BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ Protect Your Identity

Posted by: calvin Jun 25 2007, 12:44 PM

I want to remind everyone that these discussions are on a very public and open forum and available for anyone to read and most anyone can join here as a member. Now that there is ongoing litigation involving 3abn I would caution you to be protective of your private and personal information include your identity. The staff here will continue to safeguard your right to be post anonymously regardless of which side of the discussion you support. Please report any attempts to gain personal information to the administrators here.

Thank you
Calvin, Clay, PrincessDi

Too bad this policy didn't exist before. Maybe my thread wouldn't have been locked down and Robert Pickle wouldn't have been given full rein.

Well, I think the key phrase in Calvin's post was "now that there is ongoing litigation" and last time I checked it is the plaintiff who initiates such.

I think that statement is a little unfair considering that I banned Pickle for 2 weeks for hinting at your identity. But then can't please everybody. Now FHB are you back to contribute to the ongoing discuss or to continue taking shots at how I administer this forum? If it is the latter I will make sure you join the list of BSDA rejects.

Calvin, may I ask you something to clear up a concerned thought that just crossed my mind?

You are in contact with many other SDA Forum Sysops however closely or losely it may be.

Have you (or the other BSDA Mods/Admins) revealed to these other Forum managers the private names from some of those here posting behind their monikers?

Anyone of us has good or troubled connections with others in other Forums and prefer to remain as separate entity here at your place. Except for those, obviously, who fly under their own name flag.

Daryl from Maritime and Stan from ClubAdventist and myself are members of each other boards as many members are here. So to answer your question we know how to reach out to each other if we want or need to, and we have on ocassion, but rarely. We have a healthy respect for each other realizing how differcult at times managing a discussion board can be. We take a different approach to how we manage our forums as I think anyone would expect since we are different, as evidence by the approach we have taken on the 3abn saga. I am not a member on any other Adventist forums.

No, I have not revealed any personal information about any member to another member or non-member. But keep in mind like any community we do get to know each other on a personal bases.

Interesting question. Something that might be even more interesting would be the position that the board owner takes on revealing membership information to third parties such as interested attorneys. I have absolutely no question where Calvin stands in this area. I am uncertain as to the approach other discussion boards might take.

As a hypothetical example, it would be interesting to know if the board owner would voluntarily agree to cooperate with attorneys from either side in the 3abn mess. If they did in anyway convey personal identities, what would there legal jeopardy be?

I agree with you on this, bear. It is not inconceivable that Calvin could be contacted via legal process to produce membership information. Should that occur, I certainly hope everyone on this forum is prepared to financially support him in defending our privacy.

I suppose reading a forum's membership rules would be a good place to start in determining what a member's privacy rights are or their expectations of same. I also wonder if more is expected when membership requires a financial contribution rather than is free as here at BSDA.

I can only wonder how members on other boards would react if they thought there was even a chance that their identities had been revealed in a legal matter. Or do they even care?

Provocative thoughts, Bear and NW.

I certainly don't see Calvin as one who would line up to sell us out if asked. I would be happy to contribute to any future defense fund should the need arise and would even feel more than comfortable with paying a small monthly fee for membership. I would, however, get a little nervous should he decide to charge a monthly "Identity Protection Assurance" fee.

Calvin, other than you own highly commendable declaration to safeguard our right to post on BSDA anonymously, are you familiar with any legal or ethical expectations of membership privacy issues as they relate to a forum such as BSDA? Is there even any such protection in place?

ClubAdventist was pro-danny weren't they? At least that's the feel I got from the head guy... perhaps if you are a member there you might want to check out what the terms of membership are... I suspect if the owner is pro-danny some members are being sold down the river as we speak.... or their identities are. Just speculating of course....

Being a member of Club Adventist, I found that the owner is NOT always aware of what other "Friends" are doing and saying right under his nose. Voltaire Wannabe was/is alive and well spreading private information around with others. He loves identifying others, but turns to hot, deadly fire if you ever get anywhere close to identifying him!

I know who he is! Shocking, to say the least. He would actually find this a challenge to good to refuse, in my opinion!

Do I believe Voltaire Wannabe would gladly give any identity away with out a thought? You betcha I do! It has happened to me. Then I blew his cover.

In my opinion, Voltaire Wannabe is a very dangerous individual. Otherwise I would be telling the information high and low! I believe people should know who they are dealing with.

Been there done that!

Whitey;

I am praying you are a lawyer! Voltaire Wannabe doesn't want his boss seeing his real self! He has some HIGH UP friends that are trying to "Protect him". Be careful indeed!

WB: I just watched the other fellow yesterday on 3ABN Live. Danny wasn't there though. It was a good program with Dinsey (sp?), 3ABN Latino, and Christian (sp?) from 3ABN Radio. They did a wonderful job by the way. Voltaire Wannabe has been on there before. This was a much better program. I believe the reason was that Danny and Voltaire Wannabe weren't there!

V. Wannebe has some HIGH UP friends that are trying to "Protect him"? His connections to flesh in high places may be puny offers on the altar of sheol. I'm connected to He who is higher than the highest and will set the oppress free, who will fight for the rights of the poor and rectify the perverting of judgment and justice in our area of life.

Forget not how our God moved so V.Wannebe fell from his influence in 'that other' Forum and now is silenced after the calm.

I have seen Mikey boy on 3ABN with the other gentleman talking about Religious Liberty. Could it be that two years ago as he was badgering Admin Jensen to hide the 3ABN topics he was being told by 3ABN to get the topics out of public sight otherwise no-go on the coveted program slot being planned? "They" have people who knew he was involved with C.Adentist Forum, and what with being lawyer of sorts, he could level influence to get the topics hidden from view.
