A B.a.n.

Posted by: TrulyBlessedOne Apr 20 2006, 10:19 AM

With all the talk about 3ABN lately. I think that we need to stop complaining and come together to offer an alternative. Given the fact that there are a number of black churches with television ministries and a number of Black SDA artists on the rise, I believe that it could be done with the proper planning and support. It could cater to the Black experience, while presenting the unique SDA message.

Plus, if set-up properly and not done in the spirit of exclusiveness, we could get the support of many non-Adventists who enjoy our ministries. If properly pitched, it could be carried on Sky Angel and reach a massive audience. Once the audience grows, it could be pitched to cable systems in areas like Huntsville who have high concentrations of BSDA's.

I am seriously thinking about this thing. Who is with me?

Pastor J

Posted by: calvin Apr 20 2006, 11:44 AM

Got any money?

Posted by: awesumtenor Apr 20 2006, 11:55 AM

QUOTE(calvin @ Apr 20 2006, 01:44 PM)

Got any money?

There, my brother, is where the rubber meets the road, as J. Vernon McGee would say...

In His service,
Mr. J

Posted by: beartrap Apr 20 2006, 12:24 PM

The cost could be less than one might think. As Pastor J said, there are many black churches already producing their services, I believe Oakwood has some production facilities, and with the programs from outside the church, an initial investment in studios is probably not necessary. Servers for master control, personell, satellite fees, and teleport usage (until a proprietary uplink could be established) should constitute the major startup expenses. (Of course this is all theoretical. There are always complications and surprises.)

Posted by: Clay Apr 20 2006, 12:44 PM

a major problem.... folks will not work together...

Posted by: beartrap Apr 20 2006, 01:20 PM

 Clay is a pragmatic realist. Like I said, complications.

Posted by: calvin Apr 20 2006, 01:25 PM

QUOTE(Clay @ Apr 20 2006, 01:44 PM)

a major problem.... folks will not work together...

Oh, don't be so cynical Clay. It could work; I think there would be a market for it. 3ABN was always too conservative for most Black folks anyway. The Black work continues to grow, anybody pay attention to how Black and Brown General Conference was last year. About 25,000 of yall will be descending on Atlanta this weekend.

TBO, try putting together a comprehensive business plan and float it around to some investors. That is where I would start.

Posted by: Clay Apr 20 2006, 03:18 PM

QUOTE(calvin @ Apr 20 2006, 02:25 PM)

Oh, don't be so cynical Clay. It could work; I think there would be a market for it. 3ABN was always too conservative for most Black folks anyway. The Black work continues to grow, anybody pay attention to how Black and Brown General Conference was last year. About 25,000 of yall will be descending on Atlanta this weekend.

TBO, try putting together a comprehensive business plan and float it around to some investors. That is where I would start.

Calvin I try not to, however I am watching the area in churches in Huntsville go back and forth about building a new school for the kids here... The academy is the same building that my wife attended 20+ years ago... they were talking about building a new school when she attended... so if 6 or 7 black churches in one city can't come to some agreement and build a church... then....

Posted by: Zephyr Apr 20 2006, 04:33 PM

QUOTE(TrulyBlessedOne @ Apr 20 2006, 10:19 AM)

With all the talk about 3ABN lately. I think that we need to stop complaining and come together to offer an alternative. Given the fact that there are a number of black churches with television ministries and a number of Black SDA artists on the rise, I believe that it could be done with the proper planning and support. It could cater to the Black experience, while presenting the unique SDA message.

Plus, if set-up properly and not done in the spirit of exclusiveness, we could get the support of many non-Adventists who enjoy our ministries. If properly pitched, it could be carried on Sky Angel and reach a massive audience. Once the audience grows, it could be pitched to cable systems in areas like Huntsville who have high concentrations of BSDA's.

I am seriously thinking about this thing. Who is with me?

Pastor J

If BAN can operate on all talk, no money and shoddy work and nepotism then it will become the number 1 TV network. To be truthful that's about all these SDA kneegrows have to offer.

