

Printable Version of Topic

Click here to view this topic in its original format

BlackSDA _ 3ABN _ King David

Posted by: mikemike Jun 30 2007, 03:58 AM

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

Posted by: daylily Jun 30 2007, 04:32 AM

When Nathan came to him and confronted him, he said "I have sinned". He didn't mealy-mouth around and say, "Everybody makes mistakes, I'm human. I've made mistakes, there are things I would have done differently", etc.

Posted by: Panama_Pete Jun 30 2007, 04:50 AM

QUOTE(mikemike @ Jun 30 2007, 03:58 AM)

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

Well, if King David took my wife, Bathsheba, and had me killed, how David would fair with me is something I wouldn't have to really think about, now would I?

David, a man of war, was not to build the First Temple. That task was given to his son Solomon, although David drew up the plans.

If I follow your analogy I have to acknowledge that someone other than King David came along to do the building.

I also have to note that David showed contrition and repentance as daylily has mentioned.

Posted by: Clay Jun 30 2007, 05:51 AM

QUOTE(mikemike @ Jun 30 2007, 04:58 AM)

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

since it seems as though the question begs a stroll into the twilight zone let's ask this question, "How would Danny Shelton and Sabn fair if Ellen White were alive?" or, "How would Danny Shelton and Sabn fair if Jesus strolled by for a visit?"

Let's imagine that conversation:

Danny: welcome to the Sabn complex Jesus, glad you came!

Jesus: thanks for having me. Where's your wife?

Danny: ummmmm.....

then maybe the sound of crickets would be heard?

Posted by: Richard Sherwin Jun 30 2007, 05:55 AM

Yup if he refused to repent I bet we would have. And would that have been a bad thing? Would it have achieved results like this and other sites appear to have? (After all the plane is supposedly gone)

Daylily and Panama Pete excelent answers. Enjoyed them both.

Richard

QUOTE(mikemike @ Jun 30 2007, 05:58 AM)

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

Posted by: Observer Jun 30 2007, 06:03 AM

QUOTE(mikemike @ Jun 30 2007, 03:58 AM)

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

King David was the king, the civil leader of Israel. He was not the High Priest, or spiritual leader.

The standards for a person who is a spiritual leader should be higher than the standards for someone who is a civil leader.

Posted by: PeacefullyBewildered Jun 30 2007, 06:43 AM

QUOTE(mikemike @ Jun 30 2007, 02:58 AM)

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

Most of us would rejoice that King David listened to the wise counsel of his Nathan and had set the example for the rest of us.

Perhaps a more realistic hypothetical would be, how would someone like Kellogg fair with this group. Calvin, in his wisdom, would likely allow a Sanitarium Forum and, yes, we'd probably have a site called savebattlecreek.com.

Simply because some have likened Danny to King David doesn't make it so. I just wonder what Naomi and Ruth would think about that comparison?

Posted by: Seraphim7 Jun 30 2007, 07:01 AM

QUOTE(mikemike @ Jun 30 2007, 06:58 AM)

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

Let me make this very clear... Danny Shelton is not a type of Christ, by any stretch of the imagination, yet he did try to pull what Adam did. Danny blamed GOD by saying, before a world wide audience, it is the fault of the woman "you gave me" Lord. BIG difference. He did not man up after it was clear to everyone that he was wrong. Danny did, and continues to, pass the buck.

Also, unlike David, Danny, without ANY true remorse, put his business out in the street then attempted, after putting it before the people, to present his foolish behavior as upright, above reproach and acceptable by biblical standards, rather than what it was. Something one needs wading boots to get through as they try to comprehend it. In other words God is not only to blame but, seeing that He is to blame, God has sanctioned the current relationship Danny is in.

And finally, not one person on BSDA who sees this for what it is, has done any more than ask Danny to be the upstanding man of God, he claims to be, and speak the truth, as openly as he spoke the lies, rather than continue to attempt to cover up his obvious mess. Nope, nobody here is going be made his scape goat either.

Danny has more drama going on than Madea, due to his own PUBLIC behavior, not due to anything anyone here has said or done.

Posted by: LaurenceD Jun 30 2007, 07:39 AM

The word "save" implies something or someone is lost, or appears to be lost--according to the saver's impression anyway. When Jesus said, "The Son of Man came to seek and to save what was lost," lost included sinners, money collectors, adulterers, or anyone who was spiritually blind or deaf.