Posted by: beartrap Apr 20 2006, 11:10 PM

Zephyr, I disagree. Several years ago I was in New York City trying to entuse the Adventists into becoming active on behalf of 3ABN and nothing happened until I went to the black churches and the Northeastern Conference. They banded together enthusiastically in financial support and actual work and accomplished a lot. I was very impressed by how well those churches worked together on our behalf. C.A. Murray was the Communications Director at Northeastern, and I was so impressed with his skill and talent that I wrote memos and met with the leadership at 3ABN in a dilligent effort to get him employed there and I believe he has been a tremendous asset to that organization since being hired. The black Adventist community has some very qualified leaders for a television network, and I believe it can and should be done.

Posted by: Zephyr Apr 21 2006, 09:26 AM

Beartrap don't get me wrong. "We" can campaign, make noise and make a big to do. That is why "we" photocopied and sent out millions of petitions on behalf of 3ABN. Reuben was very instrumental in the Northeastern and greater NY areas.

Campaigning is great...delivering on quality, efficiency and providing a corruptiowords free working environment is a different matter...Y'all had a chance to do your thang with NET 2004 and you blew it big time. The word went out--these n... can shake their b...but they can't shake the money tree.

I wonder what CA is saying as the house of cards looks as if it is crumbling... CA is a top-notch pastor--one of the best and he left the pastoral ministry of the church to become a shill and flack for Danny and 3ABN.

Posted by: Clay Apr 21 2006, 10:09 AM

QUOTE(Zephyr @ Apr 21 2006, 10:26 AM)

Beartrap don't get me wrong. "We" can campaign, make noise and make a big to do. That is why "we" photocopied and sent out millions of petitions on behalf of 3ABN. Reuben was very instrumental in the Northeastern and greater NY areas.

Campaigning is great...delivering on quality, efficiency and providing a corruptiowords free working environment is a different matter...Y'all had a chance to do your thang with NET 2004 and you blew it big time. The word went out--these n... can shake their b...but they can't shake the money tree.

I wonder what CA is saying as the house of cards looks as if it is crumbling... CA is a top-notch pastor--one of the best and he left the pastoral ministry of the church to become a shill and flack for Danny and 3ABN.

interesting.... you think that was the perception? That black folks can entertain but not raise money?

Posted by: silsbee_bee Apr 21 2006, 05:08 PM

It would be hard, not impossible, but not easy, to get and keep a television network like that going. IMO 3ABN has done a very good job of including preachers and artists from diverse backgrounds into their network ministry. I've been watching 3abn for awhile, and I've seen more black sda preachers there than I have anywhere else. I'm talking about scores of different preachers from the 4 corners of the country and the world. I've seen lots of asian and latino preachers also, and lots of culturally diverse singers and artists. Yet with all that they are criticized as being too white and conservative. The same could happen if a black adventist tv netwrk came into being. To keep such a network on the air would cost something like $300,000 a month. The more diverse the programming the more money that could come in.

DB

Posted by: PrincessDrRe Apr 21 2006, 05:14 PM

QUOTE(TrulyBlessedOne @ Apr 20 2006, 12:19 PM) □

With all the talk about 3ABN lately. I think that we need to stop complaining and come together to offer an alternative. Given the fact that there are a number of black churches with television ministries and a number of Black SDA artists on the rise, I believe that it could be done with the proper planning and support. It could cater to the Black experience, while presenting the unique SDA message.

Plus, if set-up properly and not done in the spirit of exclusiveness, we could get the support of many non-Adventists who enjoy our ministries. If properly pitched, it could be carried on Sky Angel and reach a massive audience. Once the audience grows, it could be pitched to cable systems in areas like Huntsville who have high concentrations of BSDA's.

I am seriously thinking about this thing. Who is with me?

Pastor J

I would love it. Can I be the resident Therapist?

Posted by: beartrap Apr 21 2006, 07:31 PM

Once again, I thoroughly disagree. Yes, in NY the petitions moved quickly, Ruben Carr became very prolific in his marketing, 3ABN grew, and the Atlantic Union ended up with a production truck. Yes, CA is a wonderful pastor, and he is also a great TV producer.

Of course BAN would be difficult to start and run, but I believe that with the right partnerships, some aggressive mover and shakers, and LOTS of elbow grease, it is very possible. I agree with whoever said that a business plan should be formulated and passed around. Besides the black SDA, there are other people in the SDA denomination who I believe would contribute significantly if they saw something realistic with a good foundation to it.

Posted by: Zephyr Apr 23 2006, 02:51 PM

B.A.N
Someone whispered alternative names for the new network
Braying...A...Network!
Broke Adventists Network

Posted by: TrulyBlessedOne Apr 23 2006, 10:39 PM

QUOTE(Zephyr @ Apr 23 2006, 02:51 PM) □

B.A.N
Someone whispered alternative names for the new network
Braying...A...Network!
Broke Adventists Network

See, why n*rs (yeah I said it and mean it in the original dictionary meaning of the word) gets to bring negativity to an idea that would promote our culture?

As far as having a diverse lineup of speakers on 3ABN, sure they have them on, but they all conform to the party line. I bet they wouldn't air Buddy Byrd's sermon from UYC on 3ABN. They don't show Madison Mission style Praise & Worship. I've not heard about them having any SDA Christian rap artists on. In fact, I have heard them demeaning those who listen to and/or perform urban music.

This is why there needs to be an alternative to 3ABN. So that the world can see that Adventism is more that conservative, eurocentric, peaceful, serene, boring religion that GC and all the old white members would like it to be. It is time to move into culturally authentic and relevant worship; mold our churches into service centers for the communities we are trying to reach and stop trying to change people into white conservatives, but rather bring Jesus to them the way Jesus presented Himself to the common folk of Galilee...where they are.

If they never come to enjoy hymns and organ music, it will be fine...as long as they come to love Jesus!

That's My 2 Lincolns

Pastor J

This post was edited by a member of BSDA moderation team

Posted by: higherground2003 Apr 24 2006, 08:41 AM

In my honest opinion, it would never work, but not for the reasons that most of you are suggesting. Getting the money, and setting up a lineup that blacks would enjoy would be relatively simple. I think the real problem would come in after the channel is up and going. Having a black adventist network would force us to look at the realization that we are not on the same page. When you look at the backbone doctrine of adventism and much of the work written by Ellen G. White, it really goes in line with much of what you are seeing on 3abn. In reality, they aren't doing anything wrong. The reason why many of us seem to have a problem with their programming is that we don't necessarily agree with all of the teaching. I think that much of what you would see on a black 3abn would be identical to what you see in the black conferences, which is also not lining up with what you see in the white conferences, which would make the 3abn and the black version of 3abn night and day. Once that happens, there will be an uproar from within the denomination and we will start hearing about how there is a "falling away" from the church.

Example. From what I have seen black sda churches tend to think more locally, while the white sda churches tend to think more globally. Neither is wrong, but the priorities are clearly different. Another example is that black sda churches are probably more likely to work with other denominations than our counterparts. I also don't think a black 3abn network would do as much denominational bashing, which would cause an uproar with some people. Some people actually want to see denominational bashing.

Posted by: Clay Apr 24 2006, 08:45 AM

good points Higherground.....

Posted by: statrei Apr 24 2006, 08:55 AM

QUOTE(Clay @ Apr 24 2006, 10:45 AM)

good points Higherground.....

But the big assumption is that Adventism is the God's chariot to heaven.

Posted by: Clay Apr 24 2006, 08:57 AM

QUOTE(statrei @ Apr 24 2006, 09:55 AM)

But the big assumption is that Adventism is the God's chariot to heaven.

I thought it was "The Old Ship of Zion"

Posted by: statrei Apr 24 2006, 09:03 AM

QUOTE(Clay @ Apr 24 2006, 09:57 AM)

I thought it was "The Old Ship of Zion"

Without replacement theology we have to admit that "The Old Ship of Zion" is Judaism.

Posted by: TrulyBlessedOne Apr 24 2006, 09:12 AM

QUOTE(higherground2003 @ Apr 24 2006, 09:41 AM)

I think that much of what you would see on a black Sabn would be identical to what you see in the black conferences, which is also not lining up with what you see in the white conferences, which would make the Sabn and the black version of Sabn night and day. Once that happens, there will be an uproar from within the denomination and we will start hearing about how there is a "falling away" from the church.

Example. From what I have seen black sda churches tend to think more locally, while the white sda churches tend to think more globally. Neither is wrong, but the priorities are clearly different. Another example is that black sda churches are probably more likely to work with other denominations than our counterparts. I also don't think a black Sabn network would do as much denominational bashing, which would cause an uproar with some people. Some people actually want to see denominational bashing.