Jesus wept over the loss of his own people because they refused to comprehend the light. God tries to save anyone that is lost, or appears to be lost (anyone who acknowledges it anyway). So I wouldn't question someone who is trying to save Sabn. They do appear to be losing more than just money.

Posted by: mikell Jun 30 2007, 08:49 AM

The responses here on bsda are so RIGHT ON, such as Seraphim7. I thank God, for seeing HIS PEOPLE here on bsda are calling SIN, SIN! Ds is an Achan among us, and how long did he last?

For those who find it good to defend such corruption may not be a good thing to do. It appears that ds is living in open sin, but I might be mistaken. Did not ds do what Jesus warned about in Mt 19:9 not to do? "Anyone who divorces his wife, except for adultery, and marries another woman commits adultery." Therefore, can we see that ds is living in open sin? Just a question.

Did not John the Baptist rebuke King Herod for taking another man's wife? Is it possible we have here the same kind of a thing, when it appears that ds may have lusted after another much younger woman to soon after replace his wife, Linda with? Just asking,

Posted by: ex3ABNemployee Jun 30 2007, 09:30 AM

QUOTE(Seraphim7 @ Jun 30 2007, 07:01 AM)

Let me make this very clear... Danny Shelton is not a type of Christ, by any stretch of the imagination, yet he did try to pull what Adam did. Danny blamed GOD by saying, before a world wide audience, it is the fault of the woman "you gave me" Lord. BIG difference. He did not man up after it was clear to everyone that he was wrong. Danny did, and continues to, pass the buck.

Also, unlike David, Danny, without ANY true remorse, put his business out in the street then attempted, after putting it before the people, to present his foolish behavior as upright, above reproach and acceptable by biblical standards, rather than what it was. Something one needs wading boots to get through as they try to comprehend it. In other words God is not only to blame but, seeing that He is to blame, God has sanctioned the current relationship Danny is in.

And finally, not one person on BSDA who sees this for what it is, has done any more than ask Danny to be the upstanding man of God, he claims to be, and speak the truth, as openly as he spoke the lies, rather than continue to attempt to cover up his obvious mess. Nope. nobody here is going to be made his scape goat either.

Danny has more drama going on than Madea, due to his own PUBLIC behavior, not due to anything anyone here has said or done.

Thank you, thank you, thank you! That post is right on the mark.

Posted by: Treniece Jun 30 2007, 05:56 PM

I wonder what does Danny's present wife think about his previous marriage. She is so new in the s.d.a. faith.

Should we liken him to King David. Those making negative comments about him would rather him to be liken as King Saul.

Posted by: Fran Jun 30 2007, 06:46 PM

QUOTE(Treniece @ Jun 30 2007, 06:56 PM)

I wonder what does Danny's present wife think about his previous marriage. She is so new in the s.d.a. faith.

Should we liken him to King David. Those making negative comments about him would rather him to be liken as King Saul.

That DS is identified with any king is beyond me! He is not and never will be a King!

At the current time, he is not following the True God's will for sure, so we can not think of him as a church leader. He is not.

Danny complained that Joy and Pickle should have come to him as a brother. Pickle and Joy followed the scriptures to the letter. They did their part as commanded in Matthew. Now Danny is currently suing his brother. He did NOT follow the advice in Matthew that he had previously demanded from Pickle and Joy? No, he did not!

He is definitely NOT the anointed one. He is NOT God. He is NOT a king of anything. He has lost control and is out for blood, IMO.

In fact, IMO, this is much like a spoiled brat battling to get his own way. He is sore because someone has challenged his authority.

So should we liken him to David? NO

Should we liken him to Saul? NO

What should he be compared to in my opinion? The roaring lion seeking whom he may devour!

Posted by: beartrap Jun 30 2007, 11:49 PM

QUOTE(mikemike @ Jun 30 2007, 01:58 AM)

I was thinking about how King David would fair with this group. Would you set-up a site called saveHebrewkings.com? Would you say that King David had to quit due to his sins? Well if you would not do it to him then why?

Hey Mike, seems that so many people like Vernon Howell, and others, want to be "David" to us.

Powered by Invision Power Board (<http://www.invisionboard.com>)

© Invision Power Services (<http://www.invisionpower.com>)