In my opinion, I think the regional conferences do need to pull away from the "world church". That may sound like heresy, but my reasoning is just what higherground2003 stated above. The white church and the black church have totally different agendas. The white church is exclusive and is trying to "civilize" the world, much like the Catholic church in the dark ages. In America, they recruit the rich folk so that they can send money overseas to "spread the gospel" and make people just like them.

The black churches tend to be more locally minded in that they are working to see as many lost souls in their local community come to know Christ, regardless of their income or education level. Now I know that there are plenty of "gold diggers" in the black church as well, but most pastors are interested in the person.

Because we have to send 16% of the tithe money up the line to the unions, NAD, and GC, we are not in a position to do some of the things that we need to do. 16% may not seem like a lot, but we are talking about millions of dollars each year that could be used for local evangelism or other projects. There is also the issue of how the money flows in the white conferences vs. the black conferences. I don't have proof, but they always seem to have the money they need for evangelism, while we have to beg for it.

I point is that there needs to be a change in the way we operate as a church. We need to encourage the churches to engage in an industry that will help support the church locally and the conferences need to change the way they operate to make them more efficient (sp). Too much money is being wasted by our leaders because unskilled pastors are doing jobs they don't have a clue about. We should hire CPA's to be our treasurers rather than pastors. Our ABC's should be run by MBA's. Our youth congresses should be organized by experienced event coordinators. Each conference should have a marketing director and an IT department. We have to think of this thing as big business if the churches are going to have the support they need and deserve.

And as far as working with other churches, we should be working with other churches if we expect to make any headway in the communities we have churches. It has been our "exclusiveness" that has gotten us labeled as a cult. We have to show ourselves friendly if we want to win souls for Christ. Pastors should be a part of the ministerial alliances in the cities. We should support other churches community activities, when they do not conflict with the Sabbath. And then, some of the things that they do on the Sabbath we can still support. "It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath".

My point is this, how can you expect someone to come to visit your church, if they don't know you or have prejudice against you. We must break down the walls of misunderstanding and open dialogue with other churches so that they can see that we are Christian; we do believe in the Trinity; we do believe in the Holy Spirit; we are not a cult. We can't accomplish that by first goign out and hitting them with dictrine and telling them that they are going to hell if they don't worship on the Sabbath and don't give up pork. We have to show love first and then show them the benefits of living like the Bible tells us. Then as they see how God has blessed us for our faithfulness, they will want to serve God as well. But, if we are mean and hateful and trying to beat them over the head with dotrine every time they see us or visit the church, we will continue to lose members in America.

I guess that's about 3 or 4 Lincolns there

Pastor J

Posted by: Clay Apr 24 2006, 09:16 AM and good Lincolns they were...

Posted by: beartrap Apr 24 2006, 09:39 AM

"Having a black adventist network would force us to look at the realization that we are not on the same page. When you look at the backbone doctrine of adventism and much of the work written by Ellen G. WHite, it really goes in line with much of what you are seeing on 3abn. In reality, they aren't doing anything wrong. The reason why many of us seem to have a problem with their programming is that we don't necessarily agree with all of the teaching. I think that much of what you would see on a black 3abn would be identical to what you see in the black conferences, which is also not lining up with what you see in the white conferences, which would make the 3abn and the black version of 3abn night and day. Once that happens, there will be an uproar from within the denomination and we will start hearing about how there is a "falling away" from the church."

What is the traditional backbone doctrine of our church? Most of my life I've been in traditional white churches and at 3ABN, and what I see being shown as the true pillars of Christianity are the Sabbath, the state of the dead, diet, and end-time events (beast, dragons and images). Not saying that there is anything wrong with those doctrines, but where is the Biblical Jesus REALLY being taught? I don't recall that he said much on those subjects when he was on Earth. Have we made them the foundations of our faith simply because they are the differentiating point between "us and them?" And in the process are we losing sight of true Christianity and worship? I'm not asking rhetorical questions to be nasty toward the church, or anyone, these are genuine questions that I have.

Posted by: Clay Apr 24 2006, 09:42 AM

QUOTE(beartrap @ Apr 24 2006, 10:39 AM)

What is the traditional backbone doctrine of our church? Most of my life I've been in traditional white churches and at 3ABN, and what I see being shown as the true pillars of Christianity are the Sabbath, the state of the dead, diet, and end-time events (beast, dragons and images). Not saying that there is anything wrong with those doctrines, but where is the Biblical Jesus REALLY being taught? I don't recall that he said much on those subjects when he was on Earth. Have we made them the foundations of our faith simply because they are the differentiating point between "us and them?" And in the process are we losing sight of true Christianity and worship? I'm not asking rhetorical questions to be nasty toward the church, or anyone, these are genuine questions that I have.

those are the true pillars of adventism, not of Christianity.... you are correct we have made them our foundations because it does distinguish "us" from "them..."

Posted by: higherground2003 Apr 24 2006, 10:07 AM

QUOTE(TrulyBlessedOne @ Apr 24 2006, 09:12 AM) □

And as far as working with other churches, we should be working with other churches if we expect to make any headway in the communities we have churches. It has been our "exclusiveness" that has gotten us labeled as a cult. We have to show ourselves friendly if we want to win souls for Christ. Pastors should be a part of the ministerial alliances in the cities. We should support other churches community activities, when they do not conflict with the Sabbath. And then, some of the things that they do on the Sabbath we can still support. "It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath".
Pastor J

I totally agree. With some of these people, they feel as if the only thing that matters in the world is our church and our beliefs. They see no need to ever have any dealings with anyone else unless you are trying to convert them. LOL. Oddly enough, people like that probably only make up about 25%, but that 25% tends to be the ones that are more than likely to go out into the community and knock on doors. □

In my eyes the reasoning just doesn't line up. This small group feels as if you shouldn't associate with "sunday keepers" □ (as they say) because they don't keep all of the commandments. Oddly enough, when you point out that they aren't perfect themselves, there is always an excuse why their faults are ok, but the faults of others are totally unacceptable. Does joining the SDA church mean that you will no longer ever participate in a united way function again? Most organizations to charitable work on the sabbath. Why in the world should we be frowned upon if we participate?

Posted by: princessdi Apr 24 2006, 10:11 AM

Go on and preach, Pastor!!!!

QUOTE(TrulyBlessedOne @ Apr 24 2006, 07:12 AM) □

In my opinion, I think the regional conferences do need to pull away from the "world church". That may sound like heresy, but my reasoning is just what higherground2003 stated above. The white church and the black church have totally different agendas. The white church is exclusive and is trying to "civilize" the world, much like the Catholic church in the dark ages. In America, they recruit the rich folk so that they can send money overseas to "spread the gospel" and make people just like them.

The black churches tend to be more locally minded in that they are working to see as many lost souls in their local community come to know Christ, regardless of their income or education level. Now I know that there are plenty of "gold diggers" in the black church as well, but most pastors are interested in the person.

Because we have to send 16% of the tithe money up the line to the unions, NAD, and GC, we are not in a position to do some of the things that we need to do. 16% may not seem like a lot, but we are talking about millions of dollars each year that could be used for local evangelism or other projects. There is also the issue of how the money flows in the white conferences vs. the black conferences. I don't have proof, but they always seem to have the money they need for evangelism, while we have to beg for it.

I point is that there needs to be a change in the way we operate as a church. We need to encourage the churches to engage in an industry that will help support the church locally and the conferences need to change the way they operate to make them more efficient (sp). Too much money is being wasted by our leaders because unskilled pastors are doing jobs they don't have a clue about. We should hire CPA's to be our treasurers rather than pastors. Our ABC's should be run by MBA's. Our youth congresses should be organized by experienced event coordinators. Each conference should have a marketing director and an IT department. We have to think of this thing as big business if the churches are going to have the support they need and deserve.

And as far as working with other churches, we should be working with other churches if we expect to make any headway in the communities we have churches. It has been our "exclusiveness" that has gotten us labeled as a cult. We have to show ourselves friendly if we want to win souls for Christ. Pastors should be a part of the ministerial alliances in the cities. We should support other churches community activities, when they do not conflict with the Sabbath. And then, some of the things that they do on the Sabbath we can still support. "It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath".

My point is this, how can you expect someone to come to visit your church, if they don't know you or have prejudice against you. We must break down the walls of misunderstanding and open dialogue with other churches so that they can see that we are Christian; we do believe in the Trinity; we do believe in the Holy Spirit; we are not a cult. We can't accomplish that by first going out and hitting them with doctrine and telling them that they are going to hell if they don't worship on the Sabbath and don't give up pork. We have to show love first and then show them the benefits of living like the Bible tells us. Then as they see how God has blessed us for our faithfulness, they will want to serve God as well. But, if we are mean and hateful and trying to beat them over the head with doctrine every time they see us or visit the church, we will continue to lose members in America.

I guess that's about 3 or 4 Lincolns there

Pastor J

Posted by: simplysaved Apr 24 2006, 10:26 AM

What about the World of Praise Network that Whintley Phipps is heading up? While it is an 3ABN branch baby, it is also specifically geared for the American Urban Community (i.e. Black folks)....enough money, as I understand, is the holdup, but most of the equipment has already either been purchased or donated...

QUOTE(TrulyBlessedOne @ Apr 20 2006, 11:19 AM)

With all the talk about 3ABN lately. I think that we need to stop complaining and come together to offer an alternative. Given the fact that there are a number of black churches with television ministries and a number of Black SDA artists on the rise, I believe that it could be done with the proper planning and support. It could cater to the Black experience, while presenting the unique SDA message.

Plus, if set-up properly and not done in the spirit of exclusiveness, we could get the support of many non-Adventists who enjoy our ministries. If properly pitched, it could be carried on Sky Angel and reach a massive audience. Once the audience grows, it could be pitched to cable systems in areas like Huntsville who have high concentrations of BSDA's.

I am seriously thinking about this thing. Who is with me?

Pastor J

<http://www.blacksda.com/forums/index.php?act=ST&f=45&t=7397>

Posted by: caribbean sda Apr 24 2006, 01:59 PM

QUOTE(TrulyBlessedOne @ Apr 24 2006, 12:39 AM)

See, why n*rs (yeah I said it and mean it in the original dictionary meaning of the word) gots to bring negativity to an idea that would promote our culture?

As far as having a diverse lineup of speakers on 3ABN, sure they have them on, but they all conform to the party line. I bet they wouldn't air Buddy Byrd's sermon from UYC on 3ABN. They don't show Madison Mission style Praise & Worship. I've not heard about them having any SDA Christian rap artists on. In fact, I have heard them demeaning those who listen to and/or perform urban music.

This is why there needs to be an alternative to 3ABN. So that the world can see that Adventism is more that conservative, eurocentric, peaceful, serene, boring religion that GC and all the old white members would like it to be. It is time to move into culturally authentic and relevent worship; mold our churches into service centers for the communities we are trying to reach and stop trying to change people into white conservatives, but rather bring Jesus to them the way Jesus presented Himself to the common folk of Galilee...where they are.

If they never come to enjoy hymns and organ music, it will be fine...as long as they come to love Jesus!

That's My 2 Lincolns

Pastor J

*This post was edited by a member of BSDA moderation team

Buddy Byrd...is that Carlton Byrd? I remember him when he was a little fellow running around Miami Union Academy. What was his sermon about? It's so nice to see young men serving the Lord.

Posted by: TrulyBlessedOne Apr 25 2006, 05:25 PM

Yeah Buddy = Carlton

His sermon was dealing with the children of Israel and their fear at the size of the Canaanites. He did an excellent job with it, but for some it may have been a bit too "Pentacostal" for them. He actually...hooped  (albeit briefly).

Pastor J

Posted by: silsbee_bee Apr 25 2006, 08:31 PM

We wanted to go to UYC, but just couldn't get the ways, means and motivation together on one page. There was a relatively sparse crowd at Bellfort church this past sabbath. Everyone was in the ATL supporting Pastor Byrd. It should be back to normal on the 29th, & even more so on May 6th.

DB

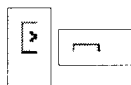

Posted by: Ephphatha May 1 2006, 09:50 PM

I offer as a caution....whether for 3abn or against...some of the Lord's work is being done through the broadcast and inevitably when the work of the Lord is being done the devil attacks...so if the "B.A.N." is successful I would hope that the people in charge would not fall into the false security that they would somehow avoid the temptations and more easily resist those that have come to visit 3abn.

I would pray that they consistently seek in prayer the best path to take and who and who not to allow on broadcast...and I would pray that, just as 3abn has done, not allow the devil to gain the victory and continue carrying forward the good news of the gospel to all the world so that the coming of our Saviour will be drawn even closer.

Posted by: simplysaved Nov 27 2006, 09:49 PM

Any progress made on B.A.N.????

Powered by Invision Power Board (<http://www.invisionboard.com>)
© Invision Power Services (<http://www.invisionpower.com>